28001|2009-02-24 13:10:58|asar_imhotep|Towards a greater understanding of the SOUL and the Heart|
Peace Phamily

As promised, I will quote at length Dr. Kajangu's discussion on the soul. I am quoting at length, so I will not provide commentary in this email. Again, I think Dr. Kajangu's discussion has been the most informative for me. Please forgive my note taking in the copy. Without further a due:

Excerpt from Beyond the Colonial Gaze pgs 210-214:

I will bring this section to an end by analyzing how the concept of soul relates to the greater hunger. First, I will define the soul by examining its characteristics. Second, I will discuss the relationship between the soul and the closed senses. I will argue that the soul is the force that empowers human beings to travel to the stars, the fields of enlightenment, but this force does not always deliver because the closed senses do not assist it in reaching the stars. Finally, I will analyze how the soul helps in going back to the stars, which is the ultimate goal of many African wisdom traditions.

What are the characteristics of the soul? Drawing on African initiatory texts, one may argue that the soul has three major characteristics. First, it is the source of life. Second, the dual weapons of life activate it. Third, it is the repository of the seeds of destiny. Let me examine in more detail these characteristics of the soul.

The first characteristic of the soul is that it is the source or seed of life. The Zulu wisdom tradition provides a number of reflections concerning this characteristic of the soul. For instance, Anthem of the Decades depicts it as follows:

At the center of all things there is a force whose radiating fire illuminates all beginnings. We are molded into seeds of existence by this power (Kunene 1981: 311-312).

In the following statement that he attributes to one of his teachers, Mutwa captures the idea of the soul as the seed of life:

My son, the aliens [Christian missionaries] teach you that God created the soul, and we say this is not so. The soul is an integral part of God and all souls were created when God created Himself. The soul exists simply because God exists. The soul, like God, has no reason for existing, neither has it any reason for not existing. One can neither deny nor prove the existence of a soul (Mutwa 1964: 460).

The soul is the seed of life that not only sows the web that binds all things but also supports the oneness of life. In the following two statements, one of Mutwa's teachers sheds light on the idea of oneness of life:

Man does not possess a special soul, exclusive to himself. All souls are the same, and Man is but one of the many forms, or re-incarnations that a soul must pass through (ibid. 458-459).

The Bantu [Africans] believe that the soul passes through a series of developmental stages long before and long after its brief association with a human body. Altogether the life span of a soul would be of the order of thousand years. Compared with the human physical cycle of about hundred years. This principle is reflected in the growth and development of all living things (ibid. 478).

The second characteristic of the soul is that the dual weapons of life activate it. A saying from the Zulu wisdom tradition gives us a hint about the dual weapons of life: "Life arms itself with dual weapons of day and night, male and female, joy and grief" (Kunene 1981: 138). Most African wisdom traditions consider the dual weapons of life to be the forces that create duality or twinness in all living things. I will use evidence from the Dagara and Zulu wisdom traditions to elucidate this concept of the dual weapons of life.

In his book Of Water and the Spirit, Som頑eports the following reflections from his initiatory teachers about the duality or twinness of life:

All human beings are circles. Our setting part represents the coolness of water. It provides the peace of the body and the soul and bridges the gap between how we look on the outside and how we are on the inside. It brings us to our family, the village, and the community. It makes us many. The god of the setting side is the god of the water, the water we drink, and the water that quenches our thirst.

Its opponent is the rising part, the fire, the god that makes us do, feel, see, love, and hate. The fire has power, a great power of motion both within us and without. Outside of us, it drives us towards one another, toward the execution of our respective duties, toward the planning of our lives. We act and react because this rising power is in us and with us. Inside us, the fire pulls the spiritual forces beyond us toward us. The fire within us is what causes our real family?those we are always drawn to when we see them?to identify us. From the realm where the ancestors dwell this fire can be seen in each and every one of us, shining like the stars that you see above your heads. Imagine what would happen if you did not have this fire. You would be a dead star, invisible, wild, and dangerous (Som頷994: 199).

Along the same line of reasoning, also on the path of initiation Mutwa reports a comment by one of his initiatory teachers:

My son, you have seen with your own eyes what a soul looks like. You saw a sphere of the purest transparency and perfect roundness, and you saw that some of these had wings like those of a mosquito. You also saw inside each one of these spheres were two worm-like creatures that constantly moved and were never still. These spheres you saw with the wings were the souls of females and those you saw with no wings were male souls. The two "worm-like" creatures you saw inside each soul were Good and Evil. But let me explain this in greater detail. The red "worm" stands for all the bad things in a man or woman?dishonesty, cruelty, pride, low cunning, spiritual and corporal perversity, cowardice and low morality. The royal blue worm stands for all the good in a human being or an animal?loyalty, courage, honest, love and charity. These worm-like components help to balance the soul [for] a combination of good and evil, equally balanced, is essential?for all souls that exist, like all living creatures, must have perfect balance between Life and Death (Mutwa 1964: 460).

These two descriptions of the soul are compelling and profess similar perspectives. They say three things about the way the dual weapons of life activate the soul. First, they emphasize that souls assume the form of spheres. This simply means that they are seeds of life, which are self-contained. Second, they show that the dual weapons of life are opposite forces within the soul that need to be maintained in balance. Finally, they point to the way in which the balance of the soul helps in regulating moral understandings and spiritual commitments that bind people together in a community.

How do the dual weapons of life work in the soul? We can draw on the imagery of the Anthem of the Decades in order to characterize this process. The dual weapons of life engage in battles of mutual enrichment that support and maintain the process of creation. On the one hand, the weapon that creates day, summer, female, and joy works for the expansion of life. This weapon fertilizes the seeds of greatness that help creation to continue. It displays the pride of creation, opens up the wonders of life, and creates visions through which all living things can enrich life. On the other hand, the weapon that creates night, winter, male, and grief opposes the expansion of creation. This weapon fertilizes the weeds of evil that fulfill the painful role in creation, which consists in uprooting some of the seeds in the field of life so that the forces of expansion may find opportunities to plant new seeds of life. Thus, as it is pointed in, Anthem of the Decades, true wisdom consists in holding in perfect balance these dual weapons of life so that they nourish the forces that bind night and day together.

The third and last characteristic of the soul is that it is the repository of the seeds of destiny. To illustrate this last feature of the soul, I will draw insights from the Edo wisdom tradition's concept of destiny:

During the process of creation, [the Creator] conceives a form, molds that form in clay, its eventual function being allowed to precede its structure. Two identical forms are made. And when the molding is completed, [the Creator] breathes into the nostrils of one of the two and it immediately comes to life. The duplicate, meanwhile, remains lifeless.

The form having come to life, [the Creator] speaks to it, saying, "now you are almost ready to descend into the world below. Whom would you choose for a father sown there?"

The new life-form thinks carefully, makes a deliberate choice of an earthly father and announces the choice.

"So be it," [the Creator] says again to the answer given.

Then [the Creator] asks what will be the circumstances of the actual birth on earth. More questions are then asked about how the new creature will live, what it will do, how it will die and return to its creator. Everything that is to happen when the creature arrives on earth is carefully chosen beforehand. And to every choice named [the Creator] says "So be it." Finally, the creator places into the head of the new life-form its twin, which then automatically comes to life. The two become one although only one of them, the first to receive life directly from the creator, will be visible on earth where the unseen companion acts solely as witness to its companion's destiny (Eweka 1996: 10).

This passage states two main ideas. First, it highlights the relationship between the soul and the double. The soul and the double are the engines of spiritual life. Their relationship is like that of a parent and its child. The soul is like the mother whose task is to witness and guide the development of the double, whose role is to reflect the flowering of the fulfilled pre-natal choices. Second, this passage underscores the idea that the soul is the repository of the seeds of destiny, which we choose before our incarnation or birth on earth. This means that all the events that unfold in any life exist as seeds in that soul's life. Thus, human beings must assume responsibility for all the good and bad that stem from their souls.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28002|2009-02-24 13:29:05|IMJs@webtv.net|Attn: Marc Washington - The Historic Significance of the Maure!!!!|
Hey Marc,

Great posts on the Black-A-Moor / Strasbourgh links.... I've found a fascinating page that blew me away with a few new insights, and it might even have a few for you too - if you haven't already seen it!... Enjoy

IMJ

``````````````````````````````````````````````````````````

THE HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE OF THE MAURE - THE AFRICAN CONSCIENCE OF HUMANITY
http://www.africanfront.com/umorusymbolism.php
| 28003|2009-02-24 13:50:23|leroy siner|Re: Towards a greater understanding of the double in African traditi|
Thank you for posting this!

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:

> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Towards a greater understanding of the | James (1954-71) | Budge (1960) | Schwaller de Lubicz (1981) |

|---|---|---|
``````````````````````````````````````````````````````````

double in African tradition
To:
Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.co m
Date: Tuesday, February
24, 2009, 2:59 PM

Here is the breakdown given in Naim Akbar's Paper's in Black Psychology. He sums up the controversy well in my opinion:

Table 1
Comparison of the Ancient Kemitic Conception of the SOul (Self) as identified by Four prominent Egyptologists

Massey (1974)
Ka a formal structure that would return to the elements: soul of blood	Ka abstract personality of the man to whom it belongs possessing the form and attributes of a man with power of locomotion	Ka double or inner self which comes into being with each person and follows him throughout life. It is the thread of connection between mans tangible and intangible being.	Ka Formal element which gives form to substance and creates matter. 1. Original Ka Creator of all the others. Divine Ka 2. Kas of nature, mineral, vegetable and animal. Intermediate Ka personal consciousness, Inferior Ka 3. Individualized Ka, inherited characteristics of psychological consciousness; Inferior
Ba Breath of life; Eternal, invisible energy that runs through all visible functions. Essence of all things.	Ba heart-soul dwells in the Ka. It has the power of metamorphosis and changes its form at will.	Ba combination of intelligence and spirit which leaves the body at death.	Ba Most spiritual element in man, it is this link with the Creator. It is free, unfixed and unaffected by the human being whose only with it is a link of consciousness 1.Ba is the cosmic soul in all constituents of the world (Universal Soul) 2. Ba the natural soul stabilized in the bodily form; 3.Ba represented by bird with human soul, which comes and goes between heaven and earth.

Khaba veil of the vital principle produced emotion and motion; sustains the sensory perceptions, total harmony and circulation of the blood shade soul	Khaibit shadow associated with Ba. It has the power of locomotion and omnipresence.	Khabit the shadow or soul of the blood	Khabit astral or etheric body, ghost or shadow. Holds the records of all pictures or imaginings in our universe
Akhu Seat of intelligence and mental perfection Attributes of judgment, analysis and mental reflection all o which could be dedicated to service of higher being	Ab The heart, the animal life in man that is rational, spiritual and ethical. Associated with the Ba and undergoes examination in the Judgement	Hati represents the heart or conscience and understanding	Inferior Ka (see above)
Seb manifested at puberty, selfcreative power of the human being. Ancestral soul. Procreation soul.	Khat concrete personality, the physical body which is mortal.		Inferior Ka
Putah first intellectual father maked the union of the brain with the mind. From its attainment the intellect governs conduct intellectual soul.	Sahu body in which the khu or spiritual self dwells. All mental and spiritual attributes of the natural body are united to the new powers of its own nature.	Sahu the spiritual body	Ba Natural soul
Atmu the Divine or eternal soul. Represented as parenthood, which symbolized the full creative power and perpetual continuation.	Khy spiritual soul which is immortal. It is immortal. It is closely associated with the Ba (heart-soul) ,	Khu the pure spirit or Horus the highest expression of the personality, the perfect spirit of Christ	Divine ka father of the father of the Neters (Spiritual Witness)Hopefully this table helps us to better understand where we are. I am going to post which is immortal.	consciousness	another email quoting Kajangu about the nature of the Soul and the Heart that may shed some light on the contemporary African philosophy. Asar Imhotep http://www.asarimhotep.com  --- On Tue, 2/24/09, Ferg wrote: From: Ferg Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Towards a greater understanding of the double in African tradition To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 10:09 AM Good analysis Asar. I agree with the interpretations you give on the duality of the Ka. Perhaps later on I shalladd on to some of the the concepts you have explored. However can we re-examine the definitions given in the context of what isstandard in Egyptology books and analyse them again in terms of Bantu understanding as I am a bit vague on certain points.According to Budge's interpretation he gives the following definitions, no doubt there will be more examples to come: KA, image, genius, person, double, character, disposition, the vital strength of the Ba-soul.

			BA, the heart-soul, might, power, strength, courage. The concept of heart-soul, and the vital strength of the Ba-soulare new concepts to me as I've often wondered about the absence of the heart as a soul in this discussion. In my analysis the heart stops functioning (moyo haupigi tena)and so does thesoul. However the shadow of the soul escapes to be judged for good or bad. What I would like to know is whether the heart-soul is the Kiswahili-Bantushadow of the heart-soul? Somo

| 28004|2009-02-24 14:06:36|Mahari Mengistu|Re: DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?|

We are, however, talking about THOUSANDS of years. And I don't know what you would call a few. And do we know for sure that there were just a few. In any case a "few" over thousands of years could conceivably have a serious effect on vegetation.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:

> i would think the fires caused by the few people on earth at the time wouldn't hasten what was set in motion at the glacial retreat of 20,000 b.c.e.

> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Mon, 2/23/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:

> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE

CHANGES?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:21 PM

>
>
>
> Has anyone considered the possibility that the current climate > situation in Afraka where the Sahara Desert has developed and continues > to this day to encroach on the Afrakan continent may have been caused > by the Afrakans themselves?

> We know Afrakans lived there for thousands of years when it was > verdant. We also know from recent research within this forum that they > have used charcoal (made from trees) from primordial times - so long in > fact that it is used to define the essence of a people.

> Thus, the likelihood is that cutting down so many trees for so many > years could point to the POSSIBILITY that the Afrakans themselves

could > have unwittingly brought on desertation and ultimate climate change

on > the continent through their cultural practices.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
| 28005|2009-02-24 14:08:07|Mahari Mengistu|Re: DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?|
Maybe.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> I would have to disagree with that being a possibility for the reason that the Sahara is the result of the moisture being drawn out of north Africa during the last wurm glacial period. The desertification would have happened regardless if there were any trees or not. Now, you find more rain where you find more trees. Now if there were a substantial amount of trees left, I think more rain would be present. But we have no way of knowing now if that is the result of the people, or the Wurm Glacial period. Giving the size of the Sahara, I blame nature for this one.

>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Mon, 2/23/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:21 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Has anyone considered the possibility that the current climate
>
> situation in Afraka where the Sahara Desert has developed and continues
>
> to this day to encroach on the Afrakan continent may have been caused > by the Afrakans themselves?
>
>
> We know Afrakans lived there for thousands of years when it was
>
> verdant. We also know from recent research within this forum that they
>
> have used charcoal (made from trees) from primordial times - so long in > fact that it is used to define the essence of a people.
>

>
> Thus, the likelihood is that cutting down so many trees for so many
>
> years could point to the POSSIBILITY that the Afrakans themselves
could
>
> have unwittingly brought on desertation and ultimate climate change
on
>
> the continent through their cultural practices.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
| 28006|2009-02-24 14:17:30|Mahari Mengistu|Re: (TELEGRAPH UK) Google Ocean: Has Atlantis been found off Africa?|
O no doubt, since the Greek culture per the eurocentrics is a COMPLETE sham. It is almost numbingly simple. Since ALL of the personages that they venerate went to study in Kemet, what does that tell you???!!!
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> >
> >
> > Egypt: origin of the Greek culture
> >
> > For centuries, scholars have identified the Greek culture as the source > > of the western civilisation. But what if the Greek culture itself was a > > legacy ? a colony ? of the ancient Egyptians?

> > Philip Coppens
> >
>
> A lot of the Greek "inventions" also are very, very suspect when > looked at from a non-Eurocentric perspective, and will probably be > dismissed in future generations.

>
> Most of the claims are based on very late manuscripts.
>
> An "artifact" that I think is an elaborate hoax is the Antikythera > mechanism that has been in the news lately.
>
> This device just appears out of nowhere and then disappears. Gears

of > this type don't appear in other cultures including Greco-Roman until > about the 11th century.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
> Quests of the Dragon and Bird Clan > http://sambali.blogspot.com/
>
| 28007|2009-02-24 14:22:20|Tafari khumbaka|Re: DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?|
of course a few would ,but the outcome was already proscribed with the the warm up of the earth starting around 20,000 yrs ago

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:06 PM

We are, however, talking about THOUSANDS of years. And I don't know what you would call a few. And do we know for sure that there were just a few. In any case a "few" over thousands of years could conceivably have a serious effect on vegetation.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> i would think the fires caused by the few people on earth at the time wouldn't hasten what was set in motion at the glacial retreat of 20,000 b.c.e.

>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
>
> --- On Mon, 2/23/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:21 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Has anyone considered the possibility that the current climate
> situation in Afraka where the Sahara Desert has developed and continues > to this day to encroach on the Afrakan continent may have been caused > by the Afrakans themselves?
> We know Afrakans lived there for thousands of years when it was > verdant. We also know from recent research within this forum that they > have used charcoal (made from trees) from primordial times - so long in > fact that it is used to define the essence of a people.
> Thus, the likelihood is that cutting down so many trees for so many > years could point to the POSSIBILITY that the Afrakans themselves could > have unwittingly brought on desertation and ultimate climate change on > the continent through their cultural practices.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28008|2009-02-24 14:23:03|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Caribbean Protests Traced to Slavery|

http://newsone.blackplanet.com/world/caribbean-protests-traced-to-slavery/

| 28009|2009-02-24 14:23:10|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|John Legends open letter to the New York post|

Open Letter to the New York Post by John Legend

Dear Editor:

I?m trying to understand what possible motivation you may have had for publishing that vile cartoon depicting the shooting of the chimpanzee that went crazy. I guess you thought it would be funny to suggest that whomever was responsible for writing the Economic Recovery legislation must have the intelligence and judgment of a deranged, violent chimpanzee, and should be shot to protect the larger community. Really? Did it occur to you that this suggestion would imply a connection between President Barack Obama and the deranged chimpanzee? Did it occur to you that our President has been receiving death threats since early in his candidacy? Did it occur to you that blacks have historically been compared to various apes as a way of racist insult and mockery? Did you intend to invoke these painful themes when you printed the cartoon?

If that?s not what you intended, then it was stupid and willfully ignorant of you not to connect these easily connectable dots. If it is what you intended, then you obviously wanted to be grossly provocative, racist and offensive to the sensibilities of most reasonable Americans. Either way, you should not have printed this cartoon, and the fact that you did is truly reprehensible. I can?t imagine what possible justification you have for this. I?ve read your lame statement in response to the outrage you provoked. Shame on you for dodging the real issue and then using the letter as an opportunity to attack Rev. Sharpton. This is not about Rev. Sharpton. It?s about the cartoon being blatantly racist and offensive.

I believe in freedom of speech, and you have every right to print what you want. But freedom of speech still comes with responsibilities and consequences. You are responsible for printing this cartoon, and I hope you experience some real consequences for it. I?m personally boycotting your paper and won?t do any interviews with any of your reporters, and I encourage all of my colleagues in the entertainment business to do so as well. I implore your advertisers to seriously reconsider their business relationships with you as well.

You should print an apology in your paper acknowledging that this cartoon was ignorant, offensive and racist and should not have been printed.

I?m well aware of our country?s history of racism and violence, but I truly believe we are better than this filth. As we attempt to rise above our difficult past and look toward a better future, we don?t need the New York Post to resurrect the images of Jim Crow to deride the new administration and put black folks in our place. Please feel free to criticize and honestly evaluate our new President, but do so without the incendiary images and rhetoric.

Sincerely,
John Legend
| 28010|2009-02-24 14:23:37|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|

Attachments :

Hello all,
I am looking for some references on the Moors, from our perspective. Can anyone send me some information... books, websites etc. Also, any information on "evolution" as well (our perspective). Thank you!

From: Asar Imhotep
Sent: Tuesday, February 24, 2009 12:28 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim

Greetings Sptpy

Thank you for taking the time to tune in. Your support is greatly appreciated. It was/is a much needed discussion topic, especially in light of a lot of posts that have been distributed here on this list as of late.

Concerning the image, I think Anthony T. Browder in his book Nile Valley Contributions to Civilizations does a good job on discussing this very subject. In his book he provides various photos showing the progression of the deterioration from various sources on the Hrw-m-Akht. I don't have the book in front of me, but it shows at each stage in time how the nose has gotten progressively worse and approximately around what period the nose was actually destroyed.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, Sptpy wrote:

From: Sptpy
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: "Ta_Seti"
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 10:28 AM

Asar, I looked forward to this radio program since you announced it here at Ta_Seti, and I was not disappointed.
The program was two hours well spent.
The questions from you, the callers, and the chat room helped make the discussion even more interesting.

Manu, it was good to hear your answers to the questions; I like how you went to the source of the questions regarding
"Man, know thyself," the papyrus of Hunefer (topics this group has discussed), correcting misconceptions, and how you have seen the evidence first-hand. Frederick Lewis Norden's drawing of a noselessHeru-em-akhet decades before Napoleon's arrival isa very interesting find.

Tyrone

http://www.catchpenny.org/nose.html

| 28011|2009-02-24 14:23:45|cristofori whitakara|Re: Attn: Marc Washington - The Historic Signifigance of the Maure!!|
Cinderella were taught to Europeans by Sudanese soldiers serving in Germany around the time of the Crusades. Cinderella especially means black skin...and may have originally simply referred to a real black girl (or several of them in similar situations).
J 398.2 C
Climo, Shirley
The Egyptian Cinderella
In this version of Cinderella set in Egypt in the sixth century B.C., Rhodopes, a slave girl, eventually comes to be chosen bythe Pharaoh to be his queen.
The Pharaoh represented in this book is Amasis about 500 years before the common era.

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, IMJs@webtv.net wrote:

From: IMJs@webtv.net
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Attn: Marc Washington - The Historic Signifigance of the Maure!!!!
To: africanclassicalhistory@yahoogroups.co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, best@mail.datanet.hu
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:29 PM

Hey Marc,

Great posts on the Black-A-Moor / Strasbourgh links.... I've found a fascinating page that blew me away with a few new insights, and it might even have a few for you too - if you haven't already seen it!... Enjoy

IMJ

`````````` `````````` `````````` `````````` `````````` `````````` `````

THE HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE OF THE MAURE - THE AFRICAN CONSCIENCE OF
``````````

HUMANITY
http://www.africanf ront.com/ umorusymbolism. php

| 28012|2009-02-24 14:27:08|Tafari khumbaka|new statue found|

http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=newsarchive&sid=a.wMAE1ZayaY
click above

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28013|2009-02-24 15:35:27|cristofori whitakara|Re: Can the Meroitic script and Zulu accounts shed light on the Egy| peace to all. thanks brother asar. ether is a form of vaporous air.

--- On Mon, 2/23/09, Divine Allah wrote:
From: Divine Allah
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Can the Meroitic script and Zulu accounts shed light on the Egyptian Ba?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 8:35 PM

Ba - "soul" (to me this is the Mind)
Ka - "double" (to me thiis is the Image)
Akh / Akhu / Khu - "glorious immortal light"
Ren - Name
Sekhem - Power
Sahu - The vehicle of the Akh / Akhu / Khu
Ab / Ib - Heart (to me, this is the "brain")
Khaibit - "shadow"
Khat / Khab - Physical Body

Notice that the Akh was rendered as the combination of the Ba and Ka and some instances, and notice that the symbol for Akh / Akhu resembles Ra / Heru and that the symbol for Sahu resembles Djehuti. This would tie into the Solar / Lunar - Consciousness / Intellect dynamic.

Shem Hetep
Divine Ruler Equality Allah

On Mon, Feb 23, 2009 at 4:50 PM, asar_imhotep <asar_imhotep@ yahoo.com> wrote:
Peace Cristofori

I'm not sure what you mean by etheric cord, but among many southern Bantu people, the shadow is the double of the physical person. As the person develops, it develops. It can be seen at times and they say it is the "ghost" of a person that stays behind after death.

Dr. Fu-Kiau describes the shadow in African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg 125:

"If a Mukongo, in particular, and a Muntu in general, sits down for awhile on one side of his/her path, he will make sure before leaving that he picked up [bonga bendo] his electronic radiated shadow [kini kia minika/minienie kisidi va bendo] left on the spot where he was sitting: To pick up one's own radiated shadow left on the seated spot [bonga bendo/kini, variant bonga kini kia minienie mia bendo], for fear of being manipulated by one's own enemy in case this enemy possesses delicate knowledge about [kini kia bendo], the electronically radiated shadow (sensibility) upon things we touch or sit down on."

I think we need to list and examine various aspects of the African personality, ethnic group by ethnic group and look for patterns. For the Zulu a person is born with a body, soul and mind. The Ena develops with the child and the "character" of the person is the combination of the Ena (shadow/double) and the Soul. This may be a clue for something later on. But we can identify, among the Zulu, at least 5 aspects of the person: body, mind, ena, soul, character.

We need to list the characteristics of the person among the ancient Egyptian and see how many they recognize.

Asar

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara

wrote:
>
> Is this 'shadow' the etheric cord?
>
> --- On Mon, 2/23/09, Ferg wrote:
>
> From: Ferg

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Can the Meroitic script and Zulu accounts shed light on the Egyptian Ba?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 9:47 AM
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
> Asar
>

> Astute observations and insight into the Ka, Ba and shadow. I don't know if this simplification would be beneficial to the discussion. As has been observed the Ka is the representation of the entire self, the personality or essence of a person.
>

> Now here is an explanation from the Kiswahili-Bantu language. When a person dies the following stages occur: The soul or spirit called roho becomes blocked, this is pulsation of the heart. The heart does not beat again, the soul or spirit dies.
>

> However the 'KIVULI cha roho', shadow of the soul does not die. Note, it is the shadow of the soul.
>

> So the soul has a shadow! The 'Kivuli cha roho', shadow of the soul will go to heaven. An invisible created being of God created by light, (or an angel) will fly the shadow away and judge whether it is a good or bad shadow of the soul.Should the shadow of the soul be good, it will go to a safe place, otherwise it will go into the fire!

>

> I think the above insight might help to distinguish whether the Ba is a shadow. In fact you are right, the Ba is a shadow, more specifically the Ba is the shadow of the Soul, ie a shadow of the Ka.

There are two shadows which one needs to talk about.
>

> (1) The shadow of the whole body or corpse.
> (2) The shadow of the soul which flies off by means of an angel. This angel is the bird one talks about. Hence the Baa is the shadow of the soul not the body.
>
> Somo
>

>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:11 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Can the Meroitic script and Zulu accounts shed light on the Egyptian Ba?
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace brother Somo
> Your questions are at the heart of what I am trying to get to the bottom of. When I examine examples from the rest of Africa, the shadow is something that, in African tradition, something that is not immortal and one must feed and keep their name alive in order to keep the shadow alive (thus why Africans pour libations • to literally keep the shadow alive). The best explanation I have found in print is documented by Credo Mutwa in Indaba My Children. For those that can read French, I also recommend Kalanda Mabika's La Revelation du Tiakani.

> In the Meroitic texts, the way they explain the function of the Ba, it is in alignment with the Bantu descriptions of the Ena (shadow). What we have to keep in mind is that the soul is eternal and is what is reincarnated to become various different types of NTU in the universe. This is supported by Mutwa (1964:565) when he states, > "Man does not possess a special soul, exclusive to himself. All souls are the same, and Man is but one of the many forms, or re-incarnations that a soul must pass through.†

> This is further supported by Schwaller de Lubicz (1981) when he breaks down the Ka as follows
> "Ka • formal element which gives form to substance and creates matter. 1) Original Ka • Creator of all the others. Divine Ka. 2) Kas of nature mineral, vegetable and animal. Intermediate Ka • personal. 3) Individual Ka, inherited characteristics of psychological consciousness. Inferior. " > Lubicz's idea of the Ka is in perfect alignment with the Bantu concept of the Soul, not the shadow. He expresses, just like Mutwa, that the soul is really just an extension of the Divine Ka (universal soul). As Mutwa puts it above, “everyone has the same soul.†

> It is the soul which incarnates as various different phenomena including human beings and in the Egyptian concept of the soul it is the Ka that matches this concept: it doesn’t match the other African concepts of the shadow and its function. Malidoma Some discusses the shadow in Of Water and the Spirit, but I don’t have my copy in this city as it is in Houston with the rest of my material. But hopefully someone can find it.

> The more and more I read Egyptological texts concerning the functions of the After Life, the more I am convinced they have it totally wrong. The Egyptian account of the after life only makes sense in the Bantu contexts as expressed by Fu-Kiau (2001), Mutwa (1964), and Mabika (1992). I would also check out the works in French by Eric de Rosny.
> My contention, again, is that we may have to reevaluate our notion of the ancient Egyptian concept of the Ka and the Ba because I feel, after comparing the functions of the Ka and Ba, that the general literature has their meanings reversed. As Winters states on page 26 of his article Reading Merotic Inscription, “The term Ba represented the ability of the deceased person's spirit to move from the grave and implore the gods for passage and protection of the Kha to the underworld.†

>
> Again, what is hinted here is the Kha, during the Meroitic period, is the aspect of the human personality that went on to the “underworld†which awaited its time to be reborn on earth. This is keeping alignment with the rest of Black Africa’s concept and journey of the soul. Again I refer everyone to read Fu-Kiau’s

African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo for the best explanation of this concept. Obenga’s On Death and Immortality (2004:227-238) section of his African Philosophy book is highly instructive. It is his discussion of the Berlin Papyrus’ Report on the Dispute of a man with his Ba. Although Obenga translate Ba as soul, the way he describes it, and compares the texts with the Bwiti of Gabon again matches, in my opinion, with the African concept of the shadow and not the soul.

>
> Obenga states concerning the Mbwiti “Rite of the Coming Out of the Spirit,†

>
> “This Bwiti initiatory text is quite Egyptian, pharaonic in meaning and style. The Ba of ancient Egyptian philosophy is here the spirit, the soul or the double, which “comes out†of the body of the deceased at the moment of death. This ephemeral entity is represented sometimes as a tiny bird, sometimes as a shaft of light rising from a vase of oil, to watch over the dead body as the deceased transits from one life to the next.†

>
> Again, this further lends evidence to my assumptions. There are many terms used in the text for “spirit†and “soul†which suggest to me that they may be different concepts, mistranslated to be interchangeable and is the reason why Obenga lumps them all above to mean “the spirit, the soul or double.†I would suggest that we revisit Mutwa’s, Winters’, and Obenga’s accounts, then compare them to such a text as the Berlin Papyrus to get a better understanding of this concept.

>
> Ancestrally,
>
> Asar Imhotep
>
> Further Readings
>
> Akbar, Naim. (2004). Papers in African Psychology. Mind

Productions and Associates. Tallahassee, FL
>
> Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo: Principles of Life and Living. Athella Henrietta Press. Brooklyn, New York
>
> Mabika, Kalanda. (1992). La Révélation du Tiakani. Lask. Kinshasa, Congo

>
> Obenga, Theophile. (2004). African Philosophy The Pharaonic Period: 2780-330 BC. Per Ankh, Senegal
>
> Mutwa, Vusumazulu C. (1964) Indaba My Children. Crane Books. Johannesburg, South Africa
>

> Rosny, Eric de. (1985) Healers in the Night. Trans. Robert R. Barr. Orbis Books.Maryknoll, N.Y.
>
> Winters, Clyde. Reading Meroitic Inscription: The Writing System of Kush. Uthman dan Fodio Institute. Chicago, IL
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Sun, 2/22/09, Ferg fsnet.co. uk> wrote:
>
> From: Ferg fsnet.co. uk>
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Can the Meroitic script and Zulu accounts shed light on the Egyptian Ba?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Sunday, February 22, 2009, 9:01 AM
>
>
>
>
>
> Correct me if I am wrong Asar.
>

> Perhaps we ought to be clear in our minds about the Ba, Ka, and the shadow Khabit.

>
> The Ka is said to be a double, an image and according to Gardiner the Ka embraces the entire self of a person. Modern concepts to which the Ka corresponds are 'personality' .
>
> The Ba is represented as 'to be' in other words 'to have being'

and possesses both substance and form and can take upon itself any shape that it chooses. In form it is depicted as a human hawk.
>

> The shadow is said to have an entirely independent existence and to be able to separate itself from the body; it was free to move wherever it pleased. Thus in Bantu the shadow is the shade of a person and is similar to a mental picture or vision, a ghost, as being the shadow of reality.

>

> The only difference between the Ba and the shadow is that the Ba possesses substance and form, while the shadow has no form, except as a vision or picture. It seems to me that the Ba and the shadow may appear similar but are different in what they are.
>
> Correct me.
>
> Somo
>
>

| 28014|2009-02-24 18:47:53|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: TAUI & Ausar Auset Meditation Webinar|

From: Ra Un Nefer Amen
Subject: TAUI & Ausar Auset Meditation Webinar
To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:26 PM

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

You are invited to a free webinar, compliments of the Ausar Auset Society and Taui International Enterprises, Inc.

Meditation Fundamentals

Join us for a Webinar on Thursday February 26, and Sat February 28 (scroll down for registration details)

Space is limited.
Reserve your Thursday 26th Webinar seat now at:
https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/342078760

This lecture will introduce you to meditation techniques that will have you meditating in 60 minutes.Meditation is a natural function of the body-mind, and the capacity is hardwire in our brain.

Title: Meditation Fundamentals

Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009

Time: 7:00 PM - 8:30 PM EST

After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar. Meditation Fundamentals

Join us for a Meditation Fundamentals Webinar on Saturday February 28

Space is limited.
Reserve your Webinar seat now at:

https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/824112702

This lecture will introduce you to meditation techniques that will have you meditating in 60 minutes.Meditation is a natural function of the body-mind, and the capacity is hardwire in our brain.

Title: Meditation Fundamentals

Date: Saturday, February 28, 2009

Time: 7:30 PM - 9:00 PM EST

After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar.

System Requirements
PC-based attendees
Required: Windows 2000, XP Home, XP Pro, 2003 Server, Vista

Macintosh-based attendees
Required: Mac OS X 10.4 (Tiger) or newer

We expect you can join us. We appreciate your business.
Sincerely, Merisa Amen

TAUI International
TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

Forward email

Email Marketing by

SafeUnsubscribe®
This email was sent to tafari_sudra@yahoo.com by ausarauset@nilevalley.com.
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with SafeUnsubscribe | Privacy Policy.

Constant Contact TRY IT FREE

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset | 1100 Albemarle Road | Brooklyn | NY | 11218

| 28015|2009-02-24 19:21:52|Tafari khumbaka|vit.D and black folks& ms|
http://www.cnn.com/2006/HEALTH/conditions/12/19/vitamin.d.ms/index.html vit d and black people

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28016|2009-02-24 19:44:15|Alex van Deelen|Misreading The African Landscape - Re:DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRS|
I remember when they tried to blame the Sahara Desert
on the desert farmers of West Africa.

Look at all the forest they have destroyed, they would say.
Instead, people had created their won miniature forests
around wells and water sources.

There was a book written about it a long time ago, called:

Misreading the African Landscape: Society and Ecology in a Forest-Savanna Mosaic (African Studies) -
James Fairhead; Paperback
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/tg/detail/-/0521564999/

One comment reads:

When the authors of this paradigm-shifting book traveled to Guinea, they planned to study the social dimensions of what generations of ecologists had perceived as a tragedy of the commons which had led to massive deforestation. What they discovered instead was that generations of ecologists had been reading this African landscape backwards: mistaking forest islands which had been cultivated by precolonial peoples for the last remaining stands of an ancient forest which they imagined had once completely covered the plains. In fact, the area where rural farmer-silviculturalists had been accused of decimating a fictitious oldgrowth forest is too dry to allow tree communities to thrive naturally. Only through human intervention had the grassland been interrupted with small pockets of highly biodiverse forest communities.

A landmark work in political ecology, this remarkable study exposes the dark side of environmentalist intervention measures that seek to curb perceived tragedies of the commons by nationalizing the management of natural resources and prohibiting traditional land-use practices that are believed to have adverse consequences.

Under the influence of an expert-generated misreading of the local ecological history, the Guinean government had instituted environmental protection measures which penalized the traditional silvicultural practices that the precious forest islands depended upon for survival, on the mistaken supposition that these apparently primitive and abusive practices were a threat to the "last remaining" forests in the district.

Pay close attention to the ecological historiography presented in this book, which reveals what shaky data are often used by highly educated environmental scientists to infer the natural and social systems dynamics at work in a given environment. This blows away the widely-held assumption that low-income rural people without college-level environmental educations are the most short-sighted and ignorant decision-makers involved in the management of public forests and other ecologically complex natural resources.

***

Alex
| 28017|2009-02-24 23:24:04|Mahari Mengistu|Misreading The African Landscape - Re:DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRS|
Well everyone makes mistakes. I'm not saying that Afrakans in the Sahara did, in fact, make a mistake with the environment. I don't know. I didn't live there at that time. I have the utmost respect for my ancestors but I am not an idolater.
I suspected that if I offered this theory that there would be those who would perceive it as an attack on Afrakans rather than an idea to be examined or mulled over. There are no people, or groups who are beyond making mistakes. You can't find one single person who is free of having made mistakes. Would you even begin to assume that there could ever be a continent of people who did not make some mistakes?
One very huge undeniable one they made was not anticipating and stopping the encroaching barbarians from the mountains. Another one came some 2000+ years later (I suspect there were numerous others in between) when they engaged in trade with the white man - in some cases with us as the merchandise.
I seriously doubt if there was ever a time in history when life was not messy with the mistakes people made.
HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
>
> I remember when they tried to blame the Sahara Desert
> on the desert farmers of West Africa.
>
> Look at all the forest they have destroyed, they would say.
> Instead, people had created their won miniature forests
> around wells and water sources.
>
> There was a book written about it a long time ago, called:
>
> Misreading the African Landscape: Society and Ecology in
> a Forest-Savanna Mosaic (African Studies) -
> James Fairhead; Paperback
> http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/tg/detail/-/0521564999/
>
> One comment reads:
>
> When the authors of this paradigm-shifting book traveled to Guinea, they > planned to study the social dimensions of what generations of ecologists had > perceived as a tragedy of the commons which had led to massive > deforestation. What they discovered instead was that generations of > ecologists had been reading this African landscape backwards: mistaking > forest islands which had been cultivated by precolonial peoples for the last > remaining stands of an ancient forest which they imagined had once > completely covered the plains. In fact, the area where rural > farmer-silviculturalists had been accused of decimating a fictitious > oldgrowth forest is too dry to allow tree communities to thrive naturally.
> Only through human intervention had the grassland been interrupted with > small pockets of highly biodiverse forest communities.
>
> A landmark work in political ecology, this remarkable study exposes
the dark > side of environmentalist intervention measures that seek to curb perceived > tragedies of the commons by nationalizing the management of natural > resources and prohibiting traditional land-use practices that are believed > to have adverse consequences.
>
> Under the influence of an expert-generated misreading of the local > ecological history, the Guinean government had instituted environmental > protection measures which penalized the traditional silvicultural practices

> that the precious forest islands depended upon for survival, on the mistaken
> supposition that these apparently primitive and abusive practices were a > threat to the "last remaining" forests in the district.
>
> Pay close attention to the ecological historiography presented in this book,
> which reveals what shaky data are often used by highly educated > environmental scientists to infer the natural and social systems dynamics at > work in a given environment. This blows away the widely-held assumption that > low-income rural people without college-level environmental educations are > the most short-sighted and ignorant decision-makers involved in the > management of public forests and other ecologically complex natural > resources.
>
> ***
>
> Alex
>

| 28018|2009-02-25 02:40:48|KAMAU|How to Make A Negro christian FREE Book campaign-phase 3|

As a way to promote my book, I am giving away books!!
I am the author of a groundbreaking new work called How To Make A Negro Christian.
To help promote my work, I have created this Free Book Giveaway Campaign. When you purchase my book, you get to choose 1 of currently 15 offered titles to receive FREE! with your completed purchase.
Go to

http://negrochristian.webs.com for all of the details.

Listed below is the 3rd installment of FREE BOOKS being given away with the purchase of How To Make A Negro Christian. The initial idea is to change the site every 2 (two) weeks... however, that will really be determined by demand from you, the readers. If these books go quickly, then more books will be added sooner.

PLEASE BE REMINDED, UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED, ALL FREE BOOKS ARE

REVIEW
COPIES. Please go to the website for all the details

http://negrochristian.webs.com

ALSO PLEASE SEND A EMAIL TO kamau301@yahoo.com TO CHECK ON FREE BOOK AVAILABILITY BEFORE COMPLETING YOUR ORDER!!!

--Gullah Cultural Legacies:: A Synopsis of Gullah Traditions, Customary Beliefs, Art forms and Speech on Hilton Head Island and vicinal Sea Islands in South Carolina and Georgia (PB)
by Emory Campbell

--The Oprah Phenomenon (HB) FINISHED COPY
by Jennifer Harris & Elwood Watson

--Inheriting the Trade: A Northern Family Confronts Its Legacy as the Largest Slave-Trading Dynasty in U.S. History (PB)
by Thomas Norman DeWolf

--The Confidante: Condoleezza Rice and the Creation of the Bush Legacy (PB)
by Glenn Kessler

--The End of Days: Armageddon and Prophecies of the Return (PB)
by Zecharia Sitchin

--Fast Profits in Hard Times: 10 Secret Strategies to Make You Rich in an Up or Down Economy (PB)
by Jordan E. Goodman

--I Got Your Back: A Father and Son Keep it Real About Love, Fatherhood, Family, and Friendship
(PB)
by Eddie Sr Levert & Gerald Levert

--Letters to a Young Brother: MANifest Your Destiny (PB)
by Hill Harper

--Jesus Freaks: A True Story of Murder and Madness on the Evangelical Edge (PB)
by Don Lattin

--Walk Like A Warrior : A Young Man's Survival Guide (PB)
by The Health Initiatives for Youth

--The Scandalous Gospel of Jesus: What's So Good About the Good News? (PB)
by Peter J. Gomes

--Redemption: The Last Battle of the Civil War (PB)
by Nicholas Lemann

--Minority Rules: Turn Your Ethnicity Into a Competitive Edge (PB)
by Kenneth Arroyo Roldan

--Them: A Novel (PB)
by Nathan McCall

--Ghettonation: A Journey Into the Land of Bling and Home of the Shameless (PB)
by Cora Daniels
| 28019|2009-02-25 02:52:40|Asar Imhotep|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|
Peace

To your question of the Moors, you may want to check Dr. Ivan Van Sertima's The Golden Age of the Moor. I think that will be a good start for you.

If you are looking for an African concept of Evolution from an indigenous perspective, I would recommend the following books:

Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some
Indaba My Children - V. Credo Mutwa
Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Here you can an indigenous perspective of the concept of Evolution. It will be described in a more spiritual language. Now, if you are looking for an African perspective on Darwinian Evolution, I can't think of anything right now. It is pretty much an accepted explanatory model for change among species and populations across the world. I hope this helps.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:

From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:23 PM

Hello all,
I am looking for some references on the Moors, from our perspective. Can anyone send me some information. .. books, websites etc. Also, any information on "evolution" as well (our perspective) . Thank you!

| 28020|2009-02-25 14:04:56|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|

try john g jackson
man god and civilization
for the our perspective om evolution
also civilization or barbarism
cheik anta diop

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 2/25/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 4:52 AM

Peace

To your question of the Moors, you may want to check Dr. Ivan Van Sertima's The Golde of the Moor. I think that will be a good start for you.

If you are looking for an African concept of Evolution from an indigenous perspective, I v recommend the following books:

Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some
Indaba My Children - V. Credo Mutwa
Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Here you can an indigenous perspective of the concept of Evolution. It will be described i more spiritual language. Now, if you are looking for an African perspective on Darwinian Evolution, I can't think of anything right now. It is pretty much an accepted explanatory m for change among species and populations across the world. I hope this helps.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:23 PM

Hello all,
I am looking for some references on the Moors, from our perspective. Can anyone send me some information. .. books, websites etc. Also, any information on "evolution" as well (our perspective) . Thank you!

| 28021|2009-02-25 15:00:42|Maurice Humphrey|Nubian Spirit: The African Legacy of the Nile Valley (trailer)|
I haven't seen this video in it's entirety, but so far it looks good.
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=B7lxbAIiGA8

| 28022|2009-02-25 15:00:52|kemetnu6240|Ashra Kwesi to Speak in Baltimore on Ancient Kemet|
Hotep (Peace) Brothers and Sisters:

Transformation Network LLC presents Ashra Kwesi for a dynamic PowerPoint lecture entitled "The Afrikan Origin of Civilization and Western Freemasonry" on Saturday, March 7, 2009 from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. The location is Forest Park Senior Center, 4801 Liberty Heights Ave., Baltimore, MD, 21207. Tickets are $15 in advance and $20 at the door. They can be purchased at Everyone's Place African Center, 1356 W North Ave., Baltimore, MD 21217, (410) 728-0877. For more information, contact Haki Ammi at: (410) 209-9687 or (202) 213-3141.

Ashra Kwesi is a historian (griot) and lecturer on ancient African history and religion. He will reveal firsthand information from the ancient temples, tombs and papyrus papers recorded when African people were teachers of the world. Brother Kwesi brings a wealth of information and a powerful delivery, based on 28 years of study and tour experience in the African Nile Valley. Brother Kwesi spent 14 of those years as an assistant to the noted Kemetologist, Dr. Yosef Ben Jochannan.

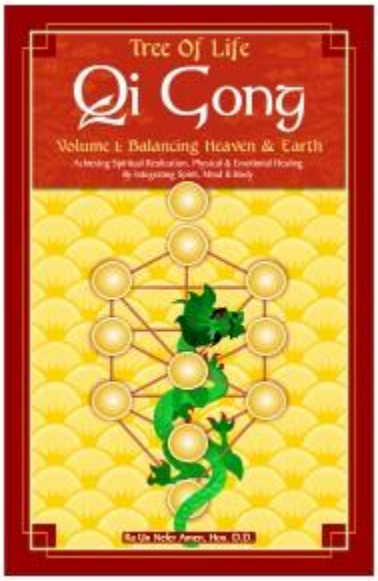
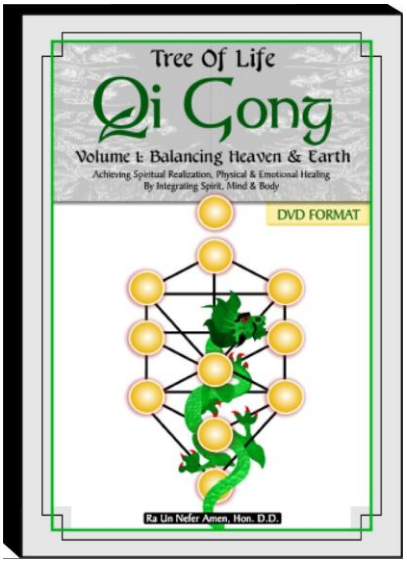
Brother Kwesi's visually documented presentation will reveal:
. The ancient history of the African Nile Valley that gave birth to civilization
. Imhotep, the world's first physician and Grand Master Teacher
. The African science of observing the universe that produced the world's first calendar
. The history of the pyramids and Sphinx, and their spiritual connection with Heaven and Earth
. The origin of western European freemasonry's symbols and spiritual concepts, their incorporation into America and the institutions of the western world
. The African mystery schools, the prototypes for the world's universities
. The destruction today to erase Black peoples' history from the ancient temples and tombs



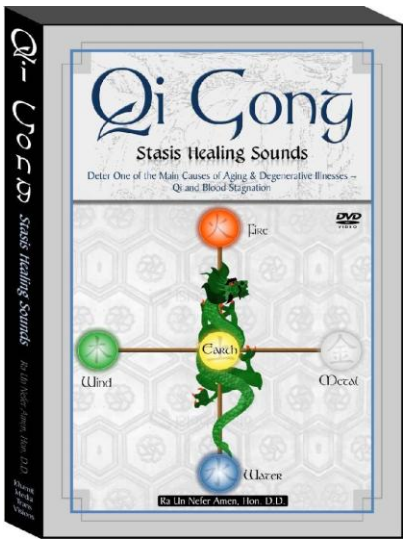
Ashra Kwesi and his wife, Merira are the owners of Kemet Nu Productions. They produce riveting, educational videos on the African origins of civilization, religion and culture. Emphasis is placed on visual documentation of the concepts and symbols from which the western world has drawn its society. Brother and Sister Kwesi also conduct annual educational tours to Egypt and Ethiopia on the Kemet Nu "Know Thyself" Educational Tour.

Hotep!
Kemet Nu Productions
www.kemetnu.com
Email: kemetnu@sbcglobal.net
Tel: 214 371-0206
| 28023|2009-02-25 19:57:57|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Qi Gong webinar follow up|



Thank you from TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset!

For attending our Qi Gong webinar. We appreciate your business.



By Ra Un Nefer Amen

By Ra Un Nefer Amen

Stasis Healing Sounds, Ra Un Nefer Amen

Save 25%

P.

Purchase both DVDs ($69.90) for $52.43. You save $17.47

Purchase any DVD and the Book ($49.90)for $37.43. You save $12.47

Purchase all three ($84.85) for $63.64. You save $21.21

Forward email

Email Marketing by

SafeUnsubscribe®
This email was sent to tafari_sudra@yahoo.com by ausarauset@nilevalley.com.
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with SafeUnsubscribe | Privacy Policy.

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset | 1100 Albemarle Road | Brooklyn | NY | 11218

| 28024|2009-02-26 05:55:46|Lamar Perryman|Re: Misreading The African Landscape - Re:DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF |

At some point in my earlier studies years ago I came across a anthropological peice that said the desertfication of the Sahara was done by a nuclear-research facility that went awry in a badly controlled experiment in the times of Sethi I or II, I think, the Father or Grandfather of Ramses the Great.
That the the Ancient Egyptians/Kemetians possessed some forms of Nuclear Energy, Electromagnetic Tools and Biodegradable Equipment is evident when looking at all the diamonds, steel and hard rocks that they had to cut to undertake the building ofMegalithic projects.
Some of the anthropologists in this report were quoted as saying that even now there are large amounts of radioactive currents or elements in the Sahara that are not the products of nature.

I will have to research my old files from over a decade ago to see if I still have that information and the source.
Hetep.!
MLP.,
Pharoah Isra'ilu El.

--- On Wed, 2/25/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:

From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Misreading The African Landscape - Re:DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF FIRST GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGES?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 7:24 AM

Well everyone makes mistakes. I'm not saying that Afrakans in the Sahara did, in fact, make a mistake with the environment. I don't know. I didn't live there at that time. I have the utmost respect for my ancestors but I am not an idolater.
I suspected that if I offered this theory that there would be those who would perceive it as an attack on Afrakans rather than an idea to be examined or mulled over. There are no people, or groups who are beyond making mistakes. You can't find one single person who is free of having made mistakes. Would you even begin to assume that there could ever be a continent of people who did not make some mistakes? One very huge undeniable one they made was not anticipating and stopping the encroaching barbarians from the mountains. Another one came some 2000+ years later (I suspect there were numerous others in between) when they engaged in trade with the white man - in some cases with us as the merchandise.
I seriously doubt if there was ever a time in history when life was not messy with the mistakes people made.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
>
> I remember when they tried to blame the Sahara Desert
> on the desert farmers of West Africa.
>
> Look at all the forest they have destroyed, they would say.
> Instead, people had created their won miniature forests
> around wells and water sources.
>
> There was a book written about it a long time ago, called:

>
> Misreading the African Landscape: Society and Ecology in
> a Forest-Savanna Mosaic (African Studies) -
> James Fairhead; Paperback
> http://www.amazon. com/exec/ obidos/tg/ detail/-/ 0521564999/
>
> One comment reads:
>
> When the authors of this paradigm-shifting book traveled to Guinea, they > planned to study the social dimensions of what generations of ecologists had
> perceived as a tragedy of the commons which had led to massive > deforestation. What they discovered instead was that generations of > ecologists had been reading this African landscape backwards: mistaking > forest islands which had been cultivated by precolonial peoples for
the last > remaining stands of an ancient forest which they imagined had once
> completely covered the plains. In fact, the area where rural > farmer-silvicultura lists had been accused of decimating a fictitious > oldgrowth forest is too dry to allow tree communities to thrive
naturally.
> Only through human intervention had the grassland been interrupted with > small pockets of highly biodiverse forest communities.
>
> A landmark work in political ecology, this remarkable study exposes
the dark
> side of environmentalist intervention measures that seek to curb perceived
> tragedies of the commons by nationalizing the management of natural > resources and prohibiting traditional land-use practices that are believed
> to have adverse consequences.
>
> Under the influence of an expert-generated misreading of the local > ecological history, the Guinean government had instituted environmental > protection measures which penalized the traditional silvicultural
practices
> that the precious forest islands depended upon for survival, on the mistaken
> supposition that these apparently primitive and abusive practices were a > threat to the "last remaining" forests in the district.
>
> Pay close attention to the ecological historiography presented in this book,
> which reveals what shaky data are often used by highly educated > environmental scientists to infer the natural and social systems

dynamics at > work in a given environment. This blows away the widely-held assumption that > low-income rural people without college-level environmental educations are
> the most short-sighted and ignorant decision-makers involved in the > management of public forests and other ecologically complex natural > resources.
>
> ***
>
> Alex
>

| 28025|2009-02-26 05:56:04|bioegyptiansgreeks|Promoting a new website|
http://www.geocities.com/bioegyptiansgreeks/

It discusses the biological relationships of ancient Egyptians and Greeks. It is meant to be a rebuttal to white racialist claims of pure "white" ancient Egyptians and Greeks. I thought you all would be interested.
| 28026|2009-02-26 05:56:08|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Sierra Leone rebel leaders guilty of war crimes|
SO SAD

> Personal message:
>
>
>
> Sierra Leone rebel leaders guilty of war crimes
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090225/ap_on_re_af/af_sierra_leone_war_crimes
>
> ==========
> Yahoo! News
> http://news.yahoo.com/
>
| 28027|2009-02-26 05:56:26|Ginger Daniels|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|
It does, thank you so much.As far as evolution, I dont know exactly what I'm looking for. I just know alot of it doesnt make sense to me... and since I dont trust the scientists of this world, I wanted toget another take on it. I will check these out. thanks forthe reply!

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com

Date: Wed, 25 Feb 2009 02:52:39 -0800
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim

Peace

To your question of the Moors, you may want to check Dr. Ivan Van Sertima's The Golden Age of the Moor. I think that will be a good start for you.

If you are looking for an African concept of Evolution from an indigenous perspective, I would recommend the following books:

Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some
Indaba My Children - V. Credo Mutwa
Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Here you can an indigenous perspective of the concept of Evolution. It will be described in a more spiritual language. Now, if you are looking for an African perspective on Darwinian Evolution, I can't think of anything right now. It is pretty much an accepted explanatory model for change among species and populations across the world. I hope this helps.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:23 PM

Hello all,
I am looking for some references on the Moors, from our perspective. Can anyone send me some information. .. books, websites etc. Also, any information on "evolution" as well (our perspective) . Thank you!

Its the same Hotmail. If by same you mean up to 70% faster. Get your account now.
| 28028|2009-02-26 05:56:37|Ginger Daniels|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|
Ok, funny I have civilazation or barbarism... havnt gotten to that part of the book yet, but I havnt read it in a while... gotta take his info in doses: = 0

Will check out John Jackson... thank you!

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
Date: Wed, 25 Feb 2009 14:04:54 -0800
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim

try john g jackson
man god and civilization
for the our perspective om evolution
also civilization or barbarism
cheik anta diop

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

> --- On Wed, 2/25/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 4:52 AM
>
> Peace
>
> To your question of the Moors, you may want to check Dr. Ivan Van Sertima's The Golde > of the Moor. I think that will be a good start for you.
>
> If you are looking for an African concept of Evolution from an indigenous perspective, I v > recommend the following books:
>
> Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some
> Indaba My Children - V. Credo Mutwa
> Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Here you can an indigenous perspective of the concept of Evolution. It will be described in a more spiritual language. Now, if you are looking for an African perspective on Darwinian Evolution, I can't think of anything right now. It is pretty much an accepted explanatory model for change among species and populations across the world. I hope this helps.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:23 PM

Hello all,
I am looking for some references on the Moors, from our perspective. Can anyone send me some information. .. books, websites etc. Also, any information on "evolution" as well (our perspective) . Thank you!

Its the same Hotmail. If by same you mean up to 70% faster. Get your account now.
| 28029|2009-02-26 06:31:02|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|
entu-nana, your welcome

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 2/25/09, Ginger Daniels wrote:
From: Ginger Daniels
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu

Ampim
To: "Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com"
Date: Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 6:44 PM

Ok, funny I have civilazation or barbarism... havnt gotten to that part of the book yet, but I havnt read it in a while... gotta take his info in doses: = 0

Will check out John Jackson... thank you!

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: tafari_sudra@ yahoo.com
Date: Wed, 25 Feb 2009 14:04:54 -0800
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim

try john g jackson
man god and civilization
for the our perspective om evolution
also civilization or barbarism
cheik anta diop

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 2/25/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 4:52 AM

Peace

To your question of the Moors, you may want to check Dr. Ivan Van Sertima's The Golde of the Moor. I think that will be a good start for you.

If you are looking for an African concept of Evolution from an indigenous perspective, I v recommend the following books:

Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some
Indaba My Children - V. Credo Mutwa
Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Here you can an indigenous perspective of the concept of Evolution. It will be described i more spiritual language. Now, if you are looking for an African perspective on Darwinian Evolution, I can't think of anything right now. It is pretty much an accepted explanatory m for change among species and populations across the world. I hope this helps.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 4:23 PM

Hello all,
I am looking for some references on the Moors, from our perspective. Can anyone send me some information. .. books, websites etc. Also, any information on "evolution" as well (our perspective) . Thank you!

Its the same Hotmail. If by same you mean up to 70% faster. Get your account now.

| 28030|2009-02-26 06:37:32|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Sierra Leone rebel leaders guilty of war crimes| hatred, lust and stupidity knows NO colorline

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 2/25/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Sierra Leone rebel leaders guilty of war crimes
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 11:22 PM

SO SAD

> Personal message:
>
>
>
> Sierra Leone rebel leaders guilty of war crimes
>
> http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090225/ ap_on_re_ af/af_ sierra_ leone_ war_ crimes
>
> ========== ========= ========= ========= ========= ========= ===
> Yahoo! News
> http://news. yahoo.com/
>

| 28031|2009-02-26 06:41:11|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Cold Fusion|

--- On Thu, 2/26/09, Linda Mapleswrote:

From: Linda Maples
Subject: Fw: Cold Fusion
To: "tafari"
Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 5:12 AM

peace and love~patchouliwindz

--- On Thu, 2/26/09, Linda Maples wrote:

From: Linda Maples
Subject: Cold Fusion
To: "Don"
Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 6:11 AM

Source: personalgrowthcourses.net
Cold Fusion: This inspiring, well researched documentary will open your eyes to knowledge of which few are aware.
Learn how some amazing inventions have been suppressed by those who would lose billions of dollars if oil were replaced, with riveting video testimony of top scientists from around the world and footage of their amazing experiments, you will learn not only about the science and vast potential of cold fusion, but also about the powerful financial forces which systematically work to stop cheap energy from being developed.

http://personalgrowthcourses.net/video/cold_fusion

peace and love~patchouliwindz

| 28032|2009-02-26 06:59:47|Tafari khumbaka|evolution| http://www.rediff.com/news/2009/feb/26sex-is-380-million-years-old.htm
click above

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28033|2009-02-26 11:15:10|Alex van Deelen|Re: Misreading The African Landscape - Re:DID AFRAKANS CAUSE ONE OF|
" At some point in my earlier studies years ago I came across a anthropological peice that said the desertfication of the Sahara was done by a nuclear-research facility that went awry in a badly controlled experiment in the times of Sethi I or II, I think, the Father or Grandfather of Ramses the Great. "

Sounds more plausible than blaming the Sahara Desert on African farmers.

The problem with either theory is that there are deserts at the same lattitude, around the globe. It has more to do with global airflow and weather patterns than anything else.

Which is why it is so interesting that the Sahara was once green, which would imply that very recently (about 5000 years ago), climates shifted dramatically.

Albert Einstein had a theory that the earth not only rotates around the sun, and rotates around it's axis (once every 24 hours), but that it also rotates around it's center and that is why it's axis is under an angle relative to the sun. That shift may explain a lot about shifting climate ranges on earth, like the one that dried up the Sahara.
| 28034|2009-02-26 11:25:21|Alex van Deelen|Promoting a new website|
http://www.geocities.com/bioegyptiansgreeks/

" It discusses the biological relationships of ancient Egyptians and Greeks. It is meant to be a rebuttal to white racialist claims of pure "white" ancient Egyptians and Greeks. I thought you all would be interested. "

I remember the whole Black Athena debate well - much of it fought out on this great mailing list.

What is obvious, is that there is an ethnic continuum throughout the Nile Valley.

I have always wondered why there are so many Greek girls with clearly frizzy (-ish) hair. Whose genes were responsible for that? Perhaps the daughters (and sons) of Danaos?

Alex
| 28035|2009-02-26 13:57:00|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: resend use this one please|
Attachments :

please check out attachment too this email

tua-u (thanx)

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28036|2009-02-26 16:57:13|Divine Allah|Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified soc|
Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism and is it "a solution" for Black People given the recent economic environment? If it is a solution, then how and what are the criteria to select the "managers" (monarchs, kings, priest) for such a set up, or is it not feasible or necessary, given wide spread corruption and lack of the practice of "Maat" in society? Or is the "free market" perfectly fine and an adequate vessel for a diversity of socialist, communist, capitalist environments. Is the free markets main failure the lack of "Maat" in engaging in business practices, or is it fundamentally flawed for large populations? Also what are some of the drawbacks of socialism, communism, or communal economics that are not as apparent. Take a gander of this excerpt from Sebai Maa (Muata Ashby) book, The Collapse of Civilization, page 327:

The ancient system of distribution of goods throughout Ancient Egypt operated in a way so that goods were collected by royal decree and the Vizier, governors, and tax collectors and a veritable army of bureaucrats managed the process. So farm crops in the north of Egypt were collected and redistributed so that everyone would get what they needed, Crops of a different sort in the south would in turn be redistributed to the north, and so on. Therefore, this was a massive system of economy based on collective sharing of the wealth of the country without: leaving some to fend for themselves or creating associations or guilds that segregate people from subsistence level goods. This system of economy may be thought of as a Barter and Collective Sharing Economy. One present day similar but small-scale system of sharing is called Communitysupported agriculture (CSA). Typically, CSA farms are small, independent, labor intensive, family farms,360 h Ancient Egypt, the system was countrywide and managed by the central government, the Pharaonic system. By Roman times, however, the Pharaonic state which had controlled the general economy by collecting and redistributing had been mostly dismantled by the Roman conquerors in favor of a colonial administrative system, which had the main goal of exploiting Egypt in favor of Rome, Egypt became the "breadbasket" that allowed the Roman empire to grow, but Egypt was depleted of its wealth. Trade fell under the control of private persons who ofien organized themselves in guilds. One such example is the association of the salt merchants of Tebtunis:

The undersigned mepr, salt mei-chan ts of Tebtynis, meeting together have decided by common consent to elect one of their number, a good man, Apynchh, son of Orseus, both supervisor and collector of the public taxes for the corning eighth yeor of Tibepius
P.Mich.: 5:245,47 CE
APIS rscord: michigan.apis.2876
After the Romans conquered Egypt, a positive interest rate scheme imposed on invested capital was introduced to the economy and the wealth from the profits were taken out of the country, and so the temple sites began to decline.....

Divine Ruler Equality Allah
| 28037|2009-02-26 20:12:34|Tafari khumbaka|(no subject)|
click tafari

tafari

our shambala/shangrila
the tibetans talk of a place call Shambala it is in many of their books a principle topic of Kalachakra.
there is a old movie and at the end of the movie (its in blk& white) the characters sit around a table and talk and smoke and drink and a principle character says the final line/ may we all find our own shambala.
this is a principle factor of the european and eurocentic life, that is too say that the truth is different for each indivdual, that each indivdual has their idea of heaven and thats the heaven or hell he/she experience's and shall experience in death.

europeans/americans you and I say "if we are christian " there is only one way and if we are collegiate we allsay it is psych... or mind and any way the mind takes is ,the way of that indivdual.
but many ancient philosophies map out a mindscape that leads to a shamballa/arrat , for the western mind this is a happy place of ones own idea/imagination the self fullfilling prophesy developed from mind clutter and personality, but for the ancients it was and is a place thats a destination thats navigable where souls of little bodhicitta meet.
the Kalachakra mandala in tibet is made of sand it takes hours and days 10days work, then at end of ritual all sand is brushed away.
our Kalachakra mandala is the opposite of the tibetan sand mandala , but only the earth itself can brush it away.....

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28038|2009-02-26 22:36:04|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: africa is the world| they suffer ridicule, and even sacrifice..... the search for the different families of peoples on the earth can begin and end here > http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cEtl91408eM&feature=related

>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28039|2009-02-27 03:38:56|Obadele Kwame Kambon|Come join me at 3 Hour Intensive Twi Workshop: Verbal Taboos in Akan|

Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network
Facilitating Dewhitenization the World Over: Abibitumi Kasa!

Obadele Kwame Kambon has invited you to the event '3 Hour Intensive Twi Workshop: Verbal Taboos in Akan (Twi) 3/7/09 2PM EST' on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network!
3 Hour Intensive Twi Workshop: Verbal Taboos in Akan (Twi) 3/7/09 2PM EST

Obadele Kwame Kambon

Time: February 27, 2009 from 6pm to 7pm
Location: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
Organized By: Obadele Kwame Kambon

Event Description:
3 Hour Intensive Twi Language Workshop
Saturday, March 7, 2009, 2:00PM Eastern Standard Time.

What: Three Hour Intensive Twi Language Workshop: Verbal Taboos in Akan (Twi): The Unmentionable!

Who: You Afrikan!

The workshop will cover:

1) Understanding Akan verbal taboos
2) Pronunciation
3) Examples of Akan verbal taboos of various genres including oaths, proper names, unmentionables, curses and more.

When: Saturday, March 7, 2009, 2:00PM-5PM EST

Where: AbibitumiKasa.com Member classroom

How much: The cost for this one (1) day workshop is $50 per participant. Children 12 and under are free (when accompanied by a registered adult). No prerequisite knowledge of the Twi language is necessary and all course materials are built into the cost of the class.

Why: What do the Twi words for leopard, mentruation, urination, leprosy, the death of the king, broom, swearing by the queenmothers pinky toe, cursing a person to barrenness and mentioning the Supreme Being by proper name have in common? They are all verbal taboos; words and phrases that are not to be said outside of specific socially restricted contexts. Understanding Akan verbal taboos will help one understand the worldview of Afrikan people as well as prevent one from inadvertently insulting Akans by saying an unmentionable.

This will be one of our most interesting workshops to date. We look forward to seeing you there!

How: Be sure to come to our Member Classroom at 2:00PM Eastern Time promptly at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php Be advised, you must first register for the free Abibitumi Kasa Liberation Forum here http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php first to access the online member classroom. If you already have an account be sure to login at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/login.php

For those interested in registering for this workshop, follow the link to http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

to submit the registration form and submit payment at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/payment.html to reserve your space in the class.

Be sure to follow all seven (7) steps of the registration process including font installation and audio/video tutorials to expedite getting into the language on

Saturday without having to fiddle around with tech issues. Click here for all video tutorials http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/video-tutorials-how-abibitumi-kasa/.

If you have been interested in getting involved in the Twi classes at Abibitumi Kasa (Black Power Language) but havent gotten a chance to or if you're an Abibitumi Kasa regular, you won't want to miss this informative and BlackPowerful workshop.

Keep an eye out for one day workshops in Yoruba and Wolof as well.

Obadele Kwame Kambon
011.233.24.0872928
info@abibitumikasa.com

See more details and RSVP on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network:
http://abibitumikasa.ning.com/events/event/show?id=2053441%3AEvent%3A19486&xgi=16e3gF1

About Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network
Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Language and Liberation Institutes dewhitenize parts of the brain others can't reach.

320 members
475 photos
166 songs
66 videos
110 discussions
54 events
50 blog posts

To control which emails you receive on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network, click here

.
| 28040|2009-02-27 07:45:19|pharoahisrael@yahoo.com|Time For A Moorish Plebiscite : [TheBlackList] RE: Reparations / Cel|
To Brother Deshon Way and All IndigenousMoorish American Nationals, Declared or Undeclared. Again My Brother Moors it is well known and accepted now as anthropological, biological and geneaological fact that we as(Black Americans) are 100% Moorish.!
What we have to consider is that WE are also 100% Igbo and Yoruba too.! That we have Two Native Indigenous Ancestries as Native Indigenous Americans (Moorish) and Native West African/African-American (Igbo and Yoruba). In other words we have Empirical BUSINESS on both sides of The Atlantic.
My take on all of this is that we as a people proclaimOur Moorish HeritageAnd Way OfLife but factor in The Igbo and Yoruba Geneaology as well. I am hoping that all of the heads involved in this process come to a unconditional agreement as to our ancestries here and a public program to have all three represented here. I am aware that Black Americans also have Mande, Akan, Ewe, Fon, Kongo, Hausa and other West African Bloodlines as wellbut Our Main Three are, in order, MOOR, IGBO and YORUBA.
I am just stating this fact so that as Moors we are inclusive of or pay respects toall three of them. That is all, Wise Ones. This is a Monumental Movement at a Monumental Time.
See Americans of Igbo Ancestry,
1.http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Igbo_American Isorkan Yoruba Magazine : Yoruba Americans,
2. http://www.yoruba.org/Magazine/Winter97/Win9706.htm
Lost Feather :The Indigenous Moors,

3. http://members.tripod.com/pointingbird/lostfeatherintl/index.htm
Respectfully and Sincerely,
MLP.,
UAACA-BFN,
Black Federal Nationalists,
Pharoah Isra'ilu-El,
Israelite Moors,
http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Black_Federal_Nationalists/
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/American_Federal_Nationalists/

--- On Fri, 1/30/09, Dr. Mustafa Ansari wrote:

From: Dr. Mustafa Ansari
Subject: Re: [TheBlackList] RE: Reparations / Celebrations and Struggle
To: pharoahisrael@yahoo.com
Cc: "littleblackbook@juno.com" , LLegall@winston.com, Rabeha@worldnet.att..net, DaveMyers@discussrace.com, PeteLorins@aol.com, Madolphine@hotmail.com, Kermeady@aol.com, afrikanspirit@yahoo.com
Date: Friday, January 30, 2009, 10:38 PM

Greetings, Peace and Blessing to you Pharoahisrael,

Your analysis of who we are corroborates the latest research. I would love to have you on the station to further this conversation. The question of political identity is the basis of our human restoration claims against the colonializers. I will contact you for upcoming shows. We are working feverishly to have the station launched by late March.

On Fri, Jan 30, 2009 at 2:33 PM, Dr. Mustafa Ansari <dr.mustafaansari@gmail.com> wrote:

On Fri, Jan 30, 2009 at 2:01 PM, <pharoahisrael@yahoo.com> wrote:

Greetings and Shalem,
Wise Elders and Matriarchs. I had not replied to this conversation before but after reading the opinions of Our Leaders such as yourselves in todays struggle
I must comment on Our Racial Identification. Legally we know that Who a Person is is Determined by Blood and Ancestry. This is also a Common Law of Identification and Inheritance as well for it is based on Common Sense. Ordinarily we as a group of peoples would not have to worry about identification as many of us do now but the matter of Slavery, De-Humanization, De-Socialization and the Criminalization of our peoples resulting from that Social and Institutional Pogrom makes our identification as a group all the more important. In fact some would say that it is solely important.
The two valid ways to Identify a person is Phenotype and Geneotype. The phenotype is how a person looks by physicalskin-complexion. If a person is Dark-Skinned to Brown-Skinned with a certain type of hair that iswoolly or straight then that person is black. The othertest is not so simple as we would like it to be. Since the Blood is the Life of a Person it also determines who one is related to in the Society. This means that ALL of Black Peoplesare related somewhat to Whites and Indians because of Intermixtures during Slavery and Afterwards. It also means that there are a lot of Whites, Indians and Latinos who have Black Blood in them too.

The Social Insanity called slavery has left it's mark on the whole population. However as Black Americans we share ethnicities and ancestries with other racio-ethnic groups while primarily remaining who we are as a Black Peoples By BOTH Phenotype and Geneotype.
I also use the word Black American instead of Afro-African American because we are Native Indigenous Citizens born on this Continent and NOT any Land or Nation in Africa.
In America We have Two main ancestries. That is The Native Black Americans who lived in The South-Southeastern United States known as The Cherokee-Seminole-Yuchi-Muscogee Indians. These are the Mound (Pyramid) Builders of North America who co-existed here with theIndian-Oriental Asians Americans who Historians call " The Indians " without mentioning the Black Native Americans. In fact All three groups of peoples were here in America when Euro-Caucasians arrived some seven centuries ago. That these peoples are black can be attested to by Anthro-Archaeological Evidences and their Own Geneaology Records where some state that they are descendants of The Olmecs and others cite West African Tribes such as The Ndi Igbo, Ewe, Mande and others. These intermarried among their own for the most part and their mixed descendants still follow that custom to this day when left to their own devices.
It was these Native Black Americans that Our West African Ancestors mixed in with during the Maafa of The Transatlantic Slave Trade and causes us to be whom we are today irrespective of the forced intermixtures with Whites during the Slavery Era. We have to rely on Anthropology, Archaeology, Ethnology, Geneology, Linguistics and Tribalism in Order to Press Our Case and Make This Whole Affair of Reparations and Reclaimations work for us as a whole.
As to why I have always preferred the term Black American over that of African-American is the fact that we have Black peoples living on every continent of this globe and it has been this way long, long, long before Caucasian Colonialism and Slavery. Indigenous Black everywhere refer to themselves as Naturalized Peoples where ever they are at for e.g. The Black Australians, The Black Dravidians of Asia, Black Europeans and even Black Peoples in South-Central America and The Island Nations. The term " African-American" is a HUGE distraction for Native Black Americans to accomplish Our Goal Here of of AIndigenous Homeland for ALL Black Americans here in these United States. We also have to look at the fact that We have Black Americans today with a mixture of Oriental Blood in them as Well. The same for Black Latinos. Using the term " African-American " instead of Plain, Simple, Straightforward Black American plays right into the enemy's hands when it comes to our Racial Identification here as a Socio-Ethnic Group in this Country. We are Black Americans and if we were to go to Africa, Asia, South America, Australia, Europe, Canada or any of the island Nations it still would NOT CHANGE The Fact that We are Born and Naturalized in these United States and Territories.!!!
At BFN-AFN we Claim ALL of Our Ancestries without conceding the fact that we are Naturalized Indigenous Citizens of this Country and without compromising Our Inheritance either. That is what OUR ANCESTORS would want us to do here.

Sincerely, I Remain
MLP.,
UAACA-BFN,
Black Federal Nationalists,
American Federal Nationalists.
http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Black_Federal_Nationalists/
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/American_Federal_Nationalists/

--- On Fri, 1/30/09, Dr. Mustafa Ansari <dr.mustafaansari@gmail.com> wrote:

From: Dr. Mustafa Ansari <dr.mustafaansari@gmail.com>
Subject: Re: [TheBlackList] RE: Reparations / Celebrations and Struggle
To: "littleblackbook@juno.com" <littleblackbook@juno.com>
Cc: LLegall@winston.com, Rabeha@worldnet.att.net, DaveMyers@discussrace.com, PeteLorins@aol.com, Madolphine@hotmail.com, Kermeady@aol.com, "Marion Lamar Perryman" <pharoahisrael@yahoo.com>, afrikanspirit@yahoo.com
Date: Friday, January 30, 2009, 7:31 PM

Sorry, I had to step out.but I love this conversation.

Yes, I am talking about Presidential Order 1310, just because Bush ignored its directive to incorporate the human rights doctrines into American Law, doesn't mean Obama should. In fact, we are going to ask Mr.. Obama to implement and improve the Presidential Order, by allowing our elected officials in an advisory post so that we can make sure that the right types of repair are being implemented. We are going to ask Mr. Obama, to make his place in history by implementing all of the human rights conventions.

Think brother, this is a dream of Malcolm's. Why? Because human rights affords a Marshall Plan like remedy for "crimes against humanity) I.e,. slavery, genocide, and racial discrimination in education, employment and housing.

Human restorative law gives us a remedy to obtain the property that we would have had, had we had not been deprived of our wages, the right to an education, and an unencumbered American marketplace. Human rights gives us full reparations.i.e restitution, rehabilitation, restoration, and a guarantee of non-repetition. UN General Assembly Resolution 60/147 (2006).

Clearly, we are indigenous to America. In fact, according to new archaeological discoveries the Africans were the first presence in America, predating the Asian mixture by at least 3,000 years, ie Indians. Our tribes were commingled over this African-Asian tribes by the various colonializers, creating slaves and ....then a despised class of sub-citizens.

You see family, human rights law cannot be analyzed like civil rights law. Human rights are not just words on a paper, human rights spring out of relationships that people proactively pursue as a definition of their state, National liberation group, or indigenous group. If we understood our human rights we would realize our collective power to control our economics, civil and criminal affairs.

Most lawyers and political scientist say that the first procedural step to a collective political identity, is the election of a political identity. We cannot be a effective, powerful collective, without an election, This is democracy.

The second step after the establishment of a political identity, is to either agree upon an interim government, or have immediate elections. This is the common way that indigenous tribes are transformed into recognized indigenous groups in the U.S and most of the world.i.e the American Indians, Hamas, ANC, Mau-Mau, Hawaiians, Eskimos, etc., .

In any case, I would like to continue this discussion with you on a Human rights radio station that we are erecting to discuss these issues. We will make an announcement soon of the radio station and our Plebiscite exploratory committee. The 24/7 station will be launched in March under the call letters www.AfricanNationRadio.com and will have African diasporic music, conscious Hip-Hop etc..... and so that we can explain to our rights to indigenous status and reparations to our youths, intellectuals and mainstream African American.

The talk show will showcase professor's, scholars, politicians and activist. We will invite a number of people who have participated in these talks on Reparations/Celebrations and struggle.

In the meantime, I will make arrangement on our blog talk show. Our conversation is to important.

On Wed, Jan 28, 2009 at 2:11 PM, littleblackbook@juno.com <littleblackbook@juno.com> wrote:

Dear Dr. Mustafa (I notice you've changed your email address to 'impress' me that you've got a 'Dr.' in front yer name - you really don't know me - I'man arch iconoclast!) :
And, kindly don't talk down to me - I know what a 'plebiscite' is - and whether or not you're 'an international lawyer,' if you're still using that anachronistic, euphemistic, inaccurate phrase "African American,' to label all Blackfolk living in the U.S.A., you're still wrong and by so doing, contributing to the perpetuation of colorism against us Blackfolk and other people of color: didn't you READ Brother Laurence Legall's piece about self-identity? SHEESH!

And my chilren and I - I reiterate, are not 'minorities,' don't care what you say.

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Sister Carol,

I am talking about legal definitions which are tied to economics and politics. I am not talking about renaming ourselves just to rename ourselves. This is not about "following fashion"??? Just try em???? Please my sister you are under-estimating me I am a International lawyer, so what I am talking about is a procedure called a 'plebiscite'. A plebiscite is a special internal vote amongst African Americans, so there will be no white folks holding ballot boxes.

Furthermore, sister there are black men who are not afraid of white folks. To quote Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. "I am not afraid of any man", Mine eyes have seen UN Resolution 60/147 and Presidential order 13107.

Finally, I am not talking about white man's law except when I talk about so-called 'civil rights' . In regards, to this law you and your children are minorities. So, if you want to change that you cannot just declare. We as a people have to elect who we are.

Finally, International law is made by the nations of the world, which are predominately nations of color in Africa, Asia and South America....As opposed to American law which is made by majority white people.

On Wed, Jan 28, 2009 at 1:04 PM, Dr. Mustafa Ansari <dr.mustafaansari@gmail.com> wrote:

What 'chu talkin' 'bout, Mustafa? Kindly elucidate - 'cause I'm not fathoming what you mean ta' say!
Your Sister-in-THE-Struggle,
Carol Taylor

African Americans were made in the United States on Southern plantations from over 500 African tribes being intertwined with over 500 Indian tribes, with infusions of Europeans. This makes us indigenous to the U.S under the International law definition. This indigenous status entitles us to land rights and the right to self-determination.

Instead, we have been hoodwinked into thinking that we are a simple minority people. Under domestic law minority people only have the rights to individual redress for discrimination.....This is a huge difference in terms of money, respect and authority...

Consequently, we are campaigning for a second election, so that we can chose the proper status. This status would allow us to have 'collective standing' for our reparations claims. In fact, this is why the reparations claims have not been successful.

It is shameful that we do not have a political identity. This one fact, leaves us up to ridicule to people and vulnerable to gentrification, police brutality, bankers, the educational, justice for our political prisoners, and economic systems.

Any good lawyer or Political scientist will tell you that the U.S cannot unilaterally designate that we are minorities to suit their purposes for us. This is why the civil rights lawyers and reparation activist have not been successful.

I just wrote a book about who we are and why it is important to be who we are. Called "Defining Change under International Law and Presidential Orders. I did so because I want to know why President Obama, Congress, the Civil rights and reparation activist do not follow the General Assembly Resolution 60/147 and Presidential Order 13107. I and the international lawyers are steamed over how our interest have been sold out by these people who are supposed to protect our rights. Read the laws and you will be steamed to. In fact, read the laws and then look in the mirror and see that you are African, Indian and European. Then you will understand at least a part of equation.

--- On Wed, 1/28/09, littleblackbook@juno.com <littleblackbook@juno.com> wrote:
From: littleblackbook@juno.com <littleblackbook@juno.com>
Subject: Fw: Re: [TheBlackList] RE: Reparations / Celebrations and Struggle
To: Mustafaansari2002@yahoo.com
Cc: LLegall@winston.com, DaveMyers@discussrace.com, PeteLorins@aol.com, Madolphine@hotmail.com, Kam_williams@hotmail.com
Date: Wednesday, January 28, 2009, 9:03 AM

On Tue, Jan 27, 2009 at 9:05 PM, Dr. Mustafa Ansari <dr.mustafaansari@gmail.com> wrote:
Corrected Post

The question of political identity is a question of political election.

That is we are who we say we are.

The answer to that question is a trillion dollar question and gives "Indigenous African American people" or whoever we say we are; except for a "minority citizens" who are only entitled to civil rights-the right to self authority over land and the monopolies of its economies...

The question of the 21st century is the question of indigenous status.

On Tue, Jan 27, 2009 at 5:27 PM, littleblackbook@juno.com <littleblackbook@juno.com> wrote:

THE RIGHT OFSELF-IDENTIFICATION

The issue here is to be self-determinant enough to be able to identify our people accurately and notacquiesce tothose who currently have the political and economic means to impose a label on a group of people. I don't think anyone can deny that the biggest fight that we have when attempting to recover reparations is accurately identifyingour people who are the ancestors of individuals who have been enslaved as well as identifying the people of Africa, on the other side, whose ancestors,were robbed of the ability to utilize the collective intellectual as well as labor capital to develop their nation as a result of the slave trade, the ramifications of which wecollectively as apeople here in the United States and Africa still feel today.

An identity, with out preaching to the converted, must take into account something thatis observed, something that has intrinsic value to the subject observed, which is usually a combination of a culture and a land mass of origin. To call an individual an African-American, by itself, from a global historical development perspective, could includethe following:

- individuals with white skin color who where born in Africa and moved to America;
- all individualson this planet who are living in America (this is from a historical perspective,of Cheik Anta Diop, among many others, whospent their entire lives proving that all humans are of African ancestry.).

Also, to continue to use "African American", by itself, as an identification for people with "observable skin melanin," excludes me as well as many millions of individualswho sharesimilar circumstances living in America from the Caribbean.

Therefore what Carol is saying is "African American" as an identity is exclusive and inconsistent (with our scholars and world history) and does notmeet the standard of identification for a self determinant people with shared values, interest, and, definitely, shared unique experiences in this historically hostile to color country.

Thus in resolution to this dilemma of identity we should be using: Black African American, Black African Caribbeans living in America, and people of color living in America (which should be used sparingly if at all).

Your Brother In the Struggle

Laurence Legall Taylor
Vice President
The Institute for "Interracial" Harmony, Inc. www.racismtest.org
www.discussrace.com

From: littleblackbook@juno.com [mailto:littleblackbook@juno.com]
Sent: Tuesday, January 27, 2009 4:36 PM
To: afrikaspirit3@yahoo.com
Cc: Legall, Laurence W.; LegallCindy@hotmail.com; DaveMyers@discussrace.com; PeteLorins@aol.com; Madolphine@hotmail.com;

Kam_williams@hotmail.com
Subject: Fw: Re: Fw: Reparations / Celebrations and Struggle

Brutha Pruitt:
Although I find your response about the www.racismtest.org as notincluding the "the scholarly perspective..." kinda' muddy and pedantic, the obvious inference I must draw from what you're not admitting is that you haven't taken the racism test. (I wonder why not? don't you believe that Blackfolk have been conditioned by the same institutionally racist/colorist mis-education as whites and people of other colors?)
About your utilizing the inaccurate term 'African American' because that's what the masses do - the 'masses' also thought slavery of people looking like you was perfectly acceptable. Oh Oh...
And das far as my not 'having the right' to correct folk on counterproductive language usage - you gotta' be kidding! I think, therefore I am; I am, therefore I have the right to express myself after due diligent analysis!
Still Your Sister-in-THE-Struggle,
Carol T.

---------- Forwarded Message ----------

Greetings My Sista,
I agree with what you say but when I send messages I am targeting the masses. Th recognize the term African-Americanas an acceptable reference to our people. No addition to that there has been much use of the term in positive and information re programs and conferences. The same for Black people.As far as I am concerned b terms areacceptable and respectableterms to refer to our people and I will continue to refer to our people in those terms until we have a National Reparations Plebiscite.

I must commend you for trying to request our people to refer to ourselves in the correct manner but this is something that should be done in a nationalinternal plebiscite vote among our people. It is not something you, I or any other person or group has a right to do, especially not whites!This is one of the reasons why we are planning on having a Reparations Plebiscite after Black History Month. I hope you will join our movement...
My sista I have seen your racism test and discussion onracism blog, but it does not include the scholarly perspective I like to approach racism from, which includes information from Dr. Francess Cress Welsing and Dr. Nelly Fuller. But again I must commend your efforts for trying to do something positive for our people. Keep up the good work and I hope you get the strength to continue your journey.

Peace and Blessings,
Brotha Pruitt
Reparations Leader and Chairman
Committee for African-American Reparations (CAAR) CA
Reparations Union Lobbying Association (RULA) NC
www.rula1.com

--- On Mon, 1/26/09, littleblackbook@juno.com <littleblackbook@juno.com> wrote:

From: littleblackbook@juno.com <littleblackbook@juno.com>
Subject: Fw: Reparations / Celebrations and Struggle
To: Afrikaspirit3@yahoo.com
Cc: DaveMyers@discussrace.com, PeteLorins@aol.com, SoulRelease@gmail.com
Date: Monday, January 26, 2009, 8:25 AM

Brutha' Pruitt, I think you should be made aware that THOUSANDS, IF NOT MILLIONS of worthy Blackfolk living in this hostile-to-color country do NOT call themselves the euphemistic "African Afmerican!"
So, in the light of that fact, I think you should cease and desist from utilizing that inaccurate white-man's phraseology.*
Your Sister-in-THE-Struggle,
Carol T.XXX
Black African
In fact, I also think that the question "WHAT

DO YOU CALL YOUR BLACK SELF?"would be a GRRREAT topic for an entire radio program! (hint hint Hugh)
P.S. Brutha' P - you STILL haven't let me know that you've taken the www.Racismtest.orgOR even posted your thoughts on www.Discussrace.com! ? talk-talk-talk is cheap...

Greetings,

As African-Americans prepare celebrations for Dr. Kings Birthday and Black History Month, we are taken away from the ideals of what both occasions called for. Dr. Kings life did not revolve around celebrations. Dr. Kings life was mirrored by the Civil Rights Movement. He was beaten by the police on several occasions as he led boycotts, freedom rides, marches, protests and sit-ins against discrimination and injustice. Blacks should realize statistics show they are far from equality, so there is a great need to resume the struggle for equality! African-Americans are still victims of the main crimes Dr. King spoke out against such as police brutality and inadequate housing, employment, health care and education. Blacks can never reach equality if they continue to turn their backs on problems that are causing massive damage for the majority of African-Americans and the black community.

African-Americans have got to start spending as much time trying to solve their problems as they are in giving to churches, charities and celebrations. If you look at a calendar to see all the events that blacks are gearing up for, to celebrate and honor one anothers achievements, in the midst of the spread of AIDS and Drugs in our communities; it is as if Dr. King, Malcolm X, Fannie Lou Hammer, Queen Mother Moore and Sista Callie House never existed. It is a shame to know blacks are becoming less and less concerned with how their immediate family and extended family across America and especially in Africa are treated. It hurts me deep in my soul and I am going to die trying to get blacks to wake up, so that we can form a power base to solve our problems!

Black History Month and the election of a Black President should inspire African-Americans to rekindle the movement to demand equality. They have sacrificed too many lives in wars and made too many valuable contributions that have benefited both America and the entire western civilization, for them to remain victims of racism, hate crimes and discriminatory practices. Black people are going to have to look beyond their churches, civil rights groups and leaders to do the work that is necessary to free their race from racism and oppression. Even though blacks are constantly giving tithes and charitable gifts, these groups and individuals have been bought and sold out. They do not care about the masses of blacks who are victims of obvious and elusive tactics that are designed to maintain white dominance and black oppression.

I hope and pray that blacks are not blinded by these celebrations and evil tactics and begin to pay tribute and honor those who came before them who made it possible for them to enjoy the little bit of success they have among their people today. Black people do not own any land, cities, schools, hospitals or businesses to provide housing, employment, health care and a quality education for their people. This is a shame because blacks have earned the right to have an infrastructure that would amount to 40 acres and a mule from slavery. As long as they have to go to those who really dont care about them for these essential needs of life they will remain locked out of the system and at risk of acquiring a life threatening or habit forming disease.

Now is the time for blacks to get serious about their future and stop falling for all these 501 c3 lies and faith based initiative tricks that were supposed to bring them to equality two decades ago. The best move blacks could make is to agree that they are still victims of inequality, injustice and disparities and that reparations are long over due to repair damage done in the past and present, in order to have a better future for themselves and generations to come. Check out the Black History Website at www.rula1.com and go to the How to Win Reparations section to see how blacks can form a power base to resume the fight against injustice and start a national campaign to win reparations.

In memory of our ancestors,
Brotha Pruitt
Reparations Leader and Chairman
Committee for African-American Reparations (CAAR) CA
Reparations Union Lobbying Association (RULA) NC
www.rula1...com

Feel like a winner with great prices on a huge selection of trophies. Click now!

The contents of this message may be privileged and confidential. Therefore, if this message has been received in error, please delete it without reading it. Your receipt of this message is not intended to waive any applicable privilege. Please do not disseminate this message without the permission of the author.
****
Any tax advice contained in this email was not intended to be used, and cannot be used, by you (or any other taxpayer) to avoid penalties under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

Give yourself a lift. Click here for great prices on stair lifts!

The contents of this message may be privileged and confidential. Therefore, if this message has been received in error, please delete it without reading it. Your receipt of this message is not intended to waive any applicable privilege. Please do not disseminate this message without the permission of the author.
****
Any tax advice contained in this email was not intended to be used, and cannot be used, by you (or any other taxpayer) to avoid penalties under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

_____
Click for an accredited Life Experience Degree in 5 days, make up to $150k.

--
Dr. Mustafa Ansari
Chief Justice, Indigenous African American Reparations Tribunal
Author, "The Ballots" A Reparations Guide
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/SelfDeterminationRadio
www.african-reparations.mypodcast.com/
Plebiscite and African Reconciliation Project

--
Dr. Mustafa Ansari
Chief Justice, Indigenous African American Reparations Tribunal
Author, "The Ballots" A Reparations Guide
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/SelfDeterminationRadio
www..african-reparations.mypodcast.com/
Plebiscite and African Reconciliation Project

--
Dr. Mustafa Ansari
Chief Justice, Indigenous African American Reparations Tribunal
Author, "The Ballots" A Reparations Guide
http://www.blogtalkradio..com/SelfDeterminationRadio
www.african-reparations.mypodcast.com/
Plebiscite and African Reconciliation Project

_____
Click now to find a divorce attorney near you!

--
Dr. Mustafa Ansari

Chief Justice, Indigenous African American Reparations Tribunal
Author, "The Ballots" A Reparations Guide
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/SelfDeterminationRadio
www.african-reparations.mypodcast..com/
Plebiscite and African Reconciliation Project

--
Dr. Mustafa Ansari
Chief Justice, Indigenous African American Reparations Tribunal
Author, "The Ballots" A Reparations Guide
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/SelfDeterminationRadio
www.african-reparations.mypodcast.com/
Plebiscite and African Reconciliation Project

--
Dr. Mustafa Ansari
Chief Justice, Indigenous African American Reparations Tribunal
Author, "The Ballots" A Reparations Guide
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/SelfDeterminationRadio
www.african-reparations.mypodcast.com/
Plebiscite and African Reconciliation Project

| 28041|2009-02-27 07:45:47|epaden22|Finally, Something Made for Black Businesses|

FYI:

Enjoy this one,and spread the word to any positive Black person that needs more exposure for their business. I was able to find out all of the information at www.BlackBusinessNetwork.com/theone

Much Love,
Erroll Paden
404-969-4585

Join The

BLACK BUSINESS NETWORK

Join Today, Create Your Business Profile, Post a Banner Ad, Network With Other Members, Start A Blog, Promote Your Black Business

www.BlackBusinessNetwork.com/theone

| 28042|2009-02-27 07:46:11|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Southeast Airlines made African American History!|

Attachments :

From: Ginger Daniels
Sent: Thursday, February 26, 2009 6:06 PM
To: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: Southeast Airlines made African American History!

> This is soooo wonderful. I received this and thought it was only right to pass it on... Ability is what you are capable of doing Motivation determines what you do Attitude determines how well you do it I thought I would share this with you. A friend of the family took a flight on an all female crew out of Atlanta. Here's the good part.they were all black, including the pilots. Take a look. Just think how much further ahead the world would be if they had just given us a chance to prove that we could make amazing contributions. Even when we did create the credit was stolen and still advancement in some areas have been curtailed because of bigotry. Somewhere in the back of my mind I feel that the common cold could have a cure if we have a whack at it. Our African-American women continue to demonstrate professionalism, intelligence and unlimited potential as they contribute to our overall struggle for unlimited freedom, access and > opportunity in America. The sisters on Flights 5202 and 5106 (a jet owned by Atlantic Southeast Airlines) have proven that African-American women can do anything if just given a fair opportunity. Their aviation success is a very proud moment for us all. I'm not 100% sure, but I'm almost positive that we might have made history on Thursday, February 12, 2009. I was a part of an all African American female crew. I'm attaching the photos and you can pass them along to whomever. We were so excited! We operated flight 5202 from Atlanta to Nashville and flight 5106 from Nashville back to Atlanta. The crew included CPT Rachelle Jones, FO Stephanie Grant, FA's Robin Rogers and Diana Galloway! No virus found in this incoming message. Checked by AVG - www.avg.com Version: 8.0.237 / Virus Database: 270.11.3/1969 - Release Date: 02/24/09 06:43:00 Sent on the Now Network from my Sprint® BlackBerry

| 28043|2009-02-27 07:46:52|Marc Taylor|Re: Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified|
LLC, Inc, schedule C, D, E,1099 etc...= capitalism (master)
W2, 1040EZ = socialism (slave)

--- On Thu, 2/26/09, Divine Allah wrote:

From: Divine Allah
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 6:57 PM

Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism and is it "a solution" for Black People given the recent economic environment? If it is a solution, then how and what are the criteria to select the "managers" (monarchs, kings, priest) for such a set up, or is it not feasible or necessary, given wide spread corruption and lack of the practice of "Maat" in society? Or is the "free market" perfectly fine and an adequate vessel for a diversity of socialist, communist, capitalist environments. Is the free markets main failure the lack of "Maat" in engaging in business practices, or is it fundamentally flawed for large populations? Also what are some of the drawbacks of socialism, communism, or communal economics that are not as apparent. Take a gander of this excerpt from Sebai Maa (Muata Ashby) book, The Collapse of Civilization, page 327:

_____ _____ _____ _____

The ancient system of distribution of goods throughout Ancient Egypt operated in a way so that goods were collected by royal decree and the Vizier, governors, and tax collectors and a veritable army of bureaucrats managed the process. So farm crops in the north of Egypt were collected and redistributed so that everyone would get what they needed, Crops of a different sort in the south would in turn be redistributed to the north, and so on. Therefore, this was a massive system of economy based on collective sharing of the wealth of the country without: leaving some to fend for themselves or creating associations or guilds that segregate people from subsistence level goods. This system of economy may be thought of as a Barter and Collective Sharing Economy. One present day similar but small-scale system of sharing is called Communitysupported agriculture (CSA). Typically, CSA farms are small, independent, labor intensive, family farms,360 h Ancient Egypt, the system was countrywide and managed by the central government, the Pharaonic system. By Roman times, however, the Pharaonic state which had controlled the general economy by collecting and redistributing had been mostly dismantled by the Roman conquerors in favor of a colonial administrative system, which had the main goal of exploiting Egypt in favor of Rome, Egypt became the "breadbasket" that allowed the Roman empire to grow, but Egypt was depleted of its wealth. Trade fell under the control of private persons who ofien organized themselves in guilds. One such example is the association of the salt merchants of Tebtunis:

The undersigned mepr, salt mei-chan ts of Tebtynis, meeting together have decided by common consent to elect one of their number, a good man, Apynchh, son of Orseus, both supervisor and collector of the public taxes for the corning eighth yeor of Tibepius
P.Mich.: 5:245,47 CE
APIS rscord: michigan.apis. 2876
After the Romans conquered Egypt, a positive interest rate scheme imposed on invested capital was introduced to the economy and the wealth from the profits were taken out of the country, and so the temple sites began to decline.....

_____ _____ _____

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

| 28044|2009-02-27 07:47:26|Manu Ampim|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|

Greetings Tyrone,

Thanks for the feedback. I agree that the excellent questions from Asar, the callers, and the chat room dialogue all made the radio program a more interesting discussion. If we look at these issues that I discussed, and that you listed in your post below, then it becomes clear that some positions of the African-centered community have to be altered and corrected, particularly as we use the lens of primary research methods. Part of my work over the many years has been to popularize the methodof primary research within the field of Africana Studies.

For those that missed the live program, they could listen to it in the archives and even download the program.

Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

Greetings Sptpy

Thank you for taking the time to tune in. Your support is greatly appreciated. It was/is a much needed discussion topic, especially in light of a lot of posts that have been distributed here on this list as of late.

Concerning the image, I think Anthony T. Browder in his book Nile Valley Contributions to Civilizations does a good job on discussing this very subject. In his book he provides various photos showing the progression of the deterioration from various sources on the Hrw-m-Akht. I don't have the book in front of me, but it shows at each stage in time how the nose has gotten progressively worse and approximately around what period the nose was actually destroyed.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

Asar, I looked forward to this radio program since you announced it here at Ta_Seti, and I was not disappointed. The program was two hours well spent.The questions from you, the callers, and the chat room helped make the discussion even more interesting.

Manu, it was good to hear your answers to the questions; I like how you went to the source of the questions regarding "Man, know thyself," the papyrus of Hunefer (topics this group has discussed), correcting misconceptions, and how you have seen the evidence first-hand. Frederick Lewis Norden's drawing of anoselessHeru- em-akhet decades before Napoleon's arrival isa very interesting find.
Tyrone
http://www.catchpen ny.org/nose. html
| 28045|2009-02-27 10:10:23|Asar Imhotep|Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim|
Peace Phamily

I know we had a discussion some years ago about creating an Africology Wiki, and I'm still willing to do it. I just don't want to do it myself (given my schedule). But I was also thinking about creating an African History Myth Busters website that kind of operates like the website Skeptic.com.

The whole point of the site would be to dispel myths in Africana studies (by African/Black people and others). This as well would take a great support network of scholars willing to confirm and debunk the communities inquiries.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Thu, 2/26/09, Manu Ampim wrote:
From: Manu Ampim
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Importance of Primary Research w/ Prof. Manu Ampim
To: ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 10:05 AM

Greetings Tyrone,
Thanks for the feedback. I agree that the excellent questions from Asar, the callers, and the chat room dialogue all made the radio program a more interesting discussion. If we look at these issues that I discussed, and that you listed in your post below, then it becomes clear that some positions of the African-centered community have to be altered and corrected, particularly as we use the lens of primary research methods. Part of my work over the many years has been to popularize the methodof primary research within the field of Africana Studies.
For those that missed the live program, they could listen to it in the archives and even download the program.
Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

| 28046|2009-02-27 10:44:43|cristofori whitakara|Re: Southeast Airlines made African American History!|
Bessie Coleman is smiling upon them

--- On Thu, 2/26/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Southeast Airlines made African American History!
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Linda Handy" , "SHARON JONES" , "Henry Burton" , "Toni Adams" , "Reginald Camon"
Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 9:13 PM

From: Ginger Daniels
Sent: Thursday, February 26, 2009 6:06 PM
To: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: Southeast Airlines made African American History!

> This is soooo wonderful. I received this and thought it was only right to pass it on...
>
> Ability is what you are capable of doing

Motivation determines what you do
Attitude determines how well you do it
I thought I would share this with you. A friend of the family took a flight on an all female crew out of Atlanta. Here's the good part.they were all black, including the pilots. Take a look.

Just think how much further ahead the world would be if they had just given us a chance to prove that we could make amazing contributions. Even when we did create the credit was stolen and still advancement in some areas have been curtailed because of bigotry. Somewhere in the back of my mind I feel that the common cold could have a cure if we have a whack at it.

Our African-American women continue to demonstrate professionalism, intelligence and unlimited potential as they contribute to our overall struggle for unlimited freedom, access and opportunity in America. The sisters on Flights 5202 and 5106 (a jet owned by Atlantic Southeast Airlines) have proven that African-American women can do anything if just given a fair opportunity.

Their aviation success is a very proud moment for us all.

I'm not 100% sure, but I'm almost positive that we might have made history on Thursday, February 12, 2009. I was a part of an all African American female crew. I'm attaching the photos and you can pass them along to whomever. We were so excited! We operated flight 5202 from Atlanta to Nashville and flight 5106 from Nashville back to Atlanta. The crew included
CPT Rachelle Jones, FO Stephanie Grant, FA's Robin Rogers and Diana Galloway!

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.237 / Virus Database: 270.11.3/1969 - Release Date: 02/24/09
06:43:00

Sent on the Now Network from my Sprint® BlackBerry

| 28047|2009-02-27 17:28:16|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified|

yes there system was like socialism, but there was a very Unique blend of dictatorship founded on maat.....
a individual breeded and nurtured by all the resources of the land , a living avatar supported by a powerful diverse priesthood.
the free market tempered as in China by communal(communist) laws and taboo's a respectfull and viable freemarket, perhaps their(china) only flaw is bureacrats who are not elected.
democratic principles ,"like the vote " could make a real difference for politicians who are locked in aseat of authority.
the main failure of the free market is greed!.
and the lifeline/feedtrough of greed is the everyday women/man who thinks its ok for a indivdual too have personal wealth of 100's of millions dollars or even 100's billion dollars.....
we lil folks (peaseants/wildebeast) think one day we gonna be a lion,,,,,, so we allow the lions their way and their way with us.....
the ancient egyptian system did allow profit from the north to be re-distributed to the south and the wealth of the south to have proper profitability for its goods(gold/minerals /saltetc.) by way of a central government, but the small farm and guild was a powerfull politic in ancient egypt .
guilds/ unions were from its concept throughtout its history a fundamental part of ancient egypt.
stone mason guilds/unions artist /scribe guilds
ironworkers/metalsmiths guilds
lots of physician/guilds
outside the templepriest were labor unions/guilds that had members that in some cases were fulltime farmers but also had some of the skills mentioned.
the potters guild that also had metalsmith's was one the earliest unions of Het-ka-pTah and was dominate in bringing about the one government of early Khamit.
I agree the romans milked Khamit dry, and tried too go deep in the south of Khamit butt the people stood up and sayed no with their very lives....." never to marshall such a resolve again(as of yet?).

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Thu, 2/26/09, Divine Allah wrote:
> From: Divine Allah
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 6:57 PM
>
> Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism and is it "a solution" for Black People given the recent economic environment? If it is a solution, then how and what are the criteria to select the "managers" (monarchs, kings, priest) for such a set up, or is it not feasible or necessary, given wide spread corruption and lack of the practice of "Maat" in society? Or is the "free market" perfectly fine and an adequate vessel for a diversity of socialist, communist, capitalist environments. Is the free markets main failure the lack of "Maat" in engaging in business practices, or is it fundamentally flawed for large populations? Also what are some of the drawbacks of socialism, communism, or communal economics that are not as apparent. Take a gander of this excerpt from Sebai Maa (Muata Ashby) book, The Collapse of Civilization, page 327:

_____ _____ _____ _____

The ancient system of distribution of goods throughout Ancient Egypt operated in a way so that goods were collected by royal decree and the Vizier, governors, and tax collectors and a veritable army of bureaucrats managed the process. So farm crops in the north of Egypt were collected and redistributed so that everyone would get what they needed, Crops of a different sort in the south would in turn be redistributed to the north, and so on. Therefore, this was a massive system of economy based on collective sharing of the wealth of the country without: leaving some to fend for themselves or creating associations or guilds that segregate people from subsistence level goods. This system of economy may be thought of as a Barter and Collective Sharing Economy. One present day similar but small-scale system of sharing is called Communitysupported agriculture (CSA). Typically, CSA farms are small, independent, labor intensive, family farms,360 h Ancient Egypt, the system was countrywide and managed by the central government, the Pharaonic system. By Roman times, however, the Pharaonic state which had controlled the general economy by collecting and redistributing had been mostly dismantled by the Roman conquerors in favor of a colonial administrative system, which had the main goal of exploiting Egypt in favor of Rome, Egypt became the "breadbasket" that allowed the Roman empire to grow, but Egypt was depleted of its wealth. Trade fell under the control of private persons who ofien organized themselves in guilds. One such example is the association of the salt merchants of Tebtunis:
The undersigned mepr, salt mei-chan ts of Tebtynis, meeting together have decided by common consent to elect one of their number, a good man, Apynchh, son of Orseus, both supervisor and collector of the public taxes for the corning eighth yeor of Tibepius
P.Mich.: 5:245,47 CE
APIS rscord: michigan.apis. 2876
After the Romans conquered Egypt, a positive interest rate scheme imposed on invested capital was introduced to the economy and the wealth from the profits were taken out of the country, and so the temple sites began to decline.....

_____ _____ _____

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

| 28048|2009-02-27 19:40:13|Tafari khumbaka|roots and rooted| http://www.rootsandrooted.org/
click above

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28049|2009-02-28 08:23:12|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Check out YouTube|
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c0dkEExPVH4
check out gahdaffi

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 2/23/09, wrote:
From: AUSAR65>
Subject: Check out YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary
To:
Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:32 PM

YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary

Get a jump start on your taxes. Find a tax professional in your neighborhood today.

| 28050|2009-02-28 12:52:45|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified|
Communism and capitalism and everything inbetween are all based upon a social imbalance that requires 'workers' be they for the state or for individuals. This means that there will always be the 'haves' and the 'have nots'. The unrestricted concentration of populations into urban areas also perpetuates this condition by creating an environment in which people do not have enough space to agriculturally sustain themselves or have enough of an uncompetitive market to all be self-sustaining entrepreneurs.

The solution is to create a balanced society of extended families that own equal units of urban and rural land to be self-sustaining and engage in commerce. The land units could only be traded for their equivalent amount and never be bought or sold. Each urban-rural area would have the same limited number of families to prevent overconcentration while each family unit would be responsible for its own size, accepting whatever positive and negative consequences there are of becoming either too big or too small. To be implimented, this would require a radical abandonment of current cities to create planned population centers of designated extended family units.

I don't see this happening by choice as it is far easier for the masses to continue on with the present state of things even when there's a complete socio-economic collapse. The widespread dispersal of nuclear family units also impeads a coming together of extended family units to an ancestral area. But what is unlikely for the structure of the industrial world is a lot more feasible for the situation of the underdeveloped world.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Divine Allah wrote:
>
> Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism > or communism and is it "a solution" for Black People given the recent > economic environment? If it is a solution, then how and what are the > criteria to select the "managers" (monarchs, kings, priest) for such a set > up, or is it not feasible or necessary, given wide spread corruption and > lack of the practice of "Ma'at" in society? Or is the "free market" > perfectly fine and an adequate vessel for a diversity of socialist, > communist, capitalist environments. Is the free market's main failure the > lack of "Ma'at" in engaging in business practices, or is it fundamentally > flawed for large populations? Also what are some of the drawbacks of > socialism, communism, or communal economics that are not as apparent. Take a > gander of this excerpt from Sebai Maa (Muata Ashby) book, The Collapse of > Civilization, page 327:
> _____
>
> The ancient system of distribution of goods throughout Ancient > Egypt operated in a way so that goods were collected by royal > decree and the Vizier, governors, and tax collectors and a veritable

> army of bureaucrats managed the process. So farm crops in the north > of Egypt were collected and redistributed so that everyone would get > what they needed, Crops of a different sort in the south would in > turn be redistributed to the north, and so on. Therefore, this was a > massive system of economy based on collective sharing of the > wealth of the country without: leaving some to fend for themselves > or creating associations or guilds that segregate people from > subsistence level goods. This system of economy may be thought of > as a Barter and Collective Sharing Economy. One present day > similar but small-scale system of sharing is called Communitysupported > agriculture (CSA). Typically, CSA farms are small, > independent, labor intensive, family farms,360 h Ancient Egypt, the > system was countrywide and managed by the central government, > the Pharaonic system. By Roman times, however, the Pharaonic > state which had controlled the general economy by collecting and > redistributing had been mostly dismantled by the Roman conquerors > in favor of a colonial administrative system, which had the main > goal of exploiting Egypt in favor of Rome, Egypt became the > "breadbasket" that allowed the Roman empire to grow, but Egypt > was depleted of its wealth. Trade fell under the control of private > persons who ofien organized themselves in guilds. One such > example is the association of the salt merchants of Tebtunis:
> The undersigned mepr, salt mei-chan ts of Tebtynis, meeting > together have decided by common consent to elect one of their > number, a good man, Apynchh, son of Orseus, both supervisor > and collector of the public taxes for the corning eighth yeor of > Tibepius
> P.Mich.: 5:245,47 CE
> APIS rscord: michigan.apis.2876
> After the Romans conquered Egypt, a positive interest rate scheme > imposed on invested capital was introduced to the economy and the > wealth from the profits were taken out of the country, and so the > temple sites began to decline.....
> _____
>
>
> Divine Ruler Equality Allah
>
| 28051|2009-02-28 20:18:02|pharoahisrael@yahoo.com|Re: Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified|
I do believe that they practiced a form of Scientific Socialism, What we moderns now call Democracy. However the Democracies of The Nile Valley, Indus Valley, Mesopotamian Valley, Niger-Congo Valley and The Cretan Valley Systems were PRACTICAL DEMOCRACIES not Theorectical Democracies that we have today.
Even in Federal Cases of great social concern Federal Judges have stated that Democracy in America is " A Social Experiment ". Well the democracies of indigenous peoples were democracies in fact because it was based on their actual ways of life and not on incidental urges and proclivities of the ruling race orclasses.!

The Mosaic Codes of Law, if interpreted in its Canaanite and Aramaic form shows a highly developed system of Constitutional, Statutory and Tribal Laws. These Canaanite Laws and Statutes themselves are the very basis and foundation of The Constitutional Democracies and Republics that we now call America, Britain, Nigeria, France, South Africa, Spain and so on. Not to mention that the U. S. Constitution is written almost verbatim from this very document. It is only the Caucasian/European Greaco-Roman cultural infusions and Linguisticinterpretations that mars the True Meaning of The MosaicConstitution which is a Thoroughly Canaanite Document Through and Through.!
Add to this the The Amazon Valley Civilization-Society of The Olmec Peoples of Meso-America, Central and South, and the Mississipi Valley Society of North America and the Picture becomes more clearer as to where we have come from.
We also have to take into account the fact, once again, even though it will be hard for some, that these societies and civilizations had no such things as what we today call Religions and Psuedo-Science of Darwinism, a Animal Based Origin of Man.They concentrated on the Personal Indigenous Spiritualities (called Vodoun) and The True
Science of Physics and Evolution called Animism. Therefore their whole concentration was one of Individual and Social Evolution of Man/Woman, Tribe and Group, to go as far as each one could goand as was possible in every occupation in humanlife everyone assisting everyone else to do so !
We in the modern Human Race and Times have lost this art, science and way of living and have actually DEVOLVED even though our mechanical inventions (which are simply re-discoveries and nothing new ; when put into proper context) makes us really think that we are doing something !
Hetep !
MLP.,
Black Federal Nationalists,
Pharoah Isra'ilu-El.
--- On Fri, 2/27/09, Marc Taylor wrote:

> From: Marc Taylor
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Friday, February 27, 2009, 3:48 PM
>
> You chose to allow Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com even though this message failed authentication
>
> Click to disallow

| 28052|2009-02-28 20:18:16|Lamar Perryman|Fw: [Black_Federal_Nationalists] Re: (It shall remain so). IDEAS NOT|

Attachments :

--- On Sat, 2/28/09, Ogie - King wrote:

From: Ogie - King
Subject: [Black_Federal_Nationalists] Re: (It shall remain so). IDEAS NOT MONEY, ALLEVIATE POVERTY
To: Edo_Global@yahoogroups.com, "Edo Ciao" , "edo nation" , "edo nca" , "Esan_community yahoogroup" , "Umagbae concernBenin" , "Black_Federal_Nationalist"
Date: Saturday, February 28, 2009, 6:54 PM

You chose to allow Black_Federal_Nationalists@yahoogroups.com even though this message failed authentication

Click to disallow

| 28053|2009-02-28 20:19:00|Lamar Perryman|Fw: [NorthAmexemObservers] Fw: PING!!! PING!!! PING!!! NOT SPAM - Am|

Attachments :

--- On Sat, 2/28/09, deshon way wrote:

From: deshon way
Subject: [NorthAmexemObservers] Fw: PING!!! PING!!! PING!!! NOT SPAM - America Sold out to China by Clinton
To: seaether@yahoo.com, debtfreemoe@yahoo.com, northamexemobservers@yahoogroups.com, paali7@yahoo.com, gyairana@yahoo.com
Date: Saturday, February 28, 2009, 1:42 AM

You chose to allow NorthAmexemObservers@yahoogroups.com even though this message failed authentication

Click to disallow

| 28054|2009-02-28 23:37:53|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Fw: Check out YouTube|

I think Qadaffi has had some good ideas. He has promoted a United States of Afraka which I think is a good idea (also, he wants to include the Carribean Islands in the pact). But I just don't trust Arabs. They don't seem to be able to separate themselves from Islam and subsequently seem to force the people into Islam. That would never happen with me. It smells like another sneaky tactic of the Arabs to get a better hold on Afraka. In my opinion they have way too much already.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
>
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c0dkEExPVH4
> check out gahdaffi
>
>
> ?
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>
> --- On Mon, 2/23/09, wrote:
>
> From: AUSAR65>
> Subject: Check out YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary
> To:
> Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:32 PM
>
>
>
> YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary
>
>
> Get a jump start on your taxes. Find a tax professional in your neighborhood today.
>
| 28055|2009-03-01 09:12:44|Divine Allah|Re: Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified|
Yeah, according to your response, and the functions we know that the Hem Netcher provided as a PROFESSIONAL class of people engaged in various modes of education,sciences, arts, crafts, etc. then I must reanalyze what Ashby says here:

"Therefore, this was amassive system of economy based on collective sharing of thewealth of the country without: leaving some to fend for themselvesor creating associations or guilds that segregate people from subsistence level goods."

He is saying there were "no guilds" PERIOD or that there were guilds but they did not exhibit the behavior described in the above sentence.

Peace.

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

On Fri, Feb 27, 2009 at 8:28 PM, Tafari khumbaka <tafari_sudra@yahoo.com> wrote:

yes there system was like socialism, but there was a very Unique blend of dictatorship founded on maat.....
a individual breeded and nurtured by all the resources of the land , a living avatar supported by a powerful diverse priesthood.
the free market tempered as in China by communal(communist) laws and taboo's a respectfull and viable freemarket, perhaps their(china) only flaw is bureacrats who are not elected.
democratic principles ,"like the vote " could make a real difference for politicians who are locked in aseat of authority.
the main failure of the free market is greed!.
and the lifeline/feedtrough of greed is the everyday women/man who thinks its ok for a indivdual too have personal wealth of 100's of millions dollars or even 100's billion dollars.....
we lil folks (peaseants/wildebeast) think one day we gonna be a lion,,,,,, so we allow the lions their way and their way with us.....
the ancient egyptian system did allow profit from the north to be re-distributed to the south and the wealth of the south to have proper profitability for its goods(gold/minerals /saltetc.) by way of a central government, but the small farm and guild was a powerfull politic in ancient egypt .
guilds/ unions were from its concept throughtout its history a fundamental part of ancient egypt.
stone mason guilds/unions
artist /scribe guilds
ironworkers/metalsmiths guilds
lots of physician/guilds
outside the templepriest were labor unions/guilds that had members that in some cases were fulltime farmers but also had some of the skills mentioned.
the potters guild that also had metalsmith's was one the earliest unions of Het-ka-pTah and was dominate in bringing about the one government of early Khamit.
I agree the romans milked Khamit dry, and tried too go deep in the south of Khamit butt the people stood up and sayed no with their very lives....." never to marshall such a resolve again(as of yet?).

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Thu, 2/26/09, Divine Allah <allahsnation@gmail.com> wrote:

> From: Divine Allah <allahsnation@gmail.com>
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, February 26, 2009, 6:57 PM
>
> Did the Ancient Black Hapi/Nile Valley Culture practice modified socialism or communism and is it "a solution" for Black People given the recent economic environment? If it is a solution, then how and what are the criteria to select the "managers" (monarchs, kings, priest) for such a set up, or is it not feasible or necessary, given wide spread corruption and lack of the practice of "Maat" in society? Or is the "free market" perfectly fine and an adequate vessel for a diversity of socialist, communist, capitalist environments. Is the free markets main failure the lack of "Maat" in engaging in business practices, or is it fundamentally flawed for large populations? Also what are some of the drawbacks of socialism, communism, or communal economics that are not as apparent. Take a gander of this excerpt from Sebai Maa (Muata Ashby) book, The Collapse of Civilization, page 327:

_____ _____ _____ _____

The ancient system of distribution of goods throughout Ancient Egypt operated in a way so that goods were collected by royal decree and the Vizier, governors, and tax collectors and a veritable army of bureaucrats managed the process. So farm crops in the north of Egypt were collected and redistributed so that everyone would get what they needed, Crops of a different sort in the south would in turn be redistributed to the north, and so on. Therefore, this was a massive system of economy based on collective sharing of the wealth of the country without: leaving some to fend for themselves or creating associations or guilds that segregate people from subsistence level goods. This system of economy may be thought of as a Barter and Collective Sharing Economy. One present day similar but small-scale system of sharing is called Communitysupported agriculture (CSA). Typically, CSA farms are small, independent, labor intensive, family farms,360 h Ancient Egypt, the system was countrywide and managed by the central government, the Pharaonic system. By Roman times, however, the Pharaonic state which had controlled the general economy by collecting and redistributing had been mostly dismantled by the Roman conquerors in favor of a colonial administrative system, which had the main goal of exploiting Egypt in favor of Rome, Egypt became the "breadbasket" that allowed the Roman empire to grow, but Egypt was depleted of its wealth. Trade fell under the control of private persons who ofien organized themselves in guilds. One such example is the association of the salt merchants of Tebtunis:
The undersigned mepr, salt mei-chan ts of Tebtynis, meeting together have decided by common consent to elect one of their number, a good man, Apynchh, son of Orseus, both supervisor and collector of the public taxes for the corning eighth yeor of Tibepius
P.Mich.: 5:245,47 CE
APIS rscord: michigan.apis. 2876
After the Romans conquered Egypt, a positive interest rate scheme imposed on invested capital was introduced to the economy and the wealth from the profits were taken out of the country, and so the temple sites began to decline.....

_____ _____ _____

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

| 28056|2009-03-01 13:30:35|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Fw: Check out YouTube|
i agree

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sun, 3/1/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Fw: Check out YouTube
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 1, 2009, 1:37 AM

I think Qadaffi has had some good ideas. He has promoted a United States of Afraka which I think is a good idea (also, he wants to include the Carribean Islands in the pact). But I just don't trust Arabs. They don't seem to be able to separate themselves from Islam and subsequently seem to force the people into Islam. That would never happen with me. It smells like another sneaky tactic of the Arabs to get a better hold on Afraka. In my opinion they have way too much already.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
>
>
> http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=c0dkEExPVH4
> check out gahdaffi
>
>
> ◆
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
>
> --- On Mon, 2/23/09, wrote:

>
> From: AUSAR65>
> Subject: Check out YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary
> To:
> Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:32 PM
>
>
>
> YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary
>
>
> Get a jump start on your taxes. Find a tax professional in your neighborhood today.
>

| 28057|2009-03-01 16:04:02|Obadele (abibitumikasa.com)|FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Li|

What: ?kyeame ?s?fo? Obadele Kwame Kambon Lecture entitled The Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation followed by Abibitumi Kasa Member Open Discussion
Who: You Afrikan!
When: March 15, 2009 @ 6:30PM EST
Where: Abibitumi Kasa Member Classroom
How: Register for free forum at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php then click member classroom or on this link: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
A continuing part of our Abibitumi Kasa fundraiser: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

http://abibitumikasa.ning.com/events/free-obadele-kambon-lecture

Live Interactive Online and Accra, Ghana Afrikan Language Classes

Register for Free Afrikan Liberation Institute

Sign Up for AKALI Mailing List

Abibitumi Kasa Fundraiser

| 28058|2009-03-02 00:07:22|Asar Imhotep|Are the Ntrw the Kontemble and do they live in caves?|

Attachments :

Peace Phamily,

In August of 2008, I wrote an article titled, "Could the Kontemble be the Netchers of the Ancient Egyptians?" It basically was comparing the images of the Ntrw to oral accounts given by the Dagara people of Burkino Faso and the Bantu speakers of Central Africa.

I have updated this essay to include some other information concerning the location of the Ntrw given an account by Malidoma Some in The Healing Wisdom of Africa. Please review this updated version and tell me what you think.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28059|2009-03-02 07:58:59|Pearl Jr|Would You Consider These Movie Reviews Controversial?|

New Black Media Reviews

www.BlackMediaReview.com

Each one of these movies deal with interracial relationships. Observe the messages of these movies.

Watch each one of these reviews and learn for yourself that there is a promotion for Black males to love non-Black females, but doesn't promote Black women with non-Black men.

This is high level trickery due to the high number of single Black females/mothers and the embarrassing number of missing Black husbands/fathers in the Black race family.

Men are providers and protectors and without an adequate number of them, high levels of poverty and crime are the results. I hope this isn't too much reality for you?

The media is a propaganda machine that continues to promote Black's Worst Interests!

If you haven't read my book, Black Women Need Love, Too! Order Yours Today on amazon.com

Click book cover to order NOW!

www.BlackWomenNeedLoveToo.com

WE MUST EDUCATE ONE ANOTHER TO THE MIND TRICKS THAT ARE PERPETRATED UPON ALL OF US!

FORWARDTHIS TO YOUR FRIENDS!

LIVING IN HISTORY!

Click the DVDcover toOrder!

www.BarackObamaHistorydvd.net

Quick Links...

~~~~~~

Our Website

Products

Services

More About Us

Contact Information

~~~~~~

phone: 818-716-7838

~~~~~~

Join Our Mailing List!

Forward email

"BARACK OBAMA THE POWER OF CHANGE" DVD Available at Barnes & Noble Stores Nationwide & AMAZON.COM

The Campaign That Inspired A Nation is Now on DVD!

This is your inspirational piece of history!

| 28060|2009-03-02 07:59:27|odhiambo okecth|In defense of the Police|
I do not support the extra judicial killings by the police and the police must be held to account.

But on the other side, let us be fair to the police. I will give this in the form of what happened to an Inspector of Police who is a friend. This is a real life situation.
~~~~~~

He had been assigned to track down one of the most dreaded criminals in Kenya. He indeed succeeded in arresting this chap, had him arraigned in court, presented a water tight case in court that made this chap get a sentence of seven years in jail.

Two weeks down the line, as he was having drinks with friends, a round of beer was brought to their table. On asking who had bought for them the round, he was shown a chap who was seated in a corner with other friends.

He froze in his seat. He thought he was seeing doubles. This was the dangerous criminal he had taken time to trail and apprehend. This is the chap who had only been jailed for seven years two weeks ago.

He asked himself, how did the man get out of jail?

These are some of the frustrations our police face in the course of their duties. They take their time to trail thugs, have them arrested, take them to court and get them convicted, only for them to be back on the street. In our imaginations, how do we help such gallant police officers who work against all odds to mete out justice to criminals?

These are fellow Kenyans who have taken the tough choice of policing the society. They are our brothers, our sisters, our parents. The only difference is that they are in uniform and licensed to carry firearms at all the times, for our sake. For the peace of the country.

Not all police officers are bad. Not all of them would like to kill. But in this kind of a situation, the life of the police officer who does his work honestly is in danger. If a criminal you lawfully arrested, took to court, got convicted, and jailed for seven years can buy you a drink two weeks down the line, what can prevent him from killing you? And he is buying you beer in jest.

If a police officer who does his work honestly is frustrated by the ineptness of the judiciary and the prisons departments, what do we expect of him faced with similar situation?

I bet we must look at all the players and determine to what extent they are making the police officers engage in extrajudicial killings of criminals. I do not advocate for this, but faced with a similar situation, most police officers would rather they kill the thugs than the thugs to kill them.

Lastly, to what extent have we been of support to the police officers when they are killed by criminals in the course of their duties? I have never heard Hassan Omar condemn the criminals for having killed a police officer. Are the police not human? Or do Human Right issues apply not to the police force?

We must be objective and address the problem.

Odhiambo T Oketch,
CEO KCDN Nairobi,
Tel; 0735 529 126, 0724 365 557,
Email; komarockswatch@yahoo.com

http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

--- On Sun, 3/1/09, George Nyongesa wrote:
From: George Nyongesa
Subject: [NewVisionKenya] (unknown)
To: grnyongesa@yahoo.com
Date: Sunday, March 1, 2009, 4:46 AM

Dear Kenyans and friends of Kenya,
There is renewed energy in the public debate on police mastermindedcareless killings since theUN Rapporteur on Human Rights, Prof Alston released his report on a10 days mission to investigate cases of extra judicial killings in Kenya.
In the debate proposers and opposers all seem to have valid arguments at least to the best of their knowledge. However,I want to suggest that beforewe take sides in the debate, let usform a working definition of the phrase extrajudicial killings.I tried to google thisphrase for a properdefinition, but theredoesnt seem to be one. From what I have read though, my understanding of extrajudicial killingisany deliberate killingdone outside regular judicial proceedings, or that is not authorised bythe supreme law or a court order. For example, http://www.bungelam wananchi. org/index. php?option=
com_seyret&Itemid=60&task=videodirectlin k&id=11
I hope now you understand why Police Commissioner, Major Hussein Ali should be taken to the Hague!
George Nyongesa
Bunge la Mwananchi

| 28061|2009-03-02 07:59:56|Ferg|Re: Are the Ntrw the Kontemble and do they live in caves?|
Asar, an interesting article, plenty of food for thought!
However the Old Nubian wordDeffufa said to bea mud bricked structureconnected with a cemetery or a place of worship for burial of dead kings.As you say it must have been a mound or a cave for worshipping.
I may be wrong but it would appear to me that the etymology of the word Deffufa must be closely connected to the word 'FUFUA', which means to revive, bring back to life again, resurrect. UFUFUO means resurrection, raising from the dead. CouldDeffufa be the place of resurrection? (I know Bantu and old Nubian are different languages).
Could this word have a significance with the following article?
"This building is known as the "Western Deffufa" (after an old Nubian word for a mud brick structure) in order to distinguish it from the "Eastern Deffufa," a similarly sized but lower brick building that rises in the cemetery. It is now known that these buildings were temples. The Western Deffufa was a huge brick platform on top of which there was probably a small shrine or object of worship. The "Eastern Deffufa" was associated with the worship or preparation for burial of the dead kings".
Deffufa = Ufufuo?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Monday, March 02, 2009 8:07 AM
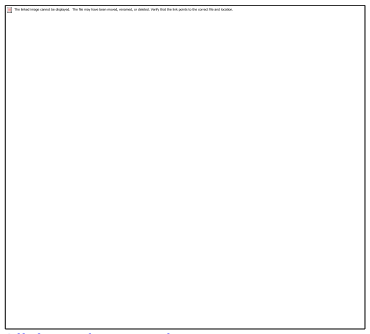
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Are the Ntrw the Kontemble and do they live in caves?

Peace Phamily,

In August of 2008, I wrote an article titled, "Could the Kontemble be the Netchers of the Ancient Egyptians?" It basically was comparing the images of the Ntrw to oral accounts given by the Dagara people of Burkino Faso and the Bantu speakers of Central Africa.



I have updated this essay to include some other information concerning the location of the Ntrw given an account by Malidoma Some in The Healing Wisdom of Africa. Please review this updated version and tell me what you think.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY

| 28062|2009-03-02 08:00:33|Paul Kekai Manansala|Sinai's turquoise goddess|

A comprehensive restoration and documentation scheme is underway at a major temple and mine complex in Sinai, as Nevine El-Aref reports

Click to view caption

Remains of Serabit Al-Khidem temple

From pre-dynastic times, early Egyptians made their way to the Sinai Peninsula over land or across the Red Sea in search of minerals. Their chief targets were turquoise and copper, which they mined and extracted in the Sinai mountains.

Archaeologists examining evidence left 8,000 years ago have concluded that some of the very earliest known settlers in Sinai were miners. In about 3,500 BC these mineral hunters discovered the great turquoise veins of Serabit Al-Khadim. Some 500 years later the Egyptians had mastered Sinai and set up a large and systematic mining operation at Serabit Al-Khadim, where they carved out great quantities of turquoise. They carried their loads down the Wadi Matalla to the garrison port at Al-Markha, south of the present village of Abu Zenima, where they set about loading them on board boats bound for the mainland.

The turquoise was so valued that it became an important part of ritual symbolism in ancient Egyptian religious ceremonies. They used it to carve sacred scarabs and fabricate jewellery, or ground it into pigments for painting statuettes, bricks, reliefs and walls.

To mine the turquoise, the Egyptians would hollow out large galleries in the mountains, carving at the entrance to each a representation of the reigning Pharaoh who was the symbol of the authority of the Egyptian state over the mines.

A temple dedicated to Goddess Hathor was built during the 12th Dynasty, when Serabit Al-Khadim was the centre of copper and turquoise mining and a flourishing trade was established. One of few Pharaonic monuments known in Sinai, the temple is unlike other temples of the period in that it is composed of a large number of bas-reliefs and carved stelae showing the dates of various turquoise-mining missions in antiquity, the number of team members, and the goal and duration of each mission. From dynasty to dynasty, the temple was expanded and beautified, with the last known enlargement taking place in the 20th Dynasty.

To reach the temple the visitor must pass through a sequence of 14 perfectly-cut blocks that form ante-rooms, and even a small pylon, before reaching the central courtyard. At the far end of this courtyard are the sanctum and two grottos, where the gods Hathor and Sopdu were adored and where their images still remain. This part of the temple was accessible only to the priests and the Pharaoh. Regretfully, a colonial British attempt to reopen the mines in the mid-19th century led to some of the reliefs being destroyed.

- Site map

The site of Serabit Al-Khadim, which lies on top of a mountain 2,600 feet above sea level, was discovered by British archaeologist Flinders Petrie in 1905. Petrie unearthed several royal and private sculptures, stelae and sacrificial tools dating back to the time of the Fourth-Dynasty King Senefru.

Petrie also found vestiges of the Proto- Sinaitic script, believed to be an early precursor of our modern alphabet. These scripts began with hieroglyphic signs used to write the names of the people who worked in the mines and to keep account of their labours. The signs developed into an "Aleph-Beta" script that recorded a Proto-Canaanite language. The script that developed, Proto-Sinaitic, was used to write a Pan-Canaanite language.

The Serabit Al-Khadim temple resembles a double series of stelae leading to an underground chapel dedicated to the goddess Hathor. Many of the temple's large number of sanctuaries and shrines were dedicated to Hathor who, among her many other attributes, was the patron goddess of copper and turquoise miners. As we have seen, the earliest part of the main rock-cut Hathor Temple, which has a front court and portico, dates from the 12th Dynasty and was probably founded by Pharaoh Amenemhet III, during a period of time when the mines were particularly active.

A number of scenes depict the role of Hathor in the transformation of the new Pharaoh, into the deified ruler of Egypt, which took place on his ascension to the throne. One scene depicts Hathor suckling the Pharaoh. Another scene from a stone tablet depicts Hathor offering the Pharaoh the ankh symbol, or key of life.

This older part of the temple was enlarged upon and extended during the New Kingdom by none other than Queen Hatshepsut, along with Tuthmosis III and Amenhotep III. This was a regeneration period for mining operations after an apparent decline in the area during the Second Intermediate Period. These extensions are unusual for a temple in the manner in which they are angled, that is to the west of the earlier structure.

On the north side of the temple is a shrine dedicated to the Pharaohs who were deified in this region. On one wall of the shrine are numerous stelae. A little to the south of the main temple is a shrine dedicated to Sopdu, god of the Eastern Desert, which is smaller than the northern shrine.

Today, the whole site is being subjected to restoration and documentation in order to make it more accessible to visitors and more tourist-friendly. Mohamed Abdel-Maqsoud, head of the central administration for Lower Egypt antiquities, said that the restoration, which will take about a year on a budget of LE500,000, would remove all the signs of time that marred the temple's walls and reliefs. It would also consolidate them and strengthen the fabric and colours of the wall paintings. The restoration will be carried out by a mission from the SCA, while the documentation will be implemented in collaboration with CULTNAT which will provide the necessary technical assistance and equipment.

Zahi Hawass, secretary-general of the SCA, said that every relief would be photographed, drawn and videotaped on its four sides and then returned to its original position. A site management project would also be implemented.

Abdel-Maqsoud promises that by 2010 a proposal will be presented to the World Heritage Organisation for the Serabit Al-Khadim archaeological site to be included on the World Heritage List.

Copyright Al-Ahram Weekly. All rights reserved

| 28063|2009-03-02 08:01:59|Paul Kekai Manansala|Fragments of Ancient Egyptian Papyrus Found|
Rossella Lorenzi, Discovery News

| 28064|2009-03-02 08:03:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Wooden sarcophaguses found in Egypt tomb|
Thu Feb 26, 2009 11:58am EST

Email | Print |
Share
| Reprints | Single Page

[-] Text [+]

1 of 3Full Size

CAIRO (Reuters) - Japanese archaeologists working in Egypt have found four wooden sarcophaguses and associated grave goods which could date back up to 3,300 years, the Egyptian government said on Thursday.

The team from Waseda University in Tokyo discovered the anthropomorphic sarcophaguses in a tomb in the Sakkara necropolis, about 25 km (15 miles) south of Cairo, the Supreme Council for Antiquities said in a statement.

Sakkara, the burial ground for the ancient city of Memphis, remains one of the richest sources of Egyptian antiquities. Archaeologists say much remains buried in the sands.

The tomb also contained three wooden Canopic jars, in which ancient Egyptians tried to preserve internal organs, and four boxes for ushabti figures, the miniature statues of servants to serve the dead person in the afterlife, the statement said.

The sarcophaguses did not contain mummies because the tomb was robbed in ancient times but have the original black and yellow paintwork showing ancient Egyptian gods, it said.

One of the ushabti boxes is in excellent condition and was unopened but most of the 38 wooden figurines inside were broken. It belonged to a man by the name of Tut Bashu, who was the original owner of one of the coffins.

Another sarcophagus belonged to someone called Ari Saraa. The statement gave no further details of the dead people but said the burials dated from the Ramesside period or the Late Dynastic Period -- anywhere between about 1300 and 330 BC.

(Writing by Jonathan Wright; Editing by Louise Ireland)

Thomson Reuters 2009 All rights reserved

| 28065|2009-03-02 08:06:02|Paul Kekai Manansala|Amenhotep III statue rises again|
From The Times
March 2, 2009

Amenhotep III statue rises again

http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/life_and_style/court_and_social/article5827034.ece

(AFP)

Amenhotep III

Norman Hammond, Archaeology Correspondent

One of Egypt's most noted Pharaohs is once more standing tall and looking out across the Nile Valley, by the efforts of an international team and a little help from the British Museum. A colossal statue of Amenhotep III, grandfather of Tutankhamun and ruler of Egypt for more than 36 years, has been raised and given back his head.

The red quartzite statue, one of a set that stood around the courtyard of his funerary temple at Kom el-Hettan, near Luxor, fell centuries ago. In the early 19th century the British collector Henry Salt acquired its head, together with a second head from the same site, and both finished up in the British Museum; the museum published Salt's manuscript on some of his work in the recent book The Sphinx Revealed.

The statue was one of a set that stood on the north side of the peristyle court of the temple, and shows Amenhotep III (reigned 1386-49BC) wearing the red crown of Lower Egypt. The south side of the court had similar statues, but wearing the white crown of Upper Egypt.

The raw material for the northern statues came from Gebel el-Akmar in northern Egypt, that for the southern ones from the red granite quarries of Aswan in the far south.

Both types showed Amenhotep III with arms crossed and holding the insignia of rulership.

"Since the start of our work at the temple we have collected and grouped large parts of the torsos with thousands of smaller fragments," Dr Hourig Sourouzian, of the Armenian Academy of Sciences, reports in Egyptian Archaeology. "In 2008 we added parts of the chest and completed the statue with an exact replica of one of the two heads now in the British Museum."

Michael Nielson, of the British Museum, made the replica head, which was then transported to Egypt and repositioned on top of the restored torso with the permission of the Egyptian authorities. The project, which has already assembled large portions of other statues, of which there were probably a dozen, involved a team of 30 from a dozen nationalities, and continues its work this year.

Egyptian Archaeology 33: 33-35.

| 28066|2009-03-02 10:44:46|Asar Imhotep|Re: Are the Ntrw the Kontemble and do they live in caves?|
I came across earlier in my research a possible etymology for the term. I'm not sure where it is currently, but I will check again. As far as in relation to the article, everything seems to be in alignment with the previously written article. This is primarily because shrines or temples are locations in which one expects to meet or invite spirit beings.

If the Egyptians believed the Ntrw beings were real beings, who were ancestor teachers, you would expect monuments that would reflect this belief. You would expect to find centers that correlate with central meeting spots of these beings. As can be seen from the oral traditions (and I could have added more from the Bambara and Zulu accounts, as well as other Kongo accounts of these beings and caves), a cave, mountain, forest or lake would be prime locations to look for shrines (constructed or natural) to these beings.

In my upcoming work Bantu Cosmology and the Origins of Egyptian Civilization I plan to demonstrate this fact and how it can give us clues to the religious practices shared by so many African ethic groups. What is suggestive of this whole hypothesis is the possible origins of the pharaonic "false" beard. It may not be the result of natural style, but a sign of reverence for these alleged spirit beings (Ntrw, Mimbos, Kontemble, Ipatika, etc.), as all of these beings are described as short statured (1foot in height) with long hair and long beards.

More work is needed indeed, but it's all coming together.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Mon, 3/2/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Are the Ntrw the Kontemble and do they live in caves?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 2, 2009, 8:42 AM

Asar, an interesting article, plenty of food for thought!
However the Old Nubian wordDeffufa said to bea mud bricked structureconnected with a cemetery or a place of worship for burial of dead kings.As you say it must have been a mound or a cave for worshipping.
I may be wrong but it would appear to me that the etymology of the word Deffufa must be closely connected to the word 'FUFUA', which means to revive, bring back to life again, resurrect. UFUFUO means resurrection, raising from the dead. CouldDeffufa be the place of resurrection? (I know Bantu and old Nubian are different languages).
Could this word have a significance with the following article?

"This building is known as the "Western Deffufa" (after an old Nubian word for a mud brick structure) in order to distinguish it from the "Eastern Deffufa," a similarly sized but lower brick building that rises in the cemetery. It is now known that these buildings were temples. The Western Deffufa was a huge brick platform on top of which there was probably a small shrine or object of worship. The "Eastern Deffufa" was associated with the worship or preparation for burial of the dead kings".

Deffufa = Ufufuo?

Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Monday, March 02, 2009 8:07 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Are the Ntrw the Kontemble and do they live in caves?
>
> Peace Phamily,
>
> In August of 2008, I wrote an article titled, "Could the Kontemble be the Netchers Egyptians?" It basically was comparing the images of the Ntrw to oral accounts gi Dagara people of Burkino Faso and the Bantu speakers of Central Africa.
>
> I have updated this essay to include some other information concerning the locatio given an account by Malidoma Some in The Healing Wisdom of Africa. Please rev updated version and tell me what you think.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>

| 28067|2009-03-02 11:58:22|Tafari khumbaka|Fwd: Spring Cleansing Flyer|
Attachments :

--- On Mon, 3/2/09, AAS Atlanta wrote:

Ausar Auset Society Atlanta

Presents:

Spring Cleansing Workshop

We live in a toxic world. Find out why the beginning of spring is the best time of year to cleanse your body and purify your spirit. Learn about safe forms of fasting, adopting a proper diet, and the benefit of cleansing herbs.

* $5 ADMISSION ****

Saturday, March 14, 2009 2:30 p.m. Decatur Recreation Center 231 Sycamore Street in downtown Decatur (one block from the Decatur MARTA Station; free parking is available at the library parking deck)

The Ausar Auset Society is a pan-African religious organization dedicated to the spiritual development of people of African descent. Teachings are based on the ancient Kamitic (Egyptian) systems of spiritual cultivation. Spiritual Readings are available upon request. For more information, call 678-701-8011 or email us at aasatlanta@gmail.com.

| 28068|2009-03-02 19:29:51|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: free meditation class this sun'sday|
Attachments :

please come by sunday for a intro: into meditation, a 4-part class offered by memphis ausar-auset study group.

please check out attachment to this email , click for more details

| 28069|2009-03-03 00:09:55|Asar Imhotep|Kikongo history of Kongo origins in Egypt?|
Peace Family

I was reading over this article titled Origin Traditions and History in Central Africa by John K. Thorton and in it he discusses the change in oral stories, influenced by political circumstances, of the Kongo kingdom. In this article he mentions an oral story which claims thefirstKongo people came from Egypt. He goes on to state:

> "In 1956 another Redemptorist, Joseph de Munck, published the first edition of an extremely influential Kikongo history of Kongo, relating that the first Kongo had probably migrated from Egypt (de Munck 1956:7). (13) His tale perhaps related to colonial mythology (such as the famous Hamitic myth, which linked all achievement in sub-Saharan Africa to "white" migrants from Egypt) as much as it did to anything he heard in tradition, though de Munck was a tireless pursuer of oral traditions, organizing whole expeditions into Angola to recover as many clan traditions as possible. (14)"

Further down in the article, the following is discussed:

> "In its Angolan manifestation, ideas of ancient Egyptian origins have crept > back in, now cleansed by time of their colonialist implications, and perhaps even distantly enriched by the acceptance in some circles of the works of Cheikh Anta Diop. While in Luanda in 1997, I met Manuel Ferraz Alberto, leader of one of the small, recognized restorationist parties, the Sovereign Conservadores Party. His platform included ample demonstrations that Kongo had originated in Ancient Egypt, and argued that an ancient migration lay at the root of this connection. (17)

> Meanwhile, another group, the project Mizaza, which sought to enhance respect for ancient Kongo customs, organized a conference in 1999 that included an account by Mbuki Nabi Lukombo Bisuaki of a long migration that began first in Ethiopia in the year 4200 "before the era of the fish. This migration took the Bena Kongo to Egypt in 4000, then had them migrating, after the reign of Pharaoh Akhnaten, back to Ethiopia in time to be present when Makeda married Solomon to form the Falasha in Ethiopia. Subsequent migrations found them in Great Zimbabwe, Zululand, southern Angola to found the Herero, and finally to Kongo proper. (18)
> These intellectual theories have made their way to the countryside. An account by Joao Paulinho, regarded in Mbanza Kongo as the best traditional historian in the region, has the Kongo originating in Ethiopia and makes the "three stones" to be Gabon, the DRC, and Angola. (19)
> While these theories are unlikely to have any scholarly impact, as opposed to the "Hamitic hypothosis," which was equally farfetched, they are believed in both the DRC and Angola by a wide range of people, both educated and rural (Fig. 6)."

Given the evidence in the linguistic and cultural factors, I don't think this story was connected to the Hamitic myth. I think that de Munck actually asked an Nganga who was well versed with their history. What's interesting is that they did not conduct any cultural, ritual, or artifactual comparitive analyses. They simply dismissed on no other grounds that they think it's fantastical. Now when dealing with origins, we have to seperate (sometimes) the origin of the people of an area and the origins of the "kingdom" proper.

When de Munck discused origins, he discussed the origins of the people, not the kingdom of Kongo. I will have to investigate this more and see what he says directly and how we can connect it to ancient Egyptian language and culture.

Another interesting thing is the timeline they say they left Egyptian territory.This would coincide with the desertification of North Africa and would match other oral traditions that say the people of the Kongo from Kayinga (ancient name for the Sahara). We'll be able to piece it together soon. But the more and more I dig, the more the Cameroonian origins of the BaNtu people seems shaky. Either the Bantu didn't originate in Cameroon or the timeline and subsequent migrations by believed by linguists are all off. What is definitely apparent is that Bantu speakers were in ancient Egypt from the beginning and certain philosophies and practices are still being practiced to this date in the Kongo.

What do you think?

Reference:

Origin Traditions and History in Central Africa

Journal article by John K. Thornton; African Arts, Vol. 37, 2004

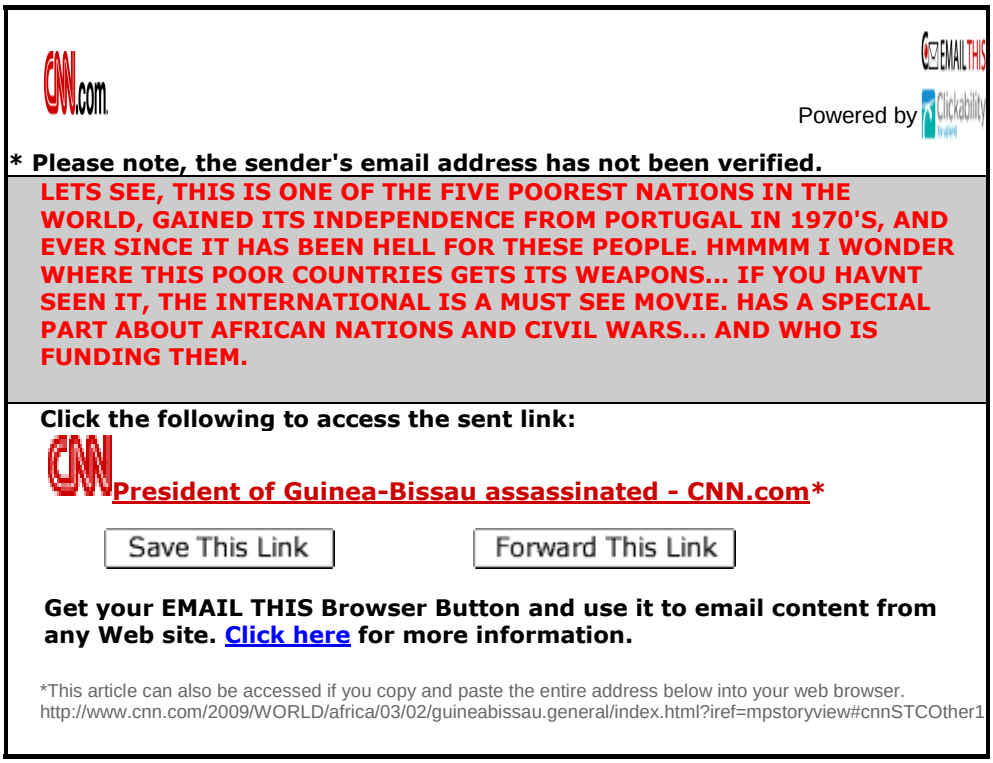
Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28070|2009-03-03 07:19:18|Alex van Deelen|Kikongo history of Kongo origins in Egypt?|
Kikongo history of Kongo origins in Egypt?
Posted by: "Asar Imhotep" asar_imhotep@yahoo.com asar_imhotep
Tue Mar 3, 2009 12:09 am (PST)

> But the more and more I dig, the more the Cameroonian
> origins of the BaNtu people seems shaky.

At one time, the rival theory to the Cameroonian origin of Bantu, was Guthrie's idea that Bantu orinated in Zambia, and that Bemba was the oldest language.

Also, there is a map representing the Genographic people's understanding of the Bantu expansion:



https://genographic.nationalgeographic.com/genographic/lan/en/globe.html#/ms007/

I quote:

" No one knows what caused the great Bantu migration, nor can anyone even say definitively that it happened as commonly believed. But informed speculation has produced several mainstream theories. It may be that growing Bantu populations stretched their resources so much that some settlers had to set off for new lands. Ancient climate change might also have spurred them to set off for new lands... Some anthropologists even suggest that the Bantu spread westward across the continent as they adopted foods such as bananas and yams that enabled them to penetrate the continent's deep forests. Such food appear to have spread historically in much the same pattern as the Bantu... No matter why the Bantu peoples moved, it's likely that they moved not in one enormous mass but in smaller increments over time. "

Alex
| 28071|2009-03-03 07:24:13|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|President of Guinea-Bissau assassinated|

CNN.com

Powered by Clickability

 Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.

LETS SEE, THIS IS ONE OF THE FIVE POOREST NATIONS IN THE WORLD, GAINED ITS INDEPENDENCE FROM PORTUGAL IN 1970'S, AND EVER SINCE IT HAS BEEN HELL FOR THESE PEOPLE. HMMMM I WONDER WHERE THIS POOR COUNTRIES GETS ITS WEAPONS... IF YOU HAVNT SEEN IT, THE INTERNATIONAL IS A MUST SEE MOVIE. HAS A SPECIAL PART ABOUT AFRICAN NATIONS AND CIVIL WARS... AND WHO IS FUNDING THEM.

Click the following to access the sent link:

President of Guinea-Bissau assassinated - CNN.com*

Save This Link Forward This Link

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn.com/2009/WORLD/africa/03/02/guineabissau.general/index.html?iref=mpstoryview#cnnSTCOther1

| 28072|2009-03-03 07:24:44|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan... they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

CNN.com

Powered by Clickability

 Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.

You have received the following link from gingerd2007@yahoo.com:

Click the following to access the sent link:

U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*

Save This Link | Forward This Link

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn.com/2009/POLITICS/03/02/mideast.clinton/index.html

| 28073|2009-03-03 07:25:14|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Barnes & Noble - racism at its best|

Attachments :

> I am so mad, I am calling this store right now. Unbelievable. Everyone > should call them. Their number is 305-446-4152. If we don't stand up for > our > own, who will?
>
> For those of you who think / thought he's not black enough, tell that to > these rednecks.
>
> Ginger
>
>
> FWD:
> This is so sad and pathetic... Barnes and Noble had this as their store > front display in Coral Gables, FL > in the Miracle Mile Mall.. I am totally disgusted and I think it is > important that we all find a different place to buy our books.
> Obviously this is a place of extreme ignorance. How far have we really > come?
>
> Please support the boycott and pass this e-mail to family and friends.
> it is so sad when you have been lied to all your life of who you are > supposed to be because of the color of your skin. Some people just can't > accept change. Fortunately, change will come with or without you.
>
>> Subject: Racism still exists obviously
>>
>>
>>
>> Let us not be lulled into a sense of complacency, due to the recent
>>
>> political success of President Obama.

>>
>> Racism still exists in this country. Like all things, nothing is >> perfect
>> on this planet, in this world.
>>
>> We have an obligation to be active on issues that simply cannot be
>>
>> ignored.
>>
>>
>>
>> Along these lines we should all actively spread the word of how Barnes
>>
>> and Noble apparently feels about Black people or at least our >> President.
>>
>>
>> Please forward this to as many people you think should be aware of >> this
>> and would be offended by this.
>>
>> Boycotting Barnes and Noble will show the economic effect of people >> who >> will not tolerate racism.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> This is so sad and pathetic. Let's buy our books anywhere but Barnes >> and >> Noble.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>> This is ridiculous!
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> (Embedded image moved to file: pic20556.jpg)
>>
>>
>>
>> Barnes and Noble had this as their store front display in Coral Gables
>> FL
>> in the Miracle Mile Mall. I am totally disgusted and I think it is >> important that we all find a different place to buy our books.
>>
>> Obviously
>> this is a place of extreme ignorance. How far have we really come?
>> God
>> bless.
>>
>>
>>
>> Please support the boycott and pass this e-mail to family and friends.
>>
>> It is so sad when you have been lied to all your life of who you are
>>
>> supposed to be because of the color of your skin. Some people just >> can't >> accept change. Fortunately, change will come with or without you.
>>
>>
>>
>> Subject: Racism still exists obviously

>>
>>
>>
>> Let us not be lulled into a sense of complacency, due to the recent
>>
>> political success of President Obama.
>>
>> Racism still exists in this country. Like all things, nothing is >> perfect
>> on this planet, in this world.
>>
>> We have an obligation to be active on issues that simply cannot be
>>
>> ignored.
>>
>>
>>
>> Along these lines we should all actively spread the word of how Barnes
>>
>> and Noble apparently feels about Black people or at least our >> President.
>>
>>
>> Please forward this to as many people you think should be aware of
>> this
>> and would be offended by this.
>>
>> Boycotting Barnes and Noble will show the economic effect of people
>> who >> will not tolerate racism.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Get a jump start on your taxes. Find a tax professional in your
>>
>> neighborhood today.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

| 28074|2009-03-03 07:25:33|hebrew b'yisrael|Re: Fw: Check out YouTube| old news... He tried before.... Gov'ts of men have failed.

--- On Sat, 2/28/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
From: Tafari khumbaka

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: Check out YouTube
To: maatcollective@yahoogroups.com
Date: Saturday, February 28, 2009, 11:23 AM

http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=c0dkEExPVH4
check out gahdaffi

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 2/23/09, wrote:
From: AUSAR65>
Subject: Check out YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary
To:
Date: Monday, February 23, 2009, 7:32 PM

YouTube - Manna - psilocybin mushroom documentary

Get a jump start on your taxes. Find a tax professional in your neighborhood today.

| 28075|2009-03-03 07:25:43|Michael Bayman|Reconstitution Of The Ancient Way Through Fiscal-Responsibility|

Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government:

4,158: Ounces-Of-Gold: Annual-Fiscal-Budget For The Year = 301,614: A.M.C. of the legislating by the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Council

Departmental-General-Operations: Budget

Department For The Law And Justice

: 30: ounces

Imperial-Court-Service: 7: ounces

Imperial-Investigation-Service = Not-Available

Imperial-Special-Services-Agency: 32: ounces

Department For The Imperial-Affairs

: 30: ounces

Department For The Ambassadors: 36: ounces

Department For The Protocols: 36: ounces

Department For The Foreign-Affairs: 18: ounces

Department For The Treasury And Budget

: 30: ounces

Imperial-Statistics-Weights And Measures-Agency: 18: ounces

Department For The Interior

: 30: ounces

Department For The Admissions: 33: ounces

Department For The Archives: 9: ounces

Department For The Copyright And Patent: 12: ounces

Imperial-Library-Services: 18: ounces

Emergency-Services-Agency: 48: ounces

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: 60: ounces

Imperial-Weather-Observation-Agency: 18: ounces

Department For The Defense And Security

= Not-Available

Imperial-Defense-Force = Not-Available

Imperial-Air-Defense-Force = Not-Available

Imperial-Sea-Defense-Force = Not-Available

Department For The Customs

: 30: ounces

Imperial-Customs-Force = Not-Available

Department For The Communications

: 30: ounces

Imperial-Broadcasting-Agency: 45: ounces

Imperial-News-Service: 12: ounces

General-Information-Agency: 36: ounces

Department For The General-Operations

: 30: ounces

Department For The Logistics: 40: ounces

Imperial-Water-Agency: 27: ounces

Imperial-Sanitation-Service: 18: ounces

Imperial-Parcel-Service: 24: ounces

Imperial-Learning-Agency: 72: ounces

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy

: 30: ounces

Imperial-Health And Dental-Maintenance-Agency: 60: ounces

Imperial-Disease-Eradication And Emergency-Response-Agency: 24: ounces

Department For The Journey/Travel And Transport

: 30: ounces

Air-Department: 10: ounces

Rail-Department: 27: ounces

Imperial-Maritime-Agency: 48: ounces; Sea-Department: 27: ounces

Commercial-Transport-Department: 45: ounces

Department For The Infrastructure

: 30: ounces

Imperial-Research And Development-Agency: 60: ounces

Department For The Public-Works: 45: ounces

Imperial-Inspections-Agency: 27: ounces

Imperial-Drilling And Mining-Agency: 9: ounces

Department For The Land-Management

: 30: ounces

Department For The Agriculture: 72 ounces

Imperial-Environmental-Conservation And Preservation-Agency: 27: ounces

Imperial-Seismic-Anomaly-Observation-Agency: 12: ounces

Fiscal-Budget: Line-Items

Department For The Admissions: Identification-Machine: Units = 3

Department For The Admissions: All-In-One: Printer/Copier/ Scanner/Fax: Units = 7

Department For The Agriculture: Hydroponics-System: (Ebb&Flow)Complete-System: Units = 54

Department For The Agriculture: Sodium-Halide: 1,000-Watt: Light-bulb: Units = 24

Department For The Agriculture: Heirloom-Seeds (Various-Species): Units = 2,000

Department For The Agriculture: Air-Filtration-Units = 25

Department For The Communications: Shortwave-Radio: Units = 48: Portable-Systems; 8: Stand-Alone: Systems

Department For The Communications: Walkie-Talkie: Units = 48

Department For The Communications: Audio-Production-Suite: Units = 1: Portable-Systems; 1: Stand-Alone: Systems

Department For The Communications: Video-Production-Suite: Units = 4

Department For The Communications: I.S.P.: Operations = 1: Year

Department For The Communications: Domain-Name = 3: Years

Department For The Communications: Web-Hosting = 1: Year

Department For The Communications: Sony-DSR-570: WSP: Video-Camera: Units = 1

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Dry-Erase-Boards: Units = 12: Large: 24: small

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Heat-Lamps: Units = 12

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Infocus: IN26+DLP: XGA: Projector with the Apollo: Multimedia-Projector-Cart, Epson: ELPSC80: Duet-Ultra: Portable-Projector-Screen, and Targus: Wireless-Presenter(Cursor-Control with the built-in-laser-pointer): Units = 24-of-everything

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Treatment-Table: Units = 24

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Station-Tables: Units = 24

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Care-Receiver-Bed: Units = 18

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Cupping-Equipment: Units = 40

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Room-Divider: Units = 24

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Ion-Foot-Cleanser: Units = 24

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy:

Blood-Type-Testers: Units = 200

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Eye-Wash-Station: Units = 8

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Alcohol: 16: Gallons

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Hydrogen-Peroxide: 16: Gallons

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Music-Therapy: Sound-System: Units = 8

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Storage-Bin: Units = 600

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Storage-Rack: Units = 60

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Herbal-Medicine-Container: Units = 4000

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Acupuncture-Therapy-Operations: Needle-Disposal-Units = 32

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Haz-Mat: Disposal: Units = 24

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Stethoscope: Units = 8

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Blood-Pressure: Reader-Cuff: Units = 16

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Examination-Gloves: Units = 4: cases

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: C.P.R.: Training-Dummies: Units = 9; Infant-Training-Dummies: Units = 9

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Electrical-Stimulation-Machine: Units = 16

Department For The Health AndPhytotherapy: Omano: OM3344: trinocular: stereo-microscope: Units = 8

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Mortar And Pestle: Units = 16

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Herb-Grinding-Machine: Units = 16

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Herb-Chopper: Units = 16

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Scales: Units = 20

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Impulse-Sealer: Units = 6

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Multifunctional-Granulation-Coater: Units = 2

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Laptop-Computer: Units = 8

Department For The Health And Phytotherapy: Computer-Server: Units = 2, additional-blades = not-available

Department For The Imperial-Affairs: Imperial-Flag: Units = 24

Department For The Imperial-Affairs: Imperial-Seal-Device and Subordinate-Seal-Devices: Units = 45

Department For The Imperial-Affairs: Laptop-Computer: Units = 3

Department For The Imperial-Affairs: Computer-Server: Units = 1, additional-blades = not-available

Department For The Journey/Travel And Transport: Land-Vessel:(Chevrolet-Express: 2500: Work-Van) Units = 6 with the Diesel-Engine

Department For The Journey/Travel And Transport: Land-Vessel- Maintenance = 18: ounces (gold)

Department For The Journey/Travel And Transport: Land-Vessel-Repair = 16: ounces (gold)

Department For The Public-Works: Metal-Working-Equipment-Suite: Units = 12

Department For The Public-Works: Wood-Working-Equipment-Suite: Units = 12

Emergency-Services-Agency: Fire-Extinguisher: Units = 60

Emergency-Services-Agency: Fire-Suppression-Foam/Solvent = 8,000: gallons

Emergency-Services-Agency: Fire-Suppression: Training-Equipment = 18: ounces of the gold

Emergency-Services-Agency: Fire-Suppression: Squad-Equipment = 8-Squads

Emergency-Services-Agency: Field-First-Aid-Kit: Units = 40

Emergency-Services-Agency: Shortwave-Radio: Units = 16: Portable: 16: Stand-Alone: Systems

Emergency-Services-Agency: Walkie-Talkie: Units = 40

Emergency-Services-Agency: Automated-Electric-Defibrillator(Portable) : Units = 16

Emergency-Services-Agency: C.P.R.: Training-Dummies: Units = 16;

Infant-Training-Dummies: Units = 16

Emergency-Services-Agency: C.P.R.: Mouth-Units = 48

Emergency-Services-Agency: Non-Latex: Sterile-Gloves = 7: cases

Emergency-Services-Agency: Ambu-Bags: Units = 16

Emergency-Services-Agency: Land-Vessel: E.M.S.: Response-Units = 8

Emergency-Services-Agency: Land-Vessel: Maintenance: 10: ounces (gold)

Emergency-Services-Agency: Land-Vessel: Repair = 16: ounces (gold)

Emergency-Services-Agency: Oxygen-Tanks: Units = 8: ounces (gold)

Imperial-Health And Dental-Maintenance-Agency: Sphygmomanometer: Units = 8

Imperial-Health And Dental-Maintenance-Agency: Essential-Oils: Suites = 8

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Dry-Erase-Board: Units = Units = 25: Large; 20: Small

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Slide-Projectors with the Computer-Link = 30

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Portable-Projector-Screens: Units = 30

Imperial-Learning-Agency: 32: inch: Televisions and DVD: Units = 8: each

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Instruction-Room: CCTV(Digital)-System: Units = 32

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Laptop-Computers: Units = 132

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Fire-Extinguisher: Units = 40

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Smoke And Carbon-Dioxide-Detector: Units = 52

Imperial-Learning-Agency: First-Aid-Kit: Units = 70

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Instructor-Desk: Units = 168

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Student-Desk: Units = 721

Imperial-Learning-Agency: Lab-Stations: Units = 8

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Biodiesel-Operations: Inspection-Maintenance And Repair: 32: ounces (gold)

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Biodiesel-Operations: Upgrades: 32: ounces (gold)

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: 1500: gallon-storage-tank: Units= 6

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: 400: gallon-storage-tank: Units = 6

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: 200: gallon-storage-tank: Units = 6

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Computer-Server: Units = 4, additional-blades = not-available

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: 60: Kw: Generator:

60: HZ: cycle:Volts: 120/240: Single-Phase:

6: cyl-3500: Allis: Chalmers-Diesel-Engine: Units = 10

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Fire-Suppression-System: Units = 24

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Fire-Powder (Anti-Grease-Fire): Units = 400: 80:lb-bags

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Portable-Solar-Power: Units = 16

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Wind-Power: WindBlue: DC-540: Units = 16

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Wind-Power:

NC25A: 12: Volt:Ultra-High-Efficiency: Charge-Controller

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Solar/Wind-Power: Link 20, 12/24V: Battery-Monitor: Units = 8

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Solar/Wind-Power: MK: U1: 12: Volt-Battery (Absorbed-Glass-Matt): 32: Amp-Hour: Units = 48

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: True-Charge: TC-10: 10Amp: 2: Bank: Battery-Charger: Units = 8

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Link 1000 - Single Battery Bank: Inverter: Units = 8

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Link 2000 - Single Battery Bank: Inverter: Units = 8

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Wind-Power: Turbine-System: Inspection-Maintenance And Repair: 32: ounces(gold)

Imperial-Power And Industry-Agency: Wind-Power: Turbine-System: Upgrades: 10: ounces (gold)

Imperial-Parcel-Service: Foreign-Venue: Parcelage: 9: ounces (gold)

Imperial-Parcel-Service: Land-Transport-Equipment: Units = 3

Imperial-Water-Agency: Portable-Distillation: Units = 45

Imperial-Water-Agency: Distillation-Equipment: Units = 40

Imperial-Water-Agency: In-Line: Pre-Filter-Housing: Units = 40

Imperial-Water-Agency: Solid-Carbon: Block-Filter: Cartridge: Units = 230

Imperial-Water-Agency: De-Scaler And Cleaner: Units = 230

Imperial-Water-Agency: Post-Filter- Cup: 6: Pack: Units = 230

Imperial-Water-Agency: Drilling-Equipment: Units = 8

Imperial-Water-Agency: Drilling-Equipment: Replacement-Bit-Set: Units = 32

Imperial-Water-Agency: 1500: gallon-storage-tanks: Units = 16

Imperial-Weather-Observation-Agency: WeatherHawk-Weather-Station: Units = 8

Imperial-Weather-Observation-Agency: Laptop-Computers = 8

Imperial-Weather-Observation-Agency: Computer-Server: Units = 8, additional-blades = not-available

General-Equipment = Docu-Pen: Portable-Scanners: Units = 18

Imperial-Council-Member: Wages = 874: ounces of the gold

Chief Of The Staff: Wages = 60: ounces of the gold

Sub-Department-Head: Wages = 1560: ounces of the gold

National-Ambassador-Wages = 40: ounces of the gold

Sector-Ambassador-Wages = 60: ounces of the gold

Regional-Ambassador-Wages = 48: ounces of the gold

District-Ambassador-Wages = 48: ounces of the gold

Lieutenant-Ambassador-Wages = 84: ounces of the gold

Imperial-Council: Operations-Discretionary-Fund: 12: ounces

Sovereign-Crown: Operations-Discretionary-Fund: 24: ounces

Amexem-Moor-Empire

: Sovereign-Copyright -Number: SC10192008CE006

| 28076|2009-03-03 08:26:21|Asar Imhotep|Re: Kikongo history of Kongo origins in Egypt?|
What's still the mystery is how the language spread. I know it is Kleiman who proposes that with the advent of Bananas and Iron, that the Bantu speakers spread out more rapidly. But to me it seems like she was trying to fit some evidence to match the already existing paradigm.

And why does everyone have to spread by means of war? Having Iron doesn't necessarily mean you are going to use it for war and conquering. I am still digging through the literature, but something isn't right.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Tue, 3/3/09, Alex van Deelen wrote:
From: Alex van Deelen
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re:Kikongo history of Kongo origins in Egypt?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 3, 2009, 9:17 AM

Kikongo history of Kongo origins in Egypt?
Posted by: "Asar Imhotep" asar_imhotep@ yahoo.com asar_imhotep
Tue Mar 3, 2009 12:09 am (PST)

> But the more and more I dig, the more the Cameroonian
> origins of the BaNtu people seems shaky.

At one time, the rival theory to the Cameroonian origin of Bantu, was Guthrie's idea that Bantu orinated in Zambia, and that Bemba was the oldest language.

Also, there is a map representing the Genographic people's understanding of the Bantu expansion:

https://genographic .nationalgeograp hic.com/genograp hic/lan/en/ globe.html# /ms007/

I quote:

" No one knows what caused the great Bantu migration, nor can anyone even say definitively that it happened as commonly believed. But informed speculation has produced several mainstream theories. It may be that growing Bantu populations stretched their resources so much that some settlers had to set off for new lands.
Ancient climate change might also have spurred them to set off for new lands... Some anthropologists even suggest that the Bantu spread westward across the continent as they adopted foods such as bananas and yams that enabled them to penetrate the continent's deep forests. Such food appear to have spread historically in much the same pattern as the Bantu... No matter why the Bantu peoples moved, it's likely that they moved not in one enormous mass but in smaller increments over time. "

Alex

| 28077|2009-03-03 09:44:02|millennium|WE-Ave wAve Re: waving waving ... Re: feeling Re: Sagittarius A* ...|
WE-Ave, Weave, Wave ...

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kQQSW35PrEY

Great Spirit, woven (by waving) of every tribal spirit ....

'waven' of every (rainbow) individual spirit ...

~~
~~~

aCorn-Planter, EllyEagle, your HeartSong, songline, dreamtime, (electromagnetic) Mind is clear.

each of our HeartMind voices is an overlapping, intertwining chorus of spirits/waves of varied form and ancestry, of harmonics multi-hued ...

and together the Phoenix Choir blending a One of EVERY shape and ancestor voice.

viz, the bizzz, of 'bee-bohr', and forgetting EVERY-thing
~~~

we have been told ... yes ... my listening has been to become like that SILENT WILDERNESS that DavidBear in Bleep_Vancouver referenced ... that my experiencing of the integrity and totality of truth is in each connecting.
'where-in' I leave behind the brashness of the 'loud province' to hear the symphony of the quiet/touch of global cultural sea, upon the living/whispering ancestral wisdom family-tree.

a 'shared-song' carrier-wave, of the 'body' of Women, native GrandMothers, the weavers and weave-wisdom-keepers, whom make up this WE of the -now~ of eternity.

She, of thee and me,

Millennium

-- On Tue, 3/3/09, ELLY wrote:

Totally agree regarding the plants dear CP.
My way of service to my community is through co-creation with the plant kingdom. Of course plants 'speak', how else would we know how plants can heal us? They pass on the information to those who are open enough to listen. Commnication is possible with all sentient beings, I once had a bee make me laugh out loud with what he was saying! :-) Blessings y'all
Elly x

www.GrassdancerEssences.com - Healing Energy from Nature
The Healing Prayers Circle - Caring for All Our Relations
http://EssencetialLife.blogspot.com

-- In phoenix-quest, CP wrote:

Brother Millennium, your version of explicit explanation compared to Michael's and mine is similar to your version of Hydrogen atoms compared to those drawn by Niels Bohr. You might actually be explicit, but we, who have not been initiated into the farther reaches of your your world view, think you are speaking Greek. (Except Kimberbeth, who knows Greek well enough to tell the difference.)

In several of my lectures, I have remarked that plants talk to us and hear us. When people ask me, "Cornplanter, how can plants listen or speak? They have no ears or mouths!", I tell them simply:
"Plants speak and hear through their hearts." (It is no wonder that many so-called intelligent people consider me a simpleton.)

I have consciously experienced the creation of matter as an harmonic pattern of vibration of non-matter as in a music which is not experienceable in our current conscious state. When one reaches close to the harmonic field which holds everything together, one almost feels all the atoms waving. They are not waving with hands and saying, "Hey there, CP, Have a nice day!" They wave from their hearts to ours, and ours to theirs. For in a certain moment, we are all one.

The first lesson in "The Science Of My Mind By Master Bizarra," is titled: "Forget Everything Other People Have Told You!" That is what we must do in order to allow into our minds the truthful experience of our world. Most of us filter everything in through enormous belief systems, cluttered with emotional traumas and fear. It is amazing that we can communicate at all.

Loved your pictures of SoCal mountains... .....

--CP

-- In phoenix-quest, millennium wrote:

whether you LIKE it or not, Michael,

I was quite explicit.

experience, spirit, the substrate, the all, the vortex,
your wave ... is emotion, is feeling, is experience,
is sensation, is consciousness.

waving/vortexing/ singing is the only phenomenon which exists, which can exist. [look around, within you ...]

that is why it has been called the dreaming, the songline, creation, for tens or hundreds of thousands of years.

from which waving electrons, waving protons,
waving you and I, are made.

in LIVING color.

the question is, how to you FEEL about that?

your having NOT read ...

the undiscovered physics

http://groupkos.com/mtwain/PapazianLetter.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/TheElectron.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/TheProton.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/Proof.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/FTLpart1.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/FTLpart2.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/NuScarlet-pt1.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/NuScarlet-pt2.pdf
http://groupkos.com/mtwain/NucleonSong.pdf

Millennium

..

| 28078|2009-03-03 11:43:15|cristofori whitakara|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
Thanks for the information. I was in a local library and came across this New Book by Cherese Cartlidge "Reparations for Slavery".

--- On Mon, 3/2/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine
To: "John Wilson" , "DR Van Hook" , "Professor McKnight" , Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Jennifer Esteen" , "Linda Handy" , "Toni Adams"
Date: Monday, March 2, 2009, 3:30 PM

I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan. .. they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

CNN.com
Powered by EMAILTHIS Clickability
* Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.
You have received the following link from gingerd2007@ yahoo.com:

Click the following to access the sent link:

U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*

Save This Link Forward This Link

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn. com/2009/ POLITICS/ 03/02/mideast. clinton/index. html

| 28079|2009-03-03 12:26:22|Daniel Glosser|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.

On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, <gingerd2007@hotmail.com> wrote:
I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan... they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

Powered by

* Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.

You have received the following link from gingerd2007@yahoo.com:

Click the following to access the sent link:

U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*

Save This Link Forward This Link

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.

http://www.cnn.com/2009/POLITICS/03/02/mideast.clinton/index.html

--
Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
Asgardian Kennels
Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)

| 28080|2009-03-03 12:26:44|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|15 -Year_old Girl Beat by Seattle Police|

When do we as a people REALLY start standing up for our children?
http://newsone.blackplanet.com/nation/seattle-police-beat-15-year-old-girl/

| 28081|2009-03-03 13:33:57|Courtenay barnett|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
There is no real 'giving'. The figures will be presented but thefunds disbursed will be far from the grand announcemnet.

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asgardiankennels@gmail.com
Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 10:50:02 -0600
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.

On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan. .. they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

Powered by
* Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.

You have received the following link from gingerd2007@ yahoo.com:

Click the following to access the sent link:

U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn. com/2009/ POLITICS/ 03/02/mideast. clinton/index. html

--
Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
Asgardian Kennels
Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)

Get news, entertainment and everything you care about at Live.com. Check it out!
| 28082|2009-03-03 16:05:56|Tafari khumbaka|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|

theyll probaly get much more then 900 mil, its a chess game, the rothchilds been doing this for 200yrs.....
54billion a yr for rehabilitation of prisoners and incorporating poor black neighborhoods would do more for america , then paying the israli's to manage through attrition the palestinians

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Tue, 3/3/09, Courtenay barnett wrote:
> From: Courtenay barnett
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Tuesday, March 3, 2009, 3:33 PM
>
> There is no real 'giving'. The figures will be presented but thefunds disbursed will be far from the grand announcemnet.
>
> ---
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

From: asgardiankennels@ gmail.com
Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 10:50:02 -0600
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.

On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan. .. they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

Powered by
* Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.
You have received the following link from gingerd2007@ yahoo.com:
Click the following to access the sent link:
U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn. com/2009/ POLITICS/ 03/02/mideast. clinton/index. html

--
Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
Asgardian Kennels
Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)

Get news, entertainment and everything you care about at Live.com. Check it out!

| 28083|2009-03-03 22:05:38|Mahari Mengistu|Re: 15 -Year_old Girl Beat by Seattle Police|
Have you ever seen ANYTHING more despicable and cowardly?
It is reminiscent of South Afrakan apartheid tactics. O, what am I saying? It is reminiscent of America.
Of course, we don't know what she may have said to him. She may have called him "a needle d--k peckerwood" or something of the sort. But that is no excuse for attacking a defenseless female child.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
> When do we as a people REALLY start standing up for our children?
>
>
> http://newsone.blackplanet.com/nation/seattle-police-beat-15-year-old-girl/
>
| 28084|2009-03-03 22:18:18|Mahari Mengistu|Re: 15 -Year_old Girl Beat by Seattle Police|
There is no reason for black people to trust the police. They are just a necessary evil. What a scenario: the mother's car is missing; she calls the police; the car unbeknowest to the mother is with her daughter and her daughter's friend; the cop finds the girls in the car and brutally beats up her daughter's best friend. Is there anything reasonable and acceptable about this outcome? I thought they were too reasonable and kind toward the cop.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
> When do we as a people REALLY start standing up for our children?
>
>
> http://newsone.blackplanet.com/nation/seattle-police-beat-15-year-old-girl/
>
| 28085|2009-03-04 01:35:34|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
Peace Mahari

While looking for something else in Fu-Kiau's Bantu Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo, I came across this foot-note on page 102 that might be of interest to this discussion. He is giving us some proverbs about community and on the previous page he gives us the word NZUNDU which means "anvil."

It is a metaphor for a child who is born in which the community expects him/her to revive their stagnant economy. In other words, a person who is Nzundu (an anvil) is someone on which the community feels, because of his/her skill or enginuity, that the community can build an industry and prosper; as an anvil is the foundation in which one creates and shapes metals to use in various industries (agriculture, war or building). In economics we call this a "vertical economy." An example of a vertical economy would be a university in a small town. Because the university exist in the town, business sprout up to take care of the various needs of the people enrolled and working in the university.

Now, the term Zundu (without the N) means "frog." A frog in the Kongo is a symbol of drunkardness. Fu-Kiau's footnote reads:

"Zundu; by fault of eliminating the "N" from the above name, the name becomes Zundu (frog); for the Kongo, Zundu is the symbol of drunkard, but also of habitual drunkeness. In suppressing certain letters, mainly "n" and "m" from their names, many intellectuals in present Africa bear names with a vulgar meaning or simply meaningless names, as in the case of the name Zundu."

This is highly suggestive on many levels. Primarily this suggest that certain names have a great meaning when the letters "n" or "m" are prefixed to the stem. This would lend some support to the notion that the "N" attached to certain names denotes a high rank or highly revered manifestation of the root stem as the examples demonstrate from the previous email. We would have to see if this same convention exist in Mdw Ntr and provide plenty of examples for analysis.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Sun, 1/11/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, January 11, 2009, 7:09 PM

Peace Mahari

I wanted to also give you something to think about as well when it comes to this subject matter. I will use the Bantu languages as an example.

When discussing the role of N in Bantu, the prefix often times denotes "one who is," or "one that does," or "that which is/does." Here are a few examples where the N in the Bantu languages changes the stresses being in the state of the root word.

Kinsa = to take care of Ghanga = to do, to act, to realize
Kaka = an elder relative, ancestor, God
Kento = female, woman
Gola = pounce upon, seize

********** ********* ********* ********* ********* ********* *****

When the N is in the prefix position:

N'Kisi = medicine, that which takes care of or heals
N'Niakisi = a doctor, a healer, therapist
N'Ganga = a master, a doer, one who does or who has mastered, acts, etc.
N'Kaka = grandma, grandpa, one who is an elder (as being a grandparent officially makes you an elder of the family)
N'Kento = a woman, one who is a woman
N'Gola = that which/ one who pounces upon, seizes, etc. This is where we get the term Capoeira Angola - from the Bantu Kipuru Ngola (to flutter (like a chicken) and pounce or seize one's prey/opponent)

As we can see from the brief examples above, when the N prefix is added, it signifies one is in the state of being/doing that which the root describes. So in our N'Tcher, we could postulate that it signifies, using the Bantu as our reference, ONE WHO IS AN ANCESTOR or GOD or PRIEST, etc.

In this case the N signifies the actualization or being in the state of the root word. So this is something you would look at as well as a possible link for understanding the N across languages. Does this convention exist in other language groups?

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep

http://www.asarimho tep.com

| 28086|2009-03-04 04:54:14|Peter Gray|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
I am just disappointed that Hillary Clinton would go the the Middle East to discuss the future for a Palestinian state, but meet with everybody except Hamas. It isn't just a question of ignorance of the fundamental driving forcesbehind the conflict, orof pandering tothe pro-Israeli lobby , but really an example of diplomatic incompetence. Just my 2 cents.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
From: barnett46@hotmail.com
Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 21:33:56 +0000
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

There is no real 'giving'. The figures will be presented but thefunds disbursed will be far from the grand announcemnet.

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: asgardiankennels@ gmail.com
Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 10:50:02 -0600
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.

On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan. .. they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

Powered by

* Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.

You have received the following link from gingerd2007@ yahoo.com:

Click the following to access the sent link:

U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*

Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn. com/2009/ POLITICS/ 03/02/mideast. clinton/index. html

--
Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
Asgardian Kennels
Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)

Get news, entertainment and everything you care about at Live.com. Check it out!

Express your personality in color! Preview and select themes for Hotmail. See how.
| 28087|2009-03-04 05:02:56|Obadele (abibitumikasa.com)|New at A.K.A.L.I. Mwalimu Baruti Classes; Obadele Kambon Lecture; Fu|

To register for course go to:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

Abibitumi Kasa and Akoben Institute present a

6-Week
Afrikan Centered Social Science
ONLINE COURSE
on Afrikan Centered Education taught by
Mwalimu K. Bomani Baruti
Every Wednesday Night
7:30PM-9PM
March 25 - April 29, 2009
course fee is $75
For Afrikan (Black) People Only
For more information e-mail: mwalimubaruti@yahoo.com

AKOBEN INSTITUTE

presents a
6-Week
Afrikan Centered Social Science
ONLINE COURSE
on

OURSTORY
An Introduction
(PART 2)

taught by
Mwalimu K. Bomani Baruti

Every Thursday
March 26 - April 30, 2009
10am - 12 pm

Course Description: The second half of this course begins with the PanAfrikan Movement and the end of Reconstruction. The further, entrenched institutionalization of racism and our response with the Black Power and Civil rights Movements and the powerful voices which articulated them bring this course to a close, but not before solutions to our contemporary situation are offered and critiqued.

Required Text: Ourstory by Gaidi Faraj

course fee is $72

FOR AFRIKAN (BLACK) PEOPLE ONLY

For more information e-mail: mwalimubaruti@yahoo.com

to register for course go to:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

What: ?kyeame ?s?fo? Obadele Kwame Kambon Lecture entitled The Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation followed by Abibitumi Kasa Member Open Discussion
Who: You Afrikan!
When: March 15, 2009 @ 6:30PM EST
Where: Abibitumi Kasa Member Classroom
How: Register at free forum at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php then click member classroom or on this link:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
A continuing part of our Abibitumi Kasa fundraiser:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

Why: "It has been said that 'power is the ability to define reality and have others respond to that definition is if it were their own.' Further, the reality of today is based upon the concepts and theories of yesterday. These are concepts that are eternally linked to a specific culture. A specific language with a specific history. According to Ngugi wa ThiongO 'language carries culture, and culture carries...the entire body of values by which we come to perceive ourselves and our place in the world.' It is said that, 'the one who prescribes the diameter of your knowledge determines the circumference of your activity.' In other words, 'a cow grazes where it is tied' and 'cattle is only as good as the field in which it grazes.' How WE are able to and choose to conceive of the world is mediated by language. It is through conceptual incarceration within the prison of an alien language designed and intended to serve only its master, that the alien is able to shape Our destiny by shaping Our very thoughts. It is said:

watch your thoughts for they become your actions
watch your actions for they become your habits
watch your habits for they become your character

watch your character for it becomes your destiny

As it is individually, so it is collectively. For it is said that 'the actions of one generation become the history of the next generation. The actions of many generations become the traditions of a people.' Afrikans in general and Diasporan Afrikans in particular have endeavored to re-conceptualize the world through language. Oftentimes, lacking other options, through the language forced upon US. However, it is said, 'the dog does not prefer bones to meat, it is just that no one ever gives him meat.' WE are the long awaited hunters. 'You are the slave of the one whose handcuffs are on your wrists,' WE are the long awaited liberators. WE, entrusted by Our ancestors. WE, the guardians of Our languages, hold the key to re-conceptualizing reality for the best interests of Afrikans throughout the world, Continental and Diasporan. That WE may speak Our reality into the future; that WE may shape the destiny of Our children, of Our childrens children, of Our childrens childrens children, and for the still more beautyful ones yet to be born."
++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

Show your appreciation for Abibitumi Kasa!
Be a part of our First Contribution Drive
No amount is too small or too large!

Abibitumi Kasa is a wealth of information and an international resource for Afrikans across the globe. Contributions from members are the life-blood that keep Abibitumi Kasa in existence. Please forward this email/information far and wide.

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

Abibitumi Kasa offers language classes and lectures in areas that are of the UTMOST importance to Afrikans world-wide covering everything from cultural issues to political strategies, including topics on psychology, Afrikan Holistic Health and Afrikan Spirituality. Abibitumi Kasa provides Sankofa Journeys to Ghana, Survival Training and information on every aspect of Dewhitenization, ReAfrikanization and Nation Building. We also offer the opportunity for members to teach classes on a variety of classes based on member expertise. We feature instructors like Obadele Kambon teaching Twi, Yoruba and Wolof, Mwalimu Baruti teaching a host of courses including Ourstory and Mentacide II, Dr. Runoko Rashidi teaching Around the World with Runoko Rashidi and Global Afrikan Presence, Keidi Obi Awadu teaching The Great AIDS Hoax and Dr. Kamau Kambon teaching The Last Black Man Standing. We also have upcoming classes on Afrikan Mathematics, Afrikan Family Building (Akoko Nan), Repatriation to Afrika and more!!! This is a forum for Afrikans helping Afrikans. Pass this information along and let someone know about this BLACKNIFICENT "Gem of the Afrikan Race" endorsed by many of our greats, past and present!

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

Many of our 100% Afrikan (Black) 1300+ members of the mailing list and 1200+ members of the forum use Abibitumi Kasa daily to share information, learn from other members, take classes, teach classes and express their views and opinions. We need to continue to leave Abibitumi Kasa available so that we can exchange information and ideas and connect and build with each other. However we need to go beyond getting a login and making a few posts to becoming a financially contributing member. That can be done by making a contribution or registering for a class or intensive language workshop. Otherwise how will the resource continue if you don't support it?

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

Until now Abibitumi Kasa has been financially maintained by a small number of people and further supported by those of you who register for classes and intensive workshops. It takes a lot to keep our resources freely available to Afrikan people including hosting, software, etc. Your participation ensures our continued success. This is the First Contribution Drive for Abibitumi Kasa and it will last initially for 30-Days and will extend throughout the year with consistent progress updates and reminders.

If you have not done so already show your support in helping to maintain Abibitumi Kasa as a global resource for Afrikan people world wide.

You can make your contributions directly on the fundraiser page here. http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html and select the amount that you can contribute monthly to ensure the survival of our valuable resource, Abibitumi Kasa.

We appreciate all of the members of the Abibitumi Kasa Family and we look forward to it continuing to grow as you telephone and tell-a-Afrikan! Meda ase (thank you), take care and stay BlackNificent!

Sincerely,
The Abibitumi Kasa Family
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

3 Hour Intensive Twi Language Workshop
Saturday, March 7, 2009, 2:00PM Eastern Standard Time.

What: Three Hour Intensive Twi Language Workshop: Verbal Taboos in Akan (Twi): The Unmentionable!

Who: You Afrikan!

The workshop will cover:

1) Understanding Akan verbal taboos
2) Pronunciation
3) Examples of Akan verbal taboos of various genres including oaths, proper names, unmentionables, curses and more.

When: Saturday, March 7, 2009, 2:00PM-5PM EST

Where: AbibitumiKasa.com Member classroom

How much: The cost for this one (1) day workshop is $50 per participant. Children 12 and under are free (when accompanied by a registered adult). No prerequisite knowledge of the Twi language is necessary and all course materials are built into the cost of the class.

Why: What do the Twi words for leopard, mentruation, urination, leprosy, the death of the king, broom, swearing by the queenmothers pinky toe, cursing a person to barrenness and mentioning the Supreme Being by proper name have in common? They are all verbal taboos; words and phrases that are not to be said outside of specific socially restricted contexts. Understanding Akan verbal taboos will help one understand the worldview of Afrikan people as well as prevent one from inadvertently insulting Akans by saying an unmentionable.

This will be one of our most interesting workshops to date. We look forward to seeing you there!

How: Be sure to come to our Member Classroom at 2:00PM Eastern Time promptly at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php Be advised, you must first register for the free Abibitumi Kasa Liberation Forum here http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php first to access the online member classroom. If you already have an account be sure to login at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/login.php

For those interested in registering for this workshop, follow the link to http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

to submit the registration form and submit payment at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/payment.html to reserve your space in the class.

Be sure to follow all seven (7) steps of the registration process including font installation and audio/video tutorials to expedite getting into the language on Saturday without having to fiddle around with tech issues. Click here for all video tutorials http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/video-tutorials-how-abibitumi-kasa/.

If you have been interested in getting involved in the Twi classes at Abibitumi Kasa (Black Power Language) but havent gotten a chance to or if you're an Abibitumi Kasa regular, you won't want to miss this informative and BlackPowerful workshop.

Keep an eye out for one day workshops in Yoruba and Wolof as well.

Obadele Kwame Kambon
011.233.24.0872928
info@abibitumikasa.com

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

A free mathematics tutorial open to all AbibitumiKasa members who may have questions in any high-school level and many college-level courses. Just logon to the online member classroom and ask away!

(Beginning on Friday, January 23, 2009 for the spring semester.)

Email: akhu718@gmail.com for more information.

What: Free mathematics tutorial (all high school math subjects through calculus)

Who: Any Afrikan with a math question!

When: Every Friday (Jan 23 - May 8, 2009), 4-5pm EST

Where: Abibitumi Kasa Member Classroom:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php

How: Register for the free forum at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php then click "member classroom" or on this link: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php

Email akhu718@gmail.com with specific questions by 5pm on the Thursday before or simply come to the tutorial with general questions.

Requirements: Melanin and math questions!

Also, don't forget to check out Abibitumi Kasa's 16-week Afrikan Algebra I course. www.abibitumikasa.com/akhu.htm

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/classes.html
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

Who: All Afrikan people who are serious about being Afrikan

What: You are invited to join one month (8 class) sessions of Introductory Twi or Yoruba or one month (4 class) sessions of Intermediate Twi or Yoruba or one month (4 class) sessions of Advanced Twi or Yoruba.

When: Next class session begins the week of February 16, 2009 (Click here for schedule http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/calendar.php)

Monday AND Wednesday Intro Yoruba 7:00PM-9:00PM Eastern

Tuesday AND Thursday Intro Twi 7:00PM-9:00PM Eastern

AND

Sunday Intermediate Twi 1:00PM-3:00PM EST

Sunday Intermediate Yoruba 4:00PM-6:00PM EST

AND

Saturday Advanced Twi 1:00PM-3:00PM EST

Saturday Advanced Yoruba 4:00PM-6:00PM EST

Where: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php

How: To access the online member classroom, you must register for the Abibitumi Kasa site at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php

You'll need to do this if you don't have an account already.

If you already have an account at the site, login at this link: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/login.php

From there click on the link to member classroom on any page at the site at class time or visit the link to the member classroom here directly at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php

Learn to hook up your audio and/or webcam for class and more at: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/...bibitumi-kasa/

How Much: 195 USD for eight (8) class Introductory Class; 97.50 USD for four (4) class Intermediate Class; Contact us about cost of advanced individual tutorials http://www.abibitumikasa.com/contact.html

Why: Repatriation, Visit, Interacting with Family, and more. Let us know your reason for wanting to learn Afrikan languages via our Prospective Student Questionnaire http://www.abibitumikasa.com/nsemmisa.pdf

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

What: Online Class: Akok? Nan: Protection and Guardianship of Our Afrikan Children in the Age of WAR with Mut Kentake Merimut

Who: You Afrikan!

When: Start date of the course: April 11, 2009 7:30PM EST and Saturdays for five (5) classes. 90 minutes per class.

Where: Abibitumi Kasa member classroom at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
How: To access the online member classroom, you must register for the Abibitumi Kasa site at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php

You'll need to do this if you don't have an account already.

If you already have an account at the site, login at this link:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/login.php

From there click on the link to member classroom on any page at the site at class time or visit the link to the member classroom here directly at
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php

Learn to hook up your audio and/or webcam for class and more at:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/video-tutorials-how-abibitumi-kasa/
Why: "As Afrikan warriors/parents/elders we are the first teachers of our Afrikan children, we are the foundation upon which our mma (Akan for children) will stand. It is only we that must be their teachers. It is only we that can teach them the value system of their nananom, the social system of how to function in accordance with their ancestral inheritance, on how to function as Asafo. It is only we that can socialize them to be responsible, disciplined and committed Afrikans who are ready to uphold the honor of their Nananom by any means necessary. We cannot leave Our children in the Hands of our Enemies and expect them to be devoted to RE-Afrikanization, we cannot leave our children in the Hands of our Enemies and expect that they will not be brutally traumatized by their psychopathic insanity.
We must collectively develop a strategic plan to protect our children in these catastrophic times of WAR and in this age of neo-colonialism and imperialism. As we know and as Our Baba Mwalimu Baruti has stated there are casualties in every war, however, we must make sure that those casualties WILL NOT be Our children ANYMORE. With the advent of intense family dysfunctionality, separation, divorce, domestic abuse, child molestation and abuse, social services intervention, single parents living in poverty, massive incarceration of many Afrikan fathers and sons and so much more ongoing mentacide and genocide affecting our communities, we cannot continue to ignore the effect these traumatic conditions are having on Our Afrikan children and on Our ability to raise healthy warriors who will take the baton of Afrikan Liberation into the next stage of Our Evolution.

A major part of the Soul-lution in my humble observation, as an Afrikan mother, is the Re-Store-A-Nation and Re-Construction of Our extended family system, when we knew that what affects one Afrikan family would also affect the WHOLE community. For the sake of the Survival of Our children, we must make a commitment to Family Reparations, RE-pairing and Healing the Family Nucleus from within."

How much: $65 per participant

++

Live Interactive Online and Accra, Ghana Afrikan Language Classes

Register for Free Afrikan Liberation Institute

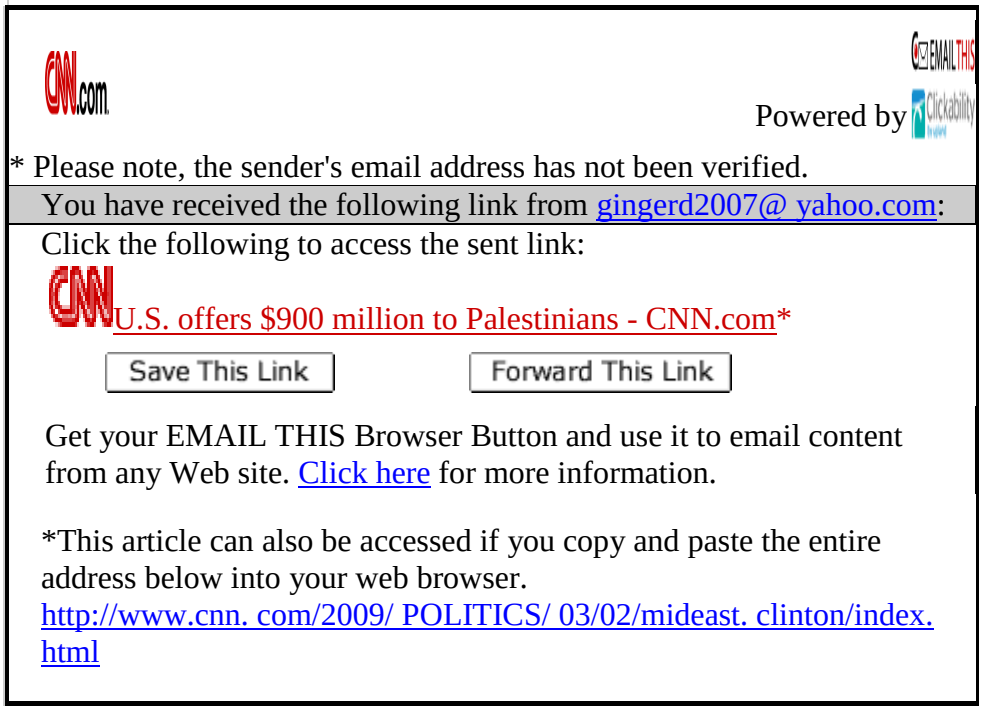
Sign Up for AKALI Mailing List

Abibitumi Kasa Fundraiser

| 28088|2009-03-04 07:58:55|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|

While I respect your opinion, Daniel, I think you are not really in a position to comment on what I know about foreign policy. The US is not concerned with making Palestine a friend, not one bit. They are not concerned with future favors or anything of the such from Palestine. Most of that 900 million will never reach those people. The United States only concern is protecting Israel. Their global image, their security, and their sovereignty. We don?t even have 900 million to give, so how can we be concerned about giving / depending. The US makes its money with its weapons, as far as foreign countriesare concerned. So if anything they are putting forth secret agendas in 3rd world countries (like Palestine) to create havoc and instability, which will lead to war. If this is what you mean by dependence, then to an extent I get your point. But we don?t have the funds to make those moves right now. China is banking us, so that we will forever be dependent on them. This country is merely pretending that it is still the global superpower that it once was.

My comments came from an emotional standpoint. Because it pisses me off. And I have the right to voice that if I see fit. You, on the other hand, should probably respond and inquire about my stance a bit more before you set out to judge what I know.



From: Daniel Glosser
Sent: Tuesday, March 03, 2009 8:50 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.

On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

> I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan. .. they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

--
Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
Asgardian Kennels
Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)
| 28089|2009-03-04 07:59:00|Michael J Robinson|If you missed the State of the Black Union 2009 on C-Span, you can w|

Hotep Family,

If you missed the State of the Black Union 2009 that was held on February 28th, 2009, you can still view it on C-Spans website. www.CSpan.org.

PBS Talk Show Host Tavis Smileys symposium on the State of the Black Union was held in Los Angeles, CA. The seminar was titled, "Making America As Good As Its Promise." Panelist included, Reverends Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, radio talk show host Tom Joyner, R-N-C Chairman Michael Steele and professors Cornel West, Charles Ogletree and Lani Guinier.
Los Angeles, CA.

For more information of The State of the Black Union, you can go to http://sobu2009.tavistalks.com.

Even though you may not agree with everything Tavis say or the panelist, The State of Black Union always provides good information. Hopefully soon they will be able to put this into a viable plan along with PowerNomics by Dr. Claud Anderson and this will help get us out of the condition that we are in right now.

Here are the direct links to the morning panel and the afternoon panel discussions.

Morning Session: http://www.cspan.org/Watch/watch.aspx?MediaId=HP-A-15942

Afternoon Session: http://www.cspan.org/Watch/watch.aspx?MediaId=HP-A-15813

Hopefully next year we will have more of our African Centered Scholars present like Dr. Leonard Jeffries, Dr. Frances Cress Welsing for Dr. Wade Nobles. He did have Dr. Naim Akbar last year which was an improvement over the usual group that he has. Hopefully also he will have Dr. Claud Anderson author of Black Labor, White Wealth and PowerNomics so we can learn how to practice Group Economics and Self Reliance like every other ethnic group in America economic instead of begging for jobs after we gain our degrees and spending 98% of our dollars with people who dont look like us. We spend $849 Billion dollars a year but only 2% with our own people. This is the recipe for Economic Suicide.

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

Right Knowledge corrects Wrong Behavior

| 28090|2009-03-04 07:59:47|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
Yes, especially considering that the US is the one who was pushing for the people of Palestine to elect their own leaders... so when they did, the US gota big surprise - Hamas. So to a large degree they are responsible for their presence...

From: Peter Gray
Sent: Wednesday, March 04, 2009 4:54 AM
To: Marc Washington
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

I am just disappointed that Hillary Clinton would go the the Middle East to discuss the future for a Palestinian state, but meet with everybody except Hamas. It isn't just a question of ignorance of the fundamental driving forcesbehind the conflict, orof pandering tothe pro-Israeli lobby , but really an example of diplomatic incompetence. Just my 2 cents.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com
From: barnett46@hotmail. com
Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 21:33:56 +0000
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

There is no real 'giving'. The figures will be presented but thefunds disbursed will be far from the grand announcemnet.

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: asgardiankennels@ gmail.com
Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 10:50:02 -0600
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine

This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.

On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

> I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan. .. they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.

Powered by
* Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.
You have received the following link from gingerd2007@ yahoo.com:
Click the following to access the sent link:
U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*
Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.

*This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
http://www.cnn. com/2009/ POLITICS/ 03/02/mideast. clinton/index. html

--
Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
Asgardian Kennels
Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)

Get news, entertainment and everything you care about at Live.com. Check it out!

Express your personality in color! Preview and select themes for Hotmail. See how.
| 28091|2009-03-04 08:00:01|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|One of Eleven Blacks Is In The System|

There is so much work to be done... http://newsone.blackplanet.com/nation/one-of-eleven-blacks-is-in-the-system/

| 28092|2009-03-04 08:00:23|Ferg|Re: "N"|
Would this be of interest
http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/SwaFo/swafo7/7_9_klein.pdf
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Wednesday, March 04, 2009 9:35 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> While looking for something else in Fu-Kiau's Bantu Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo, I came across this foot-note on page 102 that might be of interest to this discussion. He is giving us some proverbs about community and on the previous page he gives us the word NZUNDU which means "anvil."

It is a metaphor for a child who is born in which the community expects him/her to revive their stagnant economy. In other words, a person who is Nzundu (an anvil) is someone on which the community feels, because of his/her skill or enginuity, that the community can build an industry and prosper; as an anvil is the foundation in which one creates and shapes metals to use in various industries (agriculture, war or building). In economics we call this a "vertical economy." An example of a vertical economy would be a university in a small town. Because the university exist in the town, business sprout up to take care of the various needs of the people enrolled and working in the university.

Now, the term Zundu (without the N) means "frog." A frog in the Kongo is a symbol of drunkardness. Fu-Kiau's footnote reads:

"Zundu; by fault of eliminating the "N" from the above name, the name becomes Zundu (frog); for the Kongo, Zundu is the symbol of drunkard, but also of habitual drunkeness. In suppressing certain letters, mainly "n" and "m" from their names, many intellectuals in present Africa bear names with a vulgar meaning or simply meaningless names, as in the case of the name Zundu."

This is highly suggestive on many levels. Primarily this suggest that certain names have a great meaning when the letters "n" or "m" are prefixed to the stem. This would lend some support to the notion that the "N" attached to certain names denotes a high rank or highly revered manifestation of the root stem as the examples demonstrate from the previous email. We would have to see if this same convention exist in Mdw Ntr and provide plenty of examples for analysis.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Sun, 1/11/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, January 11, 2009, 7:09 PM

Peace Mahari

I wanted to also give you something to think about as well when it comes to this subject matter. I will use the Bantu languages as an example.

When discussing the role of N in Bantu, the prefix often times denotes "one who is," or "one that does," or "that which is/does." Here are a few examples where the N in the Bantu languages changes the stresses being in the state of the root word.

Kinsa = to take care of Ghanga = to do, to act, to realize
Kaka = an elder relative, ancestor, God
Kento = female, woman
Gola = pounce upon, seize

********** ********* ********* ********* ********* ********* *****

When the N is in the prefix position:

N'Kisi = medicine, that which takes care of or heals
N'Niakisi = a doctor, a healer, therapist
N'Ganga = a master, a doer, one who does or who has mastered, acts, etc.
N'Kaka = grandma, grandpa, one who is an elder (as being a grandparent officially makes you an elder of the family)
N'Kento = a woman, one who is a woman
N'Gola = that which/ one who pounces upon, seizes, etc. This is where we get the term Capoeira Angola - from the Bantu Kipuru Ngola (to flutter (like a chicken) and pounce or seize one's prey/opponent)

As we can see from the brief examples above, when the N prefix is added, it signifies one is in the state of being/doing that which the root describes. So in our N'Tcher, we could postulate that it signifies, using the Bantu as our reference, ONE WHO IS AN ANCESTOR or GOD or PRIEST, etc.

In this case the N signifies the actualization or being in the state of the root word. So this is something you would look at as well as a possible link for understanding the N across languages. Does this convention exist in other language groups?

Ancestrally,

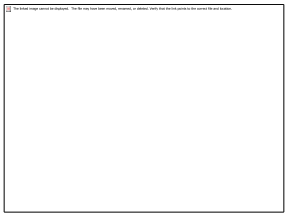
Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-Versity

| 28093|2009-03-04 08:12:57|Paul Kekai Manansala|Italian Archaeological Expedition in the Sudan - Report for 2009|

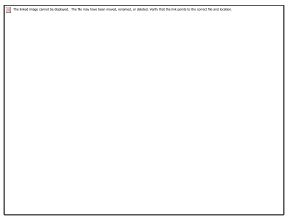
The Italian Archaeological Expedition in the Sudan (University of Torino & University of Venice "Ca' Foscari") - Report for 2009

http://www.archaeogate.org/egittologia/article/1036/1/the-italian-archaeological-expedition-in-the-sudan-univ.html



RedazioneArchaeogate, 03-03-2009

The 2009 season of the Italian Mission at Jebel Barkal was carried out between February 11th and 25th. The team was headed by Prof. Alessandro Roccati of Torino University and Prof. Emanuele Ciampini of Venice University "Ca' Foscari". The members were Prof. Grazyna Bakowska, archaeologist, of Rzeszow University (Poland), Prof. Giampietro Bakovic, photographer, Arch. Giuseppe Caputi, field advisor, and Dr. Ary諰 Boccara, medical visitor. The appointed official from NCAM was Mr. Mortada Bushara Mohamed, as in the previous seasons. Financial and technical assistance was provided by Accademia Kronos.



Our goals were several: first, to continue excavations of two monuments of special interest for our ongoing research; second, to repair and strengthen the walls of both these structures, in order to protect newly discovered fragile architectural remains and to repair older restorations; and third, to reorganize our living situation at Karima, in order to reduce costs as much as possible.
In B2400 we continued excavating in the area near the middle of its southern side. This was the only side which appeared to have no access in correspondence with an Ionic peristyle court recognized inside the edifice. The area outside was severely disturbed in antiquity; a huge mud brick wall joined by other smaller mud brick walls was observed at a lower level, which have nothing to do with B2400. However in the sand another burial and a bronze pin was found.
In the interior of B 2400 there was only a thin layer of sand, so that the network of walls could be traced rather easily and quickly in spite of shallow holes in the ancient masonry, and its ancient layout could be surveyed throughout. Some new rooms were uncovered, with a lot of Meroitic ceramics inside (many of them with beautiful painted motifs); the walls herein were m. 1,60 wide, suggesting the original existence of an upper floor. Many bones near the surface all over the area point to its use as a late cemetery, extending as far as the Jebel. However the surface burials were mostly destroyed when the area was leveled to become a passage way.

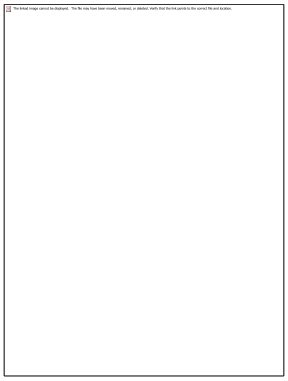
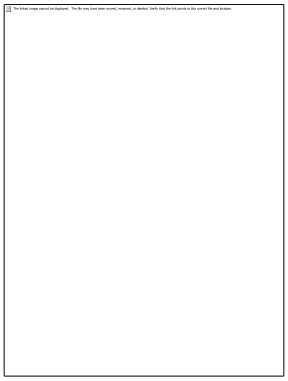
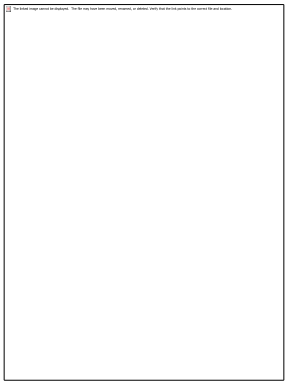
A sounding was made in the N-W corner of the building, where the ancient red brick coating could be found at a rather deep level (about m.1.80 from the floor) as far as the foundation stones. A search for a foundation deposit gave no result. Indeed, the foundation level of this corner is much deeper than the inner mud brick walls. Another fragment of pottery engraved with a Meroitic inscription was found among the debris in B2405. However the excavations of the corner produced evidence for a buttress in the masonry, which may be compared to that of the pyramids near the Jebel.
Most of the remains of B2400 have finally been revealed. A comparison of this building with B100, excavated by Reisner, was presented at the recent Vienna Meroitic Conference, and the last observations will be used to update the paper read there. More results might perhaps be achieved through the study of ceramics, entrusted to Prof. Grazyna Bakowska, but the material from B100 is for the moment unknown.
In B2200 the area West of the "basins room" was chosen for investigation. It too proved to be much destroyed, but the lining of red bricks was here and there preserved in the foundations and to some height, so a plan could be traced to enlarge little by little our understanding of the complex. Many fragments of bread moulds were found in the inner side of the peripheral wall. In the middle of one excavated room, largely destroyed in post-Meroitic times, the remains of two (?) burials were found, one of them consisting of some reused red bricks. The mud brick walls were badly plundered.
The whole area of Jebel Barkal is of outstanding historical interest; it has therefore been classed by UNESCO among the heritage sites of Mankind. It would deserve much more protection and planning than the funds we presently have at our disposal, which are, sadly, ever more limited. The presence of our expedition is indeed a challenge, based on the conviction that such a heritage cannot be further neglected. We hope that an effort can be made toward that goal also by the Sudanese Authorities, whom we thank for their courtesy and readiness. A special thank, however, is due to the President of Accademia "Kronos", Dr. Ennio La Malfa, whose intervention has finally permitted the realization of this campaign.



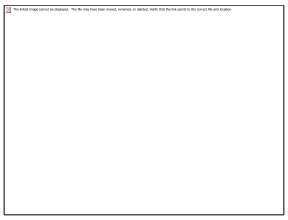
Cliccare sull'immagine per l'ingrandimento



B2400



B2200



Painted pottery fragment from B2400

Carved pottery fragments with Meroitic inscription from B2400

Carved pottery fragments with Meroitic inscription from B2400

Painted fragmentary pottery from B2400

| 28094|2009-03-04 17:38:00|Miguel N.|Display the amazing contributions of our race!!!!!!!!!!!|
When Barack Obama was elected, it was a major landmark for the African American race. We have been, and will continue to be, major contributors to American and World Civilization. From music to invention to architecture. Did you know that the co-inventor of themicrophone was a black man? Did you know that the laser used for eye surgery was invented by a black woman?
One of the saddest things I witness is the lack of confidence in many African American children. When I was in school many of my peers would comment that the reason for their pooracademic performance was their skin color. The only thing holding them back from excellence was their own mind, which sadly had been brainwashed and underfedby the schools history books, the media, and their immediate surroundings.
Obama's election was a huge victory not only for our own race, but for the whole American population. Imagine what perilous path of war and corruption we would be on under McCaint's legislation!
One thing that got to me though, was some of my peoples comments on BET after Obama won the election. Manychildren(and some adults)were saying that now that we have a black president we can believe in ourselves. If these children had a more substantial understanding of their epichistory they would have had faith in their abilities a long time ago.
My Uncle, Ray Mapp, felt the exact same way about our history and potential and wasstriving to spread the knowledge of our many contributions to American society. Thus the Black Miracles poster was born. Listing over 200 inventions and available in color or black and white(my fave is the color version my Pops painted), this poster is a great learning tool. If this emblem of African American pride was displayed in every school, Africa's children would have no reason to think themselves intellectually inferior to others, and could be proud of the contributions(at least some of them)thatour race has made to this society.
If you are interested, check em' out at stores.ebay.com/u-i-trade
MUCH/ONE LOVE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Michael Ashiyr Newson

| 28095|2009-03-04 17:38:00|Michael J Robinson|Return to the Nile Valley featuring: Dr. John Henrik Clarke, Dr. ben|

Hello Family,

I hope everyone is doing well today. I wanted to let you know that I just posted a fantastic video on my Youtube channel called Return To The Nile Valley. This is a fantastic video that was done by Gil Noble on his television show from the 1980's called "Like It Is". This video was shot in 1987 during a trip back to Kemet (Egypt) by members of the ASCAC (Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations) group. Some of the African Centered Scholars who are interviewed in the piece are Dr. John Henrik Clarke, Dr. Yosef ben Johchannan, Dr. Leonard Jeffries, Dr. Asa Hilliard, Dr. Rosalyn Jeffries and Dr. Maulan Karenga.

800 African-Americans went with these great scholars on a 2 week trip to Kemet to see what our Ancestors built and study the civilization that they created. This is a very informative and well put together piece which includes interviews of some of the participants.

For more information on ASCAC please visit, www.ASCAC.org .

You can view this video and other from the African Centered Scholars on my Youtube Channel at www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914. I hope you enjoy this one.

Shem Hotep,

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

Right Knowledge corrects Wrong Behavior

| 28096|2009-03-04 17:38:02|Shu Tefnut|NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)|
HOTEP FAMILY

CHECK OUT THIS REAFFIRMATION:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=B7lxbAIiGA8

| 28097|2009-03-04 17:38:05|Miguel N.|Fw: Amazing Contributions. Wrong link on last message|

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: Miguel N.
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Wednesday, March 4, 2009 2:09:17 PM
Subject: Display the amazing contributions of our race!!!!!!!!!!

Im sorry, that was an incorrect link on the last message. Thanks for the patience!

When Barack Obama was elected, it was a major landmark for the African American race. We have been, and will continue to be, major contributors to American and World Civilization. From music to invention to architecture. Did you know that the co-inventor of themicrophone was a black man? Did you know that the laser used for eye surgery was invented by a black woman?
One of the saddest things I witness is the lack of confidence in many African American children. When I was in school many of my peers would comment that the reason for their pooracademic performance was their skin color. The only thing holding them back from excellence was their own mind, which sadly had been brainwashed and underfedby the schools history books, the media, and their immediate surroundings.
Obama's election was a huge victory not only for our own race, but for the whole American population. Imagine what perilous path of war and corruption we would be on under McCaint's legislation!
One thing that got to me though, was some of my peoples comments on BET after Obama won the election. Manychildren(and some adults)were saying that now that we have a black president we can believe in ourselves. If these children had a more substantial understanding of their epichistory they would have had faith in their abilities a long time ago.
My Uncle, Ray Mapp, felt the exact same way about our history and potential and wasstriving to spread the knowledge of our many contributions to American society. Thus the Black Miracles poster was born. Listing over 200 inventions and available in color or black and white(my fave is the color version my Pops painted), this poster is a great learning tool. If this emblem of African American pride was displayed in every school, Africa's children would have no reason to think themselves intellectually inferior to others, and could be proud of the contributions(at least some of them)thatour race has made to this society.
If you are interested, check em' out at stores.shop.ebay.com/u-i-trade
MUCH/ONE LOVE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Michael Ashiyr Newson

| 28098|2009-03-04 18:56:39|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
Peace brother Ferg.

Thanks for the reference. I've read about halfway today and read the other (and then go back over it) later. I need to cross check my material on the African Iron Age. Something about these AD dates for the introduction and the utilization of iron at such a late period doesn't seem to in alignment with other material I have. But we'll see.

But I thought I would throw some information your way concerning our ongoing discussion on the term KM.t. As I have always suggested, the word KM.t is associated with black smithing and its metaphoric use derives from this industry, thus the charred wood piece in the glyph. Among the Bambara, there is an elite segment of the population called KOMO. These are BLACKSMITHS. There is a god named KOMO as well in which priests are initiated to serve its interest: just like among the Yoruba, i.e, a priest of Sango, etc.

In the tradition it is taught among the KOMO Master of Initiates that the Word, KUMA, is a fundamental force emanating from the Supreme Being himself - Maa Ngala.The word is an instrument of creation. What is also very interesting is that KOMO (the "god") lives on the edge of the sacred WOOD - where young initiates sit to hear teachings.

It may prove to have significance in regards to why charged wood is used for the hieroglyphic word for KM.t. It may also prove to answer why in Budge's Dictionary for the Book of the Dead that the word KM.t ends with a NETCHER determinative. Just some food for thought.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 9:40 AM

Would this be of interest
http://www.ifeas. uni-mainz. de/SwaFo/ swafo7/7_ 9_klein.pdf
Somo

| 28099|2009-03-04 22:03:16|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|
Asar,
Thank you. As usual always on the job.
I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".

I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> While looking for something else in Fu-Kiau's Bantu Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo, I came across this foot-note on page 102 that might be of interest to this discussion. He is giving us some proverbs about community and on the previous page he gives us the word NZUNDU which means "anvil."
>
> It is a metaphor for a child who is born in which the community expects him/her to revive their stagnant economy. In other words, a person who is Nzundu (an anvil) is someone on which the community feels, because of his/her skill or enginuity, that the community can build an industry and prosper; as an anvil is the foundation in which one creates and shapes metals to use in various industries (agriculture, war or building). In economics we call this a "vertical economy." An example of a vertical economy would be a university in a small town. Because the university exist in the town, business sprout up to take care of the various needs of the people enrolled and working in the university.
>
> Now, the term Zundu (without the N) means "frog." A frog in the Kongo is a symbol of drunkardness. Fu-Kiau's footnote reads:
>
> "Zundu; by fault of eliminating the "N" from the above name, the name becomes Zundu (frog); for the Kongo, Zundu is the symbol of drunkard, but also of habitual drunkeness. In suppressing certain letters, mainly "n" and "m" from their names, many intellectuals in present Africa bear names with a vulgar meaning or simply meaningless names, as in the case of the name Zundu."
>
> This is highly suggestive on many levels. Primarily this suggest that certain names have a great meaning when the letters "n" or "m" are prefixed to the stem. This would lend some support to the notion that the "N" attached to certain names denotes a high rank or highly revered manifestation of the root stem as the examples demonstrate from the previous email. We would have to see if this same convention exist in Mdw Ntr and provide plenty of examples for analysis.
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com

>
>
>
>
> --- On Sun, 1/11/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Sunday, January 11, 2009, 7:09 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> I wanted to also give you something to think about as well when it comes to this subject matter. I will use the Bantu languages as an example.
>
> When discussing the role of N in Bantu, the prefix often times denotes "one who is," or "one that does," or "that which is/does." Here are a few examples where the N in the Bantu languages changes the stresses being in the state of the root word.
>
> Kinsa = to take care of
> Ghanga = to do, to act, to realize
> Kaka = an elder relative, ancestor, God
> Kento = female, woman
> Gola = pounce upon, seize
>
> ********** ********** ********** ********** ********** ********** *****
> When the N is in the prefix position:
>
> N'Kisi = medicine, that which takes care of or heals
> N'Niakisi = a doctor, a healer, therapist
> N'Ganga = a master, a doer, one who does or who has mastered, acts, etc.
> N'Kaka = grandma, grandpa, one who is an elder (as being a grandparent officially makes you an elder of the family)
> N'Kento = a woman, one who is a woman
> N'Gola = that which/ one who pounces upon, seizes, etc. This is where we get the term Capoeira Angola - from the Bantu Kipuru Ngola (to flutter (like a chicken) and pounce or seize one's prey/opponent)

>
>
> As we can see from the brief examples above, when the N prefix is added, it signifies one is in the state of being/doing that which the root describes. So in our N'Tcher, we could > postulate that it signifies, using the Bantu as our reference, ONE WHO IS AN ANCESTOR or GOD or PRIEST, etc.
>
> In this case the N signifies the actualization or being in the state of the root word. So this is something you would look at as well as a possible link for understanding the N across languages. Does this convention exist in other language groups?
>
> Ancestrally,
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
| 28100|2009-03-04 22:12:21|Mahari Mengistu|Re: U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine|
I think it is political expediency. I am sick of the ME period. The power/political structure is nothing but a bunch of religiously obsessed, egotistical, warring slavers. If you don't think that world leaders don't have to pander and cater to the world jewish political/financial "cartel" you don't know how the world works.
You could, of course, decide that you will not be manipulated and controlled but you also must therefore be prepared for chaos. And who wants that - if it can be avoided?
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> I am just disappointed that Hillary Clinton would go the the Middle East to discuss the future for a Palestinian state, but meet with everybody except Hamas. It isn't just a question of ignorance of the fundamental driving forces behind the conflict, or of pandering to the pro-Israeli lobby , but really an example of diplomatic incompetence. Just my 2 cents.
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: barnett46@...
> Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 21:33:56 +0000
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine
>
>
>
>
>
> There is no real 'giving'. The figures will be presented but the funds disbursed will be far from the grand announcemnet.
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: asgardiankennels@...
> Date: Tue, 3 Mar 2009 10:50:02 -0600
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] U.S. offers $900 million to Palestine
>
>
>
>
> This statement obviously shows you know nothing about foreign relations. He who gives the most can depend the most. What we want to make sure is that we give more than any other country and then we will know that we can demand the most loyality.
>
>
> On Mon, Mar 2, 2009 at 2:30 PM, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I'm sorry, but do we really have 900 million to give in our current situation??? Aren't we giving Israel roughly 54 billion per year? Why cant they clean up their own mess? Lets see if the republicans stand up and scream in opposition to this... and where exactly is this money going to come from? Israel is not coming out of the pocket to assist us with Iraq, Afghanistan... they need to take care of their own problems and we need to take care of our own. Not to take away from the obvious empathy that we all feel for the Palestinians, but responsibility needs to be aimed at

Israel, not the US, and Egypt, and the other neighboring Arab countries.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Powered by
>
>
> * Please note, the sender's email address has not been verified.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> You have received the following link from gingerd2007@...:
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Click the following to access the sent link:
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> U.S. offers $900 million to Palestinians - CNN.com*
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
> Get your EMAIL THIS Browser Button and use it to email content from any Web site. Click here for more information.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> *This article can also be accessed if you copy and paste the entire address below into your web browser.
> http://www.cnn.com/2009/POLITICS/03/02/mideast.clinton/index.html
>
>
>
>
> --
> Daniel Glosser and Carl Brizendine
> Asgardian Kennels
> Home of CH. Gaia's Knight in White Satin (Thor) and Asgard's Protector of Bifrost (Heimdal)
>
>
>
>
>
> Get news, entertainment and everything you care about at Live.com. Check it out!
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Express your personality in color! Preview and select themes for Hotmail.
> http://www.windowslive-hotmail.com/LearnMore/personalize.aspx?ocid=TXT_MSGTX_WL_HM_express_032009#colortheme

>
| 28101|2009-03-04 23:08:37|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N" (reply to Ferg II)|
Peace

Going back over my material, it is evident that the Swahili speakers couldn't have been introduced to iron during the AD period, given our evidence of their presence in ancient Ta-Mery. As Diop notes in his article Iron in the Ancient Egyptian Empire, the ancient Kmtjw were developing Iron as early as 2700 BCE (III'rd Dynasty)(Van Sertima 1986:65).

Another great work to consult is Dr. Charles S. Finch in The Star of Deep Beginnings pgs 25-54. If we take the conservative theory by linguists that the original Bantu speakers spread out from the Cameroonian/Nigerian area to migrate eastward, then the information concerning iron slags among the Nok sites dated at 3500, 2000, and 900 BCE respectively is of grave importance to us (Finch 1998:36).

Although Diop cautions about attributing definitively iron at these sites, one thing has been confirmed for sure are iron tools dating back to 2800 BCE in Kaolack, Senegal (not far from, generally speaking, from present day Nigeria). There was also found an iron socketed spearhead in Buhen, Sadan dating back to 1900 BCE.

What seems to be the case, as always, is that the Swahili speakers who migrated from central and north east Africa stilled possessed their ancestral process of iron making, through blacksmithing secret societies. For proof of this process, I encourage the readers to watch a documentary film titled: Inagina: The Last House of Iron. A clip can be seen here: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zozKgGbaaxQ&eurl=http://www.der.org/films/inagina-preview.html&feature=player_embedded

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 8:56 PM

Peace brother Ferg.

Thanks for the reference. I've read about halfway today and read the other (and then go back over it) later. I need to cross check my material on the African Iron Age. Something about these AD dates for the introduction and the utilization of iron at such a late period doesn't seem to in alignment with other material I have. But we'll see.

But I thought I would throw some information your way concerning our ongoing discussion on the term KM.t. As I have always suggested, the word KM.t is associated with black smithing and its metaphoric use derives from this industry, thus the charred wood piece in the glyph. Among the Bambara, there is an elite segment of the population called KOMO. These are BLACKSMITHS. There is a god named KOMO as well in which priests are initiated to serve its interest: just like among the Yoruba, i.e, a priest of Sango, etc.

In the tradition it is taught among the KOMO Master of Initiates that the Word, KUMA, is a fundamental force emanating from the Supreme Being himself - Maa Ngala.The word is an instrument of creation. What is also very interesting is that KOMO (the "god") lives on the edge of the sacred WOOD - where young initiates sit to hear teachings.

It may prove to have significance in regards to why charged wood is used for the hieroglyphic word for KM.t. It may also prove to answer why in Budge's Dictionary for the Book of the Dead that the word KM.t ends with a NETCHER determinative. Just some food for thought.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 9:40 AM

Would this be of interest
http://www.ifeas. uni-mainz. de/SwaFo/ swafo7/7_ 9_klein.pdf
Somo

| 28102|2009-03-04 23:29:07|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
Peace Mahari

What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.

As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM

Asar,
Thank you. As usual always on the job.
I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with

"Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
HTP,
Mahari

| 28103|2009-03-05 07:13:15|Maurice Humphrey|Re: NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)|
I saw the preview of "Nubian Spirit" and I ordered the video (I hope it gets here soon!). I am atrue fan of Nubia (Kush), I think it is as important as Egypt (If not more important). The true origins ofEgypt may actuallylay in Nubia.If this is the case then Nubia should be exalted by (our) scholars as much as Egypt. Watching the preview of "Nubian Spirit" reminded me that we (Africans) were truley unified in ancient times. Canu imagine...Nubians defeated two of themightiest powers the ancient world has ever seen (The Romans and then the Arabs respectively).ALL invaders inAfrica stopped... once they reached the doors of the Kushites. The historybooks don't give details, but ifyou think about it, the only way the Kushites could have defeated the mighty armies ofRome and Arabia is that they wereTRULEY UNIFIED. It couldn't have been done any other way. We need to usethem (Kushites) as shinning examples ofthe potential we have onceWE unify.We could easily decimateOUR ENEMIES and rebuild our civilization. I'd like to address something else as well. I was trying to figure out why in recent times many European scholarswere making documenteries about Nubia. ButI think I know why. If you watch many of these videos, the scholars in the docs frequently refer to the Nubians (when theyoccupied the throne in KMT) as BLACK pharaohs.Orthey make sure they show black faces in the doc depicting Nubians. All this would be ok, if they told the truth aboutthe ancient Egyptians. Instead,most docs depict ancient Egyptians as Arab looking. So now when you think of Nubians you think black and when u think of the ancient Egyptiansu think Arab, further contrasting the two civilizations as two different races. Check out this video:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KOiAvoqZzks

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Shu Tefnut wrote:

From: Shu Tefnut
Subject: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
To: afrikanunity_ofharlem@yahoo.com, "HERU BENNU AMEN RA" , "Eugene Bennett" , bnyee@googlegroups.com, dr.garaia@africanidea.org, friends@templehealing.com, GatherTheFires@yahoogroups.com, happilynaturalday@yahoogroups.com, hndsupport@gmail.com, luv4self_network@yahoogroups.com, mwananchi@yahoogroups.com, NABSE@yahoogroups.com, nnabakyaala.afrika@gmail.com, openyourthirdeye@yahoo.com, smaitawi@yahoogroups.com, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, thanubian2@yahoo.com, trueblackness@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 2:26 PM

HOTEP FAMILY

CHECK OUT THIS REAFFIRMATION:

http://www.youtube. com/watch?v=B7lxbAIiGA8

| 28104|2009-03-05 07:13:27|Ferg|Re: "N" (reply to Ferg II)|
Hutuapo Asar!
It seems like Godmay be regarded as a blacksmith, forging and creating life, the blacksmith God.This brings me back to the symbol of divinity which I researched some time ago to be some sort of axe, a strong tool, which could resemble a hammer headed axe.Watching the blacksmiths using the hammer headed axe convinces me that the symbol of divinity wasindeed a hammer headed axe.
Furthermore the symbol of divinity could be an anvil type tool. There is very little distinction between a hammer and an anvil in Bantu. In Luvale-Bantu an anvil is definedas a lower part of a human leg together with the foot.In the article onSwahili metal working, the anvil is defined as inyundo, very close to nyundo a hammer and is the leg of the King.What I am postulating is that the symbol of divinity is called 'noto',derived from nyundo a hammer, and represents the leg of God or it could beNTU. Refer to Budge 400b Need somemoreinsight.
Somo
----- Original Message -----

From: Asar Imhotep
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:08 AM
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N" (reply to Ferg II)

Peace

Going back over my material, it is evident that the Swahili speakers couldn't have been introduced to iron during the AD period, given our evidence of their presence in ancient Ta-Mery. As Diop notes in his article Iron in the Ancient Egyptian Empire, the ancient Kmtjw were developing Iron as early as 2700 BCE (III'rd Dynasty)(Van Sertima 1986:65).

Another great work to consult is Dr. Charles S. Finch in The Star of Deep Beginnings pgs 25-54. If we take the conservative theory by linguists that the original Bantu speakers spread out from the Cameroonian/ Nigerian area to migrate eastward, then the information concerning iron slags among the Nok sites dated at 3500, 2000, and 900 BCE respectively is of grave importance to us (Finch 1998:36).

Although Diop cautions about attributing definitively iron at these sites, one thing has been confirmed for sure are iron tools dating back to 2800 BCE in Kaolack, Senegal (not far from, generally speaking, from present day Nigeria). There was also found an iron socketed spearhead in Buhen, Sadan dating back to 1900 BCE.

What seems to be the case, as always, is that the Swahili speakers who migrated from central and north east Africa stilled possessed their ancestral process of iron making, through blacksmithing secret societies. For proof of this process, I encourage the readers to watch a documentary film titled: Inagina: The Last House of Iron. A clip can be seen here: http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=zozKgGbaaxQ&eurl=http:// www.der.org/ films/inagina-preview.html&feature=player_ embedded

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 8:56 PM

Peace brother Ferg.

Thanks for the reference. I've read about halfway today and read the other (and then go back over it) later. I need to cross check my material on the African Iron Age. Something about these AD dates for the introduction and the utilization of iron at such a late period doesn't seem to in alignment with other material I have. But we'll see.

But I thought I would throw some information your way concerning our ongoing discussion on the term KM.t. As I have always suggested, the word KM.t is associated with black smithing and its metaphoric use derives from this industry, thus the charred wood piece in the glyph. Among the Bambara, there is an elite segment of the population called KOMO. These are BLACKSMITHS. There is a god named KOMO as well in which priests are initiated to serve its interest: just like among the Yoruba, i.e, a priest of Sango, etc.

In the tradition it is taught among the KOMO Master of Initiates that the Word, KUMA, is a fundamental force emanating from the Supreme Being himself - Maa Ngala.The word is an instrument of creation. What is also very interesting is that KOMO (the "god") lives on the edge of the sacred WOOD - where young initiates sit to hear teachings.

It may prove to have significance in regards to why charged wood is used for the hieroglyphic word for KM.t. It may also prove to answer why in Budge's Dictionary for the Book of the Dead that the word KM.t ends with a NETCHER determinative. Just some food for thought.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 9:40 AM

Would this be of interest
http://www.ifeas. uni-mainz. de/SwaFo/ swafo7/7_ 9_klein.pdf
Somo

| 28105|2009-03-05 08:06:31|Ferg|Re: "N"|
Hutuapo Mahari.
I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages there are noun classes. For example,a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilstin a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.
As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that wasshortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
Somo

----- Original Message -----
From: Asar Imhotep
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"

Peace Mahari

What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.

As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM

Asar,
Thank you. As usual always on the job.
I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
HTP,

> Mahari
>
>

| 28106|2009-03-05 08:28:40|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)|
Good morning Maurice... I found your email very informative. Got a question for you... can you give me any reading references on the Nubian wars against the Romans and the Arabs? I'd love to learn more about it. Please reply when you have a chance... (or anyone else for that matter) thank you.

From: Maurice Humphrey
Sent: Wednesday, March 04, 2009 11:25 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)

I saw the preview of "Nubian Spirit" and I ordered the video (I hope it gets here soon!). I am atrue fan of Nubia (Kush), I think it is as important as Egypt (If not more important). The true origins ofEgypt may actuallylay in Nubia.If this is the case then Nubia should be exalted by (our) scholars as much as Egypt. Watching the preview of "Nubian Spirit" reminded me that we (Africans) were truley unified in ancient times. Canu imagine...Nubians defeated two of themightiest powers the ancient world has ever seen (The Romans and then the Arabs respectively) .ALL invaders inAfrica stopped... once they reached the doors of the Kushites. The historybooks don't give details, but ifyou think about it, the only way the Kushites could have defeated the mighty armies ofRome and Arabia is that they wereTRULEY UNIFIED. It couldn't have been done any other way. We need to usethem (Kushites) as shinning examples ofthe potential we have onceWE unify.We could easily decimateOUR ENEMIES and rebuild our civilization. I'd like to address something else as well. I was trying to figure out why in recent times many European scholarswere making documenteries about Nubia. ButI think I know why. If you watch many of these videos, the scholars in the docs frequently refer to the Nubians (when theyoccupied the throne in KMT) as BLACK pharaohs.Orthey make sure they show black faces in the doc depicting Nubians. All this would be ok, if they told the truth aboutthe ancient Egyptians. Instead,most docs depict ancient Egyptians as Arab looking. So now when you think of Nubians you think black and when u think of the ancient Egyptiansu think Arab, further contrasting the two civilizations as two different races. Check out this video: http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=KOiAvoqZzks

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Shu Tefnut wrote:

> From: Shu Tefnut
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
> To: afrikanunity_ ofharlem@ yahoo.com, "HERU BENNU AMEN RA" , "Eugene Bennett" , bnyee@googlegroups. com, dr.garaia@africanid ea.org, friends@templeheali ng.com, GatherTheFires@ yahoogroups. com, happilynaturalday@

yahoogroups. com, hndsupport@gmail. com, luv4self_network@ yahoogroups. com, mwananchi@yahoogrou ps.com, NABSE@yahoogroups. com, nnabakyaala. afrika@gmail. com, openyourthirdeye@ yahoo.com, smaitawi@yahoogroup s.com, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, thanubian2@yahoo. com, trueblackness@ yahoogroups. com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 2:26 PM

HOTEP FAMILY

CHECK OUT THIS REAFFIRMATION:

http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=B7lxbAIiGA8

| 28107|2009-03-05 16:30:46|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|

> >>a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA. <<

Ferg,
That is interesting and you make a good point. But also remember that in Kemet the monkey held a VERY high status. Isn't Thoth (the NTR of reading, etc.) iconically represented by a monkey (baboon)? Correct me if I am wrong; I am writing from memory, now.
That does -if correct - quality the monkey to be named with the status elevating "N".
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
>
> Hutuapo Mahari.
>
> I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages there are noun classes. For example, a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.
>
> As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that was shortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
>

> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.
>
> As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.
>
> Ancestrally,
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM
>
>
> Asar,

> Thank you. As usual always on the job.
> I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
> As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
> I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
> I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
> I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
| 28108|2009-03-05 20:02:35|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|

>>quality<<

Sorry... meant to write "qualify".
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
> >>a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA. <<
>
> Ferg,
> That is interesting and you make a good point. But also remember that in Kemet the monkey held a VERY high status. Isn't Thoth (the NTR of reading, etc.) iconically represented by a monkey (baboon)? Correct me if I am wrong; I am writing from memory, now.
> That does -if correct - quality the monkey to be named with the status elevating "N".
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hutuapo Mahari.
> >
> > I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages there are noun classes. For example, a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.

> >
> > As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that was shortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
> >
> > Somo
> >
> >
> >
> > ----- Original Message -----
> > From: Asar Imhotep
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> >
> >
> > Peace Mahari
> >
> > What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.
> >
> > As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.
> >
> > Ancestrally,
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > http://www.asarimhotep.com
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >

> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM
> >
> >
> > Asar,
> > Thank you. As usual always on the job.
> > I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
> > As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
> > I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
> > I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
> > I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>
| 28109|2009-03-05 20:55:58|Mahari Mengistu|Archaeologists find statues of ancient Egypt king|

Archaeologists find statues of ancient Egypt king

Thu Mar 5, 2009 1:29pm GMT

Email | Print |
Share
| Single Page
[-] Text [+]

1 of 3Full Size

CAIRO (Reuters) - A team of Egyptian and European archaeologists have discovered two statues of King Amenhotep III, who ruled Egypt roughly 3,400 years ago, the Supreme Council for Antiquities said Thursday.

Chief Egyptian archaeologist Zahi Hawaas said in a statement the first statute was made of black granite, while the second depicts the king in the shape of a Sphinx, a figure with the head of a man and the body of a lion.

Amenhotep III presided over an era which saw a renaissance in Egyptian art. He was succeeded by his son Akhenaten, the sun-worshipping pharaoh credited by some for starting the world's first known monotheistic religion.

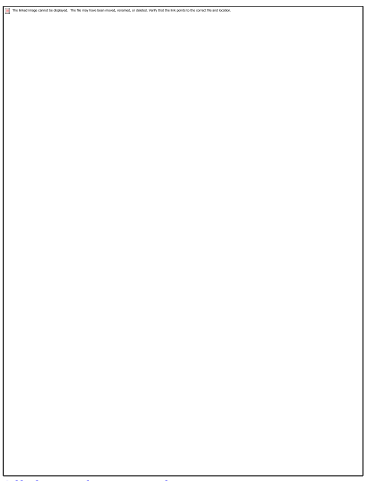
===

I hope the picture comes through. However, it appears that there is some more photographic trickery used taking the statue from this angle. It's dramatic shooting it in the dirt but wouldn't they realize that we all want to see it cleaned and upright? I think they do. To me he is obviously black but I can easily see the unobservant - who predominate - not realizing this fact from this photo.

HTP,

Mahari

| 28110|2009-03-05 23:59:25|Mahari Mengistu|YOUTUBE BLACK HISTORY MONTH SCREENING ROOM|
YouTube has a Screening Room in honor of Black History month.
This is a charming short film about a 90 year old black woman getting the opportunity to vote for a black man for President.



http://www.youtube.com/ytscreeningroom
Worth a peek.
HTP,
Mahari
| 28111|2009-03-06 07:41:26|Paul Kekai Manansala|In the house of millions of years|

A lost tomb and a sphinx in Luxor, painted anthropoid coffins in Dahshour and a noble woman's tomb in Saqqara. Nevine El-Aref reports on the most recent discoveries in Egypt

---

It seems that the recent archaeological season has been very successful. Wherever archaeologists have dug, they have come up with amazing and important discoveries.

On Luxor's west bank, major discoveries have been uncovered in the noblemen's necropolis at Sheikh Abdel-Gourna and at Kom Al-Hittan, where the temple of the 18th-Dynasty Pharaoh Amenhotep III is located.

Click to view caption

Clockwise from top: King Amenhotep III's sphinx statue; canopic jars from Sheikh Abdel-Gourna; a relief on Isisnofret's sarcophagus; the lower part of King Amenhotep's statue

After almost 130 years of exploring the sands of the archaeological hill of Sheikh Abdel-Gourna, the tomb of Amenhotep, a deputy of the overseer of seal-bearers during the reign of Pharaoh Tuthmosis III -- known among Egyptologists as "the lost tomb" -- has been found by a Belgian archaeological mission.

Amenhotep's tomb was previously discovered during the early 1880s by Egyptologist Karl Pieh, who also drew a sketch plan of its interior design. But unfortunately over the span of time it was re- buried in sand and its exact location was subsequently forgotten. In the early 2000s traces of the tomb were revealed during work on the tomb of Sennefer, the overseer of seal-bearers. Excavators found a remarkable sandstone statue dedicated to Amenhotep, and further excavations at the site revealed more about the lost tomb that early this year led to the mission's finding the main entrance to the tomb chapel.

Laurent Bavay, head of the Belgian mission, explained that the tomb was a T-shaped chapel with a transverse gallery oriented north and south and divided by a row of six pillars. Its southern half collapsed in antiquity and the space was entirely filled with debris that partially blocked the entrance and the passage leading into the gallery. The walls of the tomb are painted with the classical geometric motifs well known from the 18th Dynasty, along with bands of hieroglyphic texts showing the name, various titles and genealogy of the tomb's owner. According to these inscriptions, the tombs belonged to Amenhotep, the deputy of the overseer of seal-bearers. His father was Ahmes, director of the cattle of Amun and Neheh, and his wife, who was called Renena, was the daughter of the overseer of seal-bearers Sennefer.

"This is a very important discovery," said Zahi Hawass, secretary-general of the Supreme Council of Antiquities. He said that determining the exact location of the tomb would provide a better understanding of the Egyptian administration echelon during the reign of Pharaoh Tuthmosis III.

Hawass pointed out that other objects from Amenhotep's tomb were already known in Egyptological literature. The most important was a granite false-door stela found reused in the floor of a chapel added to the north side of the Khonsu Temple at Karnak.

At the site of the funerary temple of another Amenhotep, this time a royal one -- the 18th- Dynasty Pharaoh Amenhotep III -- at Kom Al-Hittan, the European-Egyptian mission unearthed more elements of the temple.

Houring Sourouzian, the head of the mission, told Al-Ahram Weekly that while clearing the rubble accumulated on the fa砆e of the temple's great peristyle court, her team unearthed a broken sandstone architrave along with two gigantic statues of Amenhotep III. The first statue, in black granite, is of Pharaoh Amenhotep III seated, hands flat on his knees, and wearing the nemes headdress and the pleated royal kilt, while the name of the Pharaoh is inscribed on the throne. The statue is very well preserved except for the tip of the nose and the bottom of the beard, which are broken.

"It is of an excellent artistic quality and very smoothly polished," Sourouzian said, adding that early examination revealed that the statue featured the Pharaoh during the early part of his reign as his facial features were shown with slanting eyes, a short nose and a bulging mouth.

Sourouzian said similar seated statues were found long ago in the temple, of which two are now on display in the British Museum and a third in the courtyard of the Mut Temple at Karnak. Others were reused by Ramesside Pharaohs and are dispersed in various museums.

"This newly-discovered statue is up to now the only one in black granite to have remained inside the temple, and it is sure to be one of the highlights of the site where it will attest to the glorious artistic production during Amenhotep III's reign," Sourouzian commented.

The second statue is made of quartzite and shows the Pharaoh in sphinx form with a human head and lion's body. The statue is almost complete except for the forepaws, which are missing, while parts of the nose, chin and chest are broken.

"This sphinx is larger than the three others previously found on the site," Sourouzian said, adding that among these were two headless sphinxes of Amenhotep's wife, Queen Tiye, and one of the Pharaoh himself. "They probably belonged to a processional way leading to the great court of the temple," she suggested.

As for the architrave, she continued, its total length was 4.2 metres but it was found to be broken in several pieces. Both sides are decorated with hieroglyphic inscription in sunken relief, comprising the dedication text of the temple, called "the House of Millions of Years", by Amenhotep III to the god Amun-Re.

At the Dahshour necropolis, south of the Giza Plateau, a Japanese mission from Waseda University came across four painted wooden anthropoid coffins, three wooden canopic jars and two ushabti (cultic figurine) boxes inside an unidentified burial shaft located in the northern area of the Ramesside tomb of Ta.

"Although these coffins are empty now, due to looting by tomb raiders in antiquity, their original features remain intact," Hawass said. He continued that the coffins were divided into two sets, each consisting of multiple coffins covered in black resin and decorated with yellow inscriptions. The two sets belonged to two persons, previously unknown, called Tutpashu and Iriseraa. The first set, Tutpashu's, bears the images of its owner along with various ancient Egyptian deities, while the second is more simple. The names of both persons are also written on the canopic jars and ushabti boxes, which contain at least 38 partly broken wooden statuettes.

The head of the Japanese mission, Sakuji Yoshimura, told the Weekly that a preliminary study of these objects suggested that they could be dated to the Ramesside era or the Late Period.

He pointed out that all the artefacts had been removed to the site galleries for immediate restoration as some of the coffins were extremely fragile and there was a possibility that they could suffer cracks and the bitumen could fall off owing to the change in humidity after they were uncovered from the sand.

Meanwhile, excavation work carried out by the Japanese mission in the northwestern area of the Saqqara necropolis led to the discovery of what is believed to be a previously unknown tomb dating from the 19th Dynasty. It stands on the summit of a rocky, remote outcrop where a monument belonging to Prince Khaemwaset, son of Pharaoh Ramses II, is also located, approximately 1.5 kilometres northwest of the Serapeum at Saqqara. Inside the burial chamber was a limestone sarcophagus of a woman named Isisnofret, along with three human bodies and several fragments of funerary objects.

The tomb chapel consists of a pylon, a colonnaded courtyard, an antechamber with four pilasters terminating in three cult chapels, and the base of a pyramid.

"This pyramid is a typical plan of a New Kingdom freestanding tomb-chapel, especially of the Ramesside Period," Yoshimura said. He continued that the tomb chapel was arranged on a south-north axis, unlike other Memphite New- Kingdom tomb-chapels which were normally arranged on an east-west central axis. The upper portion of the structure was largely missing, leaving only foundations and some of the flooring.

As for the sarcophagus, Yoshimura explained that this was partially broken but its shape was identifiable. It is a fine limestone sarcophagus inscribed in sunken relief and painted in a brilliant blue colour. It has a vaulted lid, and bears the name of its owner, Isisnofret, whose title means "the noble woman".

"This is a title that is very rare in the New Kingdom," Yoshimura said, adding that since Prince Khaemwaset had a daughter named Isisnofret and his monument was located on the same outcrop, then the owner of the sarcophagus could probably be this daughter of the prince.

The Waseda University mission has uncovered a number of tombs, coffins, burials and statues since commencing excavation in this area 15 years ago. Some of these objects are currently on tour in Japan as part of a special exhibition celebrating Waseda University's 40th year of archaeological work in Egypt.

Copyright Al-Ahram Weekly. All rights reserved

| 28112|2009-03-06 07:42:07|odhiambo okecth|This is cold blood murder|
I want to strongly condemn the murder yesterday of Mr King'ara and Oulu GPO both of Oscar Foundation.

This is something that is not done by civilized people. When you disagree with ones ideas, you discuss. You do not resort to brawn.

The murder of the duo came shortly after Alfred Mutua, he who talks on behalf of the President of Kenya, made it so clear that they will be dealing with Oscar Foundation decisively shortly. And shortly thereafter, King'ara was felled in a hail of bullets in an area that seems all secure.

The death of the duo must not go in vain. Kenyans must wake up and demand that justice be done. Extra judicial killing from any quarter must not be acceptable.

Unlike KNHRC that only condemns extra judicial killings by the police, Kenyans must condemn all extra judicial killings; from the police, from mungiki, from SLDF, from chinkororo, from the thugs. They are all killers and they must all be stopped.

May the Almighty God grant the duo eternal rest. And may He call to His service the people who killed these two Kenyans.

Odhiambo T Oketch,
Komarock Nairobi.

| 28113|2009-03-06 07:42:15|kemetnu6240|Kemet Nu Egypt Tour with Ashra and Merira Kwesi|
Hotep (peace) Brothers and Sisters:
The annual Kemet Nu "Know Thyself" Educational Tour to Egypt will run July 12 ? July 26, 2009 (15 days). Listed below is pertinent information on the upcoming pilgrimage to the motherland.
Download the brochure and view videos of lectures at the ancient sites plus activities from previous tours at: www.kemetnu.com
For additional information, call (877) 530-0400 (toll free) or (214) 371-0206.
KEMET NU "KNOW THYSELF" EDUCATIONAL TOUR ? A 15 Day African-centered "Trip of a Lifetime."

EGYPT : FROM CAIRO TO NUBIA, Conducted by Ashra and Merira Kwesi, international lecturers on the African origins of civilization, religion and culture.

Tour is based on 28 years of consistent study and annual tour experience in Egypt .

July 12 ? July 26, 2009 (15 days)

$3599 (Payment plans are available)

Includes:

. Roundtrip international airfare from J.F.K airport in New York

. Dynamic African-centered on-site lectures by Ashra Kwesi that bring the ancienttemples to life

. All domestic flights and land travel in Egypt (700 miles from Cairo to Nubia)

. Mind-blowing PowerPoint multimedia presentations in the evenings at the hotels by Ashra and Merira Kwesi

. Deluxe hotel accommodations (5 star)

. Two meals daily

. Pre-trip planning handbook

. Egypt : From Cairo to Nubia DVD

. Afrikan Builders of Civilization book

. Entrance fees to all sites and much, much, more?

Visit and learn about:

Pyramids and Sphinx (Horemaket) at Giza, The Bent and Red Pyramids at Dashur, Cairo Museum, Colossal statues of Ramses at Memphis, Pyramids and mastabas at Sakkara, Temples of Karnak and Luxor, Valley of the Kings, Funerary Temple of Hatshepsut, The Ramesseum, Medinet Habu, Temples of Edfu, Komombo, Denderah, Abydos, Kalabsha, Aset, Tombs of the Nobles, Abu Simbel and much, much, more?

Join the uncompromising husband and wife team of Ashra and Merira Kwesi on their annual summer tour to Kemet (Egypt). They bring the male and female balance, just as our ancestors did in ancient times.

Ashra Kwesi is a historian (griot) and lecturer on ancient African history and religion. He brings a wealth of information and a dynamic delivery, based on 28 years of study and tour experience in the African Nile Valley . Brother Kwesi spent 14 of those years as an assistant to the noted Kemetologist, Dr. Yosef Ben Jochannan.

Merira Kwesi is a spirited lecturer on African fashion and culture, both ancient and modern. She will present the symbolic and historical significance of our ancient ancestral social traditions based on her 17 years of study and annual tour experience in Egypt . She will also provide in-depth documentation on the vibrant ancient African Queens and deities of Egypt .

Brother and Sister Kwesi are the owners of Kemet Nu Productions LLC and produce riveting, educational videos on the African origins of civilization, religion and culture. Emphasis is placed on visual documentation of the concepts and symbols from which the western world has drawn its society.

For more details and complete tour brochure, contact:

Ashra or Merira Kwesi
Kemet Nu Tours

P.O. Box 41005
Dallas , TX 75241
Toll free: (877) 530-0400 Tel: (214) 371-0206
Fax: (214) 371-0908
E-mail: kemetnu@sbcglobal.net
Web site: www.kemetnu.com
| 28114|2009-03-06 07:42:17|Michael Bayman|Spring-Equinox-Autumn-Equinox, Health-Minister: Availability|

Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-News-Service*
22: Kharo-Sim-Mah: 301,613

- - -Agade-Medina
Chief Of The Staff for the Sovereign-Crown confirms the Amexem-Moor-Empire:
Minister For The Health And Phytotherapy has the assignment/authorization for the speaking-engagements throughout the North-Amexem from the first-day of the new: Earth-year = Spring-Equinox unto the Autumn-Equinox with the reduction in the rate unto the rate = 45: ounces of the silver plus the expenses.
From the 1: Ku-Mal: 301,614: Amexem-Moor-Calendar unto the 5: Zi-Ba-An-Na: 301,614: A.M.C.
[3/21/09 - 9/21/09]= A six-month: time-window; His-Imperial-Majesty authorizes the speaking-engagements in the North-Amexem and only in the North-Amexem by the Amexem-Moor-Empire:
Minister For The Health And Phytotherapy, His-Excellency: Grand-Noble: Bishara-Hafiz-El: Bey

His-Excellency = available at the rate = 45: Bamako [Troy]-Ounces of the silver in the bar or coin-form plus the travel, hotel, and local-transportation-expenses.

212 592 8959for the making of the arrangements.
Amexem-Moor-Empire: Sovereign-Copyright-Number: SC03062009CE007

| 28115|2009-03-06 07:46:35|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Archaeologists find statues of ancient Egypt king|
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
> Archaeologists find statues of ancient Egypt king Thu Mar 5, 2009
> 1:29pm GMT Email | Print
> <http://uk.reuters.com/articlePrint?articleId=UKTRE52429G20090305> |

>
> I hope the picture comes through. However, it appears that there is > some more photographic trickery used taking the statue from this angle.
> It's dramatic shooting it in the dirt but wouldn't they realize that we > all want to see it cleaned and upright? I think they do. To me he is > obviously black but I can easily see the unobservant - who predominate - > not realizing this fact from this photo.

>

Mahari, its very common, and as you say dramatic, to take pics of artifacts just as they are uncovered.

I'm sure more pics will be available later.

It really does not matter, since there are already many thousands of pictures of black Egyptians, pharaohs, etc., yet somehow (many) people believe what they are told rather than what they see.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala
| 28116|2009-03-06 10:29:44|Ferg|Re: "N"|
Thanks Mahari for pointing this out.
Good abstract thinking! There does seem to be some sort of correlation between the word and the status itsupports. I shall be looking into this further, perhaps I am missing out the implications presented by the letter N.
The next step is to find out exactly in Bantu whatword the letter N represents. Its a bit like finding out whatS stands forin the plural of the word orange-s! I'm sure there must be an explanation
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Friday, March 06, 2009 12:30 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
> >>a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA. <<
>
> Ferg,
> That is interesting and you make a good point. But also remember that in Kemet the monkey held a VERY high status. Isn't Thoth (the NTR of reading, etc.) iconically represented by a monkey (baboon)? Correct me if I am wrong; I am writing from memory, now.
> That does -if correct - quality the monkey to be named with the status elevating "N".
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hutuapo Mahari.
> >
> > I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages

there are noun classes. For example, a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.
>
> As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that was shortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
>
> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.
>
> As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.
>
> Ancestrally,
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> --- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM
>
>
> Asar,
> Thank you. As usual always on the job.
> I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
> As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
> I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
> I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
> I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28117|2009-03-06 14:44:47|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Archaeologists find statues of ancient Egypt king|

>> yet somehow (many) people believe what they are told rather than what they see.<<

Precisely. That is why I mention it. I believe it is also important to mention that photographers are complicit in these various deceptions so that people begin to question what they see (actually what they don't see) as well as what they are told.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:
>

> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> >
> > Archaeologists find statues of ancient Egypt king Thu Mar 5, 2009
> > 1:29pm GMT Email | Print
> > <http://uk.reuters.com/articlePrint?articleId=UKTRE52429G20090305> |
>
>
> >
> > I hope the picture comes through. However, it appears that there is > > some more photographic trickery used taking the statue from this angle.
> > It's dramatic shooting it in the dirt but wouldn't they realize that we > > all want to see it cleaned and upright? I think they do. To me he is > > obviously black but I can easily see the unobservant - who predominate -
> > not realizing this fact from this photo.
> >
>
> Mahari, its very common, and as you say dramatic, to take pics of artifacts just as they are uncovered.
>
> I'm sure more pics will be available later.
>
> It really does not matter, since there are already many thousands of pictures of black Egyptians, pharaohs, etc., yet somehow (many) people believe what they are told rather than what they see.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
| 28118|2009-03-07 09:08:38|Michael J Robinson|Don't Miss "Sunday Night Live with Bro. Ray Hagins" on Black Liberat|

Hotep Everyone,

Be sure to log on and tune in to Sunday Night Live With Bro. Ray Hagins on Black Liberation Radio (www.wblr.com). Every Sunday Evening at 8:00 p.m. (7:00 p.m. Central Time).

On Sunday evenings Pastor Hagins addresses issues and answers questions that many people have been needing answers to for years! This is a "live" call-in talk format and has been a pivotal instrument in the freeing of the minds of our people.

So, feel free to share in this world-wide open forum by calling in with your questions and/or comments. If you are unable to get through, you can talk "live" in our chat room and still have your concerns addressed.

The toll-free call-in number is: 1-877-454-1900

Dr. Ray Hagins is a frequent guest on the Michael Baisden: Love, Lust and Lies Radio program heard across the country. He is the Chief Elder of the Afrikan Village and Cultural Centerin St. Louis, Missouri. He is also a clinician, therapist, musician,and a pilot.

He has many lectures dealing with Afrikan History and Culture including:

The Verdict Is In:

A Woman on A Mission (About the Story if Auset (Isis) and Osiris (Ausar))

The Council of Nicaea 325 A.D.

Egypt (Kemet): The Source of the Bible

AFRICOM: A Wolf in Sheeps clothing

Excerpts of many of his lectures can be viewed at www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914 .

The balancing of the land lies in Maat: Truth, Justice and Righteousness. Do Maat and live!

Thanks,

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

"Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior."
| 28119|2009-03-07 09:08:50|ahmedkhaled_egypt2|A new website full of photos and information|
Hi Guys,
I saw a very interesting website about ancient Egypt. Actually the website have many photos from every where and to every egyptian era.
here's the link
http://egyptopia.com/Sightseeings+in+Egypt_30_286_3_15_en.html
| 28120|2009-03-07 09:08:56|Shu Tefnut|THIS IS AFRICA (VEDIO)|
CHECK IT OUT:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LHV2FebL4YU

| 28121|2009-03-07 09:09:10|Shu Tefnut|REMINDER, AFRICA / EGYPT / NUBIA: EDUCATIONAL TOUR.|

Africa / Egypt / Nubia Educational Tour.

August 15th, through August 25th, 2009.

Starting at $2379.00 P.P Double Room

Join Us As We Return to the Motherland.

Join us on our annual tour, as we return to the motherland. Lets experience the great works and wonders of our ancestors, who were the builders of the Great Pyramids, Sphinx, and many temples. You will enjoy the historical sites from Nubia to the Giza Plateau. Experience the beginning of world civilization which was influenced by ancient Egypt. Experience Nubia, which is the foundation and beginning of the Nile Valley civilization which is called Ancient Egypt. We will visit the Nubian Museum which boasts the antiquity of Ancient Egypt with artifacts going back 90,000 years. You will witness and see stone pictographs, tools made of metal (copper) and ancient sites, before there was an Egyptian Dynasty. Learn the history of Egypt and come back to the beginning of knowledge with Bro. Heru Bennu Amen Ra. (aka George Bennett M.F.A.) African Art historian, Archeologist Researcher/Lecturer, From Paleolithic (Kush) to (kemet) Egypt.

Day 1: - Departure from USA

Board your international flight to Cairo and begin your journey back in time to Egypt, and Nubia the holy land.

Day 02 - Cairo

Arrival in the Land of the Pharaohs.At Cairo International airport you will be welcomed and assisted through immigration and customs by our representative, then escorted to Hotel.

Day 03: - Cairo, Aswan

After breakfast, you will begin a full day of sight seeing in Cairo which include the Pyrimids, Sphinx, Egyptian Museum,and the bazaar. Camel ride opportunity-overnight in Cairo.

Transfer to Railway Station to board night train to Aswan. Overnight on board.

The Pyramids of Giza:

The only present-day survivors of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, The Pyramids of Giza are among the worlds greatest tourist attractions and never lose their ability to inspire and overwhelm visitors. The largest and oldest of the Pyramids of Giza is that of Cheops (Khufu). The Pyramids of Khafre the Great and Menkaure the Divine may not be as large in size as the Great Pyramid, but they are no less imposing in fascination.

Sphinx

The Sphinx remains a symbol of strength, wisdom and mystery for eons. Partially buried several times over the years by the shifting desert sands, the Sphinx now stands fully exposed with its impressive dimensions visible to all. The body of a lion with the head of a king or god, the Sphinx lines up with the Pyramid of Khafre. After visiting the Pyramids of Giza, proceed to visit the Egyptian Museum.

The Egyptian Museum

The Egyptian Museum was built during the reign of Khedive Abbass Helmi II in 1897, and opened its doors on November 15, 1902. Today, the museum contains the most important collection of Egyptian antiquities in the world. Exhibited are over 120,000 objects from the Pharaonic and Greco-Roman periods, including the celebrated mummies of ancient Egyptian kings and the treasures of King Tutankhamen. After Lunch, drive to Old Cairo, where early Judaism and Christianity flourished in Egypt. Visit the Ben Ezra Synagogue and Saint Sergious Church

Day 04: Aswan, Abu Simbel, Aswan

transferred to your hotel. The next morning

After breakfast you willbe transferred to airport

for your flight to Abu Simbel visit the colossal Temple of Ramses II and the temple of his beloved Queen Nefertari, both temples carved out of a hillside beside the Nile in the 13th century BC. Transfer back to the airport for your flight back to Aswan. Upon arrival you iewill be escorted to your 4D/3N cruise. Accommodation aboard your cruise ship will consist of a cabin with private facilities. In the afternoon, you will be escorted to visit the Nubian Museum, Temple of Philae, and the Broken Obelisk

The Nubian Museum

Located in the city of Aswan, on the eastern bank of the Nile, 899 kilometers south of Cairo. The museum is a three-story building with an outdoor exhibition area. It houses the main finds of the UNESCO salvage campaign carried out at the time of the building of the High Dam, which eventually flooded that whole region. Another major exhibit is a diorama which shows the daily life of Nubian villagers. Dinner & overnight on board.

Day 05 : Aswan - Kom Ombo Edfu

Philae Temple

On a small island in the Nile near Aswan stands the amazing Temple of Isis at Philae. This monument is possibly best known for the international effort which moved it in it's entirety to the island when it's original location was threatened by the change in water level caused by the High Dam. The temple has been completely dismantled and rebuilt to the original orientation on the nearby island of Agilika which rises higher from the water and has been reshaped and landscaped to resemble the original Philae. Sail to Komombo. Visit the temple shared by the two Gods sobek and Haroe

Temple of Kom Ombo:

The temple is actually made up of two temples: that of Sobek and that of Haroeris. In ancient time, crocodiles waded in the river. There are two entrances, two courts, two colonnades, two hypostyle halls and two sanctuaries. There were probably even two sets of priests for the two temples. Despite being badly damaged, the temple is a beautiful sight as one approach from either direction on the river, particularly as sunset nears and the colors change. Overnight in Edfu.

Day 06: Edfu - Esna - Luxor

After breakfast, visit the temple of Horus in Edfu

The Temple of Horus:

Of all the temples of ancient Egypt, the one at Edfu is the most complete and best preserved. The reason is that the temple had been totally submerged under the desert except for the very top of the pylon entrance. A small amount of stone had been removed from the exposed part, but when excavated it was found to be in near perfect condition. Sail to Esna, cross the lock, then sail to Luxor and overnight.

Day 07: Luxor

Disembarkation after breakfast. Cross to the west bank. And visit Valley of the Kings, the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut and the Colossi of Memnon.

Valley of the Kings & Queens:

A vast City of the Dead where magnificent tombs were carved into the desert rocks, decorated richly, and filled with treasures for the afterlife by generations of Pharaohs. You will also see the Valley of the Queens.

Temple of Queen Hatshepsut:

The temple built in El Deir El Bahari on the west bank of the Nile in Luxor by queen

Hatshepsut, who ruled Egypt for almost 20 years. She chose a very well protected location as it is surrounded by the mountains

Colossi of Memnon:

Two large colossal sculptures of Amenhotep III also foundation of tample.

On the way back to the river Nile, your road passes by the famed Colossi of Memnon, known in Ancient Greek times for their haunting voices at dawn. Transfer to the railway station to board your first class sleeping train to Cairo. Overnight on board.

Day 08: Cairo

Upon arrival you will be escorted to Hotel in Cairo. Rest of your day at leisure.

Suggested Tour Visit the pyrimids of Saqqara, and the tombs of Kagemeni and Ptah hotep

Day 09: Day of leisure suggested tour

Old Cairo:

Is so named because it is the oldest part of Cairo, and in fact, predates what is now Cairo. Later, the Romans built a fortress here which we call Babylon. Some of these Roman walls still exist. Later, it became a Christian stronghold, with as many as 20 churches built within an area of one square mile. There are only five remaining from which is the Church of St. Sergius (Abu Serga), which legend has it is built atop one of the sites where the Holy Family rested on their flight from Herod. Overnight at hotel.

Day 10: Sun Departure

After breakfast, transfer to Cairo International Airport for your flight back to the USA.

Great trip.

Contact info: For more details contact Dr. Bennett (347-495-4289) or Egyptian Connections at (800-334-4477)

Itinerary subject to change

Day 1	Depart from JFK
Day 2	Upon arrival to Cairo, you will be met and escorted to your Cairo Hotel - Overnight
Day 3	After your breakfast, you will begin your full day of sight-seeing in Cairo, which will include the Egyptian Museum, Bazaar, Pyramids and Sphinx. Camel ride Opportunity - Transfer to train station for trip to Aswan. Overnight on train
Day 4	Upon arrival, transfer to your Hotel for Check in. Afternoon visit of the Nubian Museum. Overnight in Hotel.
Day 5	After Breakfast, transfer to your deluxe Nile Cruise (Optional Abu Simbel Tour). After Orientation, enjoy your tour to the Temple of Philae, which is dedicated to the goddess Isis. Sail to Kom Ombo
Day 6	Visit the Temple of Kom Ombo, shared by the two Gods Sobek & Haroeris. Sail to Edfu. Upon Arrival to Edfu, visit the Temple of Horus. Sail to Luxor
Day 7	Cross the Nile to visit the Valley of the Kings and Queens, the Temple of Hatshepsut and the Colossi of Memnon. In the afternoon, visit the Temple of Karnack, the largest religious complex in the world, and the Temple of Luxor with its elegant colonnaded hall, Evening Captain's Dinner party Overnight on Board.
Day 8	Disembark, rest of the day at Leisure in Luxor, 7 PM. Transfer to the train station for a trip to Cairo Overnight on train
Day 9	Day Free at leisure.
Day	After your breakfast, you will transfer to the airport for your homebound flight

Africa/Egypt Reservation Form

Please print this Form and e-mail, fax to 201-678-0077, or mail to our address:

Name of Traveler:

Name of Companion:

Phone:

Mailing Address:

(Separate forms should be completed in case more than two are joining the trip)

Payment Information: (Please check the appropriate boxes)

Basic Package	$2379.00
Single Supplement	$239.00
Abu Simbel (Optional)	$230.00

All above are per person Total

Reservation and deposits:

A $200.00 per person deposit by check only is required to initiate the booking.

Full amount is requested 45 days prior to departure date.

Full payment is requested for any booking made less than 45 days before departure.

Note: Payments made by check received less than 30 days prior to departure must be certified.

Cancelation and Refunds:

All cancellations should be received in writing.

$75.00 per person administration fees will apply on all cancellations 45 days prior to departure.

20% cancellation fee will apply 44-30 days prior to departure|50% for 29-7days|100% for less than 7 days

No refund for any unused service while on tour.

No refund can be made for intangible items such as hardship, unpleasantness, or the like.

Travel Insurance is strongly recommended, please call & inquire within.

235 Main St. Suite 202
Hackensack, NJ 07601

www.EgyptOnTheWeb.com

| 28122|2009-03-07 20:32:15|Mahari Mengistu|OPIATES AND MELANIN|
A while back I posted a statement indicating that it seems like a wise thing for individuals interested in trying opiate drugs to avoid them because it would appear that it is likely that it would be difficult to break the habit due to the close relationship of melanin to the opiates. The following video from a Dr. Jewel Pookrum about melanin makes the same admonition but with scientific credentials:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bSHVr6OqmMA
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=P159nPN_SpU

HTP,
Mahari
| 28123|2009-03-08 06:12:53|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|
Ferg,
One more thing about "N" a while back there were some posts on the "ankh". I believe you and/or Asar researched its origin and found that it appears that the correct pronunciation of the word maybe "N-KWA". You might want to go back and find the post to verify.
If I am correct then we again have the "N" used to indicate a divine high status; thus, again we have "life-force", "life-giving", "ancestral", NTR, NHSI(who are the progeny of AmN-Ra's ejaculation).
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
>
> Thanks Mahari for pointing this out.
>
> Good abstract thinking! There does seem to be some sort of correlation between the word and the status it supports. I shall be looking into this further, perhaps I am missing out the implications presented by the letter N.
>
> The next step is to find out exactly in Bantu what word the letter N represents. Its a bit like finding out what S stands for in the plural of the word orange-s ! I'm sure there must be an explanation
>
> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Friday, March 06, 2009 12:30 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
> >>a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA. <<
>
> Ferg,
> That is interesting and you make a good point. But also remember that in Kemet the monkey held a VERY high status. Isn't Thoth (the NTR of reading, etc.) iconically represented by a monkey (baboon)? Correct me if I am wrong; I am writing from memory, now.
> That does -if correct - quality the monkey to be named with the status elevating "N".
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hutuapo Mahari.
> >
> > I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages there are noun classes. For example, a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.
> >
> > As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that was shortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
> >
> > Somo
> >
> >
> >
> > ----- Original Message -----
> > From: Asar Imhotep
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> >
> >
> > Peace Mahari
> >
> > What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.
> >
> > As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.

> >
> > Ancestrally,
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > http://www.asarimhotep.com
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM
> >
> >
> > Asar,
> > Thank you. As usual always on the job.
> > I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
> > As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
> > I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
> > I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
> > I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari

> >
>
| 28124|2009-03-08 08:10:33|Pearl Jr|Did Rap Kill The Black Male Singer?|

Did Rap Kill The Black Male Singer?

By Pearl Jr.

How many of you know who the best selling Black male singer in the world for 2008 was? I bet you'll never get this right, without a few clues. Well, he's 50 years old, considered washed up and too controversial to sell, plus the majority of his songs are more than 25 years old. It's Michael Jackson, who sold more than Usher, Chris Brown, Ne-yo, John Legend, and Seal. The King of Pop sold nearly as many records worldwide as the #1 best-selling artist in the US regardless of race, Lil Wayne, whose genre of hip hop lost19.8 percent in sales from the previous year. Michael Jackson's song catalog sold 2.9 million copies with Thriller 25 topping over 2.3 million by itself, plus Michael didn't evenpromote it and performed nowhere! Shocking isn't it! (Lil Wayne sold nearly 3 million)

Before the 1990's, it seemed one could find a million-selling Black male recording artist on other every corner, and, at least, 20 in every Black church. Today, it's becoming more and more difficult to ignore the facts that Black men are headed to the bottom of, yet, another statistical chart.

Music, the savior of the Black race, made bearable the horrors of slavery, soothed during Jim Crow racism, and bonded in segregation. This type of Black love and togetherness ushered in the perfectly pitched passion of singers like Smokey Robinson singing countertenor (a male soprano), Michael Jackson a solid tenor, David Ruffin a baritone, and Barry White, the maestro, bass singer. Even now writing this article, name after name of remarkable Black male singers come to mind like Nat King Cole, Ray Charles, Otis Redding, Jackie Wilson, Marvin Gaye, Donnie Hathaway, Stevie Wonder, Ronald Isley, Al Green, Teddy Pendergrass, Luther Vandross, Jeffrey Osborne, and singing groups like The Temptations, The Four Tops, The Spinners, Stylistics, Chi-lights, Jackson 5, Earth Wind and Fire, The Moments, The Manhattans, New Edition, and Boys II Men. The list goes on and on. But today, where are the Black male singers that made Black women buy every Right On Magazine and scream with excited hysteria whenever their favorite artists appeared?

In today's world of rap music, the last solid genre created in the Black community, seemed to have seduced too many Black men wishing for their spot on the top of music entertainment fame, to speak rhythmic poetry instead of singing the melodies of love and longing.

The irony is that while the loving lyrics of Motown dominated the Black airways for decades, Black love was in bloom, and so was the growth of the music industry. Now too many Black men in the game of hip hop slop are volunteering to label Black women bitches and hos, promote criminality, excessive spending (bling), and speak of love making as purely a one night stand have contributed to the widespread decline of Black love and progress. It's no coincidence that Black love is down at the same time Black music is at its lowest levels ethically and well as financially. This decline has little to do with the recession because these declines started to manifest 6 years ago, and ringtones along with 99 cent downloads just ain't paying the bills.

Could the absence of Black male singers be correlated with the lack of decency taught in rap crap chants? Does it take the desire to love completely and thoroughly to enhance the singing style of Black men?

Throughout the history of television, there have been numerous talent shows, such as the competitions at the famed Apollo Theater and Star Search. But the last few seasons of American Idol have not produced one top Black male singer and I think Simon is in shock due to this! Season Eight of American Idol's top 12 doesn't have one Black male singer and only one Black male singer was in the top 36.. Season two winner, Reuben Studdard and the like, are now extinct for six straight years. He was the only Black male winner in American Idol history.

Black men have lost their way in so many more different categories, such as low high school graduation rates, high incarceration rates, high rates of low self-esteem or undeserved self-gratification, and too many Black men are not in the home taking care of their children and not marrying their baby's mothers. There are simply prices to pay for not loving and respecting your women! Nature just wasn't meant to fail like this! Perhaps, the Black male's continual downfall spiral will be due to too much bad karma.

Have Black males lost their singing dominance with their souls and are now out of the emotional loop of wanting to give true love to a Black woman? What happened to lyrics like, "The Way You Do The Things You Do", "Just My Imagination" , "Your Precious Love", "Maybe Tomorrow", "Try a Little Tenderness", "Lonely Teardrops", "Isn't She lovely", "Love Ballad", "I Can't Help Myself", "Mighty Love", "Reasons", "Stop, Look, Listen to Your Heart", "Oh Girl" and "Ooh Child". Even later group like Boys II Men released hits like "I'll Make Love to You" and New Edition's "Can You Stand the Rain" seems like those were the last true love song that touched the heart in just the right place to make herds of girls run to the record store and lay out their, many times, strapped money to experience love's possibilities through music.

Even, Michael Jackson, the best-selling artist in the world achieved his greatest heights when he was filled with Black pride and surrounded by Black people, especially his Black mother and sisters who lived at the family home with him, because all of his brothers had married and moved away. One might wonder if Michael Jackson still has Black fans. Well, as the owner of one of the largest and most successful Black-themed and Black-owned bookstores in Los Angeles (Eso-Won) told me that Thriller 25 was the best selling product in his store. Remember, the last women the world saw Michael withtwo Black women named Grace Rwamba (reportedly MJ was going to marry), his assistant and Raymone Bain, his spokesperson.

All is not totally lost. There are a few Black male singers, but only one comes to mind. Usher, who is the last best selling new Black male singer, remains on the scene, but he is a rare reminiscent of days long past. Usher's album and song, "Here I Stand" earned him the #2 best-selling Black male singing title of 2008 because that love song exudes the unrelenting emotion every Black woman needs to hear to believe that to be loved, honored, and cherished is attainable. By the way, Usher is married to a beautiful Black woman. It's always been Black women that have purchased nearly all the recordings by Black male artists, period!

Examine the recent careers of post-platinum selling artists akon, Baby Face, Brian McKnight, John Legend, and Seal who are all good singers, but once they are found out to not chose Black women as their mates, those sales dropped like hot potatoes. No one else will have the guts to say this or ASK THIS SERIOUS QUESTION. Is it the Black woman who brings out the natural emotional PASSION in Black men or is it Black women that feel abandoned by the very artist they put in the rich house AND stopped buying their music because now it is difficult to imagine that singer is singing to directly to them? The answer to both is probably a big yes. Either way, the Black male singer is the loser in all this when he chooses to abandon the already abandoned, use the already abused, and fall prey to manipulations that tell him to be wrong is to be right.

Men are natural providers and protectors of their women, children and community, therefore, when Black men refuse to do their jobs as men, nature jumps in and creates a cataclysm of castigation. The Black race will not improve until Black men OVERWHELMINGLY take their responsibility seriously.

Even with the latest abusive disaster with singer Chris Brown against his girlfriend Rihanna, whose first albums attained platinum, one of Chris' first music videos (from his second album) shows him chasing non-Black women and even jumping over Black girls to get to a non-Black girl. The highly publicized relationship between Chris and Rihanna jump started Chris' quickly declining records sales, because sistas just wasn't having it. Now, why would Black females purchase an album from a guy who blatantly disrespects Black females like that? They don't and they won't. Chris' career will never recover from his felony charges for allegedly beating his girlfriend Rihanna-and Rihanna doesn't even realize that she does not possess enough love to save him. Rihanna's latest album has sold over 6 million copies worldwide, while Chris' latest stands around 2 million. During their heavily publicized crisis, Rihanna continues to sell, but Chris' sales are pretty much dead.

It seems to be a trend for Black men to be with non-Black women in entertainment, but much of the Black female audience is tired of trying to be racially fair when it's obvious that union is in direct contrast with Black love and the returning of Black men to their male lacking homes and communities.

This may be hard for many to hear, but it is the love between a Black man and a Black woman that unveils the often imitated, unique melodic beauty of Black music?

Yet, the Black female continues to deliver love songs at her emotional high, but Black men apparently, have done too much wrong to be righted by the God's of good singing and good fortune.

As the author of the book, Black Women Need Love, Too, at a glance one would think this manual was written for the sole benefit of Black women, not so! It is basically for the savior of Black men via love for Black women. Isn't it quite obvious by now, that not loving hasn't rendered any real long lasting cultural benefits? Rap Crap artists are the biggest losers in the music industry-they lead in deaths, incarcerations, and lost fortunes.

It was always the Black woman that supported the Black male singer, but how many Black men appreciated it? So now, it has been taken away. When will the majority of Black men realize that to not love Black women, will only deliver more massive declines.

White women have the best PR because White men demand it and realize that if they don't love their women and represent them as valuable; big declines will be the result. You see, men are innately motivated to thrive for success when they want to be loved by a woman--take that away and chaos is the consequence. Berry Gordy, the founder of Motown, named his autobiography "To Be Loved" because that is what motivated him to succeed. At that time, he only dated Black women and Motown was filled with Black married couples--a correlation that supports this hypothesis.

The old divide and conquer methodology, used by the non-Black music executives who have hired too many uneducated weak-minded sell-out thug-able young Black male performers to do their dirty work, has succeeded once more. How else did despicable words like the "N" word get into Black music? Motown didn't use it, Casablanca Records didn't use it and both these companies that Black men had ownership and control of hired tremendous Black talent and made lots of money. My man is the son of music executive and part owner of Casablanca Records, Cecil Holmes, who also worked in the record business and was kicked out in the early 1990's with a group of others, because they were too nice and decent for the massive mental corruption that was on the horizon. The Rap Crap Treason Act then took full effect. Now, the Black male singer seems to be a relic of the past.

How many trick bags are we going to jump in?

Do right by Black women, and Black men will see their own lives massively improve, which is attached to the upward mobility of the Black race! Hopefully, what was lost will one day be found again!
Source: www.mediatraffic. de

"BARACK OBAMA THE POWER OF CHANGE" DVD

Available at Barnes & Noble Stores Nationwide & AMAZON.COM

The Campaign That Inspired A Nation is Now on DVD!

This is your inspirational piece of history!

| 28125|2009-03-08 08:10:43|Michael J Robinson|WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND ASHRA KWESI?|

Hotep Family, this is a message sent out earlier today from Dr. Ray Hagins himself about the conflagration between he and our elder African-Centered Scholar, Ashra Kwesi. Many of you have heard that there has been some tension between the 2 of them and this letter explains why.

I have a lot of respect for both of these Brothers and it sad that there is a problem between the 2 of them. Dr. Ray Hagins has finally arrived at the point where he has to clear the air and explain to everyone what is going on. Lets pray that things will get better.

WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND ASHRA KWESI?

An Open Letter By Dr. Ray Hagins To The Afrikan Community

Greetings Brother & Sisters!

For 9 years people have been asking me this question in many different ways. And, for 9 years I have tried my best to extinguish what I perceived as an attempt by many to exacerbate childish and inappropriate behavior on the part of someone who is supposed to be strengthening the Afrikan community. Thats right --- for 9 years I have not spoken out on this issue for basically two reasons: (1) Each time that I have been approached by someone it was within the context of hearsay. And, if there is one thing that I have learned (in 36 years of ministry) NOT to do, it is DO NOT GIVE ATTENTION TO HEARSAY. And, (2) I dont have time for foolishness. I am much too busy doing what I do to waste time trying to heal a situation when the people (or person) involved doesnt want healing.

However, two weeks ago I had the wonderful experience of fellowshipping with brothers and sisters in the Bahamas at the 2009 Afrikan Heritage Conference. I was one of the invited speakers of this glorious event. Ashra Kwesi was also one of the invited speakers. This was the first time in 9 years that Ashra and I were to be speakers at the same event!?!?!?

When I received the brochure about the event and saw Ashras picture on it, as one of the speakers, I thought either this is a conspiracy to get the two of us together or the Universe is at work saying that its time to address and dispose of whatever Ashra is dealing with. --- How wrong I was (at least about the latter).

So, my reason for taking the time to write this missive to the entire community (along with an open letter to Ashra) is to do what perhaps I should have done years ago, and that is provide the missing pieces of what has puzzled and damaged so many sincere, good-hearted brothers and sisters. This is not written based on hearsay about what Ashra said or did. I WAS THERE! I witnessed what happened. And it is time now for me to speak out on this asininity.

Before proceeding any further, I want to be sure that the members of the Afrikan community understand that my reason for addressing this issue is ONLY because I will no longer keep silent while young brothers and sisters are wounded to the point of discouragement and disillusionment because two people that they hold in high esteem appear to be enemies. And notice, I said, APPEAR to be enemies. For 9 years I have been going behind Ashra trying to mend the wounds that he has caused in brothers and sisters who completely lost their inspiration for Afrikan unity because of the seeds of discord sown by him in his fabrications about me and others around me. Enough is ENOUGHand it MUST stop.

So, please allow me (after 9 years) to place ALL the cards on the table and hopefully answer some unanswered questions and satisfy the longing of so many brothers and sisters within the Afrikan community to understand what exactly is the problem between Dr. Hagins and Ashra Kwesi.

In December of 1998, I had my dear friend and brother, and late warrior scholar, Dr. Ishakamusa Barashango come and speak at my church. Needless to say, this was a spiritually powerful event because I was in the process of growing a traditional Baptist church into an Afrikan-conscious congregation. I had only been there since February of that year. So, seeing their reception of Dr. Barashango was really something to celebrate. We were beginning to attract conscious brothers and sisters into our congregation.

About a month later, one of the brothers in our church, Brother Craig Johnson, gave me a video of Ashra Kwesi and suggested that maybe we could have him come and speak at the church. I told him that I would watch the video and let him know because I had to be very careful of who I allowed to come and speak to the congregation (within the context of my assignment of raising the consciousness of our people). It was several weeks before I had the opportunity to sit and watch Ashras video. However, as I watched it, I agreed with Craigs recommendation about Ashra coming to speak at the church.

A day or two later, I received a phone call from Dr. Barashango and he had Ashra on the phone with him and wanted to introduce him to me. After Dr. Barashango introduced us I told Ashra that I had just watched a video of him a couple of days ago. Dr. Barashango asked if I would allow Ashra to come and speak at the church. I immediately said, Brother, YES!

NOTE: I have a criteria that must be satisfied before I allow someone in my pulpit to speak to the congregation under my charge; that is: (1) I must hear them to see if I approve of their message; and/or (2) They must be recommended by someone whose opinion I respect in such matters. Well, both points of my criteria had been satisfied, so I had no reservation at all with allowing Ashra to come and speak at the church.

I scheduled Ashra to be the speaker for our 1999 Spring Conference. Thats rightthe sole speaker for the weekend. I had no problem with this because I knew that he was teaching the truth and my friend had vouched for him. Ashra, along with his wife, Merira, came to the church and did a splendid job and was well received by the congregation. I didnt schedule Ashra for that Sunday morning because I didnt perceive from his presentation that he was a Sunday morning speaker for a transitioning traditional Baptist church, so I gave the message that Sunday morning. Ashra and Merira were present, sitting right there on the front row, directly in front of me. After the message, as was my practice at the time, I asked, Is there anyone here who would like to become a member of this church? Ashra and Merira stood! The entire congregation burst into an applause of pure joy. We had come to love Ashra and Merira in the short time of a couple of days. We knew that they were messengers of truth, and were honored to have them join (what was then) the New Ephesus Missionary Baptist Church.

Even though I was honored to have this great teacher join our church, I was somewhat surprised that he would join a Baptist Church. I knew that I was trying to gradually move the congregation away from the errors of Christianity into Afrikan-consciousness, but we hadnt come that far yet. So, I grabbed a microphone and went to Ashra to welcome he and Merira into our congregation, but I had to ask him why he wanted to join our church. He replied, When I came in here and saw the ankh on the pulpit I knew that this is where our membership should be. Okay, I felt much better because there are only three ways that you can join a Baptist church: (1) By baptism (confessing Jesus Christ as your savior and being baptized in water to wash away your sins); (2) By letter of recommendation from another Baptist church; or (3) By Christian experience. You see, I was wondering which one of these Ashra was going to comply with?!?! But the answer that he gave was sufficient for me and the congregation as well.

After that, Ashra, Merira and I developed a wonderful relationship and friendship. I had them to speak on subsequent occasions and whenever they were in the area they would stop by their home church and the congregation was always glad to see them. I signed up for his 1999 Kemet Nu Tour to Egypt and had a wonderful time with them there. Everything was great between us. In 2000, I signed up for his Kemet Nu tour again and because he was a part of our congregation, and we had come to love and appreciate he and Merira for their work, a total of 12 of us from the church went along with them.

Our relationship and mutual respect for each others work caused Ashra to pull a surprise on me and have a ceremony raising me to the sublime degree of a Sa Ra. Brothers and sisters, let me tell you, that was one of the most sacred and meaningful events in my life. What was most meaningful to me was that my friend thought enough of me to perform this sacred ceremony at the beautiful and sacred holy place of our Ancestors, The Temple of Luxor in Egypt. He could have done this at the church, but he decided to honor me on the holy ground of our ancient past. You cannot possibly imagine how much that meant to me. Then, to top it off, my dear brother and friend, Dr. Barashango (who I miss dearly), was also honored at the same time along with me and raised to the sublime degree of a Sa Ra. There was also another Elder (whose name I cannot remember) who was also consecrated with us. In addition to that, some of the members of my congregation who were there participated in the ceremony. I often wondered how they kept the secret from me so well. I have been through quite a few degree ceremonies (both academic and fraternal) in my time, but none of them meant as much to me as that ceremony. Dr. Barashango and I frequently talked about that special time in our lives bestowed on us by our brother, Ashra Kwesi.

After returning home from such a wonderful trip, I made a video tape of my experience there in Egypt. I entitled the video Afrikan Evidence That Demands An Afrikan Verdict. As with all of my videos, I made it available to the public. Since I do have a national audience, people from all over began to order this video. I began to receive testimonies from hundreds of people about the video and how much they learned from the footage in it.

Then, one day while I was at the church, I received a call from Ashra. As always, it was good to hear from him because he and I would frequently call each other just to see how the other was doing. As usual, everything seemed fine. He said, Brother, I just called to check on you to see how you were doing. I told him that it was good to hear from him and that I was doing fine. Then, we hung up from a very short conversation (about a minute and a half). After I hung up the phone I told my secretary that was Ashra. Then, about 20 or 30 seconds later Ashra called back and said, Brother, I was in California and a sister told me that you disrespected my wife. I was completely shocked by this statement. We had just hung up 30 seconds ago and everything was fine! What happened? I asked him, Ashra, what are you talking about? What do you mean I disrespected your wife? Then he told me that he heard that I had made a video tape and that I disrespected his wife because I didnt mention her name in the video tape during the naming ceremony of Minister Alyce Herndon. I couldnt believe that this was coming out of Ashras mouth. As close as he, Merira and I were, how could he think that I would dare disrespect such a beautiful queen sister as Merira? But, I could tell that he was livid over an innocent oversight on my part. So, I apologized to him for forgetting to mention Meriras name and told him that I would correct my mistake by re-editing that part of the footage (which I did).

He then told me that he didnt appreciate my disrespecting his wife and that I had a problem with women. When he said this to me, my training kicked in and I immediately began to realize that there is a deeper seated issue here (especially when he connected disrespecting his wife with the comment of me having a problem with women). I said to him, Ashra, you know that I love you AND Merira. If I had a problem with Merira, I would not have allowed her to repeatedly speak in my church (especially in a traditional Baptist church where they frown upon women speaking publicly anyway). I asked him how he could say such a thing. We ended the conversation.

I looked at my secretary and we both were taken by this whole thing on Ashras part. What we were baffled by the most was how he had just called acting as though everything was alright, and then called right back with a completely changed demeanor.

Then, he called back again and proceeded to complain some more about the video tape that I had made and that he didnt appreciate it because I didnt have his permission to make the video tape. I told him that I didnt need his permission to make the video. He told me that it was his tour and that I needed his permission to make a video. I told him that it was his tour, but it was MY trip, that I paid for with MY money and used MY camera and MY film. Then I reminded him that he knew that I was going to make a video because we sat in Kennedy Airport before we departed for Egypt and I showed him my new camera and told him that I had intended to make a video when I returned. It was also at this same time that I offered the use of my video production facilities to help him with the quality and production of his videos.

Ashra carried on so much about my video that I told him that I would discontinue the distribution of the tape if it bothered him that much. Ashra, then had the audacity to say to me, Brother, you stick to teaching theology and let me do the teaching about Africa. Because this is my bread and butter that you are messing with. I just couldnt wrap my mind around Ashra thinking that he had the right to even say something like, You stick to teaching theology and let me teach about Africa. But he made it very clear what his motive was for saying that. My secretary and I were very disturbed by Ashras attitude and his asinine demand. We discontinued the conversation at that point and that was the last time we talked until a couple of weeks ago when I saw him in the Bahamas.

NOTE: At this point, I think that I should mention how I had received comments from so many brothers and sisters about Ashra and I being at the same event. Everyone (including me) was hoping that this would be a time and opportunity for us to reconcile whatever differences existed between us so that the body of Afrikan brothers and sisters who love the both of us could be healed from the damage caused by this division. Well, that is definitely NOT what happened!

When I saw Ashra, he was stepping out of the elevator and I was sitting there in the hotel lobby. He looked right me and didnt speak, so I said, Hey Ashra. He said, Hey (as he turned to walk away). Even though he was walking away from me, I said, How have you been? He said (with his back to me), Fine. And that was all we said to each other.

I couldnt believe that this person, who had been traveling all over the country talking about me, slandering my name, and attempting to assassinate my character for the last 9 years, would now see me and have nothing to say.

Even though the 2009 Heritage Conference in the Bahamas was an awesome and powerful time of fellowship for brothers and sisters, there was a thick cloud of dissention in the air. I later found out that Ashra told the hosts of this wonderful and glorious event that he was not going to speak if I was present. WHAT!?!?!? How do you say something like that to someone who has spent thousands of dollars to accommodate you? Who does this person think he is? If you have the least bit of integrity, you dont behave like that. The hosts had not done anything to Ashra! Why inconvenience them?

I literally watched the brothers and sisters there in the Bahamas --- who were joyful and celebrating a coming together of Afrikans from all backgrounds and walks of life --- I watched them go from a being joyful to almost becoming electively mute. Those who traveled with me said, Pastor, there is definitely something wrong herewe can feel it, and it has something to do with Ashra Kwesi. I told them that I felt it too.

The last night of the conference, we started almost 2 hours late because Ashra refused to speak if I was present. So, the sponsor of the conference asked that I would come to her home, because in this way, Ashra would not have to see me when he arrived at the venue.

When I arrived at her home, this sister grabbed my hand and said, Dear brother, Rev. Dr. Haginswhat is the problem between you and Ashra Kwesi? Until this point I could only suspect that Ashra was the cause of this dissention, but when she asked me, then I knew for certain. I told her everything that I wrote above. She nodded her head and said, It is so sad that the two giants for our people are divided. Then, she asked me to accompany her back to the venue and close out the conference after Ashra finished speaking.

When we returned to the venue Ashra was speaking, and doing a great job at disseminating information (as he always does). But, the atmosphere was all wrong. Information was being disseminated, but the powerful presence of God, our Ancestors and Afrikan unity was absent.

After a while people started to leave and I asked those who would to stay for the closing. You see, as a Chief Elder, pastor and spiritual leader, having the right kind of benediction is very important to me. I just could not allow these brothers and sisters to leave that 2009 African Heritage Conference with the spirit that they were sitting under. I HAD to break that thing (for those who know what I mean).

After Ashra finished disseminating information, I was presented to close the conference. As is the professional thing to do, I acknowledged Ashra and then I proceeded. I closed the conference asking God and the Ancestors to bring healing and unity among us. We ended with the Oath To The Ancestors that we recite in The Afrikan Village. Ashra didnt stayhe left immediately after he finished speaking.

What was most painful to me at that time were the looks of disappointment on the faces of the brothers and sisters who look up to Ashra as an Elder in this movement. So, I just had everyone to join hands and make contact as a symbol of unity as we recited the Oath To The Ancestors for our benediction. We ended as Afrikans in unityand it was beautiful. Everyone was hugging and greeting each other. All praises be to The Almighty and our Ancestors for getting us through that.

Now, as I close this open letter to the Afrikan community, as the National Chief Elder and Spiritual Leader of The Afrikan Villages, Afrikan Village Study Groups, and all affiliates and associations of the same, I am asking that you regard Ashra Kwesi as an enemy to Afrikan unity and empowerment for the following reasons:

Ashra Kwesi has knowingly and willfully perpetrated false and injurious statements against another brother of the community, namely Dr.

Ray Hagins;

Ashra Kwesi has consistently and intentionally tried to damage the character and reputation of another without just cause to foster his own personal gain.

Ashra Kwesi has refused the request for unity and/or counsel by Elders within the Afrikan community and has shown no desire for reconciliation.

Ashra Kwesi has refused to cease and desist from a behavior that is causing emotional harm to many members within the Afrikan community.

Brothers and Sisters, it saddens me to have to send this open letter, I apologize to the entire Afrikan community for not addressing this issue much sooner. As I previously stated, I do not like acting on the words of others. But, please be sure that what I saw manifested in the character of Ashra Kwesi is not what we would (or should) see in one who is concerned about unity in the communitynot at all!

Therefore, I submit to you that as long as we continue to support Ashra by asking him to lecture at our gatherings, paying honorariums, buying his productions and participating in his tours that he will see no need to change from his destructive behavior or mend his ways. I also suggest that Ashra Kwesi make an apology to the Afrikan community for his behavior and if he refuses to do so, that he be reckoned as an adversary to our unity.

Brothers and Sisters, I do not have the words to explain how stressful it is addressing this kind of foolishness. Therefore, please understand that I have taken much time and care compiling this in the way that I best deemed fit. All that I have to say about this matter, I have said it in this missive and will not waste any more time with it. I pray that all who reads this will understand the intent of my heart in submitting it.

Hotep --- for the healing of the community,

Dr. Ray Hagins

AN OPEN LETTER TO ASHRA KWESI FROM DR. RAY HAGINS

Hotep Ashra,

When you became a member of our church one of the things that you agreed to was that part of our covenant which states We further engage to watch over and protect one another; to pray daily for the leaders and members of our body; to aid each other in sickness and distress; to cultivate sincere empathy and courtesy in speech; to be slow to take offense, but always ready for reconciliation; and to be mindful of the teachings in our daily living and to appropriate them without delay.

What do I say to you, Ashra? I had hoped so much that we would get to talk while in the Bahamas.

You see, I have concluded that something happened to you that causes you to hold on to stuff indefinitely. I am so sorry that you are in so much pain. I dont know who hurt you, Ashra, but it wasnt me! Someone didand it is quite evident that you are still carrying the anger from whatever happened. You need to deal with that because it is going to destroy you if you dont.

I have watched how you lash out at people who violate what YOU think should be. You did it when we were in Egypt to Barashango over, and over, and over again. I am sure you remember my coming to you in behalf of the rest of the group and asking you to let it go, all because Shaka corrected you in front of the group. You were ruining everyone elses trip with your constant retaliation against our brother.

Then, there was the sister who passed out Jesus fans at dinner one evening. Man, you literally leaped over chairs to get at her as though she violated and did bodily harm to a loved one. I admit that her behavior was inappropriate and needed to be addressed, but did it require such a drastic reaction (not response) from you?

There is a passage of scripture that says, As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. Transliterated, that means that a person thinks the way they do because thats the way they are. Ashra, you are you, and I know that there is no hope of unity between you and I because its just not in youthats all there is to it! And thats fine with me, but its not fine when brothers and sisters (who have the highest respect for the both of us) become disillusioned by your behavior and feel that this whole thing of Afrikan consciousness and unity is a lie and not worth fighting for. I say this to you because I have talked to quite a few who have heard you say damaging things about me. A sister called my office from Chicago in tears because she attended a lecture you did there and you began to slander me. Is that what a historian, teacher, griot Elder, (or any other title that people have assigned to you) does?

There is an Afrikan proverb that says: When elephants fight, it is the grass that suffers. Well Ashra, the grass (in this case) are the people. Havent you harmed enough grass? Or dont you care?

Every now and then, some of the people who love the ground you walk on attend a lecture that I am giving. As soon as they approach me, I can discern their spirit. And it never fails, they ask me, So what do you think about Ashra Kwesi? And you know what, I have NEVER spoken against you. I have ALWAYS answered that question by saying, Ashra is one of our best lecturers and historians. And that is trueyou are that.

The only problem here is, you dont need to be a good-hearted person to be a lecturer or a historian. All you have to have is the intellectual data and the skill to communicate it to your audience. And you certainly have both. You do an awesome job at that. But, as you heard me say (as you were rushing to leave while I was up speaking in the Bahamas) People dont care how much you know, until they know how much you care. Thats what is missing in you Ashra.

Ashra, I know that you know what Ma`at is (at least from an intellectual perspective). But are you doing it? I havent seen ma`at in your deportment since we first met. I have seen isfet though, especially in how you interact with others.

Do you remember the night we were at Applebees and a young, zealous brother asked you a question about extraterrestrials building the pyramids. You had no compassion for this young brothers emotions at all. You humiliated him right in front of everyone. This young brother considered you as one of his teachers. I could see that his spirit was crushed. But that didnt matter to you.

I dont know, Ashra, maybe thats just how you are. And as I said, thats fine with me. You dont add to or take anything away from me, but the people deserve better.

So, since you seemly cannot help yourself with regard to controlling your tongue and emotions when it comes to me, I will have to help you. Therefore, be advised that I am (for the first time) formally requesting that you cease and desist making any remarks about me that may be considered slanderous and/or injurious to my character and reputation. Any such further behavior on your part will be met with prosecution to the fullest extent of the law.

It is so sad that I have to do this, but evidently you cannot stop on your own accord. I hope, therefore, that this letter will empower you to comply with my request. Or you will leave me no choice but to enforce it. And, Ashra, please do not doubt my resolve.

Sincerely,

Dr. Ray Hagins

Thanks,

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

"Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior."
| 28126|2009-03-08 08:10:57|odhiambo okecth|Mutula Kilonzo|

Mutula Kilonzo must be sick 6th March 2009

Hon Mutula was the other day quoted as saying that ODM can take a walk, and they, PNU, can just appoint any other person to the office of Prime Minister, and life moves on. Yesterday, after Raila had said that he does not know whom Mutua Alfred talks for, Mutula was on Raila again.

Just like Raila ignored Hon Johnston Muthama when Muthama was sent to antagonize him at all the times, The Right Hon Raila has chosen to give Mutula the contempt card. He will remain as vacuous as Muthama was before him. Let the person who has sent them know this. And Raila must not respond to them.

I bet that as a partner in this government, if Mutua was talking on behalf of Raila as well, Raila would know. Not Mutula. Anyway, we will take this on another day.

At the same time, Hon Wetangula Moses said that before ODM came on board, there was a government in place, so there will still be a government in place even if they packed and left.

Then the coward of them all, Hon Noah Wekesa was again sent to go and read another press statement. And he read the same without looking at the cameras even once. As usual, he was being used.

My take is not with Wekesa. He does not know many things. My take is with the two lawyers who sat at Serena as part of the negotiation team. On the PNU said with them was Hon Martha Karua. If they can get it all that wrong, then I really pity them.

After Hon Kibaki stole the elections, Kenya erupted like never before. This made the international community come on board to help create peace. Many Kenyans lost their lives. Many more were displaced.

It took great efforts to create peace. And now, it seems like the two people that PNU sent to the negotiating table do not know why they went to the table. It looks like they were journeymen in the process. What comes from their mouths makes me think so.

Hon Mutula had been a KANU apologist for eternity. Kenyans did not trust him at all. I remember once when Mutuma Mathiu of the Nation Media told me off when I talked about Mutula during the Referendum campaign. I did support Mutula then. But with the benefit of hindsight, I can now see clearly what Mutuma meant. And with regrets I think he was right. Mutula Kilonzo is just Mutula Kilonzo. The one that supported President Moi do all sorts of things for all those years. Mutula Kilonzo is just like Daniel.

This is one guy who is wallowing in his own miasma of deceit. He made his money during the KANU dictatorship and jumped ship conveniently to join the forces of liberation without believing in the cause. He seems not to know that Kibaki and Kalonzo combined lost to ODM. Kibaki has 43 MPs, while Kalonzo has 16 MPs. Combined, PNU and ODM-K have 59 MPs. ODM on its own has 99 MPs.

When you add KANU and like minded MPs to what Kibaki and Kalonzo have, it comes to 104. ODM and its associates have 106 elected MPs. When you add nominated MPs, the Kibaki alliance has 110 MPs while ODM alliance has 112 MPs.

These are facts well known to both Mutula and Wetangula, and both of them are lawyers. I pity them.

At Serena, they came up with the Draft that came to be known as the National Accord. In the Draft, it is well stated that the Prime Minister will be the leader of the largest number of MPs in Parliament. It is a known fact that ODM is the single largest party in Parliament. ODM has 99 elected MPs. PNU has 43. KANU has, I think 19. ODM-K, [from where Mutula gloats] has 16. The rest have one or two MPs.

Surely, can Mutula pretend not to know these simple things? Even if you want to kiss ass, I bet you need to do it honourably. Did you here Mutula give a budget of 33T for Nairobi Metropolitan? Does he know what our economy is worth? This is simple madness.

You cannot sack Raila. You cannot pick the leader of ODM-K, or Chama cha Mapinduzi to be the Prime Minister of Kenya. It must be the person who leads the largest party in Parliament, and that person is Raila, like it or not. That is what the Accord that Mutula and Wetangula signed. And they must be knowing it. So what makes them shoot from the hip?

Kenya is not yet out of the woods. We are interacting with many Kenyans, Kenyans from all walks of life, and the best we can do is to create an enabling environment for national healing and reconciliation. You cannot promote national healing and reconciliation by shooting from the hips the way Mutula and Wetangula are doing.

The two gentlemen lawyers are doing PNU a big disservice by talking the way they are. Even if we are to show their masters that they deserve the positions they have been given, they must take into account the intelligence of Kenyans. Kenyans want to live in peace with each other, not more conflict.

This kind of talk endangers the life of that Luo who lives in Nyeri. It endangers the life of that Kikuyu who lives in Kabartonjo. It makes life difficult for Kenyans who would like to live in eternal peace as brothers and sisters. These people must be stopped. They are spoiling for President Kibaki who has the moral obligation to go down in history as the person who held Kenya together when Kenya was in flames.

Kenya will be a lot better without the Kilonzos and Wetangulas of this world. Kibaki needs to leave a legacy that we can talk about with confidence into the future. But with such rabid dogs, all can be easily lost.

If I were President Kibaki, I would immediately sack Mutula and Wetangula for the sake of Kenya. Instead of being honest counselors to the President, they have chosen to be auctioneers.

As for Wekesa, his masters know when to unleash him. Just like Muthama, Mutula and Wetangula, they stand for nothing.

Odhiambo T Oketch,

Komarock Nairobi.

| 28127|2009-03-08 08:11:07|Michael J Robinson|Join Dr. Hagins on Sunday Night at 8:00 p.m. (7:00 p.m. Central) on |

Dr. Hagins sent this out earlier today with the topic for Sunday Night so I wanted to make sure I sent it out to everyone since out sent out the generic message already.

Join Dr. Hagins on Sunday Night at 8:00 p.m. (7:00 p.m. Central) as he discusses

"HOW DO WE SAVE OUR BLACK BUSINESSES & INSTITUTIONS?"

Dr. Hagins' guest will be Cleaster Mims, President & CEO of Cleaster Mims College & Preparatory School.

Visit her web site at: http://www.cleastermimsprep.org

This institution is in peril from lack of support.

Join Dr. Hagins for this much needed topic.

Also, there will be discussion about the upcoming opening of The Afrikan Village at Cleveland, OH Saturday, March 14 at 1:00 p.m.

Dr. Ray Hagins is a frequent guest on the Michael Baisden: Love, Lust and Lies Radio program heard across the country. He is the Chief Elder of the Afrikan Village and Cultural Centerin St. Louis, Missouri. He is also a clinician, therapist, musician,and a pilot.

On Sunday evenings Pastor Hagins addresses issues and answers questions that many people have been needing answers to for years! This is a national, "live" call-in talk format and has been a pivotal instrument in the freeing of the minds of our people. This show is from an African-Centered point of view and is desperately needed in our community to wake up the minds of our people.

So, join us at www.wblr.com - 8:00 p.m. (7:00 p.m. Central) Sunday

The toll-free number top call in is: 1-877-454-1900

He has many lectures dealing with African History and Culture including:

The Verdict Is In: Afrikan Evidence That Demands An Afrikan Verdict

A Woman on A Mission (About the Story if Auset (Isis) and Osiris (Ausar))

The Council of Nicaea 325 A.D.

Egypt (Kemet): The Source of the Bible

AFRICOM: A Wolf in Sheeps clothing

Excerpts of many of his lectures can be viewed at www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914 .

The balancing of the land lies in Maat: Truth, Justice and Righteousness. Do Maat and live!

Thanks,

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

"Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior."
| 28128|2009-03-08 15:07:54|Mahari Mengistu|SAMBO - THE GOD OF ASIA|
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R2Ae2VgzmQE
HTP,
Mahari
| 28129|2009-03-08 15:46:00|Mahari Mengistu|Re: WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND ASHRA KWESI?|
Whoa!
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Michael J Robinson" wrote:
>
> Hotep Family, this is a message sent out earlier today from Dr. Ray Hagins > himself about the conflagration between he and our elder African-Centered > Scholar, Ashra Kwesi. Many of you have heard that there has been some > tension between the 2 of them and this letter explains why.
>
>
>
> I have a lot of respect for both of these Brothers and it sad that there is > a problem between the 2 of them. Dr. Ray Hagins has finally arrived at the > point where he has to clear the air and explain to everyone what is going > on. Let's pray that things will get better.

>
>
>
>
>
> WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND ASHRA KWESI?
>
>
>
> An Open Letter By Dr. Ray Hagins To The Afrikan Community
>
>
>
> Greetings Brother & Sisters!
>
>
>
> For 9 years people have been asking me this question in many different ways.
> And, for 9 years I have tried my best to extinguish what I perceived as an > attempt by many to exacerbate childish and inappropriate behavior on the > part of someone who is supposed to be strengthening the Afrikan community.
> That's right --- for 9 years I have not spoken out on this issue for > basically two reasons: (1) Each time that I have been approached by someone > it was within the context of hearsay. And, if there is one thing that I have > learned (in 36 years of ministry) NOT to do, it is DO NOT GIVE ATTENTION TO > HEARSAY. And, (2) I don't have time for foolishness. I am much too busy > doing what I do to waste time trying to heal a situation when the people (or > person) involved doesn't want healing.
>
>
>
> However, two weeks ago I had the wonderful experience of fellowshipping with > brothers and sisters in the Bahamas at the 2009 Afrikan Heritage Conference.
> I was one of the invited speakers of this glorious event. Ashra Kwesi was > also one of the invited speakers. This was the first time in 9 years that > Ashra and I were to be speakers at the same event!?!?!?
>
>
>
> When I received the brochure about the event and saw Ashra's picture on it, > as one of the speakers, I thought either this is a conspiracy to get the two > of us together or the Universe is at work saying that it's time to address > and dispose of whatever Ashra is dealing with. --- How wrong I was (at least > about the latter).

>
>
>
> So, my reason for taking the time to write this missive to the entire > community (along with an open letter to Ashra) is to do what perhaps I > should have done years ago, and that is provide the missing pieces of what > has puzzled and damaged so many sincere, good-hearted brothers and sisters.
> This is not written based on hearsay about what Ashra said or did. I WAS > THERE! I witnessed what happened. And it is time now for me to speak out on > this asininity.
>
>
>
> Before proceeding any further, I want to be sure that the members of the > Afrikan community understand that my reason for addressing this issue is > ONLY because I will no longer keep silent while young brothers and sisters > are wounded to the point of discouragement and disillusionment because two > people that they hold in high esteem appear to be enemies. And notice, I > said, APPEAR to be enemies. For 9 years I have been going behind Ashra > trying to mend the wounds that he has caused in brothers and sisters who > completely lost their inspiration for Afrikan unity because of the seeds of > discord sown by him in his fabrications about me and others around me.
> Enough is ENOUGH.and it MUST stop.
>
>
>
> So, please allow me (after 9 years) to place ALL the cards on the table and > hopefully answer some unanswered questions and satisfy the longing of so > many brothers and sisters within the Afrikan community to understand what > exactly is the problem between Dr. Hagins and Ashra Kwesi.
>
>
>
> In December of 1998, I had my dear friend and brother, and late warrior > scholar, Dr. Ishakamusa Barashango come and speak at my church. Needless to > say, this was a spiritually powerful event because I was in the process of > growing a traditional Baptist church into an Afrikan-conscious congregation.
> I had only been there since February of that year. So, seeing their > reception of Dr. Barashango was really something to celebrate. We were > beginning to attract "conscious" brothers and sisters into our congregation.
>
>
>
> About a month later, one of the brothers in our church, Brother Craig > Johnson, gave me a video of Ashra Kwesi and suggested that maybe we could > have him come and speak at the church. I told him that I would watch the > video and let him know because I had to be very careful of who I allowed to > come and speak to the congregation (within the context of my assignment of > raising the consciousness of our people). It was several weeks before I had > the opportunity to sit and watch Ashra's video. However, as I watched it, I > agreed with Craig's recommendation about Ashra coming to speak at the > church.

>
>
>
> A day or two later, I received a phone call from Dr. Barashango and he had > Ashra on the phone with him and wanted to introduce him to me. After Dr.
> Barashango introduced us I told Ashra that I had just watched a video of him > a couple of days ago. Dr. Barashango asked if I would allow Ashra to come > and speak at the church. I immediately said, "Brother, YES!"
>
>
>
> NOTE: I have a criteria that must be satisfied before I allow someone in my > pulpit to speak to the congregation under my charge; that is: (1) I must > hear them to see if I approve of their message; and/or (2) They must be > recommended by someone whose opinion I respect in such matters. Well, both > points of my criteria had been satisfied, so I had no reservation at all > with allowing Ashra to come and speak at the church.
>
>
>
> I scheduled Ashra to be the speaker for our 1999 Spring Conference. That's > right.the sole speaker for the weekend. I had no problem with this because I > knew that he was teaching the truth and my friend had vouched for him.
> Ashra, along with his wife, Merira, came to the church and did a splendid > job and was well received by the congregation. I didn't schedule Ashra for > that Sunday morning because I didn't perceive from his presentation that he > was a "Sunday morning speaker" for a transitioning "traditional Baptist > church," so I gave the message that Sunday morning. Ashra and Merira were > present, sitting right there on the front row, directly in front of me.
> After the message, as was my practice at the time, I asked, "Is there anyone > here who would like to become a member of this church?" Ashra and Merira > stood! The entire congregation burst into an applause of pure joy. We had > come to love Ashra and Merira in the short time of a couple of days. We knew > that they were messengers of truth, and were honored to have them join (what > was then) the "New Ephesus Missionary Baptist Church."
>
>
>
> Even though I was honored to have this great teacher join our church, I was > somewhat surprised that he would join a "Baptist Church." I knew that I was > trying to gradually move the congregation away from the errors of > Christianity into Afrikan-consciousness, but we hadn't come that far yet.

> So, I grabbed a microphone and went to Ashra to welcome he and Merira into > our congregation, but I had to ask him why he wanted to join our church. He > replied, "When I came in here and saw the ankh on the pulpit I knew that > this is where our membership should be." Okay, I felt much better because > there are only three ways that you can join a "Baptist" church: (1) By > baptism (confessing Jesus Christ as your savior and being baptized in water > to wash away your sins); (2) By letter of recommendation from another > Baptist church; or (3) By "Christian experience." You see, I was wondering > which one of these Ashra was going to comply with?!?! But the answer that he > gave was sufficient for me and the congregation as well.
>
>
>
> After that, Ashra, Merira and I developed a wonderful relationship and > friendship. I had them to speak on subsequent occasions and whenever they > were in the area they would stop by their "home church" and the congregation > was always glad to see them. I signed up for his 1999 Kemet Nu Tour to Egypt > and had a wonderful time with them there. Everything was great between us.
> In 2000, I signed up for his Kemet Nu tour again and because he was a part > of our congregation, and we had come to love and appreciate he and Merira > for their work, a total of 12 of us from the church went along with them.
>
>
>
> Our relationship and mutual respect for each other's work caused Ashra to > pull a surprise on me and have a ceremony raising me to the sublime degree > of a "Sa Ra." Brothers and sisters, let me tell you, that was one of the > most sacred and meaningful events in my life. What was most meaningful to me > was that my "friend" thought enough of me to perform this sacred ceremony at > the beautiful and sacred holy place of our Ancestors, The Temple of Luxor in > Egypt. He could have done this at the church, but he decided to honor me on > the "holy ground" of our ancient past. You cannot possibly imagine how much > that meant to me. Then, to top it off, my dear brother and friend, Dr.
> Barashango (who I miss dearly), was also honored at the same time along with > me and raised to the sublime degree of a "Sa Ra." There was also another > Elder (whose name I cannot remember) who was also consecrated with us. In > addition to that, some of the members of my congregation who were there > participated in the ceremony. I often wondered how they kept the secret from > me so well. I have been through quite a few degree ceremonies (both > academic and fraternal) in my time, but none of them meant as much to me as > that ceremony. Dr. Barashango and I frequently talked about that special > time in our lives bestowed on us by our "brother," Ashra Kwesi.
>

>
>
> After returning home from such a wonderful trip, I made a video tape of my > experience there in Egypt. I entitled the video "Afrikan Evidence That > Demands An Afrikan Verdict." As with all of my videos, I made it available > to the public. Since I do have a national audience, people from all over > began to order this video. I began to receive testimonies from hundreds of > people about the video and how much they learned from the footage in it.
>
>
>
> Then, one day while I was at the church, I received a call from Ashra. As > always, it was good to hear from him because he and I would frequently call > each other just to see how the other was doing. As usual, everything seemed > fine. He said, "Brother, I just called to check on you to see how you were > doing." I told him that it was good to hear from him and that I was doing > fine. Then, we hung up from a very short conversation (about a minute and a > half). After I hung up the phone I told my secretary that was Ashra. Then, > about 20 or 30 seconds later Ashra called back and said, "Brother, I was in > California and a sister told me that you disrespected my wife." I was > completely shocked by this statement. We had just hung up 30 seconds ago and > everything was fine! What happened? I asked him, "Ashra, what are you > talking about? What do you mean I disrespected your wife?" Then he told me > that he heard that I had made a video tape and that I disrespected his wife > because I didn't mention her name in the video tape during the naming > ceremony of Minister Alyce Herndon. I couldn't believe that this was coming > out of Ashra's mouth. As close as he, Merira and I were, how could he think > that I would dare disrespect such a beautiful queen sister as Merira? But, I > could tell that he was livid over an innocent oversight on my part. So, I > apologized to him for forgetting to mention Merira's name and told him that > I would correct my mistake by re-editing that part of the footage (which I > did).
>
>
>
> He then told me that he didn't appreciate my disrespecting his wife and that > I had a problem with women. When he said this to me, my training kicked in > and I immediately began to realize that there is a deeper seated issue here > (especially when he connected disrespecting his wife with the comment of me > having a problem with women). I said to him, "Ashra, you know that I love > you AND Merira. If I had a problem with Merira, I would not have allowed her > to repeatedly speak in my church (especially in a traditional Baptist church > where they frown upon women speaking publicly anyway)." I asked him how he > could say such a thing. We ended the conversation.
>
>

>
> I looked at my secretary and we both were taken by this whole thing on > Ashra's part. What we were baffled by the most was how he had just called > acting as though everything was alright, and then called right back with a > completely changed demeanor.
>
>
>
> Then, he called back again and proceeded to complain some more about the > video tape that I had made and that he didn't appreciate it because I didn't > have his permission to make the video tape. I told him that I didn't need > his permission to make the video. He told me that it was his tour and that I > needed his permission to make a video. I told him that it was his tour, but > it was MY trip, that I paid for with MY money and used MY camera and MY > film. Then I reminded him that he knew that I was going to make a video > because we sat in Kennedy Airport before we departed for Egypt and I showed > him my new camera and told him that I had intended to make a video when I > returned. It was also at this same time that I offered the use of my video > production facilities to help him with the quality and production of his > videos.
>
> Ashra carried on so much about my video that I told him that I would > discontinue the distribution of the tape if it bothered him that much.
> Ashra, then had the audacity to say to me, "Brother, you stick to teaching > theology and let me do the teaching about Africa. Because this is my bread > and butter that you are messing with." I just couldn't wrap my mind around > Ashra thinking that he had the right to even say something like, "You stick > to teaching theology and let me teach about Africa." But he made it very > clear what his motive was for saying that. My secretary and I were very > disturbed by Ashra's attitude and his asinine demand. We discontinued the > conversation at that point and that was the last time we talked until a > couple of weeks ago when I saw him in the Bahamas.
>
>
>
> NOTE: At this point, I think that I should mention how I had received > comments from so many brothers and sisters about Ashra and I being at the > same event. Everyone (including me) was hoping that this would be a time and > opportunity for us to reconcile whatever differences existed between us so > that the body of Afrikan brothers and sisters who love the both of us could > be healed from the damage caused by this division. We'll, that is definitely > NOT what happened!
>
>
>
> When I saw Ashra, he was stepping out of the elevator and I was sitting > there in the hotel lobby. He looked right me and didn't speak, so I said,

> "Hey Ashra." He said, "Hey" (as he turned to walk away). Even though he was > walking away from me, I said, "How have you been?" He said (with his back to > me), "Fine." And that was all we said to each other.
>
>
>
> I couldn't believe that this person, who had been traveling all over the > country talking about me, slandering my name, and attempting to assassinate > my character for the last 9 years, would now see me and have nothing to say.
>
>
>
> Even though the 2009 Heritage Conference in the Bahamas was an awesome and > powerful time of fellowship for brothers and sisters, there was a thick > cloud of dissention in the air. I later found out that Ashra told the hosts > of this wonderful and glorious event that he was not going to speak if I was > present. WHAT!?!?!? How do you say something like that to someone who has > spent thousands of dollars to accommodate you? Who does this person think he > is? If you have the least bit of integrity, you don't behave like that. The > hosts had not done anything to Ashra! Why inconvenience them?
>
>
>
> I literally watched the brothers and sisters there in the Bahamas --- who > were joyful and celebrating a coming together of Afrikans from all > backgrounds and walks of life --- I watched them go from a being joyful to > almost becoming electively mute. Those who traveled with me said, "Pastor, > there is definitely something wrong here.we can feel it, and it has > something to do with Ashra Kwesi." I told them that I felt it too.
>
>
>
> The last night of the conference, we started almost 2 hours late because > Ashra refused to speak if I was present. So, the sponsor of the conference > asked that I would come to her home, because in this way, Ashra would not > have to see me when he arrived at the venue.
>
>
>
> When I arrived at her home, this sister grabbed my hand and said, "Dear > brother, Rev. Dr. Hagins.what is the problem between you and Ashra Kwesi?"
> Until this point I could only suspect that Ashra was the cause of this > dissention, but when she asked me, then I knew for certain. I told her > everything that I wrote above. She nodded her head and said, "It is so sad > that the two giants for our people are divided." Then, she asked me to > accompany her back to the venue and close out the conference after Ashra > finished speaking.

>
>
>
> When we returned to the venue Ashra was speaking, and doing a great job at > disseminating information (as he always does). But, the atmosphere was all > wrong. Information was being disseminated, but the powerful presence of God, > our Ancestors and Afrikan unity was absent.
>
>
>
> After a while people started to leave and I asked those who would to stay > for the closing. You see, as a Chief Elder, pastor and spiritual leader, > having the "right kind" of benediction is very important to me. I just could > not allow these brothers and sisters to leave that 2009 African Heritage > Conference with the "spirit" that they were sitting under. I HAD to break > that thing (for those who know what I mean).
>
>
>
> After Ashra finished disseminating information, I was presented to close the > conference. As is the professional thing to do, I acknowledged Ashra and > then I proceeded. I closed the conference asking God and the Ancestors to > bring healing and unity among us. We ended with the Oath To The Ancestors > that we recite in The Afrikan Village. Ashra didn't stay.he left immediately > after he finished speaking.
>
>
>
> What was most painful to me at that time were the looks of disappointment on > the faces of the brothers and sisters who look up to Ashra as an "Elder" in > this movement. So, I just had everyone to join hands and make contact as a > symbol of unity as we recited the Oath To The Ancestors for our benediction.
> We ended as Afrikans in unity.and it was beautiful. Everyone was hugging and > greeting each other. All praises be to The Almighty and our Ancestors for > getting us through that.
>
>
>
> Now, as I close this open letter to the Afrikan community, as the National > Chief Elder and Spiritual Leader of The Afrikan Villages, Afrikan Village > Study Groups, and all affiliates and associations of the same, I am asking > that you regard Ashra Kwesi as an enemy to Afrikan unity and empowerment for > the following reasons:
>

>
>
> Ashra Kwesi has knowingly and willfully perpetrated false and injurious > statements against another brother of the community, namely Dr.
>
> Ray Hagins;
>
>
>
> Ashra Kwesi has consistently and intentionally tried to damage the character > and reputation of another without just cause to foster his own
>
> personal gain.
>
>
>
> Ashra Kwesi has refused the request for unity and/or counsel by Elders > within the Afrikan community and has shown no desire for
>
> reconciliation.
>
>
>
> Ashra Kwesi has refused to cease and desist from a behavior that is causing > emotional harm to many members within the Afrikan
>
> community.
>
>
>
> Brothers and Sisters, it saddens me to have to send this open letter, I > apologize to the entire Afrikan community for not addressing this issue much > sooner. As I previously stated, I do not like acting on the words of others.
> But, please be sure that what I saw manifested in the character of Ashra > Kwesi is not what we would (or should) see in one who is concerned about > unity in the community.not at all!
>
>
>
> Therefore, I submit to you that as long as we continue to support Ashra by > asking him to lecture at our gatherings, paying honorariums, buying his > productions and participating in his tours that he will see no need to > change from his destructive behavior or mend his ways. I also suggest that > Ashra Kwesi make an apology to the Afrikan community for his behavior and if > he refuses to do so, that he be reckoned as an adversary to our unity.
>

>
>
> Brothers and Sisters, I do not have the words to explain how stressful it is > addressing this kind of foolishness. Therefore, please understand that I > have taken much time and care compiling this in the way that I best deemed > fit. All that I have to say about this matter, I have said it in this > missive and will not waste any more time with it. I pray that all who reads > this will understand the intent of my heart in submitting it.
>
>
>
> Hotep --- for the healing of the community,
>
> Dr. Ray Hagins
>
>
>
> AN OPEN LETTER TO ASHRA KWESI FROM DR. RAY HAGINS
>
>
>
> Hotep Ashra,
>
>
>
> When you became a member of our church one of the things that you agreed to > was that part of our covenant which states. "We further engage to watch over > and protect one another; to pray daily for the leaders and members of our > body; to aid each other in sickness and distress; to cultivate sincere > empathy and courtesy in speech; to be slow to take offense, but always ready > for reconciliation; and to be mindful of the teachings in our daily living > and to appropriate them without delay."
>
>
>
> What do I say to you, Ashra? I had hoped so much that we would get to talk > while in the Bahamas.
>
>
>
> You see, I have concluded that something happened to you that causes you to > hold on to "stuff" indefinitely. I am so sorry that you are in so much pain.
> I don't know who hurt you, Ashra, but it wasn't me! Someone did.and it is > quite evident that you are still carrying the anger from whatever happened.
> You need to deal with that because it is going to destroy you if you don't.
>

>
>
> I have watched how you lash out at people who violate what YOU think should > be. You did it when we were in Egypt to Barashango over, and over, and over > again. I am sure you remember my coming to you in behalf of the rest of the > group and asking you to "let it go," all because Shaka corrected you in > front of the group. You were ruining everyone else's trip with your constant > retaliation against our brother.
>
>
>
> Then, there was the sister who passed out "Jesus" fans at dinner one > evening. Man, you literally leaped over chairs to get at her as though she > violated and did bodily harm to a loved one. I admit that her behavior was > inappropriate and needed to be addressed, but did it require such a drastic > reaction (not response) from you?
>
>
>
> There is a passage of scripture that says, "As a man thinketh in his heart, > so is he." Transliterated, that means that "a person thinks the way they do > because that's the way they are." Ashra, you are you, and I know that there > is no hope of unity between you and I because it's just not in you.that's > all there is to it! And that's fine with me, but it's not fine when brothers > and sisters (who have the highest respect for the both of us) become > disillusioned by your behavior and feel that this whole thing of Afrikan > consciousness and unity is a lie and not worth fighting for. I say this to > you because I have talked to quite a few who have heard you say damaging > things about me. A sister called my office from Chicago in tears because she > attended a lecture you did there and you began to slander me. Is that what a > historian, teacher, griot Elder, (or any other title that people have > assigned to you) does?
>
>
>
> There is an Afrikan proverb that says: "When elephants fight, it is the > grass that suffers." Well Ashra, the grass (in this case) are the people.
> Haven't you harmed enough grass?" Or don't you care?
>
>
>
> Every now and then, some of the people who love the ground you walk on > attend a lecture that I am giving. As soon as they approach me, I can > discern their spirit. And it never fails, they ask me, "So what do you think > about Ashra Kwesi?" And you know what, I have NEVER spoken against you. I > have ALWAYS answered that question by saying, "Ashra is one of our best > lecturers and historians." And that is true.you are that.

>
>
>
> The only problem here is, you don't need to be a good-hearted person to be a > "lecturer" or a "historian." All you have to have is the intellectual data > and the skill to communicate it to your audience. And you certainly have > both. You do an awesome job at that. But, as you heard me say (as you were > rushing to leave while I was up speaking in the Bahamas). "People don't care > how much you know, until they know how much you care." That's what is > missing in you Ashra.
>
>
>
> Ashra, I know that you know what Ma`at is (at least from an intellectual > perspective). But are you doing it? I haven't seen ma`at in your deportment > since we first met. I have seen isfet though, especially in how you interact > with others.
>
>
>
> Do you remember the night we were at Applebees and a young, zealous brother > asked you a question about extraterrestrials building the pyramids. You had > no compassion for this young brother's emotions at all. You humiliated him > right in front of everyone. This young brother considered you as one of his > teachers. I could see that his spirit was crushed. But that didn't matter to > you.
>
>
>
> I don't know, Ashra, maybe that's just how you are. And as I said, that's > fine with me. You don't add to or take anything away from me, but the people > deserve better.
>
>
>
> So, since you seemly cannot help yourself with regard to controlling your > tongue and emotions when it comes to me, I will have to help you. Therefore, > be advised that I am (for the first time) formally requesting that you cease > and desist making any remarks about me that may be considered slanderous > and/or injurious to my character and reputation. Any such further behavior > on your part will be met with prosecution to the fullest extent of the law.
>
>
>
> It is so sad that I have to do this, but evidently you cannot stop on your > own accord. I hope, therefore, that this letter will empower you to comply > with my request. Or you will leave me no choice but to enforce it. And, > Ashra, please do not doubt my resolve.

>
>
>
> Sincerely,
>
> Dr. Ray Hagins
>
>
>
> Thanks,
>
> Bro. Michael J. Robinson
>
> <http://www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914> www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914
>
> "Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior."
>
| 28130|2009-03-09 08:14:15|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Fw: Fwd: Fw: [Ta_Seti] WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND AS|

This is a message from a friend who wanted me to pass this on -

Hotep,
Thanks for sharing. I've not heard of the beef between these two brothers but since 2000 I haven't been in the inner circles, I've been working the mortgage business. What I will say is that my love, respect, understanding and loyalty is with My Brother and Master Teacher Ashra Kwesi. I say this to make it clear that I've heard, worked with, know and known many many highly respected Blacks that feel the same way I do. I want to make it clear that I'm bias! But with that being said, I'm also very open minded and I'm a righteous brother who believes in Justice for all our people. I'm also data oriented because I know often decisions are made on emotions vs what the data says or whats best. This we can see when Malcolm spoke out against Elijah Mohammad.

I've read the Open Letter to the Afrikan Community and to Brother Ashra Kwesi. Below are my point of agreement and disagreement.

Disagreement:
1. I don't agree with sending an open letter to the Black Community denouncing Brother Kwesi.
2. I definitely don't agree with him asking other Black to consider Brother Kwesi as an Enemy to the Black Community!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
3. I don't agree with his threatening Brother Kwesi in the letter to him. Threatening to get the LAW on him!
4. I don't agree with his depiction of Brother Kwesi with regard to if he's helping or hurting the Black Community.
5. I don't agree with him bringing others into his disagreement with Brother Kwesi, with the examples he provided.

Agree:
1. I agree that its his right to speak out for himself when he's be spoken against even if I don't agree.

Minister:
The Brother Minister is not taking the high ground that he professes to believe in. He claims to be a Christian Minister and if he is living to that than he would be forgiving and not taking the position he's taking. He wouldn't conclude that there's no changing Brother Kwesi because his religion says anyone can change at anytime. It just doesn't sound like he's being Christian like the way he's responding and asking others to respond.

Kwesi:
Brother and Grand Master Teacher Ashra Kwesi has and probably will always be very out spoken when he feels something or someone is violating the Ancient teachings to our Brothers and Sisters. He makes his living on his tapes and tours and he has always aggressively attached anyone who was violating his ability to make his living and continue to bring the information to the Black Community. Its always best to know something about the author of a book b4 you read it. Brother Ashra Kwesi was a student of Brother Khalid Mohammad and just as Brother Khalid would not hold his tongue, Brother Ashra Kwesi doesn't hold his tongue. It requires strength, commitments and unwavering loyalty to do what, when, where and how Brother Kwesi does!!!

My Proverb: Do not use the Lion to keep the hyenas and other predators off your land and then be disappointed or surprise when you see him eating an antelope!!!

Gye Nyame

On Sun, Mar 8, 2009 at 11:22 AM, <gingerd2007@hotmail.com> wrote:

> From: Michael J Robinson
> Sent: Saturday, March 07, 2009 10:24 PM
> To: Michael J Robinson
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND ASHRA KWESI?
>
> Hotep Family, this is a message sent out earlier today from Dr. Ray Hagins himself about the conflagration between he and our elder African-Centered Scholar, Ashra Kwesi. Many of you have heard that there has been some tension between the 2 of them and this letter explains why.
>
> I have a lot of respect for both of these Brothers and it sad that there is a problem between the 2 of them. Dr. Ray Hagins has finally arrived at the point where he has to clear the air and explain to everyone what is going on. Lets pray that things will get better.
>
> WHAT IS THE PROBLEM BETWEEN DR. HAGINS AND ASHRA KWESI?

An Open Letter By Dr. Ray Hagins To The Afrikan Community

Greetings Brother & Sisters!

For 9 years people have been asking me this question in many different ways. And, for 9 years I have tried my best to extinguish what I perceived as an attempt by many to exacerbate childish and inappropriate behavior on the part of someone who is supposed to be strengthening the Afrikan community. Thats right --- for 9 years I have not spoken out on this issue for basically two reasons: (1) Each time that I have been approached by someone it was within the context of hearsay. And, if there is one thing that I have learned (in 36 years of ministry) NOT to do, it is DO NOT GIVE ATTENTION TO HEARSAY. And, (2) I dont have time for foolishness. I am much too busy doing what I do to waste time trying to heal a situation when the people (or person) involved doesnt want healing.

However, two weeks ago I had the wonderful experience of fellowshipping with brothers and sisters in the Bahamas at the 2009 Afrikan Heritage Conference. I was one of the invited speakers of this glorious event. Ashra Kwesi was also one of the invited speakers. This was the first time in 9 years that Ashra and I were to be speakers at the same event!?!?!?

When I received the brochure about the event and saw Ashras picture on it, as one of the speakers, I thought either this is a conspiracy to get the two of us together or the Universe is at work saying that its time to address and dispose of whatever Ashra is dealing with. --- How wrong I was (at least about the latter).

So, my reason for taking the time to write this missive to the entire community (along with an open letter to Ashra) is to do what perhaps I should have done years ago, and that is provide the missing pieces of what has puzzled and damaged so many sincere, good-hearted brothers and sisters. This is not written based on hearsay about what Ashra said or did. I WAS THERE! I witnessed what happened. And it is time now for me to speak out on this asininity.

Before proceeding any further, I want to be sure that the members of the Afrikan community understand that my reason for addressing this issue is ONLY because I will no longer keep silent while young brothers and sisters are wounded to the point of discouragement and disillusionment because two people that they hold in high esteem appear to be enemies. And notice, I said, APPEAR to be enemies. For 9 years I have been going behind Ashra trying to mend the wounds that he has caused in brothers and sisters who completely lost their inspiration for Afrikan unity because of the seeds of discord sown by him in his fabrications about me and others around me. Enough is ENOUGHand it MUST stop.

So, please allow me (after 9 years) to place ALL the cards on the table and hopefully answer some unanswered questions and satisfy the longing of so many brothers and sisters within the Afrikan community to understand what exactly is the problem between Dr. Hagins and Ashra Kwesi.

In December of 1998, I had my dear friend and brother, and late warrior scholar, Dr. Ishakamusa Barashango come and speak at my church. Needless to say, this was a spiritually powerful event because I was in the process of growing a traditional Baptist church into an Afrikan-conscious congregation. I had only been there since February of that year. So, seeing their reception of Dr. Barashango was really something to celebrate. We were beginning to attract conscious brothers and sisters into our congregation.

About a month later, one of the brothers in our church, Brother Craig Johnson, gave me a video of Ashra Kwesi and suggested that maybe we could have him come and speak at the church. I told him that I would watch the video and let him know because I had to be very careful of who I allowed to come and speak to the congregation (within the context of my assignment of raising the consciousness of our people). It was several weeks before I had the opportunity to sit and watch Ashras video. However, as I watched it, I agreed with Craigs recommendation about Ashra coming to speak at the church.

A day or two later, I received a phone call from Dr. Barashango and he had Ashra on the phone with him and wanted to introduce him to me. After Dr. Barashango introduced us I told Ashra that I had just watched a video of him a couple of days ago. Dr. Barashango asked if I would allow Ashra to come and speak at the church. I immediately said, Brother, YES!

NOTE: I have a criteria that must be satisfied before I allow someone in my pulpit to speak to the congregation under my charge; that is: (1) I must hear them to see if I approve of their message; and/or (2) They must be recommended by someone whose opinion I respect in such matters. Well, both points of my criteria had been satisfied, so I had no reservation at all with allowing Ashra to come and speak at the church.

I scheduled Ashra to be the speaker for our 1999 Spring Conference. Thats rightthe sole speaker for the weekend. I had no problem with this because I knew that he was teaching the truth and my friend had vouched for him. Ashra, along with his wife, Merira, came to the church and did a splendid job and was well received by the congregation. I didnt schedule Ashra for that Sunday morning because I didnt perceive from his presentation that he was a Sunday morning speaker for a transitioning traditional Baptist church, so I gave the message that Sunday morning. Ashra and Merira were present, sitting right there on the front row, directly in front of me. After the message, as was my practice at the time, I asked, Is there anyone here who would like to become a member of this church? Ashra and Merira stood! The entire congregation burst into an applause of pure joy. We had come to love Ashra and Merira in the short time of a couple of days. We knew that they were messengers of truth, and were honored to have them join (what was then) the New Ephesus Missionary Baptist Church.

Even though I was honored to have this great teacher join our church, I was somewhat surprised that he would join a Baptist Church. I knew that I was trying to gradually move the congregation away from the errors of Christianity into Afrikan-consciousness, but we hadnt come that far yet. So, I grabbed a microphone and went to Ashra to welcome he and Merira into our congregation, but I had to ask him why he wanted to join our church. He replied, When I came in here and saw the ankh on the pulpit I knew that this is where our membership should be. Okay, I felt much better because there are only three ways that you can join a Baptist church: (1) By baptism (confessing Jesus Christ as your savior and being baptized in water to wash away your sins); (2) By letter of recommendation from another Baptist church; or (3) By Christian experience. You see, I was wondering which one of these Ashra was going to comply with?!?! But the answer that he gave was sufficient for me and the congregation as well.

After that, Ashra, Merira and I developed a wonderful relationship and friendship. I had them to speak on subsequent occasions and whenever they were in the area they would stop by their home church and the congregation was always glad to see them. I signed up for his 1999 Kemet Nu Tour to Egypt and had a wonderful time with them there. Everything was great between us. In 2000, I signed up for his Kemet Nu tour again and because he was a part of our congregation, and we had come to love and appreciate he and Merira for their work, a total of 12 of us from the church went along with them.

Our relationship and mutual respect for each others work caused Ashra to pull a surprise on me and have a ceremony raising me to the sublime degree of a Sa Ra. Brothers and sisters, let me tell you, that was one of the most sacred and meaningful events in my life. What was most meaningful to me was that my friend thought enough of me to perform this sacred ceremony at the beautiful and sacred holy place of our Ancestors, The Temple of Luxor in Egypt. He could have done this at the church, but he decided to honor me on the holy ground of our ancient past. You cannot possibly imagine how much that meant to me. Then, to top it off, my dear brother and friend, Dr. Barashango (who I miss dearly), was also honored at the same time along with me and raised to the sublime degree of a Sa Ra. There was also another Elder (whose name I cannot remember) who was also consecrated with us. In addition to that, some of the members of my congregation who were there participated in the ceremony. I often wondered how they kept the secret from me so well. I have been through quite a few degree ceremonies (both academic and fraternal) in my time, but none of them meant as much to me as that ceremony. Dr. Barashango and I frequently talked about that special time in our lives bestowed on us by our brother, Ashra Kwesi.

After returning home from such a wonderful trip, I made a video tape of my experience there in Egypt. I entitled the video Afrikan Evidence That Demands An Afrikan Verdict. As with all of my videos, I made it available to the public. Since I do have a national audience, people from all over began to order this video. I began to receive testimonies from hundreds of people about the video and how much they learned from the footage in it.

Then, one day while I was at the church, I received a call from Ashra. As always, it was good to hear from him because he and I would frequently call each other just to see how the other was doing. As usual, everything seemed fine. He said, Brother, I just called to check on you to see how you were doing. I told him that it was good to hear from him and that I was doing fine. Then, we hung up from a very short conversation (about a minute and a half). After I hung up the phone I told my secretary that was Ashra. Then, about 20 or 30 seconds later Ashra called back and said, Brother, I was in California and a sister told me that you disrespected my wife. I was completely shocked by this statement. We had just hung up 30 seconds ago and everything was fine! What happened? I asked him, Ashra, what are you talking about? What do you mean I disrespected your wife? Then he told me that he heard that I had made a video tape and that I disrespected his wife because I didnt mention her name in the video tape during the naming ceremony of Minister Alyce Herndon. I couldnt believe that this was coming out of Ashras mouth. As close as he, Merira and I were, how could he think that I would dare disrespect such a beautiful queen sister as Merira? But, I could tell that he was livid over an innocent oversight on my part. So, I apologized to him for forgetting to mention Meriras name and told him that I would correct my mistake by re-editing that part of the footage (which I did).

He then told me that he didnt appreciate my disrespecting his wife and that I had a problem with women. When he said this to me, my training kicked in and I immediately began to realize that there is a deeper seated issue here (especially when he connected disrespecting his wife with the comment of me having a problem with women). I said to him, Ashra, you know that I love you AND Merira. If I had a problem with Merira, I would not have allowed her to repeatedly speak in my church (especially in a traditional Baptist church where they frown upon women speaking publicly anyway). I asked him how he could say such a thing. We ended the conversation.

I looked at my secretary and we both were taken by this whole thing on Ashras part. What we were baffled by the most was how he had just called acting as though everything was alright, and then called right back with a completely changed demeanor.

Then, he called back again and proceeded to complain some more about the video tape that I had made and that he didnt appreciate it because I didnt have his permission to make the video tape. I told him that I didnt need his permission to make the video. He told me that it was his tour and that I needed his permission to make a video. I told him that it was his tour, but it was MY trip, that I paid for with MY money and used MY camera and MY film. Then I reminded him that he knew that I was going to make a video because we sat in Kennedy Airport before we departed for Egypt and I showed him my new camera and told him that I had intended to make a video when I returned. It was also at this same time that I offered the use of my video production facilities to help him with the quality and production of his videos.

Ashra carried on so much about my video that I told him that I would discontinue the distribution of the tape if it bothered him that much. Ashra, then had the audacity to say to me, Brother, you stick to teaching theology and let me do the teaching about Africa. Because this is my bread and butter that you are messing with. I just couldnt wrap my mind around Ashra thinking that he had the right to even say something like, You stick to teaching theology and let me teach about Africa. But he made it very clear what his motive was for saying that. My secretary and I were very disturbed by Ashras attitude and his asinine demand. We discontinued the conversation at that point and that was the last time we talked until a couple of weeks ago when I saw him in the Bahamas.

NOTE: At this point, I think that I should mention how I had received comments from so many brothers and sisters about Ashra and I being at the same event. Everyone (including me) was hoping that this would be a time and opportunity for us to reconcile whatever differences existed between us so that the body of Afrikan brothers and sisters who love the both of us could be healed from the damage caused by this division. Well, that is definitely NOT what happened!

When I saw Ashra, he was stepping out of the elevator and I was sitting there in the hotel lobby. He looked right me and didnt speak, so I said, Hey Ashra. He said, Hey (as he turned to walk away). Even though he was walking away from me, I said, How have you been? He said (with his back to me), Fine. And that was all we said to each other.

I couldnt believe that this person, who had been traveling all over the country talking about me, slandering my name, and attempting to assassinate my character for the last 9 years, would now see me and have nothing to say.

Even though the 2009 Heritage Conference in the Bahamas was an awesome and powerful time of fellowship for brothers and sisters, there was a thick cloud of dissention in the air. I later found out that Ashra told the hosts of this wonderful and glorious event that he was not going to speak if I was present. WHAT!?!?!? How do you say something like that to someone who has spent thousands of dollars to accommodate you? Who does this person think he is? If you have the least bit of integrity, you dont behave like that. The hosts had not done anything to Ashra! Why inconvenience them?

I literally watched the brothers and sisters there in the Bahamas --- who were joyful and celebrating a coming together of Afrikans from all backgrounds and walks of life --- I watched them go from a being joyful to almost becoming electively mute. Those who traveled with me said, Pastor, there is definitely something wrong herewe can feel it, and it has something to do with Ashra Kwesi. I told them that I felt it too.

The last night of the conference, we started almost 2 hours late because Ashra refused to speak if I was present. So, the sponsor of the conference asked that I would come to her home, because in this way, Ashra would not have to see me when he arrived at the venue.

When I arrived at her home, this sister grabbed my hand and said, Dear brother, Rev. Dr. Haginswhat is the problem between you and Ashra Kwesi? Until this point I could only suspect that Ashra was the cause of this dissention, but when she asked me, then I knew for certain. I told her everything that I wrote above. She nodded her head and said, It is so sad that the two giants for our people are divided. Then, she asked me to accompany her back to the venue and close out the conference after Ashra finished speaking.

When we returned to the venue Ashra was speaking, and doing a great job at disseminating information (as he always does). But, the atmosphere was all wrong. Information was being disseminated, but the powerful presence of God, our Ancestors and Afrikan unity was absent.

After a while people started to leave and I asked those who would to stay for the closing. You see, as a Chief Elder, pastor and spiritual leader, having the right kind of benediction is very important to me. I just could not allow these brothers and sisters to leave that 2009 African Heritage Conference with the spirit that they were sitting under. I HAD to break that thing (for those who know what I mean).

After Ashra finished disseminating information, I was presented to close the conference. As is the professional thing to do, I acknowledged Ashra and then I proceeded. I closed the conference asking God and the Ancestors to bring healing and unity among us. We ended with the Oath To The Ancestors that we recite in The Afrikan Village. Ashra didnt stayhe left immediately after he finished speaking.

What was most painful to me at that time were the looks of disappointment on the faces of the brothers and sisters who look up to Ashra as an Elder in this movement. So, I just had everyone to join hands and make contact as a symbol of unity as we recited the Oath To The Ancestors for our benediction. We ended as Afrikans in unityand it was beautiful. Everyone was hugging and greeting each other. All praises be to The Almighty and our Ancestors for getting us through that.

Now, as I close this open letter to the Afrikan community, as the National Chief Elder and Spiritual Leader of The Afrikan Villages, Afrikan Village Study Groups, and all affiliates and associations of the same, I am asking that you regard Ashra Kwesi as an enemy to Afrikan unity and empowerment for the following reasons:

Ashra Kwesi has knowingly and willfully perpetrated false and injurious statements against another brother of the community, namely Dr.

Ray Hagins;

Ashra Kwesi has consistently and intentionally tried to damage the character and reputation of another without just cause to foster his own personal gain.

Ashra Kwesi has refused the request for unity and/or counsel by Elders within the Afrikan community and has shown no desire for reconciliation.

Ashra Kwesi has refused to cease and desist from a behavior that is causing emotional harm to many members within the Afrikan

community.

Brothers and Sisters, it saddens me to have to send this open letter, I apologize to the entire Afrikan community for not addressing this issue much sooner. As I previously stated, I do not like acting on the words of others. But, please be sure that what I saw manifested in the character of Ashra Kwesi is not what we would (or should) see in one who is concerned about unity in the communitynot at all!

Therefore, I submit to you that as long as we continue to support Ashra by asking him to lecture at our gatherings, paying honorariums, buying his productions and participating in his tours that he will see no need to change from his destructive behavior or mend his ways. I also suggest that Ashra Kwesi make an apology to the Afrikan community for his behavior and if he refuses to do so, that he be reckoned as an adversary to our unity.

Brothers and Sisters, I do not have the words to explain how stressful it is addressing this kind of foolishness. Therefore, please understand that I have taken much time and care compiling this in the way that I best deemed fit. All that I have to say about this matter, I have said it in this missive and will not waste any more time with it. I pray that all who reads this will understand the intent of my heart in submitting it.

Hotep --- for the healing of the community,

Dr. Ray Hagins

AN OPEN LETTER TO ASHRA KWESI FROM DR. RAY HAGINS

Hotep Ashra,

When you became a member of our church one of the things that you agreed to was that part of our covenant which states We further engage to watch over and protect one another; to pray daily for the leaders and members of our body; to aid each other in sickness and distress; to cultivate sincere empathy and courtesy in speech; to be slow to take offense, but always ready for reconciliation; and to be mindful of the teachings in our daily living and to appropriate them without delay.

What do I say to you, Ashra? I had hoped so much that we would get to talk while in the Bahamas.

You see, I have concluded that something happened to you that causes you to hold on to stuff indefinitely. I am so sorry that you are in so much pain. I dont know who hurt you, Ashra, but it wasnt me! Someone didand it is quite evident that you are still carrying the anger from whatever happened. You need to deal with that because it is going to destroy you if you dont.

I have watched how you lash out at people who violate what YOU think should be. You did it when we were in Egypt to Barashango over, and over, and over again. I am sure you remember my coming to you in behalf of the rest of the group and asking you to let it go, all because Shaka corrected you in front of the group. You were ruining everyone elses trip with your constant retaliation against our brother.

Then, there was the sister who passed out Jesus fans at dinner one evening. Man, you literally leaped over chairs to get at her as though she violated and did bodily harm to a loved one. I admit that her behavior was inappropriate and needed to be addressed, but did it require such a drastic reaction (not response) from you?

There is a passage of scripture that says, As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. Transliterated, that means that a person thinks the way they do because thats the way they are. Ashra, you are you, and I know that there is no hope of unity between you and I because its just not in youthats all there is to it! And thats fine with me, but its not fine when brothers and sisters (who have the highest respect for the both of us) become disillusioned by your behavior and feel that this whole thing of Afrikan consciousness and unity is a lie and not worth fighting for. I say this to you because I have talked to quite a few who have heard you say damaging things about me. A sister called my office from Chicago in tears because she attended a lecture you did there and you began to slander me. Is that what a historian, teacher, griot Elder, (or any other title that people have assigned to you) does?

There is an Afrikan proverb that says: When elephants fight, it is the grass that suffers. Well Ashra, the grass (in this case) are the people. Havent you harmed enough grass? Or dont you care?

Every now and then, some of the people who love the ground you walk on attend a lecture that I am giving. As soon as they approach me, I can discern their spirit. And it never fails, they ask me, So what do you think about Ashra Kwesi? And you know what, I have NEVER spoken against you. I have ALWAYS answered that question by saying, Ashra is one of our best lecturers and historians. And that is trueyou are that.

The only problem here is, you dont need to be a good-hearted person to be a lecturer or a historian. All you have to have is the intellectual data and the skill to communicate it to your audience. And you certainly have both. You do an awesome job at that. But, as you heard me say (as you were rushing to leave while I was up speaking in the Bahamas) People dont care how much you know, until they know how much you care. Thats what is missing in you Ashra.

Ashra, I know that you know what Ma`at is (at least from an intellectual perspective). But are you doing it? I havent seen ma`at in your deportment since we first met. I have seen isfet though, especially in how you interact with others.

Do you remember the night we were at Applebees and a young, zealous brother asked you a question about extraterrestrials building the pyramids. You had no compassion for this young brothers emotions at all. You humiliated him right in front of everyone. This young brother considered you as one of his teachers. I could see that his spirit was crushed. But that didnt matter to you.

I dont know, Ashra, maybe thats just how you are. And as I said, thats fine with me. You dont add to or take anything away from me, but the people deserve better.

So, since you seemly cannot help yourself with regard to controlling your tongue and emotions when it comes to me, I will have to help you. Therefore, be advised that I am (for the first time) formally requesting that you cease and desist making any remarks about me that may be considered slanderous and/or injurious to my character and reputation. Any such further behavior on your part will be met with prosecution to the fullest extent of the law.

It is so sad that I have to do this, but evidently you cannot stop on your own accord. I hope, therefore, that this letter will empower you to comply with my request. Or you will leave me no choice but to enforce it. And, Ashra, please do not doubt my resolve.

Sincerely,

Dr. Ray Hagins

Thanks,

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

"Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior."

--
Konata Khalfani
1st Dynasty
Chief Executive Officer
510 593-9101

--
Konata Khalfani
1st Dynasty
Chief Executive Officer
510 593-9101
| 28131|2009-03-09 08:16:59|Ferg|Re: "N"|
Mahari,
Yes I do remember the discussion on N-KWA. Unfortunately I do not have the relevant points asI lost all my previous emails when my computer was infected with some sort of virus. Perhaps Asar can refresh us all again on the word.
I do see the salient points of your analysisand it does seem that N is in some wayconnected with the status of an entity, which in turn reflects the life force of a person. I may analyse the ank in our future discussion and perhaps a better understanding of N might emerge.However I am determined to find the word which fits N.
The nearest explanationI have uncovered may be given by 'ni' which means 'it is'. Ni comes about when asking a question such as what is it?, or who is it ? how is it?. The answer would be it is....Thus theKiswahili-Bantu word NJEMA, good, nice, pleasing, sweet, which also appears in Kemetology,given in Budge page 412may be broken down as NI-JEMA, an answer to a question what or how is it? The answer would be it is good, sweet etc, hencegiving NJEMA, good sweet etc. If one applies this logic to the word for a monkey, KIMA then NKIMA would be the word asked by the question what is it? the answer would be it is a monkey, NI-KIMA giving NKIMA.
Hope this throws some light. Still researching!
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Sunday, March 08, 2009 1:12 PM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
> Ferg,
> One more thing about "N" a while back there were some posts on the "ankh". I believe you and/or Asar researched its origin and found that it appears that the correct pronunciation of the word maybe "N-KWA". You might want to go back and find the post to verify.
> If I am correct then we again have the "N" used to indicate a divine high status; thus, again we have "life-force" , "life-giving" , "ancestral", NTR, NHSI(who are the progeny of AmN-Ra's ejaculation) .
> HTP,
> Mahari
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Thanks Mahari for pointing this out.

> Good abstract thinking! There does seem to be some sort of correlation between the word and the status it supports. I shall be looking into this further, perhaps I am missing out the implications presented by the letter N.
>
> The next step is to find out exactly in Bantu what word the letter N represents. Its a bit like finding out what S stands for in the plural of the word orange-s ! I'm sure there must be an explanation
>
> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Friday, March 06, 2009 12:30 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
> >>a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA. <<
>
> Ferg,
> That is interesting and you make a good point. But also remember that in Kemet the monkey held a VERY high status. Isn't Thoth (the NTR of reading, etc.) iconically represented by a monkey (baboon)? Correct me if I am wrong; I am writing from memory, now.
> That does -if correct - quality the monkey to be named with the status elevating "N".
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hutuapo Mahari.
> >
> > I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages there are noun classes. For example, a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.
> >
> > As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that was shortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
> >

> > Somo
> >
> >
> >
> > ----- Original Message -----
> > From: Asar Imhotep
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> >
> >
> > Peace Mahari
> >
> > What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.
> >
> > As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.
> >
> > Ancestrally,
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > http://www.asarimho tep.com
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM
> >

> >
> > Asar,
> > Thank you. As usual always on the job.
> > I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
> > As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" or "elevated" qualities.
> > I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
> > I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
> > I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>

| 28132|2009-03-09 08:18:37|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
Peace Mahari

From my research thus far, a word for LIFE is pronounced like this in the following languages:

- NKWA Akan (twi)
- ANKH - Egyptian
- NKWA Kikongo
- NKWA Kimoyo A priest, life, FIRE STARTER (a philosophical term) Kikongo, Shona Bantu
- NKWI Ki Living - Aka (Batwa), KiKongo

According to Badaw Ndaw, in Pulaar, they pronounce it something like INIKOHE. I don't know the exact spelling. I haven't been able to find it in a dictionary, but if true, the consonents match our Kemetic spelling.

As far as NKWA goes, in the Niger-Congo languages the word KWA can mean MAN. When we look at the ancient Kemetic language and examine the word ANKH, we get the following meanings:

ANKH - Life
ANKH - Swear or an Oath
ANKH - PERSON
ANKH - Captive
ANKH - Garland
ANKH - Mirror
ANKHW - Provisions
ANKHW - Blocks
ANKHW - THE LIVING

So we have two renditions which directly translate into a person or people. Dr. Fu-Kiau on page 28 of African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo talks about the symbol of the ANKH actually being a symbol for man, but also an NGANGA (priest) among the Kongo people.

In the Ankh online website, Dr. Obenga discusses the Ankh symbol as so:

> Dans l'Egypte ancienne, le signe [picture of ankh symbol] , ANKH, □n autre niveau d'interpr鴫tion, symbolise l'괺e humain en son int駟it頰ociale, spirituelle et cosmique : l'anse repr鳥nte la t괥 (Raison) ; la barre, les bras (lien entre Ciel et Terre) ; le trait vertical, le corps de l'homme entre Ciel et Terre.
>
> In ancient Egypt the sign [picture of ankh symbol], ANKH, at another level of interpretation, symbolizing the human being's integrity social, spiritual and cosmic: the cove is the head (Reason); bar, arms (relationship between Heaven and Earth), the vertical stroke, the body of the man between Heaven and Earth.

Again, the sign is being interpreted as a sign of man (mankind). This further lets me know that we are on the right track when pronouncing ANKH, something like NKWA. The root of the word KWA in the Niger Kongo languages is the word KA or KAA. This is translated usually to mean FIRE or something to do with FIRE or HEAT. Remember our previous discussions on African concepts of LIFE symbolically represented as FIRE.

Now, getting back to our "N" discussion, check out a few leadership or high ranking terms in these various languages, with our root KA(a):

THE TERM KA IN LEADERSHIP TERMS
KAKA(God) Egyptian
NKAKA (family head) - Kikongo
KA - (greater, superior) Igbo
KAAnanke (leader, leadership) - Soninke
NKwa mavanga (mature leadership) Kikongo
NKwiki (coal fighter (metaphor for leader see Fu-Kiau 2001:27)) - Kikongo
NKAni (a judge) Kongo, Loango and Tio (see Kleiman 2003:155)
KUmu-a-mbuku - (owner of the village) Mitsogho
tuNKA chief, leader Soninke

tuNKE master, chief - Soninke

The root of ANKH or NKWA is the word KAA and it relates to a human being. We can examine the root KA(a) in association with the family with the following examples:

KA IN RELATION TO FAMILY, PEOPLE, HOMES
KAA house, home Soninke
KAA family Soninke
KAAgume head of a family - Soninke
KAAdunke inhabitant of a house, family - Soninke
KAA family Kiswahili
KA-nda community Kikongo
KAAuma the black family, the black community, black as in burnt (see Greek word Kauma which means black, burnt and compare to the Bantu words for burnt) Egyptian, Kiswahili
-cuKA proto Bantu term which refers to a lineage. It also refers to a hearth. (remember our discussion on fire, family, hearths and the like. Also see Ferg Somos essay on KMT --- KAA (fire, charcoal) + UMA (hearth)). For a full discussion of this term see Kleiman (2003:69-75).
KWA man Kikongo, Twi, Soninke, (basically in all Niger-Congo languages)
Qa man - from the Linear writing of Crete (see paper on Niger-Congo and Linear A and B correspondences Dunn 2005)

We must understand that in the last word QA the Q is the K sound (Q > K). Again, at the root of the word KA is a human being or beings. The fact that we have this term QA to mean MAN in an ancient European language (which Dunn argues is really Niger-Congo), shows that this is a very ancient term that has survived all over Africa.

So I think the above is telling of the deeper aspects of the term ANKH and its relationship to man, leadership and fire (vital force). The "N" in words, as Ferg pointed out, varies so I am not sure if we can definitely find a convention without finding the fossilized word which "N" is a contraction. I wonder if it is NIA as Fu-Kiau gives the term N'NIAKisi to mean "doctor" coming from the word KISA which means to heal/cure or medicine. That may be a clue, but of course a more systematized and rigorous examination must take place before we can claim conclusivity.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Sun, 3/8/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 8, 2009, 8:12 AM

Ferg,
One more thing about "N" a while back there were some posts on the "ankh". I believe you and/or Asar researched its origin and found that it appears that the correct pronunciation of the word maybe "N-KWA". You might want to go back and find the post to verify.
If I am correct then we again have the "N" used to indicate a divine high status; thus, again we have "life-force" , "life-giving" , "ancestral", NTR, NHSI(who are the progeny of AmN-Ra's ejaculation) .
HTP,
Mahari

| 28133|2009-03-09 15:19:47|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|

>>I wonder if it is NIA as Fu-Kiau gives the term N'NIAKisi to mean "doctor" coming from the word KISA which means to heal/cure or medicine. That may be a clue, but of course a more systematized and rigorous examination must take place before we can claim conclusivity. <<

It seems that I recall that "NIA" was a very fluid and flexible word. If that is true then you may be correct (you may be correct anyway). Does either of you guys recall if this is true of "NIA"?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> From my research thus far, a word for LIFE is pronounced like this in the following languages:
>
> NKWA □ Akan (twi)ANKH □ Egyptian NKWA □ Kikongo NKWA Kimoyo □ A priest, life, FIRE STARTER (a philosophical term) □ Kikongo, Shona Bantu NKWI Ki □ Living □ Aka (Batwa), KiKongo
> According to Badaw Ndaw, in Pulaar, they pronounce it something like INIKOHE. I don't know the exact spelling. I haven't been able to find it in a dictionary, but if true, the consonents match our Kemetic spelling.
>
> As far as NKWA goes, in the Niger-Congo languages the word KWA can mean MAN. When we look at the ancient Kemetic language and examine the word ANKH, we get the following meanings:

>
> ANKH - Life
> ANKH - Swear or an Oath
> ANKH - PERSON
> ANKH - Captive
> ANKH - Garland
> ANKH - Mirror
> ANKHW - Provisions
> ANKHW - Blocks
> ANKHW - THE LIVING
>
> So we have two renditions which directly translate into a person or people. Dr. Fu-Kiau on page 28 of African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo talks about the symbol of the ANKH actually being a symbol for man, but also an NGANGA (priest) among the Kongo people.
>
> In the Ankh online website, Dr. Obenga discusses the Ankh symbol as so:
>
> Dans l'Egypte ancienne, le signe [picture of ankh symbol] , ANKH, à un autre niveau d'interprétation, symbolise l'être humain en son intégrité sociale, spirituelle et cosmique : l'anse représente la tête (Raison) ; la barre, les bras (lien entre Ciel et Terre) ; le trait vertical, le corps de l'homme entre Ciel et Terre.
>
> In ancient Egypt the sign [picture of ankh symbol], ANKH, at another level of interpretation, symbolizing the human being's integrity social, spiritual and cosmic: the cove is the head (Reason); bar, arms (relationship between Heaven and Earth), the vertical stroke, the body of the man between Heaven and Earth.
>
>
> Again, the sign is being interpreted as a sign of man (mankind). This further lets me know that we are on the right track when pronouncing ANKH, something like NKWA. The root of the word KWA in the Niger Kongo languages is the word KA or KAA. This is translated usually to mean FIRE or something to do with FIRE or HEAT. Remember our previous discussions on African concepts of LIFE symbolically represented as FIRE.
>
> Now, getting back to our "N" discussion, check out a few leadership or high ranking terms in these various languages, with our root KA(a):
>
> THE TERM KA IN LEADERSHIP TERMS
> KAKA(God) □ Egyptian
> NKAKA □ (family head) □ Kikongo
> KA □ (greater, superior) □ Igbo
> KAAnanke □ (leader, leadership) □ Soninke
> NKwa mavanga □ (mature leadership) □ Kikongo
> NKwiki □ (coal fighter (metaphor for leader □ see Fu□Kiau 2001:27)) □ Kikongo
> NKAni □ (a judge) □ Kongo, Loango and Tio (see Kleiman 2003:155)

> KUmu-a-mbuku □ (owner of the village) □ Mitsogho
> tuNKA □ chief, leader □ Soninke
> tuNKE □ master, chief □ Soninke
>
> The root of ANKH or NKWA is the word KAA and it relates to a human being. We can examine the root KA(a) in association with the family with the following examples:
>
> KA IN RELATION TO FAMILY, PEOPLE, HOMES
> KAA □ house, home □ Soninke
> KAA □ family □ Soninke
> KAAgume □ head of a family □ Soninke
> KAAdunke □ inhabitant of a house, family □ Soninke
> KAA □ family □ Kiswahili
> KA□nda □ community □ Kikongo
> KAAuma □ the black family, the black community, black as in burnt (see Greek word Kauma which means black, burnt and compare to the Bantu words for burnt) □ Egyptian, Kiswahili > *□cuKA □ proto Bantu term which refers to a lineage. It also refers to a □hearth.□ (remember our discussion on fire, family, hearths and the like. Also see Ferg Somo□s essay on KMT □□□ KAA (fire, charcoal) + UMA (hearth)). For a full discussion of this term see Kleiman (2003:69□75).
> KWA □ man □ Kikongo, Twi, Soninke, (basically in all Niger□Congo languages)
> Qa □ man □ from the Linear writing of Crete (see paper on Niger□Congo and Linear A and B correspondences □ Dunn 2005)
>
> We must understand that in the last word QA the Q is the K sound (Q > K). Again, at the root of the word KA is a human being or beings. The fact that we have this term QA to mean MAN in an ancient European language (which Dunn argues is really Niger-Congo), shows that this is a very ancient term that has survived all over Africa.
>
> So I think the above is telling of the deeper aspects of the term ANKH and its relationship to man, leadership and fire (vital force). The "N" in words, as Ferg pointed out, varies so I am not sure if we can definitely find a convention without finding the fossilized word which "N" is a contraction. I wonder if it is NIA as Fu-Kiau gives the term N'NIAKisi to mean "doctor" coming from the word KISA which means to heal/cure or medicine. That may be a clue, but of course a more systematized and rigorous examination must take place before we can claim conclusivity.
>
> Ancestrally,
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>

>
> --- On Sun, 3/8/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Sunday, March 8, 2009, 8:12 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Ferg,
>
> One more thing about "N" a while back there were some posts on the "ankh". I believe you and/or Asar researched its origin and found that it appears that the correct pronunciation of the word maybe "N-KWA". You might want to go back and find the post to verify.
>
> If I am correct then we again have the "N" used to indicate a divine high status; thus, again we have "life-force" , "life-giving" , "ancestral", NTR, NHSI(who are the progeny of AmN-Ra's ejaculation) .
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
>
> .
>
| 28134|2009-03-09 19:17:02|odhiambo okecth|Fw: Food for the Hungry; a KCDN Food Initiative|

Attachments :

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, odhiambo okecth wrote:
From: odhiambo okecth <
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 8:36 AM

In the attached caption, the Assistant Chief for Komarock is helping with the distribution o food items KCDN was able to mobilize from friends.

The net is giving me some headache so I will post more photos tomorrow. I am also still unable to post the same in our blog. Hopefully that will be done by tomorrow.

Regards,

Odhiambo T Oketch,
CEO KCDN Nairobi,
PO Box 47890-00100,
Nairobi, Kenya.
Tel; 0735 529 126, 0724 365 557,
Email; komarockswatch@yahoo.com,
http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

| 28135|2009-03-09 19:17:57|cristofori whitakara|Re: "N"|
There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:21 AM

Mahari,
Yes I do remember the discussion on N-KWA. Unfortunately I do not have the relevant points asI lost all my previous emails when my computer was infected with some sort of virus. Perhaps Asar can refresh us all again on the word.
I do see the salient points of your analysisand it does seem that N is in some wayconnected with the status of an entity, which in turn reflects the life force of a person. I may analyse the ank in our future discussion and perhaps a better understanding of N might emerge.However I am determined to find the word which fits N.
The nearest explanationI have uncovered may be given by 'ni' which means 'it is'. Ni comes about when asking a question such as what is it?, or who is it ? how is it?. The answer would be it is....Thus theKiswahili-Bantu word NJEMA, good, nice, pleasing, sweet, which also appears in Kemetology,given in Budge page 412may be broken down as NI-JEMA, an answer to a question what or how is it? The answer would be it is good, sweet etc, hencegiving NJEMA, good sweet etc. If one applies this logic to the word for a monkey, KIMA then NKIMA would be the word asked by the question what is it? the answer would be it is a monkey, NI-KIMA giving NKIMA.
Hope this throws some light. Still researching!
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Sunday, March 08, 2009 1:12 PM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
> Ferg,
> One more thing about "N" a while back there were some posts on the "ankh". I believe you and/or Asar researched its origin and found that it appears that the correct pronunciation of the word maybe "N-KWA". You might want to go back and find the post to verify.

If I am correct then we again have the "N" used to indicate a divine high status; thus, again we have "life-force" , "life-giving" , "ancestral", NTR, NHSI(who are the progeny of AmN-Ra's ejaculation) .
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Ferg" wrote:
>
> Thanks Mahari for pointing this out.
>
> Good abstract thinking! There does seem to be some sort of correlation between the word and the status it supports. I shall be looking into this further, perhaps I am missing out the implications presented by the letter N.
>
> The next step is to find out exactly in Bantu what word the letter N represents. Its a bit like finding out what S stands for in the plural of the word orange-s ! I'm sure there must be an explanation
>
> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Friday, March 06, 2009 12:30 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
> >>a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA. <<
>
> Ferg,
> That is interesting and you make a good point. But also remember that in Kemet the monkey held a VERY high status. Isn't Thoth (the NTR of reading, etc.) iconically represented by a monkey (baboon)? Correct me if I am wrong; I am writing from memory, now.
> That does -if correct - quality the monkey to be named with the status elevating "N".
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hutuapo Mahari.
> >

> > I've been researching the letter 'N' but sadly I've been coming up with conflicting ideas, sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. In Bantu languages there are noun classes. For example, a monkey is called KIMA in one Bantu language, whilst in a different Bantu language it is called NKIMA.
> >
> > As Asar says one needs to find a fossil in the language to see whether the N is a word that was shortened. However I am still researching into it and may give a few examples, including the word Nehesy, the word you mentioned.
> >
> > Somo
> >
> >
> >
> > ----- Original Message -----
> > From: Asar Imhotep
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Sent: Thursday, March 05, 2009 7:29 AM
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> >
> >
> > Peace Mahari
> >
> > What you will have to develop is a method for your research. I think you will have to look for a fossil in the proto-languages to see if the N is actually a contraction of a larger term. If we can find that term, you well may be on your way.
> >
> > As far as your second hypothesis, this seems to be very much the case. The problem is trying to find a convention in which the scribes would notice this process in the terms. I say the convention lies first in looking at terms that have a NTR determinative, and then from there examining terms with similar spellings and meanings. From there you can break down each glyph. Mdw Ntr has another hidden convention of words that actually define other words and symbols. It makes for interesting discoveries.
> >
> > Ancestrally,
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > http://www.asarimho tep.com
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

> >
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/5/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 12:03 AM
> >
> >
> > Asar,
> > Thank you. As usual always on the job.
> > I am pretty much convinced that the use of "N" has ancient indications of something in the range of "divinity", "nobility", "wisdom", "elder" "ancestor" or "priestly", etc.
> > As I mentioned when I first posted referencing it there seems to be an inordinate number of Kemetic words beginning with "N" that convey these "high" "high" or "elevated" qualities.
> > I believe much of the key to our history lies in the Afrakan, Greek and Hebrew languages. Greek and Hebrew because of the Afrakans' long association with the two groups which (IMHO) helped to form their languages.
> > I just had a feeling that the word "Nehesy" would reveal some truth since it began with "N". So as a casual investigation I just started looking through the Budge dictionary at words beginning with "N".
> > I think an excellent tactic for more historical discovery is to research and unravel EVERY Kemetic alphabet and discover its original meaning and origin because it is clear that the Kemites were very methodical. I think that language is like math - at least for the Kemites. "1+1=2"; I think early Kemetic language operated the same way. Thus, Ba+Ra+Ka = Barak=blessing. You have "Ba" and the "Ka" with "Ra" in the middle. Surely, you are blessed.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>

| 28136|2009-03-09 20:04:01|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM
>
> There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to t discussion also?

| 28137|2009-03-09 21:48:46|Mahari Mengistu|Grasping Ancient Wisdom|
I don't know who this guy is but this is an interesting article and he rightfully gives credit to both Afrigypt and Nubia for the religious philosophies that the world cherishes, misunderstands and clings so tightly to that it virtually destroys it.
==========
Sunday, March 08, 2009

Grasping Ancient Wisdom

A short course in understanding and applying wisdom - Part Three

If you haven't already done so, read the preceding articles in this series:
Part One - Grasping the Truth about Wisdom
Part Two - Grasping Wisdom about the Truth

Since I talk about ancient wisdom and will do so much more in the upcoming months, it is important to clarify and expound some before moving on to delve more deeply into the specifics. Following is the definition from the current draft of the upcoming book update. It won't change much before publication. This will help lay a bridge from the discussions about truth and wisdom in the earlier articles to the in-depth exploration of ancient wisdom and its associated symbology in upcoming articles and books.

Ancient Wisdom?The term ancient wisdom is fraught with confusion because of widespread ignorance about the true meaning of wisdom. It is most often associated with what some call the mysteries, which is a problem because mystery and wisdom are opposing concepts. Since wisdom requires precision and accuracy, the spiritually-associated mysteries are mostly imprecise allusions that fail this test. It is important to realize that true spiritual wisdom is timeless and applies to the workings of the universe and those who operate within it, not just to things only relevant to a particular time period or a limited body of knowledge. Far too many who delve into the so-called mysteries, "eastern" religion and mysticism, and/or the three faiths of Abraham are clueless about the history of the poorly sourced and translated derivative materials and concepts they rely upon.

Much of what is called ancient wisdom is actually misinterpreted ancient wisdom symbology that was designed to model, encode, and encapsulate pivotal spiritual and cosmological wisdom and related philosophy. Many also misuse the term to describe ancient medical or herbal knowledge, further muddying the lines between situational knowledge, good judgment, and wisdom. The term ancient wisdom is itself somewhat of a misnomer, since true spiritual wisdom, being timeless and immutable, is not subject to the changing interpretations imposed by religion, mysticism, tradition, or modern style.

With that said, the term ancient wisdom most accurately refers to the symbolized wisdom flowing from ancient Egypt-Nubia and their forbears during the times they called Zep Tepi. Unlike the more literal approach to spiritual philosophy and cosmology taken by later civilizations, the Egyptians and Nubians framed and represented their wisdom both dualistically and symbolically to better match pivotal insights into the verifiable nature of our reality. They didn't practice religion (or magic?) as most now understand it. Western interpretations of their spiritual concepts, practices, and philosophies are mostly dead wrong.

Sadly, this situation flows from purposeful efforts to confound the truth about the sources and meaning of information that would disprove many religious, mystery school, and secret society assertions. Though many of the empires of the past sought to guard certain information, the efforts of the Roman Empire are the most egregious. The raiding and destruction of knowledge caches like the library at Alexandria, Jerusalem, Qumran, and others by pre-Christian Rome are prime examples. But the worst and longest-running efforts to stamp-out and confound the wisdom flowing from ancient Egypt-Nubia and elsewhere have been carried out by Christian Rome and the Vatican. The hiding of vast caches of ancient documents beneath the Vatican as they hypocritically talk about faith and reason and secretly manage and manipulate secret societies and mystery schools is duplicity and deception on a grand scale. Because of such efforts throughout the preceding centuries and into the present, significant compounded error now plagues those who seek to understand through religion, mysticism, the New Age, associated concepts and related knowledge bases.

One of the important aspects of Egyptian-Nubian cosmology was the purposeful merger of physical science, cosmology, and spiritual-moral philosophy. They correctly understood that the universe was composed of a conceptual-spiritual aspect that underlies and directly influences both the structure and outcomes in space-time. They also recognized this is inseparable from the dualism inherent within spiritual-moral realities, which are likewise inseparable from resulting physical existence and outcomes, which emanate from and affect the spiritual-conceptual-moral underpinnings, ad infinitum. This is clearly modeled by the eternity-infinity symbol, or the number 8 on its side, which also happens to be the actual number of the dimension of time.

Space-time consists of dimensions 8 through 11 and is preceded and defined by dimensions 1 through 7. String theory has shown that there are eleven dimensions to this reality. Hence, there are seven hidden dimensions that precede and define the four dimensions of space-time (7+4=11). That is why the numbers four and seven are so prominent throughout so many ancient symbolic sources. Those seven hidden dimensions are the spiritual-conceptual underpinnings of space-time. Discussions of seven heavens, spheres, spirits, and many other seven-symbol groups are purposely modeling this hidden though often referenced segment of our universe. The Egyptian assertions of receiving certain wisdom and cosmology from a highly advanced earlier period of civilization are strongly validated by the highly advanced and sophisticated nature of certain aspects of their symbolized wisdom.

Parallel observations are detailed within Bohm's implicate and explicate order and other observations flowing from quantum physics. Bohm does not attach a direct dimension count because those details came after his work. The functionality modeled and detailed by his theories perfectly matches the allusions of many ancient sources, as well as the details of string theory. Bohm's efforts to understand the synchronicity of quantum physics with eastern mysticism are well known and widely published. The merger of these different sources with the verifiable truth about ancient wisdom symbology helps to clarify much that has been held as mysterious for millennia.

The subject of eastern mysticism and philosophy is pivotal to this discussion. There are two related references to the "east" associated with the topics of ancient wisdom and the mysteries. The first, which is more closely related to the topic of the so-called mysteries, are the symbolic references to east and ascending in the east in Egyptian-Nubian-Hebrew related narratives. This specifically refers to the location and action of the rising Sun, and what it symbolizes. The sun represents our primary source of light and heat, which symbolize truth and justice. The rising or ascending sun represents the triumph of light (truth) and justice (heat) over the dark (absence of the truth) and cold (absence of justice). Likewise, the Sphinx is purposely focused on the direction and point of on the horizon the rising sun during the spring equinox for its symbolic meanings. Likewise, Maat, Amen, and other Egyptian-Nubian gods and pharaohs were unequivocally said to support Truth and Justice and that is the reason for both sun symbolism and Maat. People who claim to be experts on Egyptian and Hebrew religious themes and meaning and then focus only on astrology or sun worship without exploring the symbolism of truth and justice are either clueless or lying.

The other meaning of the east is the Asian Far East, hence India, China, etc. The eastern philosophies were much less religious and much more focused on karma, reincarnation, the soul, the importance of certain wisdom, and spiritual esoterica and enlightenment. Thereby, the east has always alluded to wisdom about the soul, enlightenment, and other spiritual topics. An interesting thing to note about the mysticism of the east is the existence of various terms and concepts that were first presented in symbolic form in ancient Egypt-Nubia and according to them during the time of Zep Tepi. A prime example is the term Karma, which was also referred to as Ka-Maat. Ka meant one's spiritual nature based upon accumulated deeds during your lifetime. Maat meant both the principles of Truth and Justice as the basis for universal balance and order and she (of the feminine nature...) symbolically personified truth, justice, compassion, etc. You know, just like the much later personified symbolism of Sophia (Wisdom) and Kuan Yin (Compassion). Notice the perfect linguistic match, as well as the perfect conceptual match?

Both Karma and Ka-Maat mean spiritual truth and justice as the basis for universal balance and order. The fact that this term came from ancient Egypt and was merely one part of a far more precise and developed symbolized spiritual technology shows that it originated in Africa, not in India. Also, the categorization of certain characteristics as male and female was quintessentially Egyptian, long before the later Sophia, Kuan Yin, and others.

Similarly, eastern mystics regular had mountaintop retreats, yet mountains, pyramids, and their peaks were used to symbolize knowledge and wisdom much earlier in Egypt and in the earliest Hebrew materials. The story of [Amen]Moses ascending a great mountain and gaining wisdom atop its peak symbolizes his gaining mastery over a great body of knowledge and acquiring (grasping) its wisdom, hence the symbolism of acsension. Consequently, these examples clearly demonstrate that some eastern mysticism undeniably flows from the failure to understand earlier Egyptian-Nubian symbolism and philosophical concepts, just as in the West. Those in the East had a better grasp of the subject matter though and were not bedeviled by as much spiritual deception as those inn the West. This is the reason why similar concepts have long been called mysteries. Those outside of Egypt and Nubia failed to grasp the meaning of Medu Netcher (hieroglyphics) and associated symbolized wisdom and were clearly operating from misconceptions based partly on oral transmission.

Most of the Egyptian-Nubian gods were initially created as symbolized and personified universal principles that were purposefully dualistic in nature. They had masculine and feminine aspects inherent in their symbolism and/or had mates that balanced the details of their symbolized gender and aspects. These were meant as philosophical symbolism of certain characterizations (natures, spirits), not literal gender. This misconception plagues religion and the mysteries still. To understand this, the upper half of the Doctrine of Two Spirits enumerates the feminine aspect and the bottom half is the masculine. Other philosophical concepts were also organized accordingly. As prime examples are details associated with Amen and Amen-Ra, Maat and Thoth, and Nut and Geb. The feminine and masculine structure of the Doctrine of Two spirits is clearly illustrated by the symbolism of Nut and Geb. They all perfectly match-up to the structure modeled by the Doctrine of Two Spirits overlaid by the cross-ankh, as I have proven. Understanding of these symbolized wisdom drifted into more and more error over time due to religious and political influences and finally due to outside invaders. Even so, they remained much closer to the root concepts than later derivative religions that failed to understand or purposely hid pivotal details.

The Doctrine of Two Spirits also purposely parallels and models the actual structure of this universe. The Seven Spirits of God/Good models certain wisdom about the seven dimensions that underlie and define space-time, while the seven spirits of evil (error) model certain realities associated with space-time. The cross and ankh are both models of the four elements, which purposely model underlying wisdom about the true sources and nature of the four dimensions space-time. The dualism modeled by the Doctrine of Two Spirits and its direct relationship and inter-functionality with the four elements are the prime examples of the symbolized wisdom that was confounded to hide the truth about religion, the mysteries, and the symbology used to encode pivotal spiritual wisdom. The fact that four plus seven equals eleven and that this matches and models the verifiable dimensional structure of our "universe" should be proof enough of many things.

In the purposeful model formed by Doctrine of Two Spirits overlaid by the cross-ankh (a.k.a. four elements), truth and wisdom are shown residing outside of space-time, hence within the seven dimensions, which precede time. Also, when the Doctrine of Two Spirits is overlaid by both the cross & ankh it positions truth and wisdom at the very top of the "head" of the ankh and at the top of the upper arm of the cross. Since both represent air, which symbolizes thought and collective consciousness, this places truth and wisdom as the highest of spiritual concepts. They are also purposely modeled in this way to impart the insight that they are timeless and non-physical in nature, as well as senior to space-time realities and perceptions The merger of properly decoded ancient wisdom with the frontiers of modern science are the keys to ending the lies of religion and the errors of mysticism by proving the truth about all the related mysteries. See also: Wisdom, Eastern Wisdom, East, Ascending from the East, Pyramid, Sphinx, Lord of Wisdom, Symbology, Ancient Wisdom Symbology, Medu Netcher, Judgment, Doctrine of Two Spirits, Ancient of Days, Words of God, Zep Tepi, Karma, Ka, Maat, Amen

Part Four - Grasping Ancient Wisdom Symbology
===
HTP,
Mahari
| 28138|2009-03-09 21:59:04|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|

> >>Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?<<

And three "NKIMA's" on each side.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace
>
> Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.
>
> A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.
>
> NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:
>
> A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.
>
> Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"

> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> —
>
| 28139|2009-03-10 06:16:18|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Shakespeare with an afro?|
Attachments :
Shakespeare with an afro?

GE

www.africahistory.net <http://www.africahistory.net/> www.africahistoryonline.com <http://www.africahistoryonline.com/> www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html <http://www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html>

_____

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of Peter Gray
Sent: Tue 1/6/2009 11:41 AM
To: Marc Washington
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Stone Age tools go south

These findings suggest a much earlier emergence of H. sapiens sapiens in Africa than the previously (genetically)estimated 140,000 - 200,000 years BP.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net
Date: Mon, 5 Jan 2009 15:46:40 +0000 Subject: [Ta_Seti] Stone Age tools go south

Stone Age tools go south
By Bruce Bower <http://www.sciencenews.org/view/authored/id/10/name/Bruce_Bower>

http://www.sciencenews.org/view/generic/id/39625/title/Stone_Age_tools_go_south Web edition : Friday, January 2nd, 2009 font_down <http://www.sciencenews.org/index/generic> font_up <http://www.sciencenews.org/index/generic> Text Size access <http://www.sciencenews.org/view/access/id/39630/name/bb_newtools_1.jpg>
Enlarge <http://www.sciencenews.org/view/access/id/39630/title/bb_newtools_1.jpg> magnify
Researchers estimate that human ancestors in southern Africa were making hand axes (shown here), along with two cleavers (see image below) as early as 1.6 million years ago. These artifacts were recovered from a diamond-mining pit in South Africa.PHOTO CREDIT: R. Gibbon

Although separated by several thousand kilometers, southern and eastern Africa were, in a sense, a stone½R(tm)s throw from each other ancient times. New evidence suggests that human ancestors in southern Africa fashioned teardrop-shaped stone hand axes 1.6 million years ago, nearly twice as long ago as many researchers thought and about the time such tools are known to have first appeared in eastern Africa.
Ryan Gibbon and his colleagues dated hand axes and related stone implements, collectively known as Acheulean artifacts, using measures of the relative decay of radioactive forms of aluminium and beryllium in quartz grains from the soil and gravel bearing the artifacts. Exposure to cosmic radiation causes quartz to produce these substances, which then decay after enough sediment covers the quartz.

Acheulean finds have been dated to 1.7 million years ago in Ethiopia. Less-advanced stone tools have been dated to as early as 2.5 million years ago in eastern Africa.

Over two days in 2005, Gibbon⅛R(tm)s group identified 465 stone tools brought out of a diamond-mining pit bordering South Africa⅛R(tm)s Vaal River, near the town of Windsorton. Those implements included 10 hand axes, two hand axes with large chopping edges known as cleavers and two elongated, three-sided tools called picks. The researchers have since recovered another 100 hand axes, 30 cleavers and 40 picks from the Windsorton pit. Sand and gravel from five diamond-mining pits provided samples for dating, says Gibbon, an archaeology graduate student at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg.

access <http://www.sciencenews.org/view/access/id/39631/name/bb_newtools_2.jpg>
Enlarge <http://www.sciencenews.org/view/access/id/39631/title/bb_newtools_2.jpg> magnify
Cleavers were also found in the mine.PHOTO CREDIT: R. Gibbon

Findings at Windsorton, published online December 20 in the Journal of Human Evolution, raise the question of whether human ancestors developed Acheulean tools independently in southern and eastern Africa at around the same time, developed the tools in only one area from which the tool-making tradition spread rapidly to distant regions.

Gibbon suspects that Homo ergaster, a species regarded as a direct ancestor of modern humans, made the Windsorton hand axes. A nearby South African site has yielded H. ergaster fossils, but no fossils of any member of the human evolutionary family have been found in the Windsorton vicinity. Fossil finds have linked H. ergaster to Acheulean tools in eastern Africa.

Stanford University archaeologist Richard Klein suspects that Acheulean tool making originated in eastern Africa about 1.7 million years ago and reached northern parts of what⅛R(tm)s now South Africa shortly afterward. ⅛RoeI doubt it arose more than once,⅛R he says.

⅛RoeEast Africa has always been considered the place of origin of stone tools and subsequent technological developments, but I wouldn⅛R(tm)t be surprised to discover that significant stone-tool advances took place in the Vaal River basin and then spread to the rest of Africa,⅛R Gibbon says.

His team⅛R(tm)s findings support a preliminary age estimate of 1.6 million years that other researchers have reported for Acheulean artifacts from South Africa⅛R(tm)s Wonderwerk Cave <http://www.artsci.utoronto.ca/main/wonderwerk-press-info.pdf> , located about 100 kilometers northwest of Windsorton. Anthropologist Michael Chazan of the University of Toronto and his coworkers dated quartz grains from artifact-bearing soil and further verified the ages by identifying reversals of Earth⅛R(tm)s magnetic field with known ages in the cave⅛R(tm)s sediment. Their study appeared in the July Journal of Human Evolution.

Additional dating of Wonderwerk Cave deposits has confirmed that Acheulean activity there began 1.6 million years ago, with even older stone tools dating to 2 million years ago, Chazan says.

Still, the precise timing of Acheulean origins in eastern and southern Africa remains uncertain. ⅛RoeThere could easily be a time lag between the two regions on the order of 100,000 years, in either direction, that we are not yet able to detect,⅛R Chazan remarks.

_____

Send e-mail faster without improving your typing skills. Get your Hotmail account.
<http://windowslive.com/online/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_speed_122008
>

| 28140|2009-03-10 12:07:00|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|William Shakespeare: in the old age black was not counted fair|

Attachments :

William Shakespeare
Sonnet 127

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on Nature's power,
Fairing the foul with Art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' eyes are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Sland'ring creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look so.

| 28141|2009-03-10 16:32:51|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Spring Cleansing Flyer|

Attachments :

--- On Sat, 3/7/09, AAS Atlanta wrote:
From: AAS Atlanta
Subject: Spring Cleansing Flyer
To: "Ausar Auset Society Atlanta"
Date: Saturday, March 7, 2009, 3:00 PM

Ausar Auset Society Atlanta

Presents:

Spring Cleansing

Workshop

We live in a toxic world. Find out why the beginning of spring is the best time of year to cleanse your body and purify your spirit. Learn about safe forms of fasting, adopting a proper diet, and the benefit of cleansing herbs.

* $5 ADMISSION ****

Saturday, March 14, 2009 2:30 p.m.

Decatur Recreation Center

231 Sycamore Street in downtown Decatur (one block from the Decatur MARTA Station; free parking is available at the library parking deck)

The Ausar Auset Society is a pan-African religious organization dedicated to the spiritual development of people of African descent. Teachings are based on the ancient Kamitic (Egyptian) systems of spiritual cultivation. Spiritual Readings are available upon request. For more information, call 678-701-8011 or email us at aasatlanta@gmail.com

also visit www.tauienterprises.com

>

| 28142|2009-03-10 18:43:09|cristofori whitakara|Re: "N"|

Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:

From: Asar Imhotep

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM

Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM

There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

| 28143|2009-03-10 19:20:25|Tafari khumbaka|Fwd: PASPCR2009meeting[1].pdf|
Attachments :
Dr. Richard King tells about these meetings begining with the nazi's of wwII and that medical doctors get together every few years too discuss their findings about melanin/melatonin

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Sat, 3/7/09, fsfaynwrote:
> From: fsfayne
> Subject: Fwd: PASPCR2009meeting[1].pdf
> To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
> Date: Saturday, March 7, 2009, 4:52 PM
>
> WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT THIS?
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: jafayne
> To: fsfayne
> Sent: Sat, 7 Mar 2009 4:32 pm
> Subject: PASPCR2009meeting[1].pdf
>
> ---
>
> Access 350+ FREE radio stations anytime from anywhere on the web. Get the Radio Toolbar!

| 28144|2009-03-10 20:12:42|millennium|SpiritWorld, Singing of the Ancestors ...|
you are invited to join a worldwide composition, translating the Oral & Visual Wisdom of our ancestors, into the contemporary world-consciousness of (hyper-) text ...

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/SpiritWorld for all our relations,

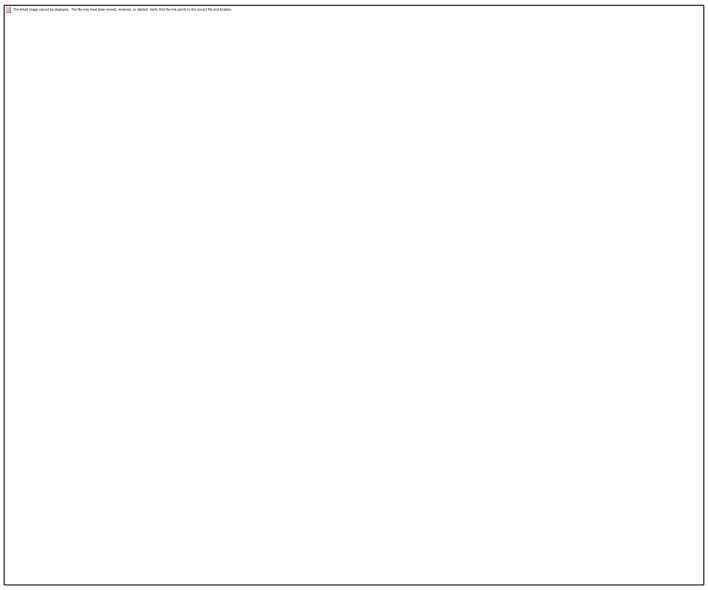
Millennium Twain



SpiritWorld

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Spirit World

The voices of spirit, of our global ancestors (ancestor_worship), of the kami or deities (divinity)

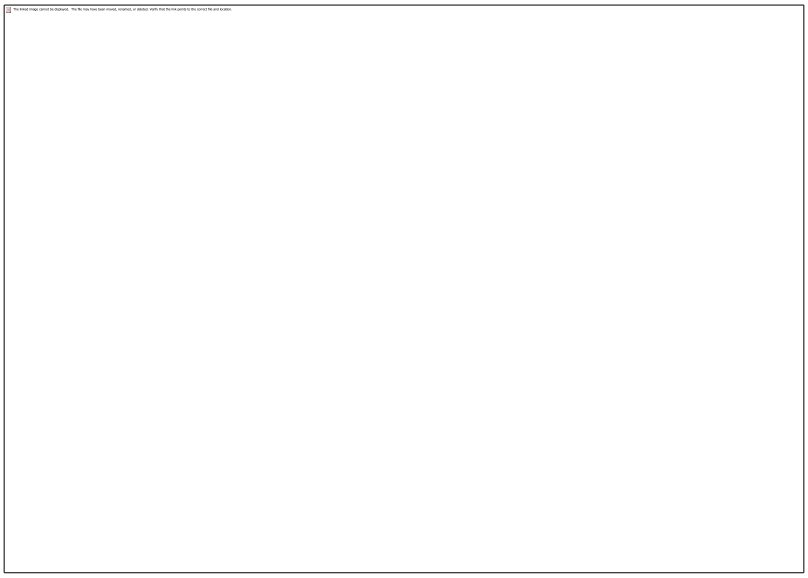
as understood by the indigenous (indigenous_peoples) or aboriginal peoples of all times, paleolithic to present. The sources, voices and messages the Spirit_mediums (clairvoyance), Seers (prophets), Diviners (Maya_calendrical_divination), Shamans, Priestesses, Medicine People (Medicine_Man) 'hear' and 'see' in their transient or permanent connection to or immersion in the 'medicine' of Mother Nature (animism), sometimes distinguished by supernatural naming.

Spirit World, of nature, of the elementals ...

Contents

- 1 Ancient & Indigenous Peoples
- 2 Weaving The Storyline
- 3 See also
- 4 Notes
- 5 References
- 6 External links

Ancient & Indigenous Peoples



Great Spirit in the many diverse names spoken in the GrandMother wisdom-keeper stories of the pre-columbian native Americans. Spoken by the Itako and Miko of ancient and contemporary Japan. The Mudang of Korea, the Noro and Yuta of the Matrilineal Ryukyu Islands. The Curandera, Machi and Sacerdonsa of Latin America. The Hawaiian Kahuna, Maori Tahunga, Filipine Babaylan. Dukun of Indonesia and Bomoh or Pawang in Malaysia. (expand to a globally-representative portrayal of the Priestess and Shaman cultures which are best known.)

Weaving The Storyline

Singing the songline, dreaming the dreamtime. A 'Dreaming trek'[1] journey around the globe of tribal and cultural examples of medicine women and men, and identifying elements of the songs, dances, rituals associated with their practices, in this 'world' today.

Dhyani Ywahoo, Tsalgi People

"When Native American people sing for the rain, the rain comes -- because those singers have made a decision that they and the water and the air and the Earth are one. The song is sung that all beings may benefit from the gentle rains."

Hoop of the Thirteen Indigenous Grandmothers ...

"Each of us has a song in our heart. Through thought, through action, each one is creating vibrations in the atmosphere. When we think about the dancing atoms that build and sustain the forms of life, we can see ourselves forever in the dance. Everything is vibration. Our action rings out in many dimensions, and in that way our thoughts and actions return to us. We may call it karma or destiny; we are living the result of our thoughts and their various overtones interacting with other thoughts. Just as a pebble of intention dropped into a still pond ripples out in every direction, so the appearance and phenomena of our lives and our world are ripples on the serene surface of universal mind."

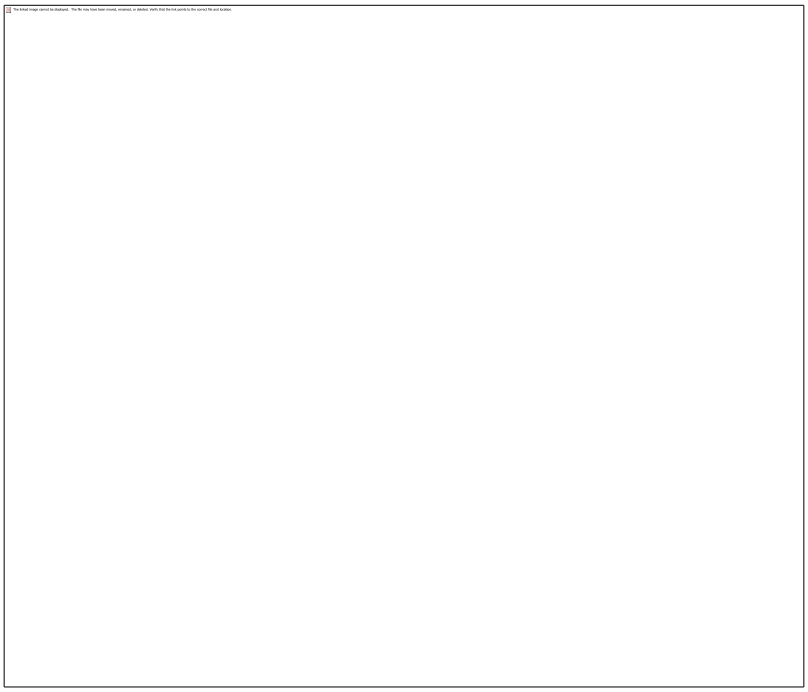
"We are one with our mother, the Earth, the umbilicus of our thought interweaving the dream that we are sharing. We are turning this dream to peace. We are remembering the sacred medicine and we are keeping the sacred prophecies to clarify and purify, to see ourselves in harmony."[2]

Diane Bell, on Women's Business

"Through their yawulyu (land-based ceremonies)" the aboriginal women "nurture land; through their health and curing rituals they resolve conflict and restore social harmony, and through yilpinji (love rituals) they manage emotions. Thus in women's rituals their major responsibilities in the areas of love, land and health fuse in the nurturance motif with its twin themes of the 'growing up' of people and land, and the maintenance of harmonious relations between people and country"

"To understand this concept of nurturance, which is so different from that of Western culture," we must look to the sacred Aboriginal teachings and practices. "When women hold aloft the sacred boards for their country, when they dance hands cupped upward, they state their intention and responsibility to 'grow up' country and kin. This wide-ranging and broadly based concept of nurturance is modelled on the Dreamtime experience, itself one all-creative force. For Aboriginal women, as the living descendants of this time, the physical acts of giving birth and of lactation are important, but are considered to be one individual moment in the much larger and total design of the jukurrpa (Dreamtime)."[3]

Rishika and Rishi, "through whom the Vedic hymns flowed ..."



(the "seers" or "shaman" of Vedic tradition, to whom the Veda hymns were "originally revealed".)

Susan Sered, on Becoming Kami

"Eight kami-sama continue their trek into the increasingly dark jungle, finally reaching the sacred grove. There are two stone benches where they sit and weave crowns of leaves and vines to put on their heads. One of the kami-sama goes further into the sacred grove, stopping at a small stone altar on which rest six conch shells. She squats in front of the shells, prays briefly, and "feeds" rice and sake into the opening of each shell. She then joins her sister kami-sama at the benches, taking her place on the center seat."

Sake is poured for each kami-sama and "they pray briefly and quietly. The eight kami-sama rise and begin their journey back to the bus. The bus driver takes them to the edge of the village, and the kami-sama walk to the village square where they are met by clan members and by the village headman, who bows and pours sake for each kami-sama. Clanswomen provide food and drink for the kami-sama. After a small meal the kami-sama (compare amaterasu) rise, take of their white robes and hang the crowns of leaves on special nails in the village square. Eight middle-aged and elderly women then walk home to prepare food for their families, to weed the vegetable gardens, and do to their housework."[4]

Hearan Chung, Shaman Dancing Spirit

Dancing our opening to Spirit World ...

"In her Shin Kal Deh Shin Mu performance, Korean Master Artist Hearan Chung uses a special kind of wand called a Shin Kal, made from layers of white paper cut into thin pieces and attached to a long bamboo stick, in Shin Kal Deh Shin Mu. The Shin Kal is used in mediating the ceremony of death as a key to open the door to the spirit world. The dance is performed to protect the emigrating soul from interference by any evil beings and to safely lead it onto the next realm of existence."

"Each element of this dance has ancient symbolism. The Shin Kal wand, held in both hands, portrays the mourning for the passing of the personality, the long white cloth used in the beginning of the dance represents the path of that soul, while the cut paper on the wand is considered money used by the soul during its journey to the other world. The powerful shaking movement the shaman creates with the Shin Kal in hand threatens any devils that might prey upon the soul, thus freeing the soul to move to the next life."[5]

Chi Gong, Traditional_Chinese_Medicine

"Spirit Possession: Perhaps many of you have heard something about being possessed by animals, such as foxes, yellow weasels, ghosts and snakes, etc?"

"Some people say that one can develop supernormal capabilities through the practice of qigong. As a matter of fact one is not developing 'supernormal' capabilities, they are none other than instinct. However, with the development of human society, we are more and more attached to tangible things in our physical space and are more and more dependent on modernized means.

Therefore our human instincts are deteriorating, and in the end they are made to disappear completely."

To return to natural instincts "one has to cultivate them" through returning to our origins and going back to the truth. "The wild animal does not have such a complex mind, so it can always communicate with the fundamental qualities of the universe and is possessed of the primordial instinct."[6]

La Sacerdonsa "Iyami Horonga"

The High Priestess 'La Emperatriz' Ochun, or Yemaya amongst the Yoruba. The ancient name Yemaya is a contraction of 3 separate Yoruba words: yeye or iya, omo and, finally, aje. "Yeye" or "iya" translates to mean ocean, creation or mother. "Omo" means child or children and "aje", can be translated to mean planet, fish, seashells; or, priestess, shaman, witch. The name can be interpreted as "mother-whose-children-are-as-numerous-as-fish", "mother-whose-child-is-the-world," or [shades of Harry Potter) "mother-whose-children-are-witches." (Compare Nwa and Naga).

The 401 Orishas or divinities that comprise the Yoruba pantheon include 200 aspects who sit to the Divine left of the Great_Mother, and 200 to the Divine right. Each one of these 401 divinities is the deification of a specific 'personality' of nature.

Many contemporary Orisha worshippers say that the lesser Orishas are not great spirits in the strictest sense but rather they are the fragments of the One Creation Song known as "Oloddumare." (Oloddumare translates to mean "Song of All Beings.")

In West Africa and in Brazil, Yemaya/Yamanja is the supreme ruler of the Iyami community. The Iyami ("our mothers") community is comprised of ancestral priestesses and she is the patron/matron kachina of the ajes. (Compare M愼de-santo).

A Yoruba priestess is known as Iyanifa, Iyalaja, Iya Agba and Iyalase.

Singing the Sky-Land, Singing the Ancestors ...

Maya ah'men, Raising the Sky

Raised-Up Sky, First-Tree Precious, Sky Tree, Elevated Wood, Platform of the Sky -- "these resonances could be coincidental, but we think they are all names for the same fundamental thing. The names may very in time and place, but Don Pablo's altar is the present expression of the Maya Cosmic Center: the axis mundi, transfered through practice and apprenticeship from shaman to shaman for early a hundred generations."

ah'men or h'men -- "performer or doer" or "one who understands." (Maya priesthood). The h'men traveled between the worlds, or existed simultaneously in both, preserving the ancestral wisdom, and healing and guiding the community. Maya_health_and_medicine.

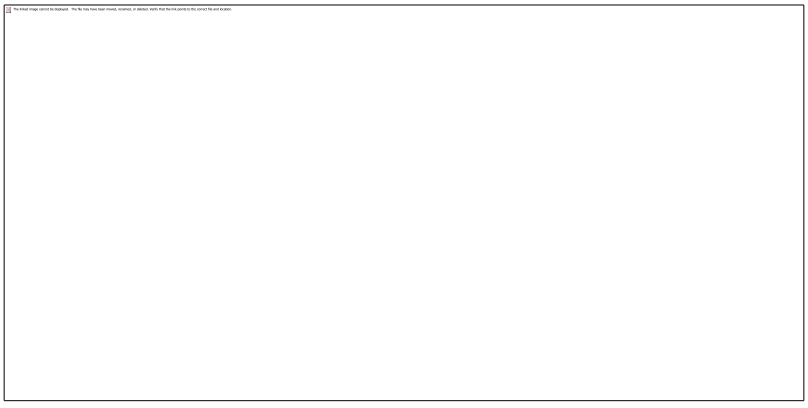
In Yukatek, the wordsounds for sky (ka'an) and the number four (kan) are nearly the same. In Cholan they are the same, "and moreover, the glyphs for the number four, and for sky and snake (all chan in Cholan or kan in Yukatekan) freely substitute for each other in the ancient writing system."

The ka'an che' (altar), was a table of six legs, and four saplings or vines (xtab ka'anil, "cords of the sky") creating the arch of the cosmos (or alternately of four legs and six vines). "In the ancient Classic period, wak and kan (six and four) formed the name of the World Tree -- the Wakah-kan (or Wakah-Chan in Chol)." (See Wacah_Chan, world_tree and Tree_of_life).

Thirteen gourds hung from the vines of the ceremonial altar -- for the thirteen constellations of the Maya zodiac -- creating a portal between the material plane and the world of spirit, through which the h'men could summon chaac/chakob ... (see Chac:_Dios_de_la_lluvia).[7]

See also

Tuvan priestess singing the 'window' open...



- Mami_Wata Water Spirits and Deities
- Axis_mundi Our Umbilical to the Worlds
- Mitakuye_Oyasin, All My Spirit Relations
- Paleolithic_religion 10,000 to 300,000 BC

- Paleolithic#Art_and_Music, Origins of spirit muse
- Oral_tradition, our pre-historic hymnal encyclopedia
- Mircea_Eliade Shamanism, Yoga and the eternal return
- Shamanism_in_Siberia#Songs.2C_music Singing/Calling Animals and Singing/Calling Spirits

References

- Bell, Diane (1993), Daughters of the Dreaming, Second Edition, University of Minnesota Press. ISBN 1-8166-2398-8,
- Bell, Diane (1998), Ngarrindjyeri Wurruwarrin: a world that is, was, and will be, Spiniflex Press, North Melbourne, Australia. ISBN 1-875559-71-x
- Blackburn, Thomas C, and Hudson, Travis (1986), The Material Culture of the Chumash Interaction Sphere, Volume IV: Ceremonial Paraphenalia, Games, and Amusements, Santa Barbara Museum of Natural History. ISBN 0-87919-101-5
- Chatwin, Bruce (1987), The Songlines, published by Jonathan Cape, and Vintage, 1998. ISBN 0-09-976991-3
- Freidel, David; Schele, Linda; and Parker, Joy (1993), Maya Cosmos, Three Thousand Years on the Shaman's Path, William Morrow, New York. ISBN 0-688-14069-6
- Keeney, Bradford, ed (2001), Walking Thunder, Dineh Medicine Woman, Ringing Rocks Press. ISBN 0-918172-32-2
- Li, Hongzhi, (2001), Zhuan Falun, Fair Winds Press. ISBN 1-93141-253-7
- Hopp□ Mih□, "Music of Shamanic Healing", from "Macht Musik. Musik als Glck und Nutzen fr das Leben", Gerhard Kilger, ed, Wienand Verlag, 2006c, ISBN 3879098654
- Senda, Minoru and Uno, Takao (2001), Kame No Kodaigaku, Toho Shuppan. ISBN 4-88591-707-7
- Sered, Susan (1999), Women of the Sacred Groves, Divine Priestesses of Okinawa, Oxford University Press. ISBN 0-19-512487-3
- Vane, Sylvia Brakke and Bean, Lowell John (1992), California Indian Shamanism, Ballena Press. ISBN 0-87919-124-4
- Ywahoo, Dhyani (1987), Voices of Our Ancestors, Cherokee Teachings from the Wisdom Fire, Shambhala, Boston and London. ISBN 0-87773-410-0

External links

Maori Hongi, Breath of Spirit shared by pressing foreheads together, then exhaling and inhaling through the nostrils ...

Thirteen Indigenous Grandmothers [[1]]
Mayan Elder Don Alejandro Cirilo Perez Oxlaj [[2]]

Aboriginal Australian Women's Business [[3]]

Haitian Voodoo, Giving Life to the Spirits [[4]]

Dogu Goddess Statuary from Jomon Period Japan [[5]]

Hearan Chung, Korean Mudang Dancer [[6]]
Chi Gong and Animal Spirit Possession, [[7]]

Di□gi, Vilmos, "Tracing Shamans in Siberia. The story of an ethnographical research expedition" [[8]]

Shand, Jessica, Walking In The Beauty Way, http:www.smbs.buffalo.edu/bp/2006_Spring/2006Spring_14-19.pdf
| 28145|2009-03-11 04:04:00|Asar Imhotep|Geomantic Divination of Africa derived from Arabs?|
Peace Phamily

I am trying to get clarity on a claim by Wim Van Binsbergen concerning the origins of Geomancy coming from Arabia and spreading across Africa. In the few papers I have been able to read, he never explains how there are not strong Arabic terms that would correspond, for instance, with the 16 primary Odu of Ifa. When someone introduces something to another ethnic group, if that ethnic group does not have a ready made equivalent in their language for the concept, they are going to adopt the names associated with the language that introduced it to them.

Does anyone know of any critiques of Binsbergen's work? His analysis seems way off kilter and I've already found holes upon holes within his central thesis. Here is an article to see what I mean: http://www.shikanda.net/afrocentrism/rethink2.htm

Here is the full gamit of his work: http://www.shikanda.net/african_religion/index.htm

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

MOCHA-Versity

| 28146|2009-03-11 08:40:37|Maurice Humphrey|Re: NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)|

Attachments :

Hello Ginger,
Sorry for the delayed response to your question (I've been very busy). I haven't had the time to find the references that I would have liked to give you, but I will give you general places to look. I have attached a pdf file I found on google that describes the Nubian defeat of the Arabs in 643 A.D. and again in 652 A.D. This is described in the last paragraph of page 3 (Day of Devastation) and continues into page 4. The Islamic armies were conquering all over, in fact (if I'm not mistaken) the Nubians were the 1st and only ones to defeat the Arabs at the time.You can also check out Nubia: Corridor to Africa by William Y. Adams. Look for the Baqt treaty in the index of the book. As far as the Roman defeat you will find a description of that near the end of the this video:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hGyipHMQhIg(Nubia: the forgotten Kingdom 2)

--- On Thu, 3/5/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:

From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 10:39 AM

Good morning Maurice... I found your email very informative. Got a question for you... can you give me any reading references on the Nubian wars against the Romans and the Arabs? I'd love to learn more about it. Please reply when you have a chance... (or anyone else for that matter) thank you.

From: Maurice Humphrey
Sent: Wednesday, March 04, 2009 11:25 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)

I saw the preview of "Nubian Spirit" and I ordered the video (I hope it gets here soon!). I am atrue fan of Nubia (Kush), I think it is as important as Egypt (If not more important). The true origins ofEgypt may actuallylay in Nubia.If this is the case then Nubia should be exalted by (our) scholars as much as Egypt. Watching the preview of "Nubian Spirit" reminded me that we (Africans) were truley unified in ancient times. Canu imagine...Nubians defeated two of themightiest powers the ancient world has ever seen (The Romans and then the Arabs respectively) .ALL invaders inAfrica stopped... once they reached the doors of the Kushites. The historybooks don't give details, but ifyou think about it, the only way the Kushites could have defeated the mighty armies ofRome and Arabia is that they wereTRULEY UNIFIED. It couldn't have been done any other way. We need to usethem (Kushites) as shinning examples ofthe potential we have onceWE unify.We could easily decimateOUR ENEMIES and rebuild our civilization. I'd like to address something else as well. I was trying to figure out why in recent times many European scholarswere making documenteries about Nubia. ButI think I know why. If you watch many of these videos, the scholars in the docs frequently refer to the Nubians (when theyoccupied the throne in KMT) as BLACK pharaohs.Orthey make sure they show black faces in the doc depicting Nubians. All this would be ok, if they told the truth aboutthe ancient Egyptians. Instead,most docs depict ancient Egyptians as Arab looking. So now when you think of Nubians you think black and when u think of the ancient Egyptiansu think Arab, further contrasting the two civilizations as two different races. Check out this video: http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=KOiAvoqZzks

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Shu Tefnut wrote:

> From: Shu Tefnut
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
> To: afrikanunity_ ofharlem@ yahoo.com, "HERU BENNU AMEN RA" , "Eugene Bennett" , bnyee@googlegroups. com, dr.garaia@africanid ea.org, friends@templeheali ng.com, GatherTheFires@ yahoogroups. com, happilynaturalday@ yahoogroups. com, hndsupport@gmail. com, luv4self_network@ yahoogroups. com, mwananchi@yahoogrou ps.com, NABSE@yahoogroups. com, nnabakyaala. afrika@gmail. com, openyourthirdeye@ yahoo.com, smaitawi@yahoogroup s.com, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, thanubian2@yahoo. com, trueblackness@ yahoogroups. com
> Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 2:26 PM
>
> HOTEP FAMILY
>
> CHECK OUT THIS REAFFIRMATION:
>
> http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=B7lxbAliGA8

| 28147|2009-03-11 12:34:09|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)|
Thank you so much Maurice, I am going to check out all those references. Also, I ordered the video as well, and I am looking forward to showing it to my current African studies class (I am a student)

I cant wait to see it. Thanks again for the response

From: Maurice Humphrey
Sent: Tuesday, March 10, 2009 11:29 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)

Hello Ginger,
Sorry for the delayed response to your question (I've been very busy). I haven't had the time to find the references that I would have liked to give you, but I will give you general places to look. I have attached a pdf file I found on google that describes the Nubian defeat of the Arabs in 643 A.D. and again in 652 A.D. This is described in the last paragraph of page 3 (Day of Devastation) and continues into page 4. The Islamic armies were conquering all over, in fact (if I'm not mistaken) the Nubians were the 1st and only ones to defeat the Arabs at the time.You can also check out Nubia: Corridor to Africa by William Y. Adams. Look for the Baqt treaty in the index of the book. As far as the Roman defeat you will find a description of that near the end of the this video:
http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=hGyipHMQhIg(Nubia: the forgotten Kingdom 2)

--- On Thu, 3/5/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:

> From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 10:39 AM
>
> Good morning Maurice... I found your email very informative. Got a question for you... can you give me any reading references on the Nubian wars against the Romans and the Arabs? I'd love to learn more about it. Please reply when you have a chance... (or anyone else for that matter) thank you.
>
> From: Maurice Humphrey
> Sent: Wednesday, March 04, 2009 11:25 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
>
> I saw the preview of "Nubian Spirit" and I ordered the video (I hope it gets here sc atrue fan of Nubia (Kush), I think it is as important as Egypt (If not more importan origins ofEgypt may actuallylay in Nubia.If this is the case then Nubia should be e scholars as much as Egypt. Watching the preview of "Nubian Spirit" reminded me (Africans) were truley unified in ancient times. Canu imagine...Nubians defeated t themightiest powers the ancient world has ever seen (The Romans and then the Ar respectively) .ALL invaders inAfrica stopped... once they reached the doors of the historybooks don't give details, but ifyou think about it, the only way the Kushites defeated the mighty armies ofRome and Arabia is that they wereTRULEY UNIFIE have been done any other way. We need to usethem (Kushites) as shinning examples ofthe potential we have onceWE unify.We could easily decimateOUR ENEMIES and rebuild our civilization. I'd like to address something else as well. I was trying to figure out why in recent times many European scholarswere making documenteries about Nubia. ButI think I know why. If you watch many of these videos, the scholars in the docs frequently refer to the Nubians (when theyoccupied the throne in KMT) as BLACK pharaohs.Orthey make sure they show black faces in the doc depicting Nubians. All this would be ok, if they told the truth aboutthe ancient Egyptians. Instead,most docs depict ancient Egyptians as Arab looking. So now when you think of Nubians you think black and when u think of the ancient Egyptiansu think Arab, further contrasting the two civilizations as two different races. Check out this video: http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=KOiAvoqZzks

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Shu Tefnut wrote:

From: Shu Tefnut
Subject: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
To: afrikanunity_ ofharlem@ yahoo.com, "HERU BENNU AMEN RA" , "Eugene Bennett" , bnyee@googlegroups. com, dr.garaia@africanid ea.org, friends@templeheali ng.com, GatherTheFires@ yahoogroups. com, happilynaturalday@ yahoogroups. com, hndsupport@gmail. com, luv4self_network@ yahoogroups. com, mwananchi@yahoogrou ps.com, NABSE@yahoogroups. com, nnabakyaala. afrika@gmail. com, openyourthirdeye@ yahoo.com, smaitawi@yahoogroup s.com, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, thanubian2@yahoo. com, trueblackness@ yahoogroups. com
Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 2:26 PM

HOTEP FAMILY

CHECK OUT THIS REAFFIRMATION:

http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=B7lxbAliGA8

| 28148|2009-03-11 13:03:42|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)|

Excellent . Will show to my class but there is urgent need to correct typing errors- ancient (1 error) mathematics (1), writing (1).

I am ordering the video as well.

GE

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto:Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Sent: Wednesday, March 11, 2009 11:43 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)

Thank you so much Maurice, I am going to check out all those references. Also, I ordered the video as well, and I am looking forward to showing it to my current African studies class (I am a student)

I cant wait to see it. Thanks again for the response

From: Maurice Humphrey

Sent: Tuesday, March 10, 2009 11:29 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)

Hello Ginger,

Sorry for the delayed response to your question (I've been very busy). I haven't had the time to find the references that I would have liked to give you, but I will give you general places to look. I have attached a pdf file I found on google that describes the Nubian defeat of the Arabs in 643 A.D. and again in 652 A.D. This is described in the last paragraph of page 3 (Day of Devastation) and continues into page 4. The Islamic armies were conquering all over, in fact (if I'm not mistaken) the Nubians were the 1st and only ones to defeat the Arabs at the time.You can also check out Nubia: Corridor to Africa by William Y. Adams. Look for the Baqt treaty in the index of the book. As far as the Roman defeat you will find a description of that near the end of the this video:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hGyipHMQhIg(Nubia: the forgotten Kingdom 2)

--- On Thu, 3/5/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:

> From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 5, 2009, 10:39 AM
>
> Good morning Maurice... I found your email very informative. Got a question for you... can you give me any reading references on the Nubian wars against the Romans and the Arabs? I'd love to learn more about it. Please reply when you have a chance... (or anyone else for that matter) thank you.

From: Maurice Humphrey

Sent: Wednesday, March 04, 2009 11:25 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLY. (VIDEO)

I saw the preview of "Nubian Spirit" and I ordered the video (I hope it gets here sc atrue fan of Nubia (Kush), I think it is as important as Egypt (If not more importan origins ofEgypt may actuallylay in Nubia.If this is the case then Nubia should be e scholars as much as Egypt. Watching the preview of "Nubian Spirit" reminded me (Africans) were truley unified in ancient times. Canu imagine...Nubians defeated t themightiest powers the ancient world has ever seen (The Romans and then the Ar respectively) .ALL invaders inAfrica stopped... once they reached the doors of the historybooks don't give details, but ifyou think about it, the only way the Kushites defeated the mighty armies ofRome and Arabia is that they wereTRULEY UNIFIE have been done any other way. We need to usethem (Kushites) as shinning exampl potential we have onceWE unify.We could easily decimateOUR ENEMIES and re civilization. I'd like to address something else as well. I was trying to figure out wh times many European scholarswere making documenteries about Nubia. ButI think If you watch many of these videos, the scholars in the docs frequently refer to the l theyoccupied the throne in KMT) as BLACK pharaohs.Orthey make sure they sho in the doc depicting Nubians. All this would be ok, if they told the truth aboutthe a Egyptians. Instead,most docs depict ancient Egyptians as Arab looking. So now wh of Nubians you think black and when u think of the ancient Egyptiansu think Arab contrasting the two civilizations as two different races. Check out this video: http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=KOiAvoqZzks

--- On Wed, 3/4/09, Shu Tefnut wrote:

> From: Shu Tefnut
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE VALLY. (VIDEO)
> To: afrikanunity_ ofharlem@ yahoo.com, "HERU BENNU AMEN RA" , "Eugene Bennett" , bnyee@googlegroups. com, dr.garaia@africanid ea.org friends@templeheali ng.com, GatherTheFires@ yahoogroups. com, happilynaturalday@ yahoogroups. com, hndsupport@gmail. com, luv4self_network@ yahoogroups. com, mwananchi@yahoogrou ps.com, NABSE@yahoogroups. com, nnabakyaala. afrika@gmail. com, > openyourthirdeye@ yahoo.com, smaitawi@yahoogroup s.com, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, thanubian2@yahoo. com, trueblackness@ yahoogroups. com

> Date: Wednesday, March 4, 2009, 2:26 PM
>
> HOTEP
>
> FAMILY
>
> CHECK OUT THIS
>
> REAFFIRMATION:
>
> http://www.youtube. com/watch?v=B7lxbAliGA8

| 28149|2009-03-11 14:24:50|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Good Read| good info , tua/thanx

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Wed, 3/11/09, Felicia Carroll wrote:
> From: Felicia Carroll
> Subject: Good Read
> To: "Andre" , "Ausariankh" , "cornelius bostick" , "Charles E Bowie" , "Toni Brittenum" , "Ardie Campbell" , "'Tena Wheat Crump'" , "Enjl" , "James Ferguson" , "David J UTPWR Fitz" , "'Nia Glenn-Lopez'" , "Derrick Harris" , "Mike Harris" , "'Patrick Harris'" , "Lieutenant Higgins" , "Garland Holmes" , "Kelvin Hopson" , "'LaSaunders Hunders'" , "James" , "Fluffy jaquess" , "Jeff" , "ERIC JENKINS" , "'Fredrick Jones'" , "JW" , "Tafari khumbaka" , "Letoya" , "Ronald Long" , "'Sylvia Malone'" , "Vincent Moore" , "Chandra Murray" , "Muata Muse" , musicatp@bellsouth.net, ndaniels@selftucker.com, "'Alandas Dobbins Men Ra'" , "Romecus" , "toni" , "Victoria Vaughn" , "virgil wadlington" , "Warren" , "Wayne" , "'Stephanie Williams'" , "Stephon Wolfe"
> Date: Wednesday, March 11, 2009, 8:56 AM
>
> http://www.scionofzion.com/federalreserve.htm

| 28150|2009-03-11 19:09:09|Sptpy|Re: /NUBIAN SPIRIT: THE AFRICAN LEGACY OF THE NILE VALLEY/ (VIDEO)|

> Maurice Humphrey wrote:
> I haven't seen this video in it's entirety, but so far it looks good
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=B7lxbAIiGA8
>
> Ginger wrote:
>
> Thank you so much Maurice, I am going to check out all those references. Also, I ordered the video as well, and I am looking forward to showing it to my current African studies class (I am a student)
>
> > Excellent . Will show to my class but there is urgent need to correct typing errors- ancient (1 error)
> >
> > mathematics (1), writing (1).
> >
> > I am ordering the video as well.
> >
> > GE

I intend to order the video, and yes, these misspelled key words should be corrected:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qgkYEpxAN6I&feature=channel_page,

Agriculture

Writing http://www.wsu.edu/~brians/errors/writting.html

Mathematics

Tyrone

| 28151|2009-03-11 20:28:26|Black Vegetarian Society of GA|UK Queen of Soul Julie Dexter at the Meat Out, Atlanta,GA. See you t|

MEAT OUT Vegetarian Food and Wholistic Health Fair

Sunday, March 29th 1-7pm (programbegins at 2pm)

Program will include a panel discussion "Heal Thyself" with Dr. Dean Marshall, DC,LMT, Adama, Life Coaching, L'dia Men-Naa,W.H.E. Life Path Awakening and William E.Richardson, M.D. featuring the Who's Who in Wholistic Community all in one place for one day only.

Hosted by Reggie Smith with SameBoat, Inc.

ADrum Circle, Raw and Cooked vegan food exhibitors, MarketPlace, Veg Chef Show-off, AfriSalsa Dance and Belly DancingLessons, Yoga Class with Dr.Naima Lewis, HYer Dynamics HealthDiscoveries bring your yoga mat,Health Screenings, Interactive Boot camp with Tammie Leady's Body Physique, Body Pavilion with hands-onmodalities and other surprises!

Volunteers are the Heart & Soul of the Meat Out. Give us two hours of your time and receive complimentary admission, volunteers are ask to wear black, call Attallah today at 404.374 9491.

Children activities hosted by Roots to Fruits Children Natural Health & Cultural Arts Center.

A Special Musical Performance by UK Queen of Soul Julie Dexter!

Cost: FREE for BVSGA card holding members

$10 in advance , $15 at the door

It's our annual membership drive, you can become a member at the dooror online and attend the Meat out for Free this year and next year!

Atlanta Technical College
Academic Complex Building
Second Floor
1560 Metropolitan Parkway
Atlanta GA 30310

Annual and Lifetime Membership

$25. Individual/Lifetime $150.00
$40. Family/Lifetime $200.00
$100. Corporate / Lifetime $350.00

Become a Corporate Lifetime Member and exhibit at the Meatout for no additional cost.

Are you a Wholistic Pracitioner that specializein ... ionic foot detox, massage, reflexology, accupressure, rain drop therapyor? Let us hear from you.

For more information and to buy tickets visit www.bvsga.eventbrite.com

Thank you in advance for sending this note to your e-list!

| 28152|2009-03-11 22:02:16|Asar Imhotep|Dogon: Tracking the pale Fox (19311983)|
Peace Phamily

I don't know how many people have seen this documentary but I think it is informative. Tell me what you think: http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=2215878832442911455

Dogon: Tracking the pale Fox (19311983)

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28153|2009-03-12 02:39:02|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
Peace

In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (the womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss of Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.

I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would shed some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba Simbi in English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, energy, the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.

Simba in Kikongo means:

? to hold up
? to keep (a thing)
? to bless
? to treasure
? to touch
? to retain

Simbi means:

? a keeper; a watch over
? someone with power to protect
? a living power/energy that holds up everything

All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM

Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti rep the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the H where Heru develops?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM

Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" a NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification o nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "h of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the para of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, foo sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I inte Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for th who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would includ prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These conce working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the N of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you livi
This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM

There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

| 28154|2009-03-12 07:32:34|Paul Kekai Manansala|Tropically-adapted human migration into Neolithic Germany, 4th mille|
Homo. 2009 Mar 3. [Epub ahead of print]
Related Articles, Links

ELSEVIER FULL-TEXT ARTICLE

Population continuity, demic diffusion and Neolithic origins in central-southern Germany: The evidence from body proportions.

Gallagher A, Gunther MM, Bruchhaus H.

School of Anatomical Sciences, University of the Witwatersrand, 7 York Road, Parktown, Johannesburg 2193, Republic of South Africa.

The transition to agro-pastoralism in central Europe has been framed within a dichotomy of "regional continuity" versus exogenous "demic diffusion". While substantial genetic support exists for a model of demographic diffusion from an ancestral source in the Near East, archaeological data furnish weak support for the "wave of advance" model. Nevertheless, archaeological evidence attests the widespread introduction of an exogenous "package" comprising ceramics, cereals, pulses and domesticated animals to central Europe at 5600calBCE. Body proportions are under strong climatic selection and evince remarkable stability within regional lineages. As such, they offer a viable and robust alternative to cranio-facial data in assessing hypothesised continuity and replacement with the transition to agro-pastoralism in central Europe. Humero-clavicular, brachial and crural indices in a large sample (n=75) of Linienbandkeramik (LBK), Late Neolithic and Early Bronze Age specimens from the middle Elbe-Saale-Werra valley (MESV) were compared with Eurasian and African terminal Pleistocene, European Mesolithic and geographically disparate recent human specimens. Mesolithic Europeans display considerable variation in humero-clavicular and brachial indices yet none approach the extreme "hyper-polar" morphology of LBK humans from the MESV. In contrast, Late Neolithic and Early Bronze Age peoples display elongated brachial and crural indices reminiscent of terminal Pleistocene and "tropically adapted" recent humans. These marked morphological changes likely reflect exogenous immigration during the terminal Fourth millennium cal BC. Population expansion and diffusion is a function of increased mobility and settlement dispersal concomitant with significant technological and subsistence changes in later Neolithic societies during the late fourth millennium cal BCE.

| 28155|2009-03-12 08:08:16|Joseph Wright|Re: [Ta_Seti] Dogon: Tracking the pale Fox (19311983)|

Fantastic, few have even heard of the Dogon, let alone the Pale Fox. This is great! Thanks.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Dogon: Tracking the pale Fox (19311983)
To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 12:02 AM

Peace Phamily

I don't know how many people have seen this documentary but I think it is informative. Tell me what you think: http://video. google.com/ videoplay? docid=2215878832 442911455

Dogon: Tracking the pale Fox (19311983)

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-Versity

| 28156|2009-03-12 08:08:19|Ferg|Re: "N"|
?
Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TIas NINA meansmother in Bantu. I understand that TIis aSumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate asthe mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
> Peace
>
> In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (the womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss of Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.
>
> I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would shed some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba Simbi in English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, energy, the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.
>
> Simba in Kikongo means:
>
> ? to hold up
> ? to keep (a thing)
> ? to bless
> ? to treasure
> ? to touch
> ? to retain
>
> Simbi means:
>
> ? a keeper; a watch over
> ? someone with power to protect
> ? a living power/energy that holds up everything
>
> All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM

Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM

Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM

There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

| 28157|2009-03-12 09:16:02|Asar Imhotep|Re: "N"|
I am not familiar enough with the Sumerian to develop an informed hypothesis.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 8:36 AM

?

Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TIas NINA meansmother in Bantu. I understand that TIis aSumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate asthe mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"

| 28158|2009-03-12 13:58:00|cristofori whitakara|An article from www.miamiherald.com|

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, cristofori wrote:
From: cristofori
Subject: An article from www.miamiherald.com
To: boogie_down_black@yahoo.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 4:57 PM

cristofori has sent you the following story:

Posted on Thursday, Mar. 12, 2009

Costa Rican presidential candidate channels spirit of Obama

By GILLIAN GILLERS

She wants to be the country's first black president. She paints herself as an agent of change who will take on special interests. Eleven weeks before the primary, she trails a more-experienced opponent in the polls. Still, she hopes to build a broad base by reaching out to young people through the Internet.
Sound familiar?
People are calling Epsy Campbell the Barack Obama of Costa Rica. Campbell, a charismatic activist who recently announced a run for president, dismisses the comparison. But she said she has been deeply inspired by Obama. She attended the Democratic National Convention, closely followed the campaign and cried when Obama won.

Read More...

| 28159|2009-03-12 15:11:06|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: [SmaiTawi] Fw: free meditation class this sun'sday|

Attachments :

this sunday march 15th- 2009

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> please come by sunday for a intro: into meditation, a 4-part class offered by memphi ausar-auset study group.
> please check out attachment to this email , click for more details

| 28160|2009-03-12 21:36:55|Mahari Mengistu|ARABS IN AFRAKA|

ARABS IN AFRICA

By NAIWU OSAHON

Naiwu Osahon

Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.

In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.

Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.

In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.

Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.

Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.

On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.

No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.

In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN ? SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN ? SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN ? SAD.

Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.

He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.

In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."

Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.

Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert. With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons), owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.

The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.

Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions), Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.

A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable." Osama Bin Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996 said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."

In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slaves??.what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah ? Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.

A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'

In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are Africans' mortal foes.

Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."

Ibn Sina (Avicenna 980?1037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."

Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism," adding that "they are every where described as stupid."

al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heat?.."

Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "?..the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passions?.."

NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M.
Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
====

Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
HTP,
Mahari
| 28161|2009-03-12 23:20:57|Asar Imhotep|Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA|
I hate to judge a population of people, in general, but you can't help it. The Arab men have shown that they just aren't human. The question is, what can you do outside of genocide to deal with a culture that is imperialist and racists?

No amount of dialogue is going to be able to shift the consciousness. Unless Africans unite and develop weapons for themselves, they are not going to be able to defend themselves and all is lost. The men of Africa need to step up and quit being so passive.

This is why I appreciate Diop so much. His greatest work in my opinion is Black Africa: Case for a Federated State. He underscores the importance of a unified Africa in culture as well as in territory. It is more critical than ever now to make this happen.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] ARABS IN AFRAKA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:36 PM

ARABS IN AFRICA

By NAIWU OSAHON

Naiwu Osahon

Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.

In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania

and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.

Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.

In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.

Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.

Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.

On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.

No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.

In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN SAD.

Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.

He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.

In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."

Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.

Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert. With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons) , owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.

The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.

Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions) , Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.

A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable. " Osama Bin Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996 said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."

In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slaves.what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.

A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'

In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are

Africans' mortal foes.

Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."

Ibn Sina (Avicenna 9801037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/ scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."

Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism, " adding that "they are every where described as stupid."

al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heat.."

Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "..the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passions.."

NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M. Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
====
Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
HTP,
Mahari

| 28162|2009-03-13 01:00:30|Mahari Mengistu|Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA|
I agree with you, Asar. But I am getting so discouraged with what I am seeing in Afraka AND what I see from our Afrakan brothers and sisters here in the Americas. I keep trying to hold on to optimism. I keep trying to be audaciously hopeful. I keep trying.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> I hate to judge a population of people, in general, but you can't help it. The Arab men have shown that they just aren't human. The question is, what can you do outside of genocide to deal with a culture that is imperialist and racists?
>
> No amount of dialogue is going to be able to shift the consciousness. Unless Africans unite and develop weapons for themselves, they are not going to be able to defend themselves and all is lost. The men of Africa need to step up and quit being so passive.
>
> This is why I appreciate Diop so much. His greatest work in my opinion is Black Africa: Case for a Federated State. He underscores the importance of a unified Africa in culture as well as in territory. It is more critical than ever now to make this happen.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] ARABS IN AFRAKA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:36 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> ARABS IN AFRICA
>
>
>
> By NAIWU OSAHON
>
>

>
> Naiwu Osahon
>
>
>
> Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.
>
>
>
> In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.
>
>
>
> Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.
>
>
>
> In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.
>
>
>
> Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.

>
>
>
> Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.
>
>
>
> On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.
>
>
>
> No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.
>
>
>
> In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN □ SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN □ SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN □ SAD.

>
>
>
> Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.
>
>
>
> He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.
>
>
>
> In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."
>
>
>
> Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.
>
>
>
> Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert.

With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, > displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons) , owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.
>
>
>
> The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.
>
>
>
> Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions) , Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.
>
>
>
> A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable. " Osama Bin Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996 said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."
>
>
>
> In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slaves□□.what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah □ Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.

>
>
>
> A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'
>
>
>
> In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are Africans' mortal foes.
>
>
>
> Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."
>
>
>
> Ibn Sina (Avicenna 980□1037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/ scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."
>
>
>
> Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism, " adding that "they are every where described as stupid."

>
>
>
> al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heat□.."
>
>
>
> Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "□..the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passions□.."
>
>
>
> NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M.
>
> Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
>
> ====
>
> Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
| 28163|2009-03-13 07:10:44|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset Event|

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ausar Auset Society wrote:

From: Ausar Auset Society
Subject: TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset Event
To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 8:40 PM

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

March 12, 2009

Greetings!

Hetepu! You are invited to attend three upcoming webinars: Sat march 14, Tuesday March 17 and Thursday March 19. Hope you can attend. We apologize for the inability to follow up on last saturday's proposed webinar, and to communicate. We were experiencing difficulties with our broadcast and communication systems.

Kamitic Astrology

Join us for a Webinar on March 14

Space is limited.
Reserve your Webinar seat now at:

https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/206364074

There are many astrology systems in place, all giving different degrees of accuracy in profiling events and people.Kamitic Astrology uses the Hindu Krishnamurti Padhati sidereal method of charting the horoscope, and Kamitic spiritual philosophy and psychology to interpret the findings.You will be delighted by the accuracy of the Padhati system and the empowerment provided by the Kamitic interpretation.The latter makes correspondences of the signs and planets to the Paut Neteru (Tree of Life), in other words, to the faculties underlying your psychological and spiritual make-up (talents, emotional and mental functions), allowing thus for the manipulation and control of your destiny through meditation, Kamitic and African spiritual systems.For example, the moon and cancer corresponds to Auset (so called Isis), Yemaya, and Nana Esse; the sun and Leo corresponds to Heru, Shango, and so on.

What's more, the popular astrology that is in vogue in the western world today is flawed.It is based on an error made by a Greek by the name of Hipparchus who in the first century B.C. concluded that march 21 should always coincide with 1 degrees Aries.Were that true, there would be no movement towards the age of Aquarius.Because te zodiac moves backwards at the rate of 1 degree every 72 years, march 21 falls in the last 2 degrees of Pisces).Following the same reasoning, none of the signs begin on the 21st of the month, but around the 15th of the following month.Thus, for example, a person born on the 30th of March is not an Arian, but a Piscean, etc.

Our system does not end at these differences.It will chart your success path; show you the talents you can best develop for your livelihood, and so on.

This is a two hour webinar with a half an hour break!

Title: Kamitic Astrology

Date: Saturday, March 14, 2009

Time: 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM EDT

After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar.

System Requirements
PC-based attendees
Required: Windows 2000, XP Home, XP Pro, 2003 Server, Vista

Macintosh-based attendees
Required: Mac OS X 10.4 (Tiger) or newer

Become your own Spiritual Reader

Join us for a Webinar on March 17

Space is limited.
Reserve your Webinar seat now at:

https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/392116189

Why spend extra money getting a spiritual reading when you can easily acquire the skill yourself?
Get answers to life important questions immediately instead of waiting to see a reader. Besides, since you understand your situation better than anyone, armed with the oracle reading skills, you are in the best position to decipher what a reading is saying.

This webinar will introduce you to the basic principles for using the Metu Neter oracle that has been detailed in Metu Neter, volumes 1, 2 and 3.

Ra Un Nefer Amen, the "author" (channeler) of the oracle system will share with you the basic techniques that you can use to understand how to use this powerful system.

The symbols that make up the Metu Neter oracle system represent the faculties of your body, mind and spirit.A reading is like an MRI of your mind that enables you to get insight into what is going on in your subconscious enabling you thus to take charge and make sure that the shaping forces of your life are moving in the direction that they need to be moving.

You will able to prescribe for yourself the truisms (laws, not affirmations) to meditate on, mantras, esoteric use of oils, incense, colors, etc.

This is a two hour webinar, with a half an hour brake.

Title: Become your own Spiritual Reader

Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009

Time: 7:00 PM - 9:00 PM EDT

After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar.

System Requirements
PC-based attendees
Required: Windows 2000, XP Home, XP Pro, 2003 Server, Vista

Macintosh-based attendees
Required: Mac OS X 10.4 (Tiger) or newer

Spring Detoxification and the Vernal Equinox

Join us for a Webinar on March 19

Space is limited.
Reserve your Webinar seat now at:

https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/214186221

What is the meaning of the Vernal Equinox?

Ancient Societies have dedicated the major part of their resources to the ability to predict the occurrences of the Solstices and Equinoxes.Why?
The answer is in the biological cycles that control the physical, psychical and mental functions of living creatures.
The liver, viewed from the energetic point of of view of Chinese medicine governs our ability to assert ourselves over the major challenges of life, to face the challenges of life in a calm and relaxed manner and to utilize our imagination to dream of life's possibilities.
Our ability to use this faculty depends on its state of health.Because the liver is the main detoxifier of the body, it suffers greatly from the toxins it has to neutralize.To allow it and its energetic counterparts (meridians or energy channels) to carry the functions listed above, it must be regularly detoxified, and repaired.
The time that is appointed for it to carry out its major housecleaning is the spring time--passage from the cold to the warm season--March in the northern hemisphere, September in the deep southern.

In this webinar we will explore the best way to carry out the detoxification of your body.Spring, in the northern hemisphere is the best time for doing so.

Be prepared!

Title: Spring Detoxification and the Vernal Equinox

Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009

Time: 7:30 PM - 9:00 PM EDT

After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar.

System Requirements
PC-based attendees
Required: Windows 2000, XP Home, XP Pro, 2003 Server, Vista

Macintosh-based attendees
Required: Mac OS X 10.4 (Tiger) or newer

thanks for attending our past webinars and giving us your business. It is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely, Merisa Amen

TAUI International
TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

Forward email

SafeUnsubscribe®
This email was sent to tafari_sudra@yahoo.com by ausarauset@nilevalley.com.
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with SafeUnsubscribe | Privacy Policy.

Email Marketing by Constant Contact
TRY IT FREE

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset | 1100 Albemarle Road | Brooklyn | NY | 11218

| 28164|2009-03-13 07:50:07|Lamar Perryman|Re: [P-U-T-T] Villagers burning their kinfolk - just horrific|
That is the foolishness of being programmed by Christianity and Islam to think that Indigenous Afrikan Spirituality is evil or dangerous and Black Folks Ain't did one damn thing noteworthy or of worthwhile in the way of civilization since subscibing to Islam, Christianity, Hinduism, " Religious " Judaism and any of the other religious faiths that teach dumb, blind, foolish belief and faith and a Mythical Heaven out in space somewhere but anywhere besides right here on this planet earth.
That is the value of these " religious oh so holy foolish and dangerousbeliefs ". !!!

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Denise van Esche wrote:

> From: Denise van Esche
> Subject: [P-U-T-T] Villagers burning their kinfolk - just horrific
> To: "p-u-t-t"
> Cc: black_freethinkers@yahoogroups.com, thetopazclub@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 7:34 PM
>
> Five individuals suspected of witchcraft are burned to death by villagers in Nyamatero.
>
> http://www.inewsit. com/video/ gallery.. .mataro-Village
>
> Let's dissuade ourselves of foolish romantic views of sub-saharan Africa. It is a hardscrabble life for most Africans. Being burned as a witch seems a mere anticlimax.
>
> --
> He prayeth well who loveth well, both man and bird and beast.
> THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER-
>
> Denise van Esche
> http://i33.tinypic. com/1e5u2u. jpg

| 28165|2009-03-13 07:50:17|pharoahisrael@yahoo.com|Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] Re: [SOA] ARABS IN AFRICA (Must read)|
Bro. Abba Re, The only statements that you have made that I agree with is that of the Pgymy Peoples being the peoples of the God Ptah. They were also Amenists as well as one of them ruled Egypt/Kemet in the person of Mentu-Hotep of the 11th dynasty I believe.
As for your statements that The Canaanites (Kana, Ga-na-na, Ga-Ana, Kinnihu) were not Black Peoplesthat is a foolish statement whether it comes from yourself or Dr. Malachi Z. York-El.
You need to do a anthropological and archaeological study of Canaan with some Ethnology and Linguistics thrown in (I have a ways to go on the linguistics myself butI am persevering to the end).
Many of my Nuwaubian brothers and sisters are starting to sound just like these otha folks around here you know. I believe I know all of the reasons why too.
Peace.!
MLP.,
Pharoah Isra'ilu-El,
Israelite Moor.

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, deshon way wrote:

From: deshon way
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] Re: [SOA] ARABS IN AFRICA (Must read)
To: NorthAmexemObservers@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 4:31 PM

Brother, when looking at these names in the bible, we have to remember that we are not dealing with individuals, but that we are dealing with whole tribes and races and groups of people so when you see that Naphtuhim is the son of Mizraim, then it does not mean biological sons because you cant birth a whole race in 9 months. Now lets look at Naphtuhim:

NAPHTUHIM - naf-tu'-him (naphtuchim; Septuagint Nephthaleim) : A son of Mizraim (Gen 10:13; 1 Ch 1:11); but, according to most modern authorities, a district or a dependency of Egypt. Among the many efforts at identification the following deserve notice: Naphtuhim = (1) Nephthys (Nephthus) in the Northeast of Egypt; (2) Na-ptah, i.e. the people of Ptah, the dwellers in the neighborhood of Memphis; (3) Nathu (according to Herodotus, Natho), which occurs in Assurbanipal' s Annals as the name of a part of Lower Egypt; (4) Erman (ZATW, X, 118), by the change of a letter, reads Petemhim, which signifies "The Northland"; (5) Spiegelberg sees in the word an old designation of the Delta, and would therefore render the name, "the people of the Delta" (compare Johns, HDB; Skinner and Holzinger on Genesis).
The Naphtuhim (Hebrew: ???????, Naphtchi^ym) are the descendants of Naphtuh one of the sons of Mizraim according to the Table of Nations in Genesis 10. The Naphtuhim would be in southern Egypt today. They were originally in the Nile Delta (or lower Egypt) giving their name to it. It is they who were the Memphites - "the people of the god Ptah or Path". Memphis was originally known as Naph[1], and in more modern times as Abu Sir. Later they migrated southwards founding the city of Napata in southern Egypt. Peoples known as 'Nobatai' (Oasis Dwellers) were observed in antiquity in Libya, Nubia, and Arabia.

Now out of all of these sons of "Mizraim" which means "the two rivers" only Naphtuhim gives you a direct link to our real egiptian ancestors. The egiptians that we have come to know are not our posterity, but are Phoenicians and Hindus. This is actual facts. Naphtuhim is the only biblical group that links us back to our original deity which is Ptah, a pygmy god and we know that the so called pygmies were the first woolly haired god-people on the planet.

YOU CANNOT PROVE THAT WE ARE OF MOABITE AND CANAANITE DESCENT!!!!

"ONE DAY, ALL OF THE PROPERTY IS GOING TO GO BACK TO THE GOVERNMENT" - THE PROPHET, NOBLE DREW ALI.

_____ _____ _____ __
This message is intended solely for the use of the individual and entity to whom it is addressed, and may contain information that is privileged, confidential, and exempt from disclosure under applicable state and federal laws. If you are not the addressee, or are not authorized to receive for the intended addressee, you are hereby notified that you may not use, copy, distribute, or disclose to anyone this message or the information contained herein. If you have received this message in error, immediately advise the sender by reply email and destroy this message.

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Alf P wrote:

From: Alf P
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObserve rs] Re: [SOA] ARABS IN AFRICA (Must read)
To: NorthAmexemObserver s@yahoogroups. com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 3:02 AM

You chose to allow NorthAmexemObserver s@yahoogroups. com even though this message failed authentication

Click to disallow

| 28166|2009-03-13 07:51:11|Michael Bayman|His-Imperial-Majesty Brings It : Part: 4|
From: Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Broadcasting-Agency: Staff
Unto: All-Moors (Declared/Undeclared)/Original-men and women:
on-this-planet
Re: Latest-video from the Amexem-Moor-Empire:
Imperial-Government
I.S.L.A.M.:
On the behalf of the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Constitutional-Monarch, His-Imperial-Majesty: Emperor: An-Anu-El: Bey and the-entire: Amexem-Moor-Empire: National-Collective , peace, good-health, and much-prosperity: be-upon-you.
For the record, please-find-below a link for the latest-video from the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Broadcasting-Agency by the order from the Operations-Director : Distinguished-Noble:

Seti-Hotep: Bey under the authority of the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Minister For The Communications,
His-Excellency: Grand-Noble: Dan-El
For the record, we-request-that-you: share the link with brothers and sisters, in-your-cipher/circle, if-you-appreciate the information therein the video.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jjvWR25ViQY
>Of the dispatching by the Amexem-Moor-Empire:
Imperial-Broadcasting-Agency: Staff

| 28167|2009-03-13 07:51:14|pharoahisrael@yahoo.com|Fw: THE CULTURAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE KANAANITE PEOPLES|

--- On Wed, 3/11/09, pharoahisrael@yahoo..com wrote:

From: pharoahisrael@yahoo.com
Subject: THE CULTURAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE KANAANITE PEOPLES
To: "Marion Lamar Perryman"
Date: Wednesday, March 11, 2009, 5:28 PM

THE CULTURAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE KANAANITE PEOPLES
THE MOORI
Table of Contents
1. The Secrets Of The Word YHWH And The Name ALLAH.
2. Ancestral Venerations
3. YAH
4. The Order Of Melchizedek/The Cult Of The Ancestors
5. Asherah, Goddess Of Canaan-Israel
6. Tree Of Life
7. Henotheism
8. Animism
9. The Culture Wars : The Most Important Conflicts
10. Academic Deceptions
11. Ancestral Teachings
12. IGBOLOGY-Vs-Judaism and Hebrewism
13. The Moorish, Igbo And Yoruba Legacy
The Secrets Of The Word YHWH And The Name ALLAH
(Note: In the interest of objectiveness, peace and clarity it is advised that those who are Emotional or Sensitive read the written portions of this Essay First before examining the Websites that are given herein for references and Evidence.)

The Secret of the Sacred Word YHWH and the Name ALLAH has been revealed by Anthropologists, Archaeologists, Ethnologists, Linguistics, Tribal Sources and Israelite Metaphysicians.
The word YHWH and The Name ALLAH is shown to be nothing more than the Representation of The Sacred Holy Royal Family of The Canaanite-Israelite-Phoenician Peoples (Sabeans, Hebrew-Israelites, Moabites and others) and their Ancestral Venerations. As such it represents their Physics and Metaphysics System for Ancient and Modern Israelites/Moors. Y = El or Baal as The Father El, The Chief Baal. H is Asherah the Mother, W or V corresponds to Baal as the Son Of El and Asherah and H is the Daughter Anath or Anith.The Sacred Word and Name YHWH The ALLAH also corresponds to the Four Living Elements of The Kanaanite Worlds of Nature and Spirit. Yod is El as Fire, He is Mother Asherah as The Living Waters. This includes the Natural Waters as well as the SpiritualWaters of The Firmament/Universe. She is the counterbalancing Element to El who is the Consuming Fire. Without her, the All-Powerful Mother, none can approach to El. Waw or Vau is Baal the Son who is Air and depicted as the Lord/Baal/God of Storms, Winds, Thunders and Lightenings. And Heh is Anath as the Daughter, the Earth Goddess which is All the Forces of Nature. She is the counter-balance and consort of Baal the Son.
Again, Y is Yod, El the Father as The Aethers. H is He the Mother Asherah. The Ashe which is The Living Waters of All Life. She is The Life force which is The Intelligent Conscious Substances. V or W is Waw or Vau as Baal the True Son Born of the Living Fire and Living Waters being the offsprings and products. And H isHeh. Anith the Daughter as Earth, Anima which is Living Conscious Substance and Creatures. She is Generator, Producer, The Former of Matter and Substance, The Sustainer.... The Repository of All. They are also the Mental-Spiritual, Psychic-Physical Chemical Formulas for All of Life as the Chemical Signs.
1. Ether is The Living Gases
2. Fire is Nitrogen
3. Air is Oxygen
4. Water is Hydrogen
5. Earth is Carbon

These are the Four Living Conscious Elements and the Ether the Intelligent Force. It is the same forAL-LAH as EL/AL the Father, the Fire and Mother Asherah asLAH and YAH.
She is the Living Waters and Regulator of the Life Force and Elemental Forces everywhere and this is The God.! This is The Great Five and The Great Four of The Ankh-Kabbalah Cross and Five Point Star of The Canaanite World and The Canaanite Torah, The Word!
This is also the Metaphysic Spirituality and theScience of Physics ofthe Ancestral World of The Canaanite-Israelite-Sabean-Phoenician Peoples who inhabited Canaan, West Africa, Moorish Spainand Americathat Scientists have used in our modern schools to build the Industrial Mechanical Scientific Technological World of the present BUT mis-represented and mis-taught to us as the False, Dumb, Blind Systems called RELIGIONS.

Along with these are the State-Sponsored System of FALSE SCIENCE called DARWINISM which is The THEORY of a Animal-Based (Ape-Man, Dog-Man, Cat-Man)
Genesis of Human Beings mis-represented as EVOLUTION.
The Canaanite Torah survives to this day as the Basis of The Modern World as what is called/mis-called The Christian Holy Bible of The West and The Holy Koran (Quran) of The Islamic Muslims of The East along with the Scientific Technology of The Modern World.

ANCESTRAL VENERATIONS

Let us be clear on Ancestral Venerations. It is not a worship of the Ancestral Persons over God even though in the Indigenous Sense of the term God/Goddess as Father-Mother is the Greatest Ancestorand Chief of all the Ancestors whether they be good or bad. Ancestral Veneration is the practice of identifying one's family, tribal, ethnic and national ancestors and then emulating them in thoughts, words, deeds and acts. For a more fuller definition of Ancestor Venerations go to Yoruba Spirituality and search in the archives for articles on such by Queen Mother Adinnasse, Sis. Yetunde Baderinwa, Nana Kwesi Ra Nehem Akhan and other group members.There are also other teachers, guides and Instructors in the Spirituality Traditions of Indigenous Peoples.
These truths remove ignorance, fear and divisions from among us by restoring our traditional spiritual and nature systems that are IDENTICAL and similar with parallels, correspondences, synthesis and relations.
See Yoruba Spirituality,
1. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Yoruba_Spirituality/
Moro-Kongo-Judio,
2. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/MoroKongJudio/
Spiritual Nationalism,
3. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Spiritual_Nationalism/

YAH

It is known that Yah or Lah is a Aspect of The Chief Power Goddess and Mother of Life known as Asherah.As the Ashe itself she is the Life Force and Sustainer. She is associated with EL as his consort and wife and is also seen as a aspect of the power of El too but still The Life Force in her own right. As time went on this aspect of the Mother Life grew to such extent and importance that it was adopted and used as a Name and Epithet of EL himself. Also El, Yah and Lah was used as a epithetin personal namesof a Hero/Heroine Messiah, Man or Woman, hence the saying that The God appeared in the form of a person. This is a reference to the Afro-Asiatic Indigenous System of a Guardian Patron Spirit,The Ruler of The Head so to speak.
And that is how we get the switch from EL to YAH among the Elohists and Yahwists of the Ancestor Traditions.

The Order Of Melchizedek

THE CULT OF THE ANCESTORS

The celebrated Order of Melchizedek is the Order of The Eternal Ancestors and Forces called Ishim or Ashim in the Canaanite Traditions. Melchizedek is none other than the Ancestral Person and Spirit of the Canaanite Peoples. Iman-U-El Yahshua Yisrael Yehuda Ben-Yoseph, (whether he actually lived or is a Symbolic Image)is clearly shown to be the Ritualistic Son, Prince, King and Messiah of this Ancestral Order. Born of a Virgin Mother whose mother Mary-Am was A VIRGIN HIGH PRIESTESS and whose Father Yoseph Ben-Canaan was a Patriarch, High Priest and Elder of the Clan both of in whom the Holy Ancestral Spirits of the clan resided.
It is also to be noted that the root letters of the name Yahshua is actually the words Yah and Ashe. Again,the Mother Goddess and The Life Force used as a epithet in the name of a Messiah.
This is the Cult of Our Canaanite Ancestors still worshipped today in Fraternities and Sororities in the Western and Eastern World in The Greek Orders, Freemasonry, The Arabic Order of The Mystic Noble Shrine, The Order of The Eastern Stars and many others.

ASHERAH, Goddess of Canaan-Israel

A noted fact is that Mother Asherah is the Sacred Pole with Wings on itthat The Pharoanic Moses held up in the wilderness for the Israelites to look at tobe healed. A interesting website is given below that should be of particular interest to all the Hebrew-Israelite/Moorish Black Americans of Native Ancestry. The site discusses the concepts and practices surrounding the Israelite Goddess The Holy Shekinah. Again experienced Israelites know thatTetragrammaton (The Sacred WordYHVH) is a euphemism for the Canaanite SacredHoly RoyalFamily and The Four Elements of Nature Fire, Air, Water and Earth.The word as a working symbol is a Glyph that deals with their forces, powers and properties. The word is actually feminine in it's pronounciation and in the conduct of nature rituals and metaphysical practices. The word describes the aspects of God to the Israelite Moors as the Feminine Archetype with its Symbolic God-Form.
Since the Goddess takes on many diverse forms, variations and manifestations the Israelite Metaphysicists said that the God has no form hence came about the saying that YHVH has no form. No One Singular Form That Is.!!!
Israelite Metaphysicists taught that the word itself as a glyph stands for the Masculine and Feminine Elements that the Cosmic/Earth Goddess exhibited as the creations, transformations and regenerations. YH being Fire and Air and VH being Water and Earth the Elements coming into life as Man/Woman, Male and Female. It should be noted that the Elements are bi-natured each one having a male/female, etheric/physical manifestation expression and so on.
See Jewitchery,
5. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Judeo_Neo-Paganism
Biblical Beginnings In Canaan,

6. http://www.mystae.com/restricted/streams/thera/canaan.html
Yah's Bovine Forms And Images And The Name Of Allah,
7. http://www.bibleorigins.net/YahwehsBovineFormsImages.html
http://www.investigateislam.com/MoonGod....htm
http://www.inthenameofallah.org/Abd%200R%20Black%20Slave.html
http://www.answer-islam.org/AllahOrigin.html
Judaism An African Way Of Life,
8. http://fortunecity.com/millenium/zebedee/67/afinf.htm
http://www.stewartsynopsis.com/africans_wrote_the_bible.htm
Canaanite Myth And Hebrew Epic, The Many Faces of God, 9. http://amazon.com/review/R3L295TWONBT45
http://www.amazon.com/Faces-God-Canaanite-Mythology-Theology/dp/0882141171
Mamiwata, Organization Of Traditional African Healers (MWHS),
10. http://www.mamiwata.com/voodoohistory.html
http://www.mamiwata.com/lineage13.html

TREE OF LIFE

The Evidence makes it clear that Mother Asherah is The Three Pillars of The Temple. She is called Qodesh/Kadesh and She is the actual Tree of Life of The Kanaanite Peoples which is now known as The Physics and Metaphysical System called Kabbalah by moderns. The word Kabbalah means to recieve. This simply illustrates the truth of the matter that the Tree of Life and its Branches has its Roots, Nourishment, Development and Sustenation in The Life Force, The ASHE.!
See Also : The Lost Goddess Of Israel, http://www.archaeology.org/0503/abstracts/israel....html , And Israelite Religion To Judaism: The Evolution Of The Religion Of Israel, http://www.adath-shalom.ca/israelite_religion.htm
These scholarly studies shows that Canaanite Peoples had no system of what we today call " Religions " and that instead their system was of Spirit and Nature, Physics and Metaphysics.!

HENOTHEISM

The evidence shows thatKanaan'sPhysics andMetaphysical system was like that of All Afro-Asiatic groups and peoples. That is henotheistic. Now seeHenotheism and that is just what the Aramaic System of the Canaanite Ancestors were as founded and practiced by their ownselves. This is the system now referred to as Judaismgenerally and among African/Black American Hebrew-Israelitescalled HEBREWISM.!
Henotheism,
11. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Henotheism
http://www.class.uidaho.edu/ngier/henotheism.htm
For the skeptics metaphysical investigation has convinced earnest scholars and laypersons that The Most High gave The Pharoanic Moses no name at all but Ehyeh Asher Ehyeh meaning I AM THAT I AM, I AM WHAT I AM. After that the Pharoanic Moses was given the Word YHVH as a working model for the formulas done for the Spiritual, Physical, Elemental purposes and the same applies to the Name AL-LAH.!
Yah-Veh the Israelite Goddess is a veil to the Israelite Moors similar to the Veiled Isis of Egypt and Ninurta of Sumeria. Another point of High Interset and Particular imporatance is that to Our Ancestors the word and terms Mind and Spirit are Synonomous.One and The Same Thing.!

In other words Mental Operations are Spiritual and Spiritual Operations are Mental. And thus we can see that the very word, term and name itself YHWH-ALLAH is none other than the essential force of the Mother Goddess-Father God with the especial emphasis on the Mother Substance which name means Material/Matter and the many countless variations of its elements, forces and properties. These forces and properties appear as the Earth, Suns, Moons, Planets, Stars and the Material Universe itself. It manifests the living substance and matter called cellular or animate and all non-living non-animate substances and matter. This Cosmic/Earth Substance manifests as living organisms specific to us as Man/Woman and all other living creatures in general whether they be in spiritual form or physical forms.
And that is the very basis, origin and development of the True Real Science that is called PHYSICS and the Traditional Indigenous Spiritualities called METAPHYSICS which is the Reality behind all the false, dumb, blind hypnotic systems called Religions.
Again I must note some Important Truths for Israelite Moors and others. One is that there is actually no terms for the words God and Goddess in the Indigenous language of Black societies in Early Africa, Asia, Australia, Europe, North and South America. Neither in the Tribal societies or the Classical Nations. That is Nubia, India, Egypt, Sumeria, Libya, Canaan, Afro-Greece, Olmec America or Yoruba, Zulu, Igbo, Akan, Mande, Kongo, Galla, Oromo, Maasai, Ewe, Moor,Tamil, Washitaw, Cherokee-Seminole etc.
When the Ancestors referred to what we now call " God and Goddess" they thought of Ancestors, Forces and The Elements and used such in their Spirituality and Physics. For a better description of this thanI can give see the Group Sites below.
Ta Seti Group Site,
12. http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta_Seti/message/27401
Yoruba Spirituality,
13. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Yoruba_Spirituality/message/12 and American Pharoahs,
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/AmericanPharoahs/message/327
This was the Ancestral Practice in Kanaan for Men and Women, Baals and Baalats.
Another truth is that ALL of the Spirituality Metaphysical systems of our Indigenous Ancestors is Called VODUN. !!!
In this system a person is taught to honor, venerate and practice the spirituality of one's own particular family, community, tribe, ethnic group and self while respecting and considering the practical systems of other persons and tribal-ethnic groups. It is this true system that the various Religions have suppressed and replaced with allof the Tribal, Gender, Ethnic, Racial, Class Prejudices and National Divisions that Religions have brought about with the confusions along with them. I personally believe that Black Societies have Lost The Key Of Vodun or Ignored it for far too long which has produced all of the negative results and differences in our communities all over " blind belief and faith systems ".

ANIMISM

And yet another truth is that the Oldest, Realest and Most Reliable Science of Human Evolution is ANIMISM. This is the PHYSICS Science of the Ancestors. Animism teaches us that man/woman and all living organisms are the products of the Great Five Living Elements that are Ether, Fire, Air, Water and Earth. That these Living Conscious Elements are Intelligent and Builds us as Intelligent, Sensible Emotional Creatures.

Animism teaches us that Intelligence and Force which is ANI, Life, Spirit is in all living creatures in varying degrees as well as in the Earth, The Planets and The Material Universe. That this Earth is a Living Planet, a Living Organism whose survival mentality and consciousness in the universe we are in is far far greater than we know.

As for intelligent living Man and Woman are the only creatures on the planet that can consciously increase or even decrease ours by CHOICES and the ways that we live whereas all the other animals are set in their ways by nature altogether although all living creatures possess a survival mentality and evolutionary sense by nature that pertains to their own specific kind. Modern Science gives credit to our Ancestors by calling the Elements as Fire: Nitrogen, Air : Oxygen, Water : Hydrogen, Earth : Carbon and Ether :

Plasma. This Ether or Plasma is also The Asherah, Yewe-Yahwe-Yaa.! The Mother Substance of Dark Matter that pervades the Universe from which all living creatures and non-animate matter is produced out of. There are millions of elements and sub-elements but the Great Five are The Only Living Ones.! This alone will help to explain about the Earth, the other planets and the material universe around us although our main primary focus should be on this Earth.

Animism is The Black Science, The Black Physics. It should be noted that it is the science for everyone though whether Black, Brown, White, Red or Yellow. The one based on us the Human Beings. This is the only Biological, Psychological, Anatomical and Anthropological Science that the world has ever had or ever will have. This knowledge andscience hatrks back to the times of the Indigenous Tribal Societies and their Classical Nations when Spiritual Philosophy and the Animist Physical Sciencess walked hand-in-hand together for the benefit and education of humanity.

See Animism*,
http://www.erasmatazz.com/library/Mind/Animism.html
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Natural_Sciences
http://www.1902encyclopedia.com/A/ANI/animism.htm

THE CULTURE WAR :
The Most Important Conflict

To end this short essay on cultural mattersI will just say this. What is called JUDAISM and HEBREWISM should be called ARAMAICor KANAANITE.This Aramaic is Kanaanite language, culture and science. This Aramaic is Kanaanite Spirituality-

VODUN and Kanaanite Physics-ANIMISM, the Kanaanite Science. This Aramaic is the system of the Mesopotamian Valley and although it is wholly indigenous it shares identity and relations with the older Nile Valley Systems of Nubia and Egypt and the Indus Valley Systems of India and Sumeria.
Kanaan is the land and peoples between the two lands meaning the entire Arabian Penisular (formerly the Sabean Penisular). The two lands being Sumeria to the North and East and Egypt to the South and West. Original and Modern Kanaan is Lebanon, Israel, Syria, Palestine and Saudi Arabia. The migration of Our Canaanite Ancestors into Western Africa from the times of c. 500 B.C. to about700 A.D. among the Intelligent Indigenous Peoples already there is a noted factor that helped to produce the Medieval Age Classical Civilizations in those ancient societies of Ghana, Mali and Songhai-Nigeria.
It is to be noted that the relations between the peoples of West Africa and North-East Africa stretches back for some five-thousand years or more as all of these societies were Coastal Nations united by the Atlantic Coast, The Mediterranean and Overland Trade Routes. The indigenous peoples of West Africa were alrady skilled in the wayof advanced civilization. This region is where the Southwestern Europeans and Indian Arabs got all of the primary technical knowledge with which to produce the Modern Industrial Mechanical Scientific Technological World that we have today.
The other two (2) factors was the rise of the Graeco-Roman Renaissance Period among White Intellectuals in Europe and America and The Black Moors of WestAfrica and Spainalong with theTranatlantic Slave Trade of Skilled Black Peoplesand Inventors brought to America and Europe from the shores of West African Nations mostly Igbo and Yoruba(with some Mande, Akan, Ewe, Fon, Hausa and others). There was a Arab-Indian Slave Trade of Black Peoplestoo but the Transatlantic Slave Trade is what got America on top of the World. It is also no coincidence The Olmec Peoples who are the First Native Americans have the oldest science, language and culture in the Americas overall and Kanaanites have the second one based in North America.
See The Olmec Peoples,
14. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Olmec
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cascajal_Block
The Metcalf Stone,
15. http://www.badarchaeology.net/data/ooparts/metcalf.php
http://hope-of-israel.org/hebinusa.htm (Everyone inanthropology and archaeology in the South-SoutheastUnited States knows that the Cherokee-Seminole-Yuchi-Muscogee Indians and related sub-tribal groups were a dark-skinned peoples with straight hair and kinky woolly hair. Their origin stories are even more astounding. In the Muscogee Perspectives they state that they are children of the Olmec while others cite the Ewe, Ibo and other West African Groups. Yu-Chi itself has been transliterated as being " from the Ewe " while we know what " Chi " means in Ibo in the teachings on a person's spirituality)
See Also : Washitaw-Seminole,
http://www.stewartsynopsis.com/washitaw.htm

http://members.tripod.com/jrmoore/1958/seminole And Lost Feather, The Indigenous Black American Indians:The Moors, http://members.tripod.com/pointingbird/lostfeatherintl/index.htm
This goes to show that Black Americans have two (2) great indigenous ancestries here that are before, during and after the Transatlantic Slave Trade these being the Cherokee-Seminole Mound-Building Traditions and our West African Heritage. I am aware that as time went on we now share our ancestries with Caucasians, Indian and Oriental ethnicities while primarily still remaining who we are as a Black Peoples.
In an earlier post that I wrote to Yoruba Spirituality/Bro. Yao-Heru-Tehuti entitled : Physical Appearance of Ancient Israel, some parts of the cultural and ontological sections will have to be amended to reflect the information contained in this Essay. The Moori (Moor, Mori, Amu, Amurru, Amorite) as a Tribal-Ethnic group will also have to be added as the root/base of the Canaanite Peoples along with the OriginalBlack Arab Population known as The AncientSabeans.. This is for the interest of honesty, truthfulness, unity, tribal and socio-ethnic conciliations among Black (Moorish) Americans in the West.
See Yoruba Spirituality,
16. http://group.yahoo.com/group/Yoruba_Spirituality/message/398
http://group.yahoo.com/group/Yoruba_Spirituality/message/399
Also I would like for no one to get me wrong. I am not saying that there were never any Caucasians, Indians and Orientals in Egypt, Canaan, Sumeria and Dravidian India. At some point these peoples did enter those societies but as Indigenous Teachers and Black Scholars (Winters, Diop, Jochanan, Hilliard, Williams, James, J.A. Rogers, Welsing) point out they contributed nothing to the arts, sciences, literature, mechanics, industry, technology and spirituality of those societies. It is the same truth for West Africa, Australia and the Early Americas. Only in our Modern Medieval and Post-Medieval contemporary society have Aryan Caucasians, Indinas and orientals contricuted to the arts, sciences, industry, literature and technology that now dominates the Western and Eastern world.

ACADEMIC DECEPTIONS

Another promblem to take into account is that Caucasian and Arab scholars more so than other groups have mastered the Art Of Deception. For instance when we go through the books of The Pharoanic Moses such as Dueteronomy (which is similar to the Yoruba Oduduwa and Ifa in thought and structure), Joshua, Samuel, Judges and so on and on we can see that the stories as told by Caucasians and Arabs in their versions are far different from the actual accounts as told by the Canaanite Peoples themselves. This is in regards to almost every single incident. (See Encyclopedia Judaica, A-Z, to get a good clear picture of what I mean). We also know that Canaanites would not put a curse on themselves intheirown sacred writings.
The Art of Academic Deception has 3 main components that I know of.
No. 1 : Mixing The Histories Of Peoples And Cultures. This is done to make it seem as if White peoples were present among the Early Societies of Asia and Africa and were the better tribes or groups. This way the establishment can profit off of confusion, deceit and ignorance of the oppressed peoples while falsely programming their own people too.

No. 2 : Swithching The Histories Of Peoples And Cultures. The practice of switching the histories of different peoples outright. Call it Trading Places if you will. This false way of re-writing history pretends that only Whites, Indians and Orientals were educated and civilized, that Black peoples were savage and uncivilized, and that among the Whites, Indians and Orientals the Caucasian Group was the most progressive. The Lies have been proven to be totally false but the damage still remains.

No. 3 :Teaching Half-Truths and Half-Lies. This may be the most dangerous one of all. for instance when a person is taught something about a people or culture and it is a half-truth/half-lie it is impossible or nearly impossible for a unskilled and untrained mind to diffrentiate from what is really fact and what is really fiction. It is much easier to accept the incomplete teaching as the whole truth and go on from there to make do as best as one can.

Caucasians, Indians, Orientals, Bi-Racials, Eurocentric and Indocentric Black peoples then believe these false and incomplete teachings and go out to act on them and live by them. It is the worst and most dangerous form of indoctrinatedprogramming known to date.

Let us look at something. The Canaanite Mortuary Practices. When there were stillborn fetuses, babies and small children that died our Ancestors customs was to embalm, mummify and cremate the child's remains. In each of these procedures the deceased child passed through all of the Elements of Earth, Water, Air and Fire. There was some significant meaning to this. When European and Arab Scholars find these remains in the Canaanite mauseleoums they call the practice " child sacrifice ". Again when we read their version of our history they make it seem as if the Canaanite-Israelites-Phoenicians were all different peoples in the same land with the same ancestries going around killing each other, sacrificing their babies to demons, and other such foolishness. This is because they did such things themselves in their Euro-Indo Asian Cultures. By now we should see clearly through the mist and fog of these Dangerous and Fraudelent Lies that support Caucasian and Arab Indian imperialism against Black societies.

ANCESTRAL TEACHINGS

I believe that all Black Americans should realize that there are Ancestral Teachings in all of our organizations the U.N.I.A. of Hon. Marcus and Amy Jacques Garvey, The Nation Of Islam (s), The AfricanHebrew-Israelites (s), The Moorish Science Temples Of America (MSTA), The Five-Percent Nation Of Islam, The Nuwaubian Nation Of Moors, Black Freemasons/Eastern Star Sororities,Black Greeks, Several Underground Groups and even Black Christianity and Black Islam. The Source of This Knowledge comes fromthe Indigenous Traditional Afrikan Spirituality- The VODUN and Animism, Egyptologists, Sumerologists, and Black Kabbalists.

On the matter of the transmission of knowledge or the transfer of technology from one culture and peoples to another I am aware that many distinguished peoples hold that the American-European, Oriental and Indo-Arab societies of today descended from the earlier African Egypto-Sumerian world or borrowed from it largely. I give much weight and credit to all those men and women who know more than I do about culture and ancestry but my views detail another source.

In short, my own personal research and social studies have led me to conclude that the gist of the matter is that Caucasian Whites and Indian Arabs have based their Entire Cultures on Stolen Kanaanite Spirituality and Science and then gave us a Mangled, Garbled, Distorted, Corrupted, Purgated and Horribly Disfigured copy and version of such in their Basic Classical Textbooks known as the CaucasianChristian Holy Bible and the Indian Arab Holy Koran (Quran).
With the correct information from Anthropological, Archaeological, Ethnological, Linguistic and Tribal Sources we should rewrite these volumes aright OR let them have theirs and write our own Bibles and Science books as Afrocentric Scholars and Theologians have called for.
We owe it to ourselves most of all. !!!
See Israelite Identity,
17. http://encyclopediaegypt.com/israel/eg-blond.htm
Canaanites, by Jonathan Tubb, http://www.amazon.com/Canaanites-Peoples-Past-Jonathan-Tubb/dp/0714120898#reader
It Ain't Necessarily So,
http://www.abc.net.au/compass/s771288.htm
Also to be noted in honesty to the Canaanite Peoples the Land of Canaan included The Sinai Peninsula and Saudi Arabia. This is important because of The Sabean Elements and its historical connection with Canaan being two Black Ethnic Groups, Moors and Sabeans in the same proximity.
Canaan, http://www.wikinfo.org/index.php./Canaan http://www.answers.com/topic/canaan
The Nation Of Abraham, Canaanite-Israelite Roots: The Mythical Curse On Canaan Exposed, by Moreh Titus, http://www.nazoraean.com/canaan.html
IGBOLOGY- Vs.- Judaism and Hebrewism
After all of this in comparison to the Original Indigenous Moorish Spirituality and Animist System of Kanaanite Culture in relation to Islam-Christianity and in spite of All the Identicals, Similarities, Relations, Parallels and Correspondences between Igboism and Hebrewism-Judaism I have to agree with Bro. Akunna Madueke and other Indigenous Teachers that it stands to common sense, basic reasoning and simple logic as towhich of thetwo (Kanaanite, Igbology) are the oldest, original and more purer in comparison

to
Islam-Christianity and Judaism-Hebrewism.
See Olaudah Equiano,
18. http://www.freewebs.com/radah/olaudahequiano.htm
http://www.freewebs.com/radah/sumerianhebrews.htm
http://www.freewebs.com/radah/Kushatonjudaism.htm along with Manifesto/Historical Israel, by LeRico Richardson, http://www.freewebs.com/radah/index.htm
Lasting Impressions, New Bullae Reveal Egyptian Style Emblems On Judah's Royal Seals, http://www.archaeological-center.com/en/monographs/m13/
Factoring in cultural exchanges, migrations, intermixtures, tribalism, ethnicism, wars, colonialism and cultural imperialisms those who are of descent from the Indigenous Kanaanite Moors and Indigenous West Africans here in the United States ought to end All pretense of cultural integration and return outright to the practices, traditions and heritage of the Indigenous American (Canaanite) Moors, Ndi Igbo, Ewe and Yoruba Peoples in North, South, Central and the Island Nations (Haiti, Cuba, Jamaica, etc.) so that we can START ALL OVER AGAIN. !!!
See Kwenu :Our Culture, Our Future, by Bro. Akunna Madueke,
19. http://www.kwenu.com/ndiigbo/hebrew_connection.htm
Emphasis On WestAfrica, by Hon. Zachary P. Gremillion-EL, Canaanite Temple No. 1, http://members.tripod.com/sunbull/id38.htm
Odinani, Igbo Monotheism,http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Igbo_mythology
The Religion Of The Yorubas, by J. Olumide Lucas, http://www.amazon.com/Religion-Yorubas-J-Olumide-Lucas/dp/0963878786
Ekwe Nche Research Institute, Igbo Nations,http://ekwenche.org/
The Moorish, Igbo And Yoruba Legacy
I wrote this short essay for Black Americans in general but primarily for Black Americans who identify with The Canaanite Hebrew-Israelite and Moorish Moabite Heritage, Culture and Teachings.
Those who are of or claim descent from the Ancient Canaanite Israelites through the Tribal-Ethnic lineage of The Moors, Igbo-Ewe, Washitaw Cherokee-Seminole Mound (Pyramid) Building Traditions and Yoruba related peopleswould do well to focus on our Tribal Vodun Ethnic Animist Culture and Teachings so as to return aright to our Ancestral Physic and Metaphysic System. American Hebrew Israelite-Moors should be proud, overjoyed and rejoice about Our Ontology and rush to embrace it. Not be sad and despondent about it. After all We Now KNOW who EL and YAH is. Who They Actually are as the Father-Mother God-Force given to us and represented by the Holy Sacred Word and Name the Tetragrammaton (YHWH-YHVH) the AL-LAH.
At the very least we should embrace the Kanaanite Spirituality and Animist Science of

The Ancestors.!
In fact those who are Indigenous American Moors in the West should focus on The Moori, Igbo-Yoruba heritage and language and raise Our Indigenous Ethnic System to Classical Knowledge and Practice again. I believe that we should promote our indigenous culture and traditions here in the Western Hemisphere as other tribal ethnic groups native to the Americas are doing. After all we are at the very least full-blooded Moor-Igbo and Moor-Yoruba.
See The Washitaw Peoples, by Aashid,
20. http://goarchie.com/aashid/washpeop.html
HOTEP-Washitaw,
http://www.hotep.org/pages/washitaw.php
Washitaw-MUURS-MOORS-Moabites, by Daughters of Ruth, http://www.geocities.com/maatguidesme2u/daughters_of_ruth_moabite/washitaw.htm
Also See Abibitumikasa, http://groups.yahoo.com/group/abibitumikasa/ And New Afrikan Vodun, Spiritual Nationalism,
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/spiritual_nationalism/
The Moorish, Igbo and Yoruba Identity Of Black Americans,
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/AmericanPharoahs/message/380
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/AmericanPharoahs/message/373
I Remain,
MLP.,
UAACA-BFN,
Pharoah Isra'Ilu-EL,
Israelite Moor,
Ndi Igbo-Yoruba-Ewe,
BlackFederal Nationalists,
American Federal Nationalists.

On Wed, Mar 11, 2009 at 1:18 PM, nye nem <lordabba@gmail.com> wrote:
HOWEVER, THE BIBLE TELLS YOU THAT CANAAN WAS THE CURSED SEED WITH THE DIS-EASE OF LEPROSY WHICH CAUSES THE SKIN TO DISCOLOR AND THE HAIR TO TURN YELLOW. IT IS ACTUAL FACT. NOW WHY WOULD CAUCASIANS CONCUR THAT IT IS THEY WHO ARE THE DESCENDANTS OF A CURSED RACE IF THIS WERE NOT SO? WHO WOULD CALL THEMSELVES "BLACKS" AND ADMIT TO BEING WHAT THE BIBLE CLEARLY DEFINES CANAAN AS AN ALBINO?

On Wed, Mar 11, 2009 at 1:12 PM, Lamar Perryman <pharoahisrael@yahoo.com> wrote:
In a Bronze plaque from hazor 15th century b.c. in Harper's Bible Dictionary is a picture of Canaan. All Black Scolars that I know of and Even Euro-Indian ones do not dispute the fact that Canaan is, was and still is a Black Man/Woman Person.!!!

> Pg. 150-53, Canaanites...!
>
> --- On Wed, 3/11/09, nye nem <lordabba@gmail.com> wrote:
>
> From: nye nem <lordabba@gmail...com>
> Subject: Re: THE CULTURAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE KANAANITE PEOPLES
> To: "Lamar Perryman" <pharoahisrael@yahoo.com>
> Date: Wednesday, March 11, 2009, 4:59 PM
>
> THIS IS TAKEN FROM A POST THAT EYE DID ON CANAAN LAST YEAR
>
> WE ARE NOT DESCENDANTS OF CANAAN. HERE IS THE PROOF!

| 28168|2009-03-13 07:51:39|odhiambo okecth|Congratulations to the Kenyan Media|
We must congratulate the Kenyan Press for coming together to mobilize Kenyans to help our fellow citizens who have been worstly afflicted by hunger.

The drive by the FM Radio Stations come hotly on the heels of the Mountain of Food Initiative by the Nation Media Group, and the one recently launched by The Standard Group.

This is really motivating. The success of these initiatives prove that Kenyans love and do care for each other.

On behalf of Komarocks Community Development Network, I would like to thank our local media, fellow Kenyans and all friends of goodwill who have responded to these calls for support. It proves that we are all Kenyans and our plight is our collective responsibility.

At KCDN, we are also putting in our two cents in support;
http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

God bless the Kenyan Media, God bless KCDN and God bless Kenya.

Odhiambo T Oketch
CEO KCDN Nairobi.

| 28169|2009-03-13 07:51:54|cristofori whitakara|Re: "N"|
thats really interesting to me as related to the biblical story of adam taking a 'rib' to create hawwah/eden/eve or mother of living.

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ferg wrote:

From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 9:36 AM

?
Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TIas NINA meansmother in Bantu. I understand that TIis aSumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate asthe mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
> Peace
>
> In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.
>
> I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba S English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, e the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.
>
> Simba in Kikongo means:
>
> ? to hold up
> ? to keep (a thing)
> ? to bless
> ? to treasure
> ? to touch
> ? to retain
>
> Simbi means:
>
> ? a keeper; a watch over
> ? someone with power to protect
> ? a living power/energy that holds up everything
>
> All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM

Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM

Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM

There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

| 28170|2009-03-13 11:20:02|clyde winters|Re: "N"|
Hi
In the Sumerian tradition women were first and man (males) were made from the rib.
Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:19 AM

thats really interesting to me as related to the biblical story of adam taking a 'rib' to create hawwah/eden/ eve or mother of living.

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ferg wrote:

From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 9:36 AM

?
Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TIas NINA meansmother in Bantu. I understand that TIis aSumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate asthe mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
Somo

----- Original Message -----
From: Asar Imhotep
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"

Peace

In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living e womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "M Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as w

I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. S English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living p the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.

Simba in Kikongo means:

? to hold up
? to keep (a thing)
? to bless
? to treasure
? to touch
? to retain

Simbi means:

? a keeper; a watch over
? someone with power to protect
? a living power/energy that holds up everything

All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM

Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM

Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Nganga of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM

There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

| 28171|2009-03-13 13:53:26|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|China frets about U.S. treasury holdings|
http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29675114/
| 28172|2009-03-13 13:53:41|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too bad the gay and lesbian community don?t speak up about the millions of other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I read in this media anymore.

http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/
| 28173|2009-03-13 13:53:44|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Police Take Cash and Cars For Driving While Black|

http://newsone.blackplanet.com/nation/police-take-cash-and-cars-for-driving-while-black/

| 28174|2009-03-13 15:14:44|Mahari Mengistu|Re: "N"|
If logic were to be a part of the argument then that seems more logical. However, logic has never been an important consideration for these narcissistic, self-centered, warring mountain tribes from whence comes the three "big" religions (I call them "big" rather than great because there is nothing great about them) and the most recent editions of Afrakan-sourced religions.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:
>
> Hi
>
> In the Sumerian tradition women were first and man (males) were made from the rib.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:19 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> thats really interesting to me as related to the biblical story of adam taking a 'rib' to create > hawwah/eden/ eve or mother of living.
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ferg wrote:
>
> From: Ferg

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 9:36 AM
>
>
>
>
>
> Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TI as NINA means mother in Bantu. I understand that TI is a Sumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate as the mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
>
> Somo
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace
>
> In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (the womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss of Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.
>
> I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would shed some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba Simbi in English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, energy, the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.
>
> Simba in Kikongo means:
>
> □ to hold up
> □ to keep (a thing)
> □ to bless
> □ to treasure
> □ to touch

> □ to retain
>
> Simbi means:
>
> □ a keeper; a watch over
> □ someone with power to protect
> □ a living power/energy that holds up everything
>
> All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace
>
> Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.
>
> A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.
>
> NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:
>
> A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.
>
> Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep

> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursing that brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?
>
| 28175|2009-03-13 15:25:30|Mahari Mengistu|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
I think one lesson to take from this - apart from it being a huge expression of ignorance - is that throughout the black disapora we black folk do not have control over our youth.
One reason, I believe, is because they do not really respect black elders. And quickly, I will add that to a huge extent that is because we continually express ourselves as powerless and in powerless ways.
And I will also add that the expression of power does not really manifest itself in talking loud or speaking outlandishly. We must speak with clarity and with a workable plan that is centered in self-love, self-affirmation, self-determination and with DETERMINATION. When do we ever see that expressed or manifested?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too bad the gay and lesbian community don't speak up about the millions of other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I read in this media anymore.
>
> http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/
>
| 28176|2009-03-13 22:45:51|KAMAU|Buy How To Make A Negro Christian, & get another book, FREE!!!|
As a way to promote my book, I am giving away books!!
I am the author of a groundbreaking new work called How To Make A Negro Christian.
To help promote my work, I have created this Free Book Giveaway Campaign. When you purchase my book, you get to choose 1 of currently 14 offered titles to receive FREE! with your completed purchase.
Go to

http://negrochristian.webs.com for all of the details.

Listed below is the 3rd installment of FREE BOOKS being given away with the purchase of How To Make A Negro Christian. The initial idea is to change the site every 2 (two) weeks... however, that will really be determined by demand from you, the readers. If these books go quickly, then more books will be added sooner.

PLEASE BE REMINDED, UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED, ALL FREE BOOKS ARE REVIEW COPIES. Please go to the website for all the details

http://negrochristian.webs.com

ALSO PLEASE SEND A EMAIL TO kamau301@yahoo.com TO CHECK ON FREE BOOK AVAILABILITY BEFORE COMPLETING YOUR ORDER!!!

--Gullah Cultural Legacies:: A Synopsis of Gullah Traditions, Customary Beliefs, Art forms and Speech on Hilton Head Island and vicinal Sea Islands in South Carolina and Georgia (PB)
by Emory Campbell

--The Oprah Phenomenon (HB) FINISHED COPY
by Jennifer Harris & Elwood Watson

--Inheriting the Trade: A Northern Family Confronts Its Legacy as the Largest Slave-Trading Dynasty in U.S. History (PB)
by Thomas Norman DeWolf

--The Confidante: Condoleezza Rice and the Creation of the Bush Legacy (PB)
by Glenn Kessler

--The End of Days: Armageddon and Prophecies of the Return (PB)
by Zecharia Sitchin

--Fast Profits in Hard Times: 10 Secret Strategies to Make You Rich in an Up or Down Economy (PB)
by Jordan E. Goodman

--I Got Your Back: A Father and Son Keep it Real About Love, Fatherhood, Family, and Friendship
(PB)
by Eddie Sr Levert & Gerald Levert

--Letters to a Young Brother: MANifest Your Destiny (PB)
by Hill Harper

--Jesus Freaks: A True Story of Murder and Madness on the Evangelical Edge (PB)
by Don Lattin

--Walk Like A Warrior : A Young Man's Survival Guide (PB)
by The Health Initiatives for Youth

--The Scandalous Gospel of Jesus: What's So Good About the Good News? (PB)
by Peter J. Gomes

--Redemption: The Last Battle of the Civil War (PB)
by Nicholas Lemann

--Them: A Novel (PB)
by Nathan McCall

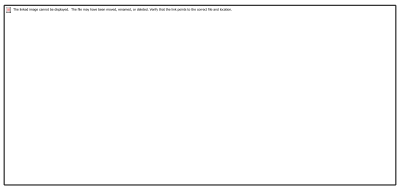
--Ghettonation: A Journey Into the Land of Bling and Home of the Shameless (PB)
by Cora Daniels
| 28177|2009-03-14 00:20:38|Mahari Mengistu|Egyptian treasures found in ancient tomb|

Egyptian treasures found in ancient tomb

From Wikinews, the free news source you can write!

Jump to: navigation, search

Friday, March 13, 2009



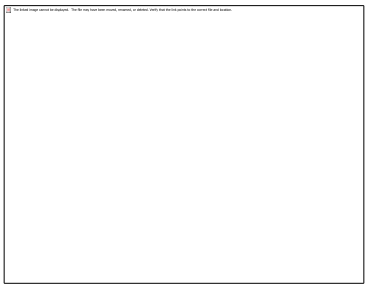
Egypt

Other stories from Egypt

- 13 March 2009: Egyptian treasures found in ancient tomb
- 22 February 2009: Over a dozen injured, one killed in bomb blast in Egypt
- 6 February 2009: Somali pirates agree to release Egyptian ship with fertiliser cargo and 28 crew
- 1 February 2009: Cyprus detains weapon-laden ship
- 15 January 2009: Israeli-Palestinian conflict: Day 20

...More articles here

Location of Egypt



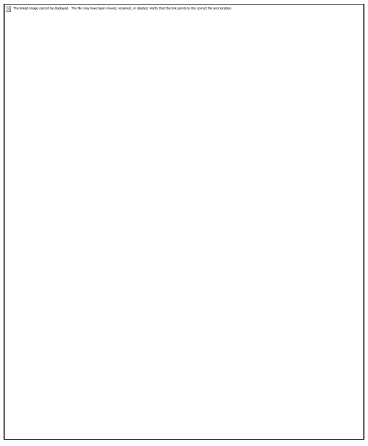
To write, edit, start or view other articles on Egypt, see the Egypt Portal

A team of archaeologists excavating an Ancient Egyptian tomb have discovered golden jewelry in a recently-discovered lower chamber at the Valley of the Kings burial site in Luxor, Egypt.

Two golden rings and five golden earrings were found in the tomb of Djehuty, an 18th-dynasty official of Queen Hatshepsut, and were probably the property of Djehuty or his family.

The discovery was announced by Farouk Hosni, Egypt's current Minister of Culture.

The Valley of the Kings



Djehuty was overseer of the treasury and overseer of works for the Queen. Hatshepsut reigned approximately 1479□1458 BCE. Djehuty was responsible for managing the huge amounts of precious goods brought in from Egypt's military expedition to Punt in the Horn of Africa and the vast building projects of Hatshepsut which have made the female pharaoh one of the most-remembered of any from ancient Egypt.

Djehuty died after Hatshepsut did, sometime during the reign of Thutmosis III. Both Hatshepsut's and Thutmosis's names are recorded on the tomb. In a fashion typical of ancient Egyptian rivalries, Hatshepsut's name was partly obscured on the monument over the tomb sometime after the queen's death.

The team, led by José Manuel Galán of the National Research Center (Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, CSIC), in Madrid, Spain, had been excavating the tomb, designated TT11 and located in the necropolis of Dra' Abu el-Naga', since 2002. While much of Djehuty's funerary equipment was lost to fire in antiquity, the lower chamber of his tomb was concealed at the end of a three-meter shaft and discovered at the end of 2008.

A superficial description of the tomb itself was recorded almost two hundred years ago by 19th-century French Egyptologist Jean-François Champollion, rubble blocking the entrance hindered excavation until the 21st century. In that time, emphasis in Egyptology has changed from the cataloging of treasures to the investigation of ancient culture, life and religion.

Since excavation began, Djehuty's tomb has yielded a number of surprises. It was discovered that the tomb was re-used repeatedly up to and during the Greco-Roman period. There is an unusual face-on depiction of pharaoh Thutmosis III hunting ducks, and the mummy of a young, bejewelled, as-yet unidentified woman.

Djehuty was an official of Hatshepsut

In 2007, 44 preserved bunches of flowers thought to be from Djehuty's funeral were found in the site. In their 8th season of excavation, which ended on February 22, 2009, the team also found considerable evidence that below Djehuty's tomb is a network of burial sites from the 11th dynasty, four thousand years old.

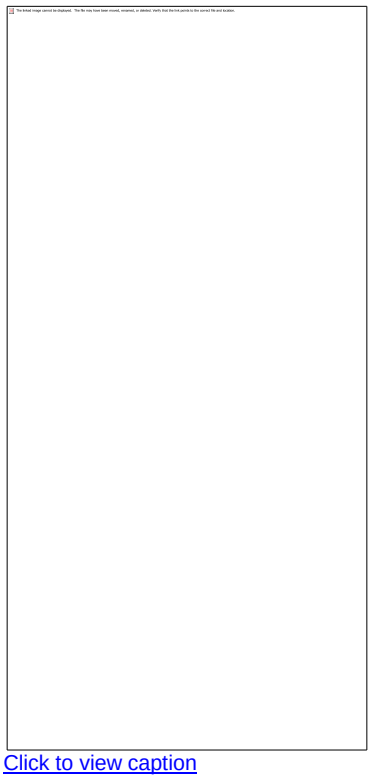
The lower chamber also displays passages from the Egyptian funerary text the Book the Dead on its walls and a colorful mural of the goddess Nut, an embodiment of the heavens, on the ceiling. The names of Djehuty and his parents were also intact in the second chamber; the names were defaced in the previously-known first chamber of the tomb, which had also been looted.

According to a press release from Dr. Zahi Hawass, Secretary General of Egypt□s Supreme Council of Antiquities, Djehuty's tomb is only the fifth known decorated burial chamber of the 18th dynasty. An additional unusual feature of the tomb is that its upper chamber is decorated in relief, rather than simply paint. When the excavation is completed, Dr Galán's team plans to open the site to the public as the carved stoneworks will not be destroyed by tourists' activities as paint would.

The identification of Djehuty is a complicated one, as a number of officials of the 18th dynasty bore the name, including a general and several governors. The name itself is an alternate transliteration of the name of the Egyptian god usually written in English as Thoth.

===

HTP,



Mahari

| 28178|2009-03-14 00:22:34|Mahari Mengistu|Sailing like an Egyptian|

Sailing like an Egyptian

How did the ancient Egyptians import goods by sea or travel to the fabled Land of Punt in search of gold, ebony and leopard skins? Nevine El-Aref finds out

---

Click to view caption

The ancient Egyptians pioneered the development of river craft for various uses, including agricultural and for transporting troops, cattle and building materials, as well as for funeral processions. But what about seafaring vessels? Until a few years ago, there was a widely held belief that the ancient Egyptians did not travel long distances by sea because of their poor naval technology. However, this view is changing.

Clockwise from top: the Min of the desert crossing the Red Sea; the crew on board; the reconstruction of Min

People in the past tended to assume that the ancient Egyptians did not make long-distance trips because little evidence of such journeys has been found. Based on this belief they also thought that the Land of Punt, the fabled source of many ancient Egyptian imports, could not have been located in the Horn of Africa, but must have been in southern Sinai.

However, these views have changed as a result of the unearthing of timber, rigging and cedar planks dating from the Middle Kingdom to early New Kingdom periods two years ago in the ancient Red Sea port of Marsa Gawasis, 23km south of Port Safaga. This discovery has shed light on ancient Egyptian naval technology and on the elaborate ancient Red Sea trade network.

"Sailing to Punt required a tremendous investment of manpower," ship archaeologist Mohamed Mustafa told Al-Ahram Weekly, explaining that ancient Egyptian shipbuilders harvested cedarwood from the mountains of Lebanon and transported it up the Nile to the site where the vessels were first assembled and then disassembled into travel-ready pieces that could be carried on a 10-day journey across about 100 miles of desert to the coast.

Based on texts discovered more than a century ago, researchers have long known that the ancient Egyptians mounted naval expeditions to Punt as far back as the Old Kingdom to obtain gold, ebony, ivory, leopard skins and the frankincense necessary for religious rituals. The hides of giraffes, panthers and cheetahs, worn by temple priests, were imported along with live animals either for the priests' own menageries or as religious sacrifices, including the sacred cynocephalus or dog-faced baboon. Little wonder, then, that Punt became known as the "Land of the Gods" and as the personal pleasure garden of the god Amun.

When the ancient Egyptian ruler Queen Hatshepsut came to the throne, she sent a fleet of ships to Punt, and this is featured in relief in Hatshepsut's mortuary temple at Deir Al-Bahari. It portrays a total of 10 ships, five entering the harbour and five loading and setting sail. It is assumed that the ships were prefabricated on the Nile at Coptos, a point where the river is closest to the Red Sea, and were then stripped down and transported through Wadi Hammamat by donkey caravan to Qusseir, where they were reassembled.

On completion of their mission to Punt, the ships had to be stripped down again and their parts carried back through the desert together with their rich cargoes. Once they reached the Nile, they would be reassembled and set sail for Thebes.

However, despite these reliefs Mustafa said that in general little is known about ancient Egyptian maritime technology. Remains of Old Kingdom boats have been found at Tarkhan, Abydos and on the Giza Plateau in the shape of the Pharaoh Khufu's solar boats. Evidence of later New Kingdom vessels is engraved on the walls of temples, for example those at Deir Al-Bahari and Medinet Habu. However, very little is known about how these New Kingdom ships were put together.

So how did the ancient Egyptians sail to the Land of Punt, and how did they use their maritime technology to resist the destructive forces of the sea?

In order to try to answer such questions, a team of French, Italian, American and Egyptian archaeologists working with shipping experts have reconstructed an ancient Egyptian ship of the first quarter of the second millennium BC called "Min of the Desert". The idea was to set sail across the Red Sea in order to experience how the ancient Egyptians sailed to Punt and to expand the data available from archaeological evidence and the technical study of ships in ancient Egypt.

"Min of the Desert" was built in Rosetta using techniques that the ancient Egyptians would have used and then transported to Marsa Gawasis on the Red Sea, from where it started its sea voyage. Before starting the trip, the 24-strong crew paid a visit to the Giza Plateau where Khufu's solar boat is located and to the Egyptian museum where the funerary boats of Senwosret III, unearthed at the Dahshour necropolis, are exhibited, in order to prepare them for the unusual aspects of sailing in an ancient Egyptian ship. Such ships were built without using nails, and the planks used to construct them were designed to fit together like pieces of a puzzle.

"The purpose of the expedition was to understand the capabilities of a reconstruction of an ancient Egyptian ship," said ship archaeologist Cheryl Ward of Florida State University, adding that the ship used the same technology as that used 4,000 years ago, as shown by discoveries at Marsa Gawasis.

The rigging of the ship was reconstructed from models and from the bas reliefs at the temple of Queen Hatshepsut at Al-Deir Al-Bahari. "Our primary goal was to demonstrate the extraordinary capability of the Egyptians at sea, as many people, including fellow archaeologists, have thought of the Egyptians as tied to the Nile and lacking the ability to go to sea," Ward said.

In order to save time, the team did not only use ancient shipbuilding techniques but was assisted by modern technology, such as electric saws to rough cut the planks. However, following this phase most of the work was done using hand tools following ancient examples, though these were made of iron rather than hammered copper. The construction phase lasted eight months.

The completed ship was 20m long, 4.9m wide, and 1.7m high under the beams. Its construction made it possible to check that the design (shell first) and its method of construction (the absence of a frame and assembly by non-pegged tenon joints), based on the interpretation of the archaeological and iconographic evidence, were technically realisable and effective. According to Mustafa, the ship's rigging can be operated by a crew of 15, and it is possible to sail at an average speed of 5.5 knots in favourable conditions. When using the oars, it is possible to reach a speed of 2.5 knots using 14 oarsmen. The ship's steering system proved to be effective, but heavy to operate, he said.

The completed ship "confirms the most recent hypothesis on the construction of the ships of ancient Egypt," Ward said, adding that tests were made in the shape of short trips on the Nile, then in the Red Sea, and then in the shape of a longer trial voyage south towards the Sudan from Safaga along the route used by the ancient Egyptians. "Min of the Desert" is the only experimental reconstruction of a ship from the ancient Egyptian period that has yet been carried out based on scientifically validated archaeological evidence.

Those who made the test voyages were generally full of praise for the technology of the ancient Egyptians. "At first, it seemed to me to be a crazy project," said Mahrous Lahma, an Egyptian worker who worked on the ship, "but then I grew to respect the technology and to have faith in the ship, and I was with them every minute of the voyage."

The crew were worried that the ship would not be able to withstand the strong sea waves, particularly since it was held together by wooden joints alone, as was ancient Egyptian practice. However, even in swells of up to three metres, the ship handled well, corkscrewing through the waves smoothly and taking only one small splash of a wave over the rail even when the wind was blowing at 25 knots.

"Although it took brute strength to haul up the sail and to row the ship, once the sail was set all of us remarked on the efficiency and simplicity of the ship when manoeuvring and steering, and on its responsiveness," Mustafa commented.

"We did not have any particular problems with the navigation. In fact, the ship was easy to sail. We did not practise anchoring, though it would have been possible to do that, but our intention was not to imitate the voyage entirely."

Many people helped to make the project work, notably Sombrero & Co., a documentary film production company based in France, which sponsored the project and made a film about it that will now be broadcast internationally and on NOVA/WGBH in the United States.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 28179|2009-03-14 06:14:37|Alex van Deelen|South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
I remember the charge, even repeated on the BBC, that 'every 30 seconds, a woman is raped in South Africa'. This story is the same. Which was a lie of course. What these 'activists' did, was say "Well there are only an x amount of rapes reported, so we are going to presume that only 3% of rapes are actually reported, and then multiply the number of reported rapes x 33.

For some context, the population of South Africa (in millions) went from:

40.6 1996
44.8 2001
48.5 2007

Source: Community Survey 2007

http://www.statssa.gov.za/community_new/content.asp

Total reported rapes fluctuated between about 41,000 and 36,000 per year for South Africa.

41,082 2001
38,896 2002
39,007 2003
41,006 2004
41,343 2005
39,304 2006
36,190 2007

http://www.saps.gov.za/statistics/reports/crimestats/2008/march_april_2001_2008/catagory/rape.pdf

It is clear from these crime statistics surveys that there were 36,000 reported rapes in 2007, and yet " ActionAid estimates there are 500,000 rapes in South Africa every year. ".

No explanation of how they go from 36,000 to 500,000.

Now to the rest of the article. If you read it carefully, it is written in a very sensationalistic and deceptive manner. But if you read more closely:

" Thirty one lesbians have been reported murdered in homophobic attacks since 1998 "

31 in 10 years, that is 3.1 per year in Cape Town, which because of it's cultural diversity and relative tolerance (compared to Boer heartlands like Transvaal and Orange Free State) is the gay capital of South Africa. And no quoted evidence that this has been committed 'by gangs' of youths either - although again, that makes for sensationalistic reading.

So yes, you should be very sceptical about what you read. These 'activists' have a long history in massively exaggerating not only the number of rapes, but the numbers of deaths from HIV/AIDS, to make political hay.

(As you've seen from the Community Survey and previous censuses, the population of South Africa grows with about 700,000 per year. There is no evidence of a declining population, as was predicted by the HIV/AIDS models.)

Alex
| 28180|2009-03-14 13:54:59|Tafari khumbaka|Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA|
i had the opportunity to meet andspeak with bro. Osahon,
I would love too know if he is well, and what he is doing these days?

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] ARABS IN AFRAKA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:36 PM
>
> ARABS IN AFRICA
>
> By NAIWU OSAHON
>
> Naiwu Osahon
>
> Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.
>
> In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.

Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.

In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.

Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.

Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.

On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.

No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.

In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN SAD.

Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.

He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.

In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."

Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.

Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert. With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons) , owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.

The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.

Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions) , Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.

A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable. " Osama Bin Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996 said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."

In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slaves.what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.

A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'

In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are Africans' mortal foes.

Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."

Ibn Sina (Avicenna 9801037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."

Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism, " adding that "they are every where described as stupid."

al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heat.."

Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "..the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passions.."

NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M. Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
====
Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
HTP,
Mahari

| 28181|2009-03-14 15:23:49|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
I absolutely agree with you. I always speak to that when talking to young people, as well as elders. Our young people, around the world, have been left to fend for themselves. And then when the lack of knowledge kicks in, and ignorance rears its ugly head, the elders want to stand back and point fingers and say - I told you so. How can you say I told you so? The young people are a reflection of you! So when they / we fail, you fail. I believe that there have been one to two generations of our elders who got so caught up in religion, and praying and waiting for something to happen, that they forgot that God blesses the child that?s got his own. They left the young people out to dry while they were working from sun down to sun up, and going to church. Now, let me say - I am not against any religion, and I know our people did what they had to do to take care of the family and get by. And religion is supposed to be that ladder to elevate us so that we can become free - not spiritually enslaved. Problem is, it was taught to us by slave masters and unfortunately many of us have not been truth seekers to find out what it really means to and for us as a people. I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?

As far as Africa, I believe the only way we can get the African nations on track is if we, African Americans, take our struggle, and scholarship, and economic gain, and go and help rebuild. We are the only ones - in the Diaspora who are in a position to do it. Thank you for your response, it was well stated and enlightening.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Friday, March 13, 2009 3:25 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians

I think one lesson to take from this - apart from it being a huge expression of ignorance - is that throughout the black disapora we black folk do not have control over our youth.
One reason, I believe, is because they do not really respect black elders. And quickly, I will add that to a huge extent that is because we continually express ourselves as powerless and in powerless ways.
And I will also add that the expression of power does not really manifest itself in talking loud or speaking outlandishly. We must speak with clarity and with a workable plan that is centered in self-love, self-affirmation, self-determination and with DETERMINATION. When do we ever see that expressed or manifested?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

>
> Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too bad the gay and lesbian community don't speak up about the millions of other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I read in this media anymore.

>
>
href="http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/">http://www.msnbc. msn.com/id/ 29676829/
>

| 28182|2009-03-14 15:24:00|Shu Tefnut|PHOTO'S FROM: AFRICA/ EGYPT/ NUBIA. EDUCATIONAL TOUR. (SLIDE SHOW)|

Living In Black
360 Degrees of the Black Experience

HERU BENNU

Check out 'Living In Black's Photo Slideshow'
Greetings family,

AMEN RA

Check out these photo's from our annual educational tour.
Link:
Living In Black's Photo Slideshow

About Living In Black
We're Africans ascending, engaged in culturally relevant conversations, business tips, research and activism. We're ready for action.

5089 members
14917 photos
3429 songs
3993 videos
4170 discussions
2178 blog posts

| 28183|2009-03-14 16:47:31|Mahari Mengistu|Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA|
Are you aware that he has a website? In fact, this article is posted at his website. As I write this I don't recall the name of the site. However, I am sure you can "Google or Yahoo" him and find it.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> i had the opportunity to meet andspeak with bro. Osahon,
> I would love too know if he is well, and what he is doing these days?
>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] ARABS IN AFRAKA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:36 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> ARABS IN AFRICA
>
> By NAIWU OSAHON
>
> Naiwu Osahon
>
> Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.

>
> In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.
>
> Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.
>
> In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.
>
> Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.
>
> Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.

>
> On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.
>
> No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.
>
> In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN □ SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN □ SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN □ SAD.
>
> Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.
>
> He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.
>
> In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."

>
> Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.
>
> Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert. With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, > displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons) , owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.
>
> The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.
>
> Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions) , Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.
>
> A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable. " Osama Bin Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996

said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."
>
> In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slaves□□.what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah □ Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.
>
> A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'
>
> In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are Africans' mortal foes.
>
> Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."
>
> Ibn Sina (Avicenna 980□1037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/ scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."
>
> Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism, " adding that "they are every where described as stupid."
>
> al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heat□.."
>

> Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "□..the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passions□.."
>
> NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M.
> Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
> ====
> Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
| 28184|2009-03-14 16:52:50|Tafari khumbaka|Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA|
tua-Thanx, lol never thought too google him, lol

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sat, 3/14/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Saturday, March 14, 2009, 6:47 PM

Are you aware that he has a website? In fact, this article is posted at his website. As I write this I don't recall the name of the site. However, I am sure you can "Google or Yahoo" him and find it.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> i had the opportunity to meet andspeak with bro. Osahon,
> I would love too know if he is well, and what he is doing these days?
>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] ARABS IN AFRAKA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:36 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> ARABS IN AFRICA
>
> By NAIWU OSAHON
>
> Naiwu Osahon
>
> Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.
>
> In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.
>
> Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.

>
> In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.
>
> Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.
>
> Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.
>
> On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.
>
> No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.

>
> In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN • SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN • SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN • SAD.
>
> Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.
>
> He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.
>
> In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."
>
> Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.
>
> Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert. With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, > displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons) , owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.

>

> The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.

>

> Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions) , Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.

>

> A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable. " Osama Bin Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996 said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."

>
> In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slaves…….what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah • Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.
>
> A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'
>
> In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are Africans' mortal foes.
>
> Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."
>
> Ibn Sina (Avicenna 980•1037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/ scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."
>
> Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism, " adding that "they are every where described as stupid."

> al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heat….."
>
> Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "….the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passions….."
>
> NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M.
> Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
> ====
> Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28185|2009-03-14 16:56:23|Tafari khumbaka|master teacher asian martial arts(afr-am. treasure)|
http://www.youtube.com/user/sifufr my teachers ,Teacher
he is a expert in several systems of Kung-fu and Tiji-chuan a true master

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28186|2009-03-14 17:19:57|Mahari Mengistu|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|

>> I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?<<

I agree with you about our people working hard and relying heavily on religion. The spiritual experience, IMHO, is extremely important to all humans I believe - even those who resist or have contempt for it. However, religion or the spiritual experience is like grabbing and eating a piece of fruit. It will usually be good for you to some degree but if you are not careful you might grab a rotten piece, a damaged piece, a sour piece. All of which might be good for you to SOME EXTENT. But clearly a sweet, firm, fully ripe piece of fruit is better for your body.

It was our faith and sticking to the straight and narrow that carried most of us through this HELL that still, in some ways, is America. But I strongly believe that this "religious" expression has been a double edged sword. For all these years we have been worshiping a white god and a white Jesus - spiritual representations (and just like socialization you CANNOT over-estimate the level of power of this indoctrination)of our Savior. That alone to me does not make ANY sense. Even today in most black churches and black homes you will find the blond Jesus on the wall overlooking the black gathering! I suppose it is Christianity that makes them believe that in spite of all evidence to the contrary that THIS particular white man and his white god will be different - miraculously. This is not to say that all white people are evil. I don't know what percentage are evil but I know - I know from personal experience, current events and history that very many are.
And as for the "pointing the finger" I have NO PROBLEM WITH POINTING THE FINGER. You can't just point the finger and do no personal work on your part. I think in many cases it is important to point the finger because many people don't know. You point the finger and they know exactly where to look for the guilty party.
It is true that there are times when it is not wise to point the finger because it might limit some current negotiations taking place. Yet, I think it is a very good idea to keep that index finger supple and flexible and your sense of direction very clear.
I appreciate your response. It is good to hear a sister expressing real energy within the struggle.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> I absolutely agree with you. I always speak to that when talking to young people, as well as elders. Our young people, around the world, have been left to fend for themselves. And then when the lack of knowledge kicks in, and ignorance rears its ugly head, the elders want to stand back and point fingers and say - I told you so. How can you say I told you so? The young people are a reflection of you! So when they / we fail, you fail. I believe that there have been one to two generations of our elders who got so caught up in religion, and praying and waiting for something to happen, that they forgot that God blesses the child that's got his own. They left the young people out to dry while they were working from sun down to sun up, and going to church. Now, let me say - I am not against any religion, and I know our people did what they had to do to take care of the family and get by. And religion is supposed to be that ladder to elevate us so that we can become free - not spiritually enslaved. Problem is, it was taught to us by slave masters and unfortunately many of us have not been truth seekers to find out what it really means to and for us as a people. I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?
>
> As far as Africa, I believe the only way we can get the African nations on track is if we, African Americans, take our struggle, and scholarship, and economic gain, and go and help rebuild. We are the only ones - in the Diaspora who are in a position to do it. Thank you for your response, it was well stated and enlightening.

>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Friday, March 13, 2009 3:25 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians
>
>
> I think one lesson to take from this - apart from it being a huge expression of ignorance - is that throughout the black disapora we black folk do not have control over our youth.
> One reason, I believe, is because they do not really respect black elders. And quickly, I will add that to a huge extent that is because we continually express ourselves as powerless and in powerless ways.
> And I will also add that the expression of power does not really manifest itself in talking loud or speaking outlandishly. We must speak with clarity and with a workable plan that is centered in self-love, self-affirmation, self-determination and with DETERMINATION. When do we ever see that expressed or manifested?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> >
> > Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too bad the gay and lesbian community don't speak up about the millions of other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I read in this media anymore.
> >
> > http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/
> >
>
| 28187|2009-03-14 17:21:17|Mahari Mengistu|Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA|
No prob.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> tua-Thanx, lol never thought too google him, lol
>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>
> --- On Sat, 3/14/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>

> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: ARABS IN AFRAKA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Saturday, March 14, 2009, 6:47 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Are you aware that he has a website? In fact, this article is posted at his website. As I write this I don't recall the name of the site. However, I am sure you can "Google or Yahoo" him and find it.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
> >
> > i had the opportunity to meet andspeak with bro. Osahon,
> > I would love too know if he is well, and what he is doing these days?
> >
> >
> > ÿ
> >
> > Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] ARABS IN AFRAKA
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:36 PM
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > ARABS IN AFRICA
> >
> > By NAIWU OSAHON
> >
> > Naiwu Osahon
> >
> > Egypt is still so intimidated by its glorious Black African past that its Arab government would not allow thorough research into Egypt's past. President Gamal Abdel Nasser falsified

Egyptian history when he declared Egypt an Arab Republic. Egyptian authorities refused to allow American film makers to make a film on the life of Anwar Sadat in Egypt on the ground that the actor chosen for Sadat's role was black. When Morocco left the OAU in 1984, it aspired to become a member of the European Union.
> >
> > In Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Eritrea, Mauritania and the rest of the Arab world, Africans are treated as the scum of the earth. They are second-class citizens at the very best in their own countries. Blacks in these countries cannot aspire to positions of respect or authority. There are hardly Africans in high government positions in Arab governed African countries. Like Brazil, which is just as racially cruel against their black natives, there is no legislation favouring slavery (except in Mauritania). It is simply a way of life that's all. Blacks do not really exist or at best are not humans.
> >
> > Mauritania left the Economic Community of West African States to join the union formed by the Arab North African States. A few years ago, Mauritania sacked all black natives from their civil service positions. Black Mauritanians protest their plight to the African Union (AU) without receiving attention, because AU black leaders fear offending their Arab colleagues in the AU. In Mauritania, they have had to declare an end to slavery six times in this century alone, and still nothing has changed for the captive majority African natives. African slavery is still in their statute books. African slavery in Mauritania is what the on going quarrel between Mauritania and Senegal is about. The quarrel forced black African refugees to pour across the border from Mauritania into Senegal.
> >
> > In Algeria, Arabs throw stones at black people, including diplomats, in markets and other public places. To quote Prof. Clarke, "Arabs always act as though they are not in Africa. Once when I was visiting Egypt, I told my Egyptian Arab host to get a cab ready for the next morning that I was going to Kenya. `So you are going to Africa to visit your people? We got no diseases here, why are you leaving us?" the host asked. Even across the Red Sea, in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, blacks are treated worse than animals, after using their life's savings to go there on pilgrimage.
> >
> > Hundreds of blacks who have lived all their lives in Saudi Arabia are being repatriated daily right now, after loosing an arm or leg for some minor or trumped up offense and without regard for their comfort, welfare or rights. Racism towards black Moslems in Saudi Arabia is so strong it makes one wonder if making pilgrimage to Mecca should be one of the five pillars of the Muslim faith, and why blacks bother to be Muslim.
> >
> > Col. Gadhafi saw vicious white racism in the tragic death in August 1997, of Princess Diana of Wales, the mother of a future king of England, and her Arab lover. What no one remembered to ask Gadhafi was whether he himself was disposed to allowing any daughter of his to marry even the richest black man in the world let alone a black Libyan. If one were to ask Gadhafi why Africans are not high up in his government, he might balk that all Libyans are Africans. In that case, one should go and find out the truth for oneself in the poor sections of town. One would be shocked by the plight of our African kith and kin that constitute the bulk of the population in oil rich Libya and other Northern African countries similarly afflicted with Arab racism. While pretending to champion pan-African interest, he is busy getting rid of black immigrants from Libya.

> >
> > On 9 May, 1997, in flagrant defiance of a UN embargo on flights in and out of Libya, Col. Gadhafi invaded Nigeria with his planes carrying 1,000 members of his rag-tag army, plus 500 journalists. They strategically occupied the Kano airport and his other reception facilities, with the connivance of the Nigerian Muslim dictator host. The purpose was to launch a jihad in supposedly religiously secular Nigeria, or at least precipitate a serious schism between the predominantly Moslem north of the country and the Christian and animist south. Right now the Moslem world is trying to use `Sharia' to dismember Nigeria. Pakistan, Libya and Saudi Arabia, to name a few, have pumped substantial funds into Zamfara, the first of Nigeria's Sharia states, to start the process of Islamizing, (or at least trigger mayhem and civil war), in Nigeria as in Sudan.
> >
> > No nation in Africa has suffered more in the hands of the Arabs than Ethiopia. It has been going on since Arabs first invaded Africa in the 7th century CE. Recently, with Libya supporting the people of Eritrea, they destroyed the basic structure of Ethiopia, to cut her from the sea and weaken this section of Africa, and eventually all of Africa, for further Arabization. They did this mercilessly with religion.
> >
> > In the last 38 years, Gadhafi at one time or the other, tried to force Libya's unification with Egypt, Algeria etc, and has continued the effort since with Sudan. He forcibly annexed the Auzon Strip from Chad, and sponsored destabilization in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Uganda, Mali, Cote d' Ivoire, Niger, etc in pursuance of his Arabization of Africa policy, laced with inordinate imperial personal ambition. In 1998, his strategy got a fillip with the founding of his community of Sahel-Savannah States (CEN â□" SAD), which he was hoping to use to control the envisaged African Union (AU). The CEN â□" SAD, at the moment, ropes in 25 African states from West, East, and Central Africa, and includes Senegal, Cote d "Ivoire, Chad, Sudan, Somalia, Comoro Islands etc. Most of these unsuspecting African countries were stable until they joined CEN â□" SAD.
> >
> > Col. Muammar Gadhafi pushed desperately for a United States of Africa government to be approved, set up, and launched right there and then, at the 9th ordinary Session of the Assembly of the heads of states of the African Union (AU), held in July 2007, in Accra, Ghana.
> >
> > He has heightened his Arabization policy pursuit at the AU level since 2001, pretending to be promoting the Pan-African agenda of Kwame Nkrumah. Chinweizu, the renowned scholar, described Gadhafi's Arab-Black Africa government plan at the time, "as unification of nigger monkey with python." Arabs themselves divide Africa into North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa to instigate a division and as long as the invaders continue to occupy our land and treat us as slaves in North Africa, the two segments of the continent cannot cohabit.
> >
> > In a paper presented at the meeting of the Arab league in Amman, Jordan, in 2001, Muammar Gadhafi spelt out the Arabization agenda against Africa in language reminiscent of Adolph Hitler's Lebensraum, (Hitler's sick obsession to secure a living space for political and economic expansion in Europe) for the Germans, (the superior race). Gadhafi in his address during the Amman's Arab conference invited his Arab brothers outside of Africa to come to Africa in the following words. "The third of the Arab community living outside Africa should move in with the two-thirds (about 250 million) on the continent, and join the African Union, which is the only space we have."

> >
> > Gadhafi's unbridled urge in modern times to enlarge Arabia inside Africa, is a continuation of the Arab war against Africans and the Arabization of African lands that started in the 7th century CE. Arabs have since settled on one-third of Africa, pushing continuously southwards towards the Atlantic Ocean. Arabs' racial war against black Africa started with their occupation and colonization of Egypt between 637 and 642 CE, decimating the Coptic or black population.
> >
> > Between 642 and 670 CE, more Arab invaders poured into Africa and occupied areas known today as Tunisa, Libya, Algeria and Morocco, where they physically eliminated most of the native (Berber) inhabitants. The Berbers that escaped death ran westwards and southwards towards the Sahara. In the 11th century CE, fresh Arab migrants of nomadic origin, migrated into North Africa to displace and drive the remaining pastoral Berbers deeper into the Sahara desert. With Arab consolidation and backing in Northern Africa, new waves of Arab invaders and migrants pushed deeper into the Nile banks, inhabited then by the Nilotic Shiluk, and continued all the way down to where Dueim stands today, belonging then to the Dinka and Furnawi autochthons. The entire territory was known at the time as Bilad as-Sudan (the Arabic for land of the Blacks), and currently includes the Republic of Sudan. Continuing with their Arabization of African land policy through elimination, > > displacement, separation, marginalization and suppression, the Arab invaders of Bilad as-Sudan, over the passage of time, decimated the population of (the Nilotic Shiluk, Dinka and Furnawi autochthons) , owners of the land, and pushed to restrict the rest waiting for elimination to Darfur area and the South of the country, which the Arab invaders are now intent on taking from the native Black Africans. This is the genesis of the war in Sudan. It is a racial war. The Arabs want the Republic of Sudan, which by land mass is the largest country in Africa, to be an entirely Arab state, by exterminating the Black native population gradually to the last person.
> >
> > The war in Sudan is our modern day Haiti war in terms of black liberation, and our recent fight against apartheid. Arabs are carrying out ethnic cleansing right now in Southern Sudan, with the financial support of the Arab world, particularly Libya and Saudi Arabia. China is backing them against Africa. The Janjaweed, with Sudanese and Arab governments' backing, are trying to wipe out the black population so as to expropriate their lands, but Africans, including Nigerians, do not know where their interests should reside. The Arabs succeeded in doing the same thing in Northern Africa where the original Nubian African owners of the land have almost all been wiped out and the rest marginalized (enslaved) by their Arab invaders/settlers since 642 CE.
> >
> > Islamization is not the problem in Sudan because the majority Furnawi people of Darfur are Moslems. Arabs do not consider Black Moslems authentic or of consequence. At best, they concede to blacks, the role of ordained slaves or animals, to be used as beasts of burden by the "superior Arab race." The rule applies to all blacks, whether Moslems or non-Moslems and whether of Nigerian (Hausa/Fulani or Yoruba extractions) , Tanzanians, Ugandans, Malians or African-Americans.
> >
> > A traveller in Sudan observed in 1930 that "In the eyes of the Arab rulers of Sudan, the black slaves were simply animals given by Allah to make life of Arabs comfortable. " Osama Bin

Laden, in a discussion with the Sudanese-American novelist, Kola Boof, in Morocco in 1996 said, "when next you meet an Arab, you should ask what is the Arabic word for slave, you'll discover that the words are the same "abeed." Which is why, when an Arab looks at a black African, what he sees is a slave."
> >
> > In 1962, the Arab Sudanese General, Hassan Beshir Nasr, while flagging off his troops to the war front against black Africans in South Sudan, declared: "We don't want these black slavesâ□¦â□¦.what we want is their land." Arabs' attitude to blacks derives from Genesis' racist fiction of the three sons of Noah â□" Ham, Japheth and Shem. Arabs claim that "the accursed Ham was the progenitor of the black race; that Japheth begat the full-faced, small eyes Europeans, and that Shem fathered the handsome of face with beautiful hair Arabs," of course.
> >
> > A coalition of 50 charities in Darfur, Sudan, published a study in mid December, 2008, confirming what the world already knew that the Janjaweed and the Sudanese army, with the backing of their government, during joint or individual attacks, raped, tortured and killed Sudanese Africans and razed their villages to repopulate them with Arab nomads. They rounded up and abducted escapees from hide-outs in the bush, and at other times raided refugee camps to kidnap Africans as sex and labour slaves, working them to the bones as domestic and farm labour. The army flew their captives in planes to Khartoum at night and shared them among soldiers, like you allocate bags of commodities, and used them as sex and domestic servants. Kidnapped victims interviewed, said their captors told them that `they were not human beings and that they were there to serve them.'
> >
> > In the five years between 2003 and 2008, over 300,000 Sudanese Africans were killed, 100,000 abducted and 2.7 million rendered homeless refugees, with their land appropriated by Arabs. The Khatoum government admitted 14,000 kidnaps. You can imagine what happened when the world turned a blind eye on Sudan, in the twenty years between 1983 when the conflict began, and 2003. You have to ask yourself what African leaders are doing in AU with Arabs. Arabs are Africans' mortal foes.
> >
> > Al Qaeda's bombing of the American Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, left 260 black civilians that included 12 Americans, dead. Over 4,000 Kenyans and Tanzanians were wounded. A remorseless top Arab journalist justified the attack by quoting Stalin: "You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."
> >
> > Ibn Sina (Avicenna 980â□"1037), Arab's most famous and influential philosopher/ scientist in Islam, described blacks as "people who are by their very nature slaves." He wrote: "All African women are prostitutes, and the whole race of African men are abeed (slave) stock." He equated black people with "rats plaguing the earth."
> >
> > Ibn Khaldum, an Arab historian stated that "Blacks are characterized by levity and excitability and great emotionalism, " adding that "they are every where described as stupid."
> >
> > al-Dimashqi, an Arab pseudo scientist wrote, "the Equator is inhabited by communities of blacks who may be numbered among the savage beasts. Their complexion and hair are burnt and they are physically and morally abnormal. Their brains almost boil from the sun's heatâ□¦.."

> >
> > Ibn al-Faqih al-Hamadhani painted this no less horrid picture of black people, "â□¦..the zanj (the blacks) are overdone until they are burned, so that the child comes out between black, murky, malodorous, stinking, and crinkly-haired, with uneven limbs, deficient minds, and depraved passionsâ□¦.."
> >
> > NAIWU OSAHON Hon. Khu Mkuu (Leader, Pan-African Movement world-wide); Ameer Spiritual (Spiritual Prince) of the African race; MSc. (Salford); Dip.M.S; G.I.P.M; Dip. I.A (Liv.); D. Inst. M; G. Inst. M; G.I.W.M; A.M.N.I.M.
> > Awarded: Key to the City of Memphis, Tennessee, USA; Honourary Councilmanship, Memphis City Council; Honourary Citizenship, County of Shelby; Honourary Commissionership, County of Shelby, Tennessee and a silver trophy from Morehouse College, Atlanta, USA for his contributions to the unity and uplift of his race.
> > ====
> > Selecting Qadaffi as head of the AU certainly seems pretty stupid to me. I think he is buying some of them off.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>
| 28188|2009-03-15 07:12:32|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Fw: Police shooting kills 73-year old BLACK man on his home porch|

This happened on February 20th. I never even heard of it until today.

From: Gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Sent: Saturday, March 14, 2009 9:21 PM
To: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: www.ksla.com : Police-involved shooting kills 73-year old man on porch

Ginger (Gingerd2007@hotmail.com) has sent you an item from http://www.ksla.com.

Police-involved shooting kills 73-year old man on porch

An Ark-La-Tex community is outraged this weekend after a police-involved shooting killed a 73-year old man on his own front porch. And there are conflicting reports whether the man was armed.
http://www.ksla.com/global/story.asp?s=9882347

Find more items like this at http://www.ksla.com

Copyright 2009 KSLA
| 28189|2009-03-15 07:14:23|Terry|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
You mean bigotry was taught to us by White enslavers - and they were not masters.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
> >> I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?<<
>
> I agree with you about our people working hard and relying heavily on religion. The spiritual experience, IMHO, is extremely important to all humans I believe - even those who resist or have contempt for it. However, religion or the spiritual experience is like grabbing and eating a piece of fruit. It will usually be good for you to some degree but if you are not careful you might grab a rotten piece, a damaged piece, a sour piece. All of which might be good for you to SOME EXTENT. But clearly a sweet, firm, fully ripe piece of fruit is better for your body.
> It was our faith and sticking to the straight and narrow that carried most of us through this HELL that still, in some ways, is America. But I strongly believe that this "religious" expression has been a double edged sword. For all these years we have been worshiping a white god and a white Jesus - spiritual representations (and just like socialization you CANNOT over-estimate the level of power of this indoctrination)of our Savior. That alone to me does not make ANY sense. Even today in most black churches and black homes you will find the blond Jesus on the wall overlooking the black gathering! I suppose it is Christianity that makes them believe that in spite of all evidence to the contrary that THIS particular white man and his white god will be different - miraculously. This is not to say that all white people are evil. I don't know what percentage are evil but I know - I know from personal experience, current events and history that very many are.
> And as for the "pointing the finger" I have NO PROBLEM WITH POINTING THE FINGER. You can't just point the finger and do no personal work on your part. I think in many cases it is important to point the finger because many people don't know. You point the finger and they know exactly where to look for the guilty party.
> It is true that there are times when it is not wise to point the finger because it might limit some current negotiations taking place. Yet, I think it is a very good idea to keep that index finger supple and flexible and your sense of direction very clear.
> I appreciate your response. It is good to hear a sister expressing real energy within the struggle.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, gingerd2007@ wrote:

> >
> > I absolutely agree with you. I always speak to that when talking to young people, as well as elders. Our young people, around the world, have been left to fend for themselves. And then when the lack of knowledge kicks in, and ignorance rears its ugly head, the elders want to stand back and point fingers and say - I told you so. How can you say I told you so? The young people are a reflection of you! So when they / we fail, you fail. I believe that there have been one to two generations of our elders who got so caught up in religion, and praying and waiting for something to happen, that they forgot that God blesses the child that's got his own. They left the young people out to dry while they were working from sun down to sun up, and going to church. Now, let me say - I am not against any religion, and I know our people did what they had to do to take care of the family and get by. And religion is supposed to be that ladder to elevate us so that we can become free - not spiritually enslaved. Problem is, it was taught to us by slave masters and unfortunately many of us have not been truth seekers to find out what it really means to and for us as a people. I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?
> >
> > As far as Africa, I believe the only way we can get the African nations on track is if we, African Americans, take our struggle, and scholarship, and economic gain, and go and help rebuild. We are the only ones - in the Diaspora who are in a position to do it. Thank you for your response, it was well stated and enlightening.
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Friday, March 13, 2009 3:25 PM
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians
> >
> >
> > I think one lesson to take from this - apart from it being a huge expression of ignorance - is that throughout the black disapora we black folk do not have control over our youth.
> > One reason, I believe, is because they do not really respect black elders. And quickly, I will add that to a huge extent that is because we continually express ourselves as powerless and in powerless ways.
> > And I will also add that the expression of power does not really manifest itself in talking loud or speaking outlandishly. We must speak with clarity and with a workable plan that is centered in self-love, self-affirmation, self-determination and with DETERMINATION. When do we ever see that expressed or manifested?

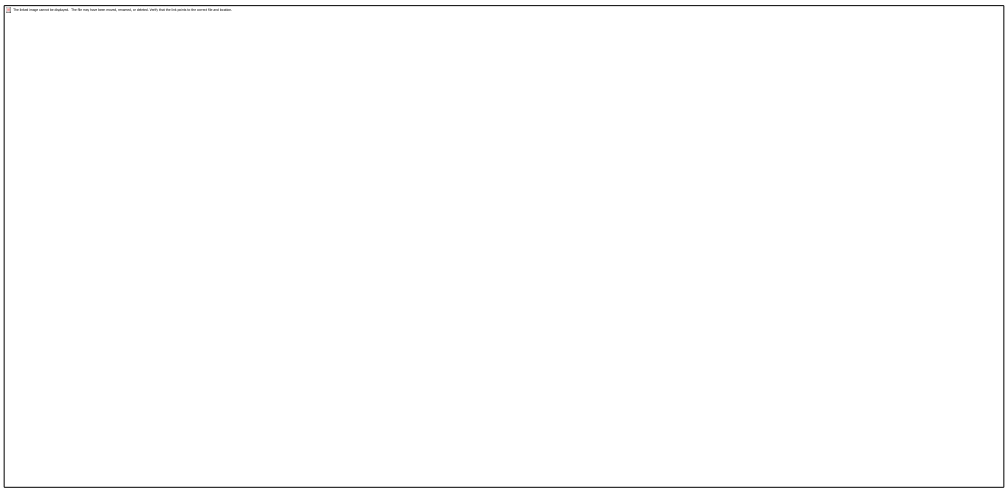
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> > >
> > > Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too bad the gay and lesbian community don't speak up about the millions of other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I read in this media anymore.
> > >
> > > http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/
> > >
> >
>
| 28190|2009-03-15 07:53:00|Shu Tefnut|Fw: [BNYEE]-- ARTICLE: Tempers Flare at Hearing on Mayoral Control o|

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: FriendsOfMacombs.com
To: FriendsOfMacombs.com
Sent: Sunday, March 15, 2009 7:54:39 AM
Subject: [BNYEE]-- ARTICLE: Tempers Flare at Hearing on Mayoral Control of Schools

FYI!

WNYC News Blog
Tempers Flare at Hearing on Mayoral Control of Schools
By: Beth Fertig
Blogs.WNYC.org | March, 13, 2009
http://blogs.wnyc.org/news/2009/03/13/public-hearing-on-mayoral-control-of-schools/

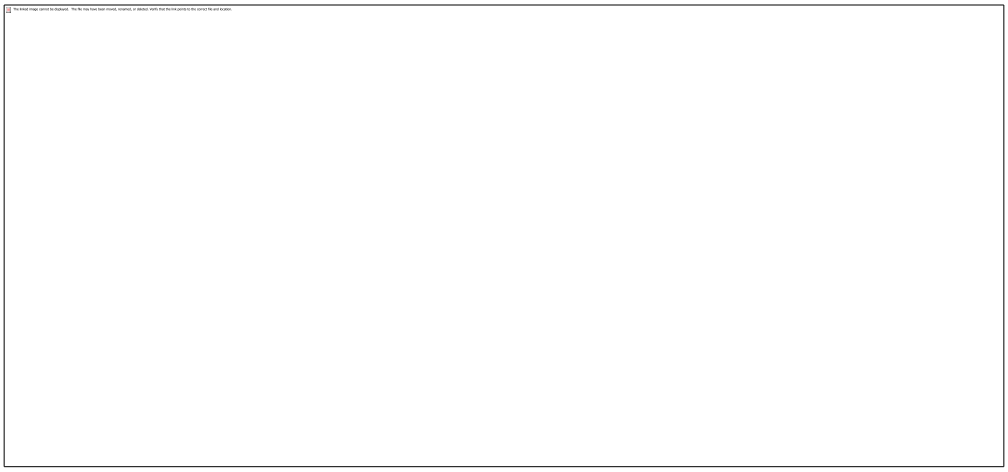
===== ARTICLE BELOW =====



WNYC News Blog

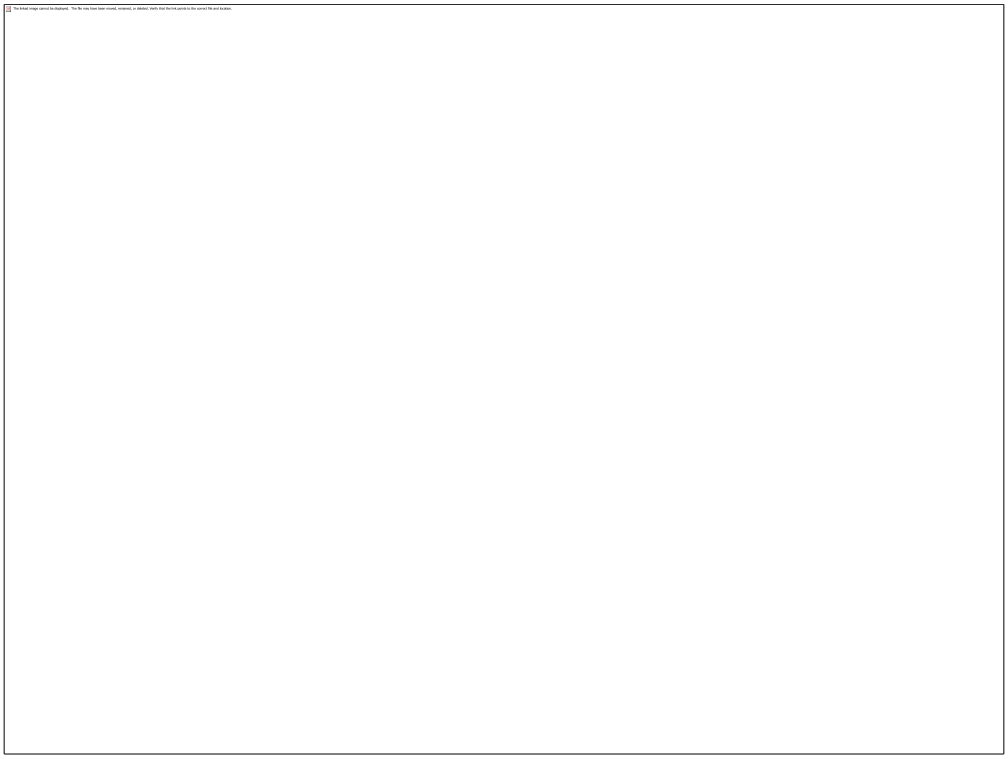
Tempers Flare at Hearing on Mayoral Control of Schools

By Beth Fertig



March 13, 2009

Sparks flew in the Bronx today at the State Assembly Education Committees hearing on mayoral control of the public schools.



Shana Marks-Odinga and Zakiyah Ansari of Campaign for Better Schools at the Assembly Education Committee hearing today in the Bronx. They want more checks and balances on mayoral control when the law comes up for renewal in June.

With the law granting Mayor Bloomberg full control over the school system of more than a million students set to expire in June, assembly members peppered Department of Education officials with questions - specifically about programs for English Language Learners. It was an especially relevant issue as the Bronx is now more than 50 percent Hispanic, according to census figures.

Milton Bustamante, Jeanette Iglesias, and Karin Weekes at the State Assembly Education hearing at Lehman College in the Bronx. They all have children who attend the Family Life Academy charter school and they believe having the mayor in charge has improved the schools.

Maria Santos, the Education Departments executive director of English Language Learners, testified that there are now more programs for these students. She said the number of English Language Learners performing at the lowest levels has decreased in the Bloomberg years and that the city has created more dual language programs - though she conceded the graduation statistics were less clear. But Assemblywoman Carmen Arroyo called her a liar (in Spanish and English) and proposed a collaboration with a University in Puerto Rico to prepare more teachers for working with English Language Learners. And parents and community members in the auditorium at Lehman college erupted with boos as Santos testified.

Jane Hirschmann of Time Out from Testing opposes mayoral control in its current form, and wants the mayor to have a partnership with parents with no veto power. Her three children attended the public schools.

Assemblyman Daniel ODonnell also asked why a school on the Upper West Side was being replaced by a charter school that has no experience with teaching English Language Learners. Deputy Chancellor Christopher Cerf said he would have to look into the matter, but said charter schools overall are serving many English Language Learners and have academic achievements that surpass those of schools with comparable populations. Cerfs comments were cheered by the dozens of charter school parents in the room, who support mayoral control. But opponents of mayoral control gave the panel Bronx cheers. Assemblyman Mark Weprin muttered a word of advice to the the Dept of Ed representatives: Like A-Rod you gotta ignore the crowd.

Peace,

K
--
Coordinating Member / FOMBBL
Tele: 646-714-3221
EMail: FOMBBL@GMail.com
Web Site: http://www.FriendsOfMacombs.com
Mailing List: http://groups.google.com/group/friends-of-macombs-news Struggle for New Library & Multifunction Facility for the Youth in "The Valley" North Harlem above West 153rd St.
===
This transmission is intended only for the use of the individual or entity named. It may contain information that is privileged, confidential and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient of these documents then you should notify the sender immediately and delete this email.

--~--~---------~--~----~------------~-------~--~----~
You received this message because you are subscribed to the Google Groups "Black New Yorkers for Educational Excellence" group.
To post to this group, send email to bnyee@googlegroups.com
To unsubscribe from this group, send email to bnyee+unsubscribe@googlegroups.com
For more options, visit this group at http://groups.google.com/group/bnyee?hl=en
-~----------~----~----~----~------~----~------~--~---

| 28191|2009-03-15 07:53:23|Paul Kekai Manansala|What happened to Pharaoh's workers?|

We are gradually beginning to understand what happened to the elite body of artisans that worked on the royal tombs in the Valley of the Kings after they ceased to be built, says Jill Kamil

Click to view caption

Clockwise fom top: Sennedjem and his wife harvesting in the afterlife; the burial chamber of Sennedjem's tomb; view of the workmen's village at Deir Al-Medina

It appears that the workers, or should we say workmen and artisans, the people who built the rock-cut tombs of the Pharaohs in the Valley of the Kings from about 1500 BC onwards, may have later been employed on a project aimed at "emptying" and "recycling" their contents -- or that, at least, is what Rob Demaree of Leiden University thinks.

In his recent talk at the Dutch Institute in Cairo, Demaree said that an impressive number of texts on papyri, ostraca and graffiti had provided researchers with extensive information on the workers' community at Deir Al-Medina, especially from the Ramasside Period and the second half of the New Kingdom, but that in spite of all our knowledge we did not know what happened at the end of this period when the Ramasside line of kings was no longer in power and no more royal tombs were built. "Now, thanks to a largely unpublished dossier of texts, we are gradually beginning to understand what happened to them," he said.

Demaree, who studied Egyptology in Leiden, Copenhagen and Oxford, and who obtained his PhD on "Ancestor Worship in Ancient Egypt", was aware that not all members of the audience were au fait with the earlier phases of the workmen's village on the Theban necropolis, let alone the final phase, so he started his presentation by outlining what had taken place earlier. To recap, he said that the settlement was founded some time in the early 18th Dynasty, in the reign of Tuthmosis I (1550--1525 BC), the first Pharaoh definitely to be buried in the Valley of the Kings, and that in its earliest stage there was no resident community -- just a village of some 40 houses to accommodate itinerant workmen hired for short periods of time. Later the settlement was expanded to accommodate a special group of artisans -- "expert artists" might be a better word -- and, from literary evidence recovered from the village, it appears that more than 100 people, including children, lived in the village, off and on, for several centuries.

"The situation changed after the Amarna period, in the 19th and 20th dynasties (1307--1070 BC) when the workers who plied their trade in the Valley of the Kings and the Valley of the Queens lived, worked and died at Deir Al-Medina, and built large and finely-decorated tombs for themselves," Demaree said. He went on to explain that texts had survived which told us about their lives and the organisation of their work.

During their weekly labour, the workers stayed in a small camp built on a ridge above the royal valley. The work force was divided into two -- one working on the left side of the tomb, the other the right side, the numbers varying according to the size of the tomb. Each work force was under a foreman, and several scribes reported the progress of work, worker absence, and payments.

Gradually the workers formed an elite class, as is evident from the contents of their homes and their tombs at Deir Al-Medina. The extant tomb of Sennedjem, for example, which was discovered early in the 20th century, clearly reveals the high quality of life expected in the afterlife, a lifestyle similar to that on earth. He and his wife are shown dressed in white linen, ploughing and reaping in a fertile hereafter; with protective deities guarding his sarcophagus; while other wall paintings show the deceased and his wife returning from a ritual journey to Abydos. These paintings are some of the finest on the necropolis.

The workmen's village at Deir Al-Medina is situated to the north of the small and graceful late Ptolemaic temple. Ever since it was cleared by a French archaeological mission between 1922 and 1951, a succession of scholars has worked on the masses of archaeological and literary evidence recovered from a large pit containing some 40,000 pieces of pottery and scraps of papyrus. Through these, the mission has been able to trace the family histories of each of the inhabitants of the village throughout a span of nearly three centuries: as well as their daily activities, religious ceremonies, marriages, pride in their work, magic texts, and even their antagonisms and jealousies.

"At first no one had a real idea of what the community was for," Demaree said. "But gradually they came to realise that it was to prepare the royal tombs. This was really a construction department under a vizier, and Demaree credited two scholars, Bernard Bruyere and Jaroslav Cerny, for revealing a main street in a community of 500 to 600 people, and by far the largest amount of evidence of a workmen's community ever to be found. Indeed, it is somewhat ironical that today we know more about the lives of the workmen who cut the New Kingdom royal tombs than we know about many of the Pharaohs for whom they were built.

The men of the village were all skilled workers who toiled in the Valley of the Kings for 10-day stretches, and slept in makeshift shelters in a mountain pass above the village until their term of work was over. They worked under a strict system of administration, all classified according to their work. The designers and scribes ranked highest, artists, painterss and draftsmen next on the scale, then quarrymen and masons, and at the bottom of the scale were the porters, diggers and mortar mixers. In charge of the whole community was a Director of Works, and the various foremen immediately under his control.

Attendance was strictly marked. An absent worker had to account for himself. The written excuses, which have survived the centuries, reveal that one had to "visit my mother-in-law"; another had to get urgent supplies from the market; and illness was a frequent excuse. Payment came regularly each month in the form of charcoal, dried meat, fish, bandages and cloth, along with materials for their work. When the caravan failed to turn up and there was a backlog of salaries, this led to the famous Revolution of the 20th/21st dynasties written on papyrus.

With the death of Ramses X and Ramses XI, work at the royal valley came to a close. We know this because their tombs were left unfinished. The subsequent period was one of decline, during which no royal tombs were built. "So what did the workers do?" asked Demaree. "We wondered about that because texts on the final phase of occupation of the village were lacking."

Thanks, however, to a largely unpublished dossier of texts of an earlier period -- in the time of Hatshepsut and Tuthmosis III (c 1473--1353 BC) -- as well as from the ostraca from various collections around the world, Demaree's painstaking research resulted in what he called "a great surprise!"

"The material revealed that, under Ramses IX, it was no longer safe in the village and the community took refuge near the Temple of Deir Al-Bahari where they created tombs for the Priests of Amun, and, under a new boss of a new dynasty in Thebes, the ruling elite appears to have been given orders to empty the royal tombs and recycle the objects," Demaree said. He provided several examples of "the re-use of royal coffins that the worker's forefathers had created for the Ramasside kings."

Pharaoh's high-ranking officials

PASER was a vizier during the reign of Seti I, and he continued to serve under Ramses II. His job was to organise and direct major projects of state and to supervise production and officiate at major religious festivals, as here shown in a scene from his tomb at Thebes. One of his main duties was to oversee the construction of his Pharaoh's tomb in the Valley of the Kings, and it was he who organised the necessary workforce, dividing the workers into two gangs -- one working on the right side of the tomb and one on the left -- each under a foreman.

The name of the foreman of the left side of Seti's tomb was Hay. He seems to have spent his whole life working in the royal valley, which is to say from about 1214 to 1174 BC. His father before him was a foreman, and young Hay worked beside him from childhood, continuing to work in the valley after his father died. He appears to have been a kind and pious individual, and obviously a dedicated one because the tomb of Seti I, discovered by Giovanni Belzoni in 1817, far surpasses all others in the Valley of the Kings both in size and in the artistic execution of the sculptured walls. Every inch of the wall space of its entire 100-metre length is covered with representations which were carried out by the finest craftsmen.

Copyright Al-Ahram Weekly. All rights reserved

| 28192|2009-03-15 09:20:24|leroy siner|Re: Fw: Police shooting kills 73-year old BLACK man on his home porc|

Cowardly MF

From: "gingerd2007@hotmail.com"
Sent: Saturday, March 14, 2009 11:24:58 PM
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: Police shooting kills 73-year old BLACK man on his home porch

This happened on February 20th. I never even heard of it until today.

From: Gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Sent: Saturday, March 14, 2009 9:21 PM
To: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: www.ksla.com : Police-involved shooting kills 73-year old man on porch

Ginger (Gingerd2007@ hotmail.com) has sent you an item from http://www.ksla. com.

Police-involved shooting kills 73-year old man on porch

An Ark-La-Tex community is outraged this weekend after a police-involved shooting killed a 73-year old man on his own front porch. And there are conflicting reports whether the man was armed.
http://www.ksla. com/global/ story.asp? s=9882347

Find more items like this at http://www.ksla. com

Copyright 2009 KSLA

| 28193|2009-03-15 18:34:09|Mahari Mengistu|Re: What happened to Pharaoh's workers?|
It sounds like nothing in modern times surpasses the organization or skills of the Kemetians.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:
>
> We are gradually beginning to understand what happened to the elite body > of artisans that worked on the royal tombs in the Valley of the Kings > after they ceased to be built, says Jill Kamil > <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/_he1.htm> Click to view caption > <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/_he1.htm> Clockwise fom top:
> Sennedjem and his wife harvesting in the afterlife; the burial chamber > of Sennedjem's tomb; view of the workmen's village at Deir Al-Medina
> It appears that the workers, or should we say workmen and artisans, the > people who built the rock-cut tombs of the Pharaohs in the Valley of the > Kings from about 1500 BC onwards, may have later been employed on a > project aimed at "emptying" and "recycling" their contents -- or that, > at least, is what Rob Demaree of Leiden University thinks.
>
> In his recent talk at the Dutch Institute in Cairo, Demaree said that an > impressive number of texts on papyri, ostraca and graffiti had provided > researchers with extensive information on the workers' community at Deir > Al-Medina, especially from the Ramasside Period and the second half of > the New Kingdom, but that in spite of all our knowledge we did not know > what happened at the end of this period when the Ramasside line of kings > was no longer in power and no more royal tombs were built. "Now, thanks > to a largely unpublished dossier of texts, we are gradually beginning to > understand what happened to them," he said.

>
> Demaree, who studied Egyptology in Leiden, Copenhagen and Oxford, and > who obtained his PhD on "Ancestor Worship in Ancient Egypt", was aware > that not all members of the audience were au fait with the earlier > phases of the workmen's village on the Theban necropolis, let alone the > final phase, so he started his presentation by outlining what had taken > place earlier. To recap, he said that the settlement was founded some > time in the early 18th Dynasty, in the reign of Tuthmosis I (1550--1525 > BC), the first Pharaoh definitely to be buried in the Valley of the > Kings, and that in its earliest stage there was no resident community -- > just a village of some 40 houses to accommodate itinerant workmen hired > for short periods of time. Later the settlement was expanded to > accommodate a special group of artisans -- "expert artists" might be a > better word -- and, from literary evidence recovered from the village, > it appears that more than 100 people, including children, lived in the > village, off and on, for several centuries.
>
> "The situation changed after the Amarna period, in the 19th and 20th > dynasties (1307--1070 BC) when the workers who plied their trade in the > Valley of the Kings and the Valley of the Queens lived, worked and died > at Deir Al-Medina, and built large and finely-decorated tombs for > themselves," Demaree said. He went on to explain that texts had survived > which told us about their lives and the organisation of their work.
>
> During their weekly labour, the workers stayed in a small camp built on > a ridge above the royal valley. The work force was divided into two -- > one working on the left side of the tomb, the other the right side, the > numbers varying according to the size of the tomb. Each work force was > under a foreman, and several scribes reported the progress of work, > worker absence, and payments.
>
> Gradually the workers formed an elite class, as is evident from the > contents of their homes and their tombs at Deir Al-Medina. The extant > tomb of Sennedjem, for example, which was discovered early in the 20th > century, clearly reveals the high quality of life expected in the > afterlife, a lifestyle similar to that on earth. He and his wife are > shown dressed in white linen, ploughing and reaping in a fertile > hereafter; with protective deities guarding his sarcophagus; while other > wall paintings show the deceased and his wife returning from a ritual > journey to Abydos. These paintings are some of the finest on the > necropolis.
>
> The workmen's village at Deir Al-Medina is situated to the north of the > small and graceful late Ptolemaic temple. Ever since it was cleared by a > French archaeological mission between 1922 and 1951, a succession of > scholars has worked on the masses of archaeological and literary > evidence recovered from a large pit containing some 40,000 pieces of > pottery and scraps of papyrus. Through these, the mission has been able > to trace the family histories of each of the inhabitants of the village > throughout a span of nearly three centuries: as well as their daily > activities, religious ceremonies, marriages, pride in their work, magic > texts, and even their antagonisms and jealousies.

>
> "At first no one had a real idea of what the community was for," Demaree > said. "But gradually they came to realise that it was to prepare the > royal tombs. This was really a construction department under a vizier, > and Demaree credited two scholars, Bernard Bruyere and Jaroslav Cerny, > for revealing a main street in a community of 500 to 600 people, and by > far the largest amount of evidence of a workmen's community ever to be > found. Indeed, it is somewhat ironical that today we know more about the > lives of the workmen who cut the New Kingdom royal tombs than we know > about many of the Pharaohs for whom they were built.
>
> The men of the village were all skilled workers who toiled in the Valley > of the Kings for 10-day stretches, and slept in makeshift shelters in a > mountain pass above the village until their term of work was over. They > worked under a strict system of administration, all classified according > to their work. The designers and scribes ranked highest, artists, > painterss and draftsmen next on the scale, then quarrymen and masons, > and at the bottom of the scale were the porters, diggers and mortar > mixers. In charge of the whole community was a Director of Works, and > the various foremen immediately under his control.
>
> Attendance was strictly marked. An absent worker had to account for > himself. The written excuses, which have survived the centuries, reveal > that one had to "visit my mother-in-law"; another had to get urgent > supplies from the market; and illness was a frequent excuse. Payment > came regularly each month in the form of charcoal, dried meat, fish, > bandages and cloth, along with materials for their work. When the > caravan failed to turn up and there was a backlog of salaries, this led > to the famous Revolution of the 20th/21st dynasties written on papyrus.
>
> With the death of Ramses X and Ramses XI, work at the royal valley came > to a close. We know this because their tombs were left unfinished. The > subsequent period was one of decline, during which no royal tombs were > built. "So what did the workers do?" asked Demaree. "We wondered about > that because texts on the final phase of occupation of the village were > lacking."
>
> Thanks, however, to a largely unpublished dossier of texts of an earlier > period -- in the time of Hatshepsut and Tuthmosis III (c 1473--1353 BC)
> -- as well as from the ostraca from various collections around the > world, Demaree's painstaking research resulted in what he called "a > great surprise!"

>
> "The material revealed that, under Ramses IX, it was no longer safe in > the village and the community took refuge near the Temple of Deir > Al-Bahari where they created tombs for the Priests of Amun, and, under a > new boss of a new dynasty in Thebes, the ruling elite appears to have > been given orders to empty the royal tombs and recycle the objects," > Demaree said. He provided several examples of "the re-use of royal > coffins that the worker's forefathers had created for the Ramasside > kings."
> Pharaoh's high-ranking officials
> PASER was a vizier during the reign of Seti I, and he continued to serve > under Ramses II. His job was to organise and direct major projects of > state and to supervise production and officiate at major religious > festivals, as here shown in a scene from his tomb at Thebes. One of his > main duties was to oversee the construction of his Pharaoh's tomb in the > Valley of the Kings, and it was he who organised the necessary > workforce, dividing the workers into two gangs -- one working on the > right side of the tomb and one on the left -- each under a foreman.
>
> The name of the foreman of the left side of Seti's tomb was Hay. He > seems to have spent his whole life working in the royal valley, which is > to say from about 1214 to 1174 BC. His father before him was a foreman, > and young Hay worked beside him from childhood, continuing to work in > the valley after his father died. He appears to have been a kind and > pious individual, and obviously a dedicated one because the tomb of Seti
> I, discovered by Giovanni Belzoni in 1817, far surpasses all others in > the Valley of the Kings both in size and in the artistic execution of > the sculptured walls. Every inch of the wall space of its entire > 100-metre length is covered with representations which were carried out > by the finest craftsmen.
>
> * Front Page <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/index.htm>
> * Egypt <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/egypt.htm>
> * Region <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/region.htm>
> * Economy <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/economy.htm>
> * International <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/inter.htm>
> * Opinion <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/opinion.htm>
> * Press review <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/press.htm>
> * Reader's corner <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/letters.htm>
> * Culture <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/culture.htm>
> * Special <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/special.htm>
> * Entertainment <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/entertain.htm>
> * Heritage <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/heritage.htm>
> * Living <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/living.htm>

> * Sports <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/sports.htm>
> * Cartoons <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/cartoon.htm>
> * People <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/people.htm>
> * Listings <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/list.htm>
> * BOOKS <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2006/788/books788.htm>
> * TRAVEL <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2009/938/travel.htm>
> * Site map <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/issues.htm>
>
>
>
>
>
> Copyright Al-Ahram Weekly. All rights reserved
>
| 28194|2009-03-15 18:42:54|Mahari Mengistu|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
To whom are you addressing this post?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Terry" wrote:
>
> You mean bigotry was taught to us by White enslavers - and they were not > masters.
>
>
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> >
> > >> I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or > pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our > history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not > happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst > off than they are now? Can we really picture that?<<
> >
> > I agree with you about our people working hard and relying heavily on > religion. The spiritual experience, IMHO, is extremely important to all > humans I believe - even those who resist or have contempt for it.
> However, religion or the spiritual experience is like grabbing and > eating a piece of fruit. It will usually be good for you to some degree > but if you are not careful you might grab a rotten piece, a damaged > piece, a sour piece. All of which might be good for you to SOME EXTENT.
> But clearly a sweet, firm, fully ripe piece of fruit is better for your > body.
> > It was our faith and sticking to the straight and narrow that carried > most of us through this HELL that still, in some ways, is America. But I > strongly believe that this "religious" expression has been a double > edged sword. For all these years we have been worshiping a white god > and a white Jesus - spiritual representations (and just like > socialization you CANNOT over-estimate the level of power of this > indoctrination)of our Savior. That alone to me does not make ANY sense.

> Even today in most black churches and black homes you will find the > blond Jesus on the wall overlooking the black gathering! I suppose it > is Christianity that makes them believe that in spite of all evidence to > the contrary that THIS particular white man and his white god will be > different - miraculously. This is not to say that all white people are > evil. I don't know what percentage are evil but I know - I know from > personal experience, current events and history that very many are.
> > And as for the "pointing the finger" I have NO PROBLEM WITH POINTING
> THE FINGER. You can't just point the finger and do no personal work on > your part. I think in many cases it is important to point the finger > because many people don't know. You point the finger and they know > exactly where to look for the guilty party.
> > It is true that there are times when it is not wise to point the > finger because it might limit some current negotiations taking place.
> Yet, I think it is a very good idea to keep that index finger supple and > flexible and your sense of direction very clear.
> > I appreciate your response. It is good to hear a sister expressing > real energy within the struggle.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, gingerd2007@ wrote:
> > >
> > > I absolutely agree with you. I always speak to that when talking to > young people, as well as elders. Our young people, around the world, > have been left to fend for themselves. And then when the lack of > knowledge kicks in, and ignorance rears its ugly head, the elders want > to stand back and point fingers and say - I told you so. How can you say > I told you so? The young people are a reflection of you! So when they / > we fail, you fail. I believe that there have been one to two generations > of our elders who got so caught up in religion, and praying and waiting > for something to happen, that they forgot that God blesses the child > that's got his own. They left the young people out to dry while they > were working from sun down to sun up, and going to church. Now, let me > say - I am not against any religion, and I know our people did what they > had to do to take care of the family and get by. And religion is > supposed to be that ladder to elevate us so that we can become free - > not spiritually enslaved. Problem is, it was taught to us by slave > masters and unfortunately many of us have not been truth seekers to find > out what it really means to and for us as a people. I say this to say, > its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the > other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we > got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if > in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we > really picture that?

> > >
> > > As far as Africa, I believe the only way we can get the African > nations on track is if we, African Americans, take our struggle, and > scholarship, and economic gain, and go and help rebuild. We are the only > ones - in the Diaspora who are in a position to do it. Thank you for > your response, it was well stated and enlightening.
> > >
> > >
> > > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > > Sent: Friday, March 13, 2009 3:25 PM
> > > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' > lesbians
> > >
> > >
> > > I think one lesson to take from this - apart from it being a huge > expression of ignorance - is that throughout the black disapora we black > folk do not have control over our youth.
> > > One reason, I believe, is because they do not really respect black > elders. And quickly, I will add that to a huge extent that is because we > continually express ourselves as powerless and in powerless ways.
> > > And I will also add that the expression of power does not really > manifest itself in talking loud or speaking outlandishly. We must speak > with clarity and with a workable plan that is centered in self-love, > self-affirmation, self-determination and with DETERMINATION. When do we > ever see that expressed or manifested?
> > > HTP,
> > > Mahari
> > >
> > > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The > black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle > image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too > bad the gay and lesbian community don't speak up about the millions of > other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have > any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I > read in this media anymore.
> > > >
> > > > http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/
> > > >
> > >

> >
>
| 28195|2009-03-15 19:01:29|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Fw: Police shooting kills 73-year old BLACK man on his home porc|
I lived in N'Ahlins, LA for 7.5 long somewhat dreary years. Shall I say that Katrina was just the tip of the racist iceberg? It's truly foul.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, leroy siner wrote:
>
>
>
> Cowardly MF
>
>
>
> _____
> From: "gingerd2007@..."
> Sent: Saturday, March 14, 2009 11:24:58 PM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: Police shooting kills 73-year old BLACK man on his home porch
>
>
>
>
> This happened on February 20th. I never even heard of it until today.
>
>
> From: Gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
> Sent: Saturday, March 14, 2009 9:21 PM
> To: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
> Subject: www.ksla.com : Police-involved shooting kills 73-year old man on porch
>
>
>
> Ginger (Gingerd2007@ hotmail.com) has sent you an item from http://www.ksla com.
>
>
>
> Police-involved shooting kills 73-year old man on porchAn Ark-La-Tex community is outraged this weekend after a police-involved shooting killed a 73-year old man on his own front porch. And there are conflicting reports whether the man was armed.
> http://www.ksla com/global/ story.asp? s=9882347
>
> Find more items like this at http://www.ksla com
>

> Copyright 2009 KSLA
>
| 28196|2009-03-16 09:23:13|Alex van Deelen|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
I will repost this, because people seem to be more interested in condemning African people for being homophobic, than they are in the actual data. I quote myself:

" It is clear from these crime statistics surveys that there were 36,000 reported rapes in 2007, and yet " ActionAid estimates there are 500,000 rapes in South Africa every year. "
No explanation of how they go from 36,000 to 500,000. "

In the gay capital of South Africa (Cape Town, population 3.5 million), on average 3.1 lesbians are killed per year because of hate crimes.

I guess they are not interested in actual facts.

Alex

I posted:

I remember the charge, even repeated on the BBC, that 'every 30 seconds,
a woman is raped in South Africa'. This story is the same. Which was a lie of course. What these 'activists' did, was say "Well there are only an x amount of rapes reported, so we are going to presume that only 3% of rapes are actually reported, and then multiply the number of reported rapes x 33.

For some context, the population of South Africa (in millions) went from:

40.6 1996
44.8 2001
48.5 2007

Source: Community Survey 2007

http://www.statssa.gov.za/community_new/content.asp

Total reported rapes fluctuated between about 41,000 and 36,000 per year for South Africa.

41,082 2001
38,896 2002
39,007 2003
41,006 2004

41,343 2005
39,304 2006
36,190 2007

http://www.saps.gov.za/statistics/reports/crimestats/2008/march_april_2001_2008/catagory/rape.pdf

It is clear from these crime statistics surveys that there were 36,000 reported rapes in 2007, and yet " ActionAid estimates there are 500,000 rapes in South Africa every year. ".

No explanation of how they go from 36,000 to 500,000.

Now to the rest of the article. If you read it carefully, it is written in a very sensationalistic and deceptive manner. But if you read more closely:

" Thirty one lesbians have been reported murdered in homophobic attacks since 1998 "

31 in 10 years, that is 3.1 per year in Cape Town, which because of it's cultural diversity and relative tolerance (compared to Boer heartlands like Transvaal and Orange Free State) is the gay capital of South Africa. And no quoted evidence that this has been committed 'by gangs' of youths either - although again, that makes for sensationalistic reading.

So yes, you should be very sceptical about what you read. These 'activists' have a long history in massively exaggerating not only the number of rapes, but the numbers of deaths from HIV/AIDS, to make political hay.

(As you've seen from the Community Survey and previous censuses, the population of South Africa grows with about 700,000 per year. There is no evidence of a declining population, as was predicted by the HIV/AIDS models.)

Alex
| 28197|2009-03-16 09:52:11|Shu Tefnut|Fw: [BNYEE]-- Fury and Forgiveness For Miles|
Hotep!

Thanks terry for taking me back.

Heru Bennu Amon Ra

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: Terry Howcott

To: terryhowcott@terryhowcott.com
Sent: Sunday, March 15, 2009 11:46:51 AM
Subject: [BNYEE]-- Fury and Forgiveness For Miles

Fury and Forgiveness For Miles as a Recovering Black Man

Put His Steps in His Horn

http://terryhowcott.com/closeup.asp?cid=9&pid=1218&offset=3

--~--~---------~--~----~------------~-------~--~----~
You received this message because you are subscribed to the Google Groups "Black New Yorkers for Educational Excellence" group.
To post to this group, send email to bnyee@googlegroups.com
To unsubscribe from this group, send email to bnyee+unsubscribe@googlegroups.com
For more options, visit this group at http://groups.google.com/group/bnyee?hl=en
-~----------~----~----~----~------~----~------~--~---

| 28198|2009-03-16 09:52:12|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
It depends on what your talking about and how you interpret the word. They were, and still are, masters of deception.

From: Terry
Sent: Sunday, March 15, 2009 7:12 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians

You mean bigotry was taught to us by White enslavers - and they were not masters.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >
> > >> I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?<<
>
> I agree with you about our people working hard and relying heavily on religion. The spiritual experience, IMHO, is extremely important to all humans I believe - even those who resist or have contempt for it.

However, religion or the spiritual experience is like grabbing and eating a piece of fruit. It will usually be good for you to some degree
but if you are not careful you might grab a rotten piece, a damaged piece, a sour piece. All of which might be good for you to SOME EXTENT.
But clearly a sweet, firm, fully ripe piece of fruit is better for your body.
> It was our faith and sticking to the straight and narrow that carried
most of us through this HELL that still, in some ways, is America. But I strongly believe that this "religious" expression has been a double edged sword. For all these years we have been worshiping a white god
and a white Jesus - spiritual representations (and just like socialization you CANNOT over-estimate the level of power of this indoctrination) of our Savior. That alone to me does not make ANY sense.
Even today in most black churches and black homes you will find the blond Jesus on the wall overlooking the black gathering! I suppose it is Christianity that makes them believe that in spite of all evidence to the contrary that THIS particular white man and his white god will be different - miraculously. This is not to say that all white people are evil. I don't know what percentage are evil but I know - I know from personal experience, current events and history that very many are.
> And as for the "pointing the finger" I have NO PROBLEM WITH POINTING
THE FINGER. You can't just point the finger and do no personal work on your part. I think in many cases it is important to point the finger because many people don't know. You point the finger and they know exactly where to look for the guilty party.
> It is true that there are times when it is not wise to point the finger because it might limit some current negotiations taking place.
Yet, I think it is a very good idea to keep that index finger supple and flexible and your sense of direction very clear.
> I appreciate your response. It is good to hear a sister expressing real energy within the struggle.
> HTP,
>
Mahari
>
> --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, gingerd2007@ wrote:
> >
> > I absolutely agree with you. I always speak to that when talking to young people, as well as elders. Our young people, around the world, have been left to fend for themselves. And then when the lack of knowledge kicks in, and ignorance rears its ugly head, the elders want to stand back and point fingers and say - I told you so. How can you say I told you so? The young people are a reflection of you! So when they / we fail, you fail. I believe that there have been one to two generations of our elders who got so caught up in religion, and praying and waiting for something to happen, that they forgot that God blesses the child that's got his own. They left the young people out to dry while they were working from sun down to sun up, and going to church. Now, let me say - I am not against any religion, and I know our people did what they had to do to take care of the family and get by. And religion is supposed to be that ladder to elevate us so that we can become free - not spiritually enslaved. Problem is, it was taught to us by slave masters and unfortunately many of us have not been truth seekers to find out what it really means to and for us as a people. I say this to say, its not about placing blame on anyone or pointing the finger in the other direction. Its about studying our history, and finding out how we got so off track... so that it does not happen again. Can we imagine if in 50-75 years our children are worst off than they are now? Can we really picture that?

> >
> > As far as Africa, I believe the only way we can get the African nations on track is if we, African Americans, take our struggle, and scholarship, and economic gain, and go and help rebuild. We are the only ones - in the Diaspora who are in a position to do it. Thank you for your response, it was well stated and enlightening.
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari
Mengistu
> > Sent: Friday, March 13, 2009 3:25 PM
> > To:
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure'
lesbians
> >
> >
> > I think one lesson to take from this - apart from it being a huge expression of ignorance - is that throughout the black disapora we black folk do not have control over our youth.
> > One reason, I believe, is because they do not really respect black elders. And quickly, I will add that to a huge extent that is because we continually express ourselves as powerless and in powerless ways.

> > And I will also add that the expression of power does not really manifest itself in talking loud or speaking outlandishly. We must speak with clarity and with a workable plan that is centered in self-love, self-affirmation, self-determination and with DETERMINATION. When do we ever see that expressed or manifested?
> > HTP,
> >
Mahari
> >
> > --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> > >
> > > Notice the symbolism in the picture accompanying the story. The black boy walking past the white poster boards of girls... a subtle image that you will not notice if your eye is not conscious. Also, too bad the gay and lesbian community don't speak up about the millions of other injustices that are going on in this same area. Does anyone have any information on this topic? Its hard for me to believe anything I read in this media anymore.
> > >
> > >
href="http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29676829/">http://www.msnbc. msn.com/id/ 29676829/
> > >
> >
>

| 28199|2009-03-16 09:52:12|Michael J Robinson|Don't Miss "The Order of Ma'at Presents, Alexyss K Tylor' on Ma'at C|

Attachments :

Hotep Family,

I wanted to let you know about some positive things our people are doing. Tune into this radio program tonight.

Check out "The Order of Ma'at Presents Alexyss K Tylor" on Ma'at Connections.

Time: March 16, 2009 from 10pm to 11:45pm
Location: BlogTalkRadio.com/theorderofmaat
Organized By: Seekwizdom9 OF THE ORDER OF MA'AT COUNCIL

Event Description:
Alexyss K Tylor: Speaks about sexual spirituality and the mindset that was perpetuated in our communities through slavery and how that correlates to our lives today.

PLEASE MAKE SURE YOU MARK THE ORDER OF MA'AT BLOG TALK RADIO AS A FAVORITE!

To view a clip of Alexyss K Tylor, and to check out her Youtube, please click on the link below.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yJW31arVE-I&eurl=http://maatconnections.ning.com/events/the-order-of-maat-presents?rsvpConfirm=1&feature=player_embedded

See more details and RSVP on Ma'at Connections:

http://maatconnections.ning.com/events/event/show?id=2673401%3AEvent%3A3043&xgi=0ZUiPB1

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior

| 28200|2009-03-16 09:53:41|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians|
I did see your posting, and I did read the information. I thank you for providing this information. It affirms what I already knew, and I appreciate you giving me the proper lenses from which to view this. I am passing your information to all of those that I sent the initial email to in an attempt to police this racist media and take control of our information on Africa. Thank you.

From: Alex van Deelen
Sent: Monday, March 16, 2009 9:22 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: South Africa gangs using rape to 'cure' lesbians

I will repost this, because people seem to be more interested in condemning African people for being homophobic, than they are in the actual data. I quote myself:

" It is clear from these crime statistics surveys that there were 36,000 reported rapes in 2007, and yet " ActionAid
estimates there are 500,000 rapes in South Africa every year. "
No explanation of how they go from 36,000 to 500,000. "

In the gay capital of South Africa (Cape Town, population 3.5 million), on average 3.1 lesbians are killed per year because of hate crimes.

I guess they are not interested in actual facts.

Alex

I posted:

I remember the charge, even repeated on the BBC, that 'every 30 seconds,
a woman is raped in South Africa'. This story is the same. Which was a lie of course. What these 'activists' did, was say "Well there are only an x amount of rapes reported, so we are going to presume that only 3% of rapes are actually reported, and then multiply the number of reported rapes x 33.

For some context, the population of South Africa (in millions) went from:

40.6 1996
44.8 2001
48.5 2007

Source: Community Survey 2007

http://www.statssa. gov.za/community _new/content. asp

Total reported rapes fluctuated between about 41,000 and 36,000
per year for South Africa.

41,082 2001
38,896 2002
39,007 2003
41,006 2004
41,343 2005
39,304 2006
36,190 2007

http://www.saps. gov.za/statistic s/reports/ crimestats/ 2008/march_ april_2001_ 2008/catagory/rape.pdf

It is clear from these crime statistics surveys that there were 36,000 reported rapes in 2007, and yet " ActionAid estimates there are 500,000 rapes in South Africa every year. ".

No explanation of how they go from 36,000 to 500,000.

Now to the rest of the article. If you read it carefully, it is written in a very sensationalistic and deceptive manner. But if you read more closely:

" Thirty one lesbians have been reported murdered in homophobic attacks since 1998 "

31 in 10 years, that is 3.1 per year in Cape Town, which because of it's cultural diversity and relative tolerance (compared to Boer heartlands like Transvaal and Orange Free State) is the gay capital of South Africa. And no quoted evidence that this has been committed 'by gangs' of youths either - although again, that makes for sensationalistic reading.

So yes, you should be very sceptical about what you read. These 'activists' have a long history in massively exaggerating not only the number of rapes, but the numbers of deaths from HIV/AIDS, to make political hay.

(As you've seen from the Community Survey and previous censuses, the population of South Africa grows with about 700,000 per year. There is no evidence of a declining population, as was predicted by the HIV/AIDS models.)

Alex

| 28201|2009-03-16 10:21:44|cristofori whitakara|Re: "N"|
The use of the rib sounds like some bone marrow experiment. Does the story go into detail about what the rib was used for?

--- On Fri, 3/13/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 13, 2009, 6:14 PM

If logic were to be a part of the argument then that seems more logical. However, logic has never been an important consideration for these narcissistic, self-centered, warring mountain tribes from whence comes the three "big" religions (I call them "big" rather than great because there is nothing great about them) and the most recent editions of Afrakan-sourced religions.
HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, clyde winters wrote:
>
> Hi
>
> In the Sumerian tradition women were first and man (males) were made from the rib.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:19 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> thats really interesting to me as related to the biblical story of adam taking a 'rib' to create > hawwah/eden/ eve or mother of living.
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ferg wrote:
>
> From: Ferg
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 9:36 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TI as NINA means mother in Bantu. I understand that TI is a Sumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate as the mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
>

> Somo
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace
>
> In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (the womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss of Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.
>
> I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would shed some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba Simbi in English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, energy, the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.
>
> Simba in Kikongo means:
>
> ➢ to hold up
> ➢ to keep (a thing)
> ➢ to bless
> ➢ to treasure
> ➢ to touch
> ➢ to retain
>
> Simbi means:
>
> ➢ a keeper; a watch over
> ➢ someone with power to protect
> ➢ a living power/energy that holds up everything
>
> All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).
>

> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
> Peace
>
> Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.
>
> A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.
>
> NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:
>
> A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.
>
> Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursing that brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?
>

| 28202|2009-03-16 12:52:28|clyde winters|Re: "N"|
I will let you know later I have to re-read my source.
Clyde

--- On Mon, 3/16/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 16, 2009, 12:21 PM

The use of the rib sounds like some bone marrow experiment. Does the story go into detail about what the rib was used for?

--- On Fri, 3/13/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, March 13, 2009, 6:14 PM

If logic were to be a part of the argument then that seems more logical. However, logic has never been an important consideration for these narcissistic, self-centered, warring mountain tribes from whence comes the three "big" religions (I call them "big" rather than great because there is nothing great about them) and the most recent editions of Afrakan-sourced religions.
HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, clyde winters wrote:
>
> Hi
>
> In the Sumerian tradition women were first and man (males) were made from the rib.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 11:19 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> thats really interesting to me as related to the biblical story of adam taking a 'rib' to create > hawwah/eden/ eve or mother of living.
>
> --- On Thu, 3/12/09, Ferg wrote:
>
> From: Ferg
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 9:36 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Just a quick note about the Goddess NIN-TI. Could her name be NINA-TI as NINA means mother in Bantu. I understand that TI is a Sumerian word for rib, which is also a verb and means to make live. Thus NIN-TI would translate as the mother of the rib. Or could TI merely signify the feminine?
>

> Somo
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Thursday, March 12, 2009 9:38 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace
>
> In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (the womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss of Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.
>
> I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would shed some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba Simbi in English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, energy, the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.
>
> Simba in Kikongo means:
>
> ➢ to hold up
> ➢ to keep (a thing)
> ➢ to bless
> ➢ to treasure
> ➢ to touch
> ➢ to retain
>
> Simbi means:
>
> ➢ a keeper; a watch over
> ➢ someone with power to protect
> ➢ a living power/energy that holds up everything
>
> All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).
>

> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
> Peace
>
> Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.
>
> A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.
>
> NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:
>
> A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.
>
> Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
> --- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursing that brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?
>

| 28203|2009-03-16 21:01:04|Mahari Mengistu|The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|

The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman

March 15, 2009 · Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures

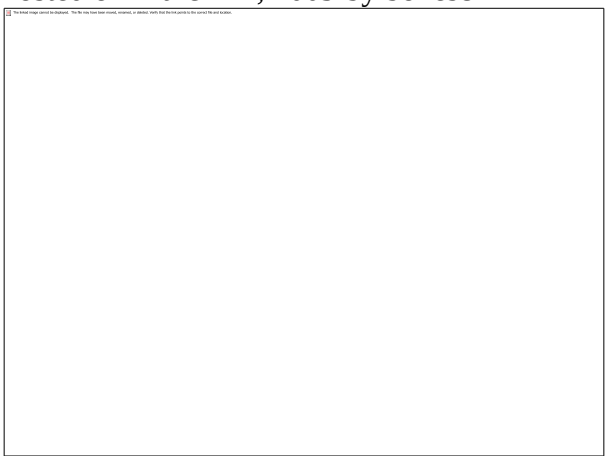
In its permanent exhibition, Bonn University□s Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.

The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.

The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to □reconstruct□ the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.

Science Daily

===



HTP,

Mahari

| 28204|2009-03-16 21:45:11|Mahari Mengistu|Seth: Deity of Good or Evil?|

Seth: Deity of Good orEvil?

Posted on March 14, 2009 by bones8

Seth slaying Apophis in Hibis Temble, Kharga

Commonly considered the god of chaos, and thus an evil god, Seth may be more diverse than that simple definition illustrates. To understand the character of the god, his mythical character must be examined from many perspectives, including the time periods he was worshipped and the geographic locations where he was worshipped.

Seth was the third son of the sky goddess, Nut, and the earth god, Geb. Among Seth□s four brothers and sisters was his archenemy, Osiris, and Osiris□ wife, Isis. Osiris was lord of all Egypt and it was because of this that Seth saw Osiris as his enemy. Seth wanted to claim lordship of Egypt for himself and so he devised a trap for Osiris. Using his cunning, Seth created a sarcophagus that would be the perfect size for Osiris and Osiris only. On the occasion of a party, Seth presented the splendid sarcophagus to the onlookers. He challenged them all saying whoever fit into the sarcophagus perfectly would become its owner. Everyone tried save for Osiris. Finally, Seth convinced his brother to try the sarcophagus. As soon as Osiris lay in the sarcophagus, Seth slammed the lid shut and threw it into the Nile. Distraught, Isis searched for the sarcophagus downstream and upon finding it, began to give her husband a proper burial. Angered, Seth set upon Osiris and cut his body into fourteen pieces, which he scattered throughout the land of Egypt. Again, Isis searched for her husband. She found all her husband□s pieces save for one, which was eaten by fish that were thereafter cursed and neither touched nor eaten by any Egyptian. Upon rejoining the pieces of Osiris, making a magical likeness of Osiris□ missing piece and through her own magic, Isis was able to beget a child from Osiris. Horus was born in the rushes of the Nile where Isis hid from Seth, who still hunted them, despite his claiming lordship over the land of Egypt. When Horus grew into manhood, he declared war on Seth to avenge the wrongs he committed against Osiris. After many battles, Horus triumphed over Seth and became lord of the land of Egypt in his father□s stead and Seth the god of chaos.[i]

From this popular myth, Seth appears to be a character driven out of greed for what his brother possesses that he cannot have. The atrocities he preformed against Osiris, Isis and later Horus, show a truly evil character.[ii] However, he was respected by the ancient Egyptians and worshipped, as was his due. The question becomes whether he was worshipped out of fear or out of simple respect for his being a deity.[iii]

As a deity in general, Seth shows more than just the greedy tendencies put forth in the classic Isis and Osiris myth. He is a strong god, and a cunning one. These aspects of his character are truly traits that would be admired by any. In his own right, Seth was worshipped, not as a god of chaos, in as much, but as a god of cunning, strength, and, through strength, as a protective deity. Regarding the times he has been worshipped by pharaohs, it is obvious that he is seen as far more than an evil, chaotic figure. In the pyramid texts, the pharaoh claims to possess Seth□s strength. Ramses II, at the battle of Kadesh, also claims Seth□s strength.[iv]

While not often worshipped in the Nile Valley for his chaotic qualities, Seth could be called upon to combat chaotic occurrences. As seen with Ramses II, he prays to Seth to battle the massive storms that were preventing a Hittite princess from coming to Egypt to marry the pharaoh. In this sense, Seth is worshipped as a god of chaos and a god of protection. To the ancient Egyptians, there was no better way to combat chaos than to appeal to the one deity that understood chaos better than any other.[v]

Through the strength of Seth, another myth comes to light. As Ra, the sun deity, sails across the sky in his bark, he is set upon by many evils intent on doing him harm. Spells are said by the deity to protect him from some of these evils, an ensemble of deities combats other evils. In the Book of the Dead, Seth is called upon to slay the serpent, Apophis, whose intent is to swallow the sun bark whole, throwing the world into darkness and chaos. It is Seth who slays Apophis every day, combating the serpent□s chaos with his own and protecting Ra with his strength.[vi]

While Seth was feared and respected by the inhabitants of the Nile Valley, he was a patron to those who lived in the uncertain climate of the Oases of the Western Desert. As Seth was the god of chaos, he was the god of the uncontrollable deserts of the Sahara. The Oases were small pockets of order in the chaotic deserts, and were thus allowed to survive by the good graces of Seth. The oases□ inhabitants consequently worshipped Seth, not as the feared deity of chaos, nor the strong protector, per se, but as a respected and loved deity of chaos to combat the feared chaos of the shifting desert sands.[vii] This loved deity of chaos is seen in a rare form in Hibis Temple in the Kharga Oasis. Here he is depicted as a blue-skinned, falcon headed god, his wings spread wide behind him as he slays Apophis beneath his feet.[viii] Here he is not just the protector of Ra, but of the inhabitants of the oases.

While questioning the goodness or evilness of Seth□s character, the conclusion does not appear to be a simple one. On the one hand, his volatile character drives him to slay his brother in greed, yet he is the protector of Ra and slayer of the evil Apophis. He possesses qualities both of good and evil, depending upon his mood. His mood is as shifting as the desert sands of his domain. He is truly a god of chaos, being either good or evil when the whim takes him.

---

[i] McDevitt, April. The Story of Isis and Osiris. 25 Mar. 2008. Ancient Egypt: the Mythology. 14 Mar. 2009.

[ii] ibid.

[iii] Wilkinson, Richard H. The Complete Gods and Goddesses of Ancient Egypt. New York: Thames & Hudson, 2003.

[iv] ibid.

[v] ibid.

[vi] Budge, E.A. Wallis. Chapter CX, Plate XXXIV. The Egyptian Book of the Dead (The Papyrus of Any) Egyptian Test Transliteration and Translation. New York: Dover Publications, 1967.

[vii] Thurston, Harry. Secrets of the Sands: The Revelations of Egypt□s Everlasting Oasis. New York: Arcade Publications, 2003.

[viii] Le temple d□Hibis, oasis de Khargha. Bienvenue dans les oasis de Khargha et Dakhla. 14 Mar. 2009. < http://alain.guilleux.free.fr/khargha_hibis/khargha_temple_hibis.html>

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 28205|2009-03-17 02:54:12|Sptpy|Re: Seth: Deity of Good or Evil?|

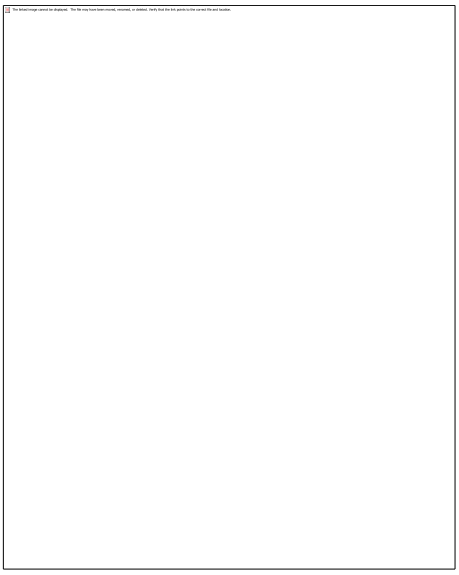
Are we to consider the nTrw as *gods*or as the principles or forces of Creation?

Tyrone

"Commonly considered the god of chaos, and thus an evil god, Seth may be more diverse than that simple definition illustrates.[...]Seth was the third son of the sky goddess, Nut, and the earth god, Geb.Among Seth's four brothers and sisters was his archenemy, Osiris, and Osiris' wife, Isis."
http://bones8.wordpress.com/2009/03/14/seth-deity-of-good-or-evil/
| 28206|2009-03-17 06:17:07|Paul Kekai Manansala|Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
Oh really!

Cleopatra's mother 'was African'

http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/also_in_the_news/7945333.stm



Cleopatra, the last Egyptian Pharaoh, renowned for her beauty, was part African, says a BBC team which believes it has found her sister's tomb.

Queen Cleopatra was a descendant of Ptolemy, the Macedonian general who ruled Egypt after Alexander the Great.

But remains of the queen's sister Princess Arsinoe, found in Ephesus, Turkey, indicate that her mother had an "African" skeleton.

Experts have described the results as "a real sensation."

The discovery was made by Hilke Thuer of the Austrian Academy of Sciences.

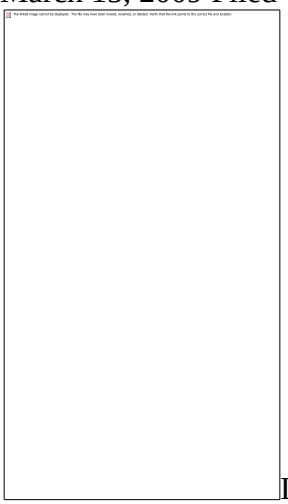
Elizabeth Taylor's European Cleopatra persists in the public imagination

"It is unique in the life of an archaeologist to find the tomb and the skeleton of a member of Ptolemaic dynasty," she said.

They were real people and not the semi-mythical figures portrayed by Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor

"That Arsinoe had an African mother is a real sensation which leads to a new insight on Cleopatra's family and the relationship of the sisters Cleopatra and Arsinoe." Archaeologist Neil Oliver

They lived at a turbulent time when the Roman empire was extending its power across the Mediterranean.



Cleopatra established alliances with the Roman leader Julius Caesar and, after his assassination, with his political supporter, General Mark Antony, to whom she was married.

"Cleopatra, Julius Caesar, Mark Antony - they are all iconic figures from history," said archaeologist Neil Oliver who presents the BBC documentary.
| 28207|2009-03-17 07:39:04|cristofori whitakara|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman| After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM

The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman

March 15, 2009 Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures

In its permanent exhibition, Bonn Universitys Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to reconstruct the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.

Science Daily
===
HTP,
Mahari

| 28208|2009-03-17 08:08:28|cristofori whitakara|Lithium Batteries (Kemtronics?)|

Technology seen slashing battery recharge time, weight

March 11, 2009
World Science staff

Engineers say theyve found a way to move energy faster through a well-known battery material, possibly paving the way for smaller, lighter batteries that recharge in seconds rather than hours.

Engineers say theyve found a way to move energy faster through a well-known battery material, possibly paving the way for smaller, lighter batteries that recharge in seconds rather than hours. The advance could also benefit car batteries, which usually take hours to charge, according to engineers. (Image courtesy GM)

The work, led by Gerbrand Ceder of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is detailed in the March 12 issue of the research journal Nature. Because the material involved isnt newits just made in a new wayCeder says the technology could reach the market within three years.

Modern lithium rechargeable batteries can pack plenty of charge into a small space, but are slow to take up and discharge that energy. This drawback means that, for example, an electric car battery can move the auto at a moderate highway speed for a long time, but acceleration is sluggish, Ceder noted.

Scientists traditionally thought such pokey performance was due to slow movement of the particles that carry electric charge across the batterycharged atoms and electrons.But through a series of computer calculations, Ceder and colleagues found that this wasnt exactly the problem, at least not for a well-known battery material, lithium iron phosphate.

The real difficulty, the group found, is that the charged atoms can only cross through the material through tunnels accessed from the surface. If the particle lies directly at a tunnel entrance, it slips right in, but otherwise it gets stuck.

Ceder and Byoungwoo Kang, a graduate student, devised a solution: a new surface structure that lets the particles, called ions, move quickly around the outside of the material. Like a beltway around a city, this diverts ions right into the tunnels. The result was a small battery that could be fully charged or discharged in 10 to 20 seconds. By comparison, it takes six minutes to fully charge or discharge a cell phone made from the unprocessed material.

Ceder said further tests showed the new material degrades less than do other battery materials when repeatedly charged and recharged. This could allow smaller batteries, as less material is needed for the same result. The advance may open up new technological applications and induce lifestyle changes, Ceder and Kang wrote.

| 28209|2009-03-17 08:12:48|cristofori whitakara|Re: "N"|
The Watchmen, how interesting.

--- On Thu, 3/12/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 12, 2009, 5:38 AM

Peace

In essence yes. Het-Heru, from my interpretation, would be the mothering living energy (the womb) that aids in the development of "a" Heru. Het Heru is also known as the "Mistriss of Singing" and "The Mistriss of Dancing." That may give clues to her meaning as well.

I think a good work that discusses the African concept of a living energy force that would shed some light on ANKH/NKWA, would be Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi. Simba Simbi in English would mean to "Hold up that which holds you up." The Simbi is a living power, energy, the God principle, the mothering principle that holds up everything.

Simba in Kikongo means:

? to hold up
? to keep (a thing)
? to bless
? to treasure
? to touch
? to retain

Simbi means:

? a keeper; a watch over
? someone with power to protect
? a living power/energy that holds up everything

All of these principles associated with Simba Simbi apply to the ANKH and the NKWA. Which is why the root of NKWA again is KA(a) - fire, man, to be, to exist, power, living energy, charcoal, "alive coal" (see Kala).

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Tue, 3/10/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, March 10, 2009, 5:04 PM

Now I can see the difference from your explanation of which I am very thankful. Ninti represents the place(house) in which the life force(ankh) is developed i.e. Hathor, Het Heru, is the House where Heru develops?

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 11:03 PM

Peace

Linguistically, I don't think that they relate. Looking at the consonants, NKH for "ankh" and NNT or NNHRSG, they do not match. Conceptually they do not match as well. If you are correct in your interpretation of the Sumerian principles, then it seems more like the deification of the nurturing and developing princples that bring forth life. When you say something is the "house" of something, you are metaphorically orienting one's attention to the engulfing or the parameters of a concept. It is a principle that incubates something and allows it to come into being.

A house is space in which, after birth, human beings develop (are nurtured by parents, food, sleep, learning, etc.). The woman's womb is the place (house) where life develops getting ready for its next phase. It encompasses the fetus, protects it so it can develop. This is how I interprete Ninti.

NKWA/ANKH (INEKOHE?) is more related to the vital force that is life (internal fire). It is the living principle (the union of masculine and feminine forces). On another level, it expands this concept to encompass a more prosperous, vitalistic life. This kind of life is reserved for those who are balanced and have obtained harmonic wealth in their life time. This would include prosperity in human relationships, finance, spirituality, health, and education. These concepts working together to bring balance is someone who has NKWA (or power). They are the Ngangas of their community. They know and carry out their responsibilities as children of the earth and children of the stars. This is why you would see in Egyptian text priests receiving ANKH:

A Dagara proverb states, "When death comes knocking at your door, let him find you living!" This proverb speaks to the heart of the back-view meaning of the term ANKH/NKWA.

Side note: In our discussion of Ankh, and my interpretation of its root being KA, in the following image, you actually see the KA coming out of the ANKH. I wonder if that is coincidence?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Mon, 3/9/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: "N"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 9, 2009, 10:24 AM

There was a Sumerian goddess named Ninti/Ninhursag that symbolized the House of Life as the deity of nursingthat brought forth life in the human form and so i wonder if she relates to the discussion also?

| 28210|2009-03-17 09:14:18|Ferg|Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Attachments :
Greetings.
I've called this KA pdf documentgenesis of the KAA, Bantu abstractions of KAA.
Please feel free to criticise.
Somo
| 28211|2009-03-17 13:10:43|Lamar Perryman|Fw: [NorthAmexemObservers] Fw: Scholar Claims Dead Sea Scrolls 'Auth|
Bro. Abba-Re,
Even though I disagreed with you about your position on Black Americans not having a connection to Moors or Kanaanites whether through West Africa, Spain or the Early Americas Iwish to apologize to youfor calling your statement and that of Dr. York's about the matter "foolish". That was not the proper thing to do whether either of us is right or wrong. Accepting your analysis based on what you know or believe is the proper thing to do even though I disagree with your premise for such conclusion.

Hoping that you accept my apology and let us continue to work together for substantial progress here in Black America in our own respective ways.
Sincerely,
MLP.,
American Federal Nationalists.

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, deshon way wrote:

From: deshon way
Subject: [NorthAmexemObservers] Fw: Scholar Claims Dead Sea Scrolls 'Authors' Never Existed
To: northamexemobservers@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 4:35 PM

"ONE DAY, NEW MOORS WILL COME IN WITH EYES WIDE OPEN, SEEING AND KNOWING, WHO WILL TAKE YOU OLD MOORS, SEAT YOU IN THE BACK, AND CARRY OUT MY LAW" - THE PROPHET, NOBLE DREW ALI.

This message is intended solely for the use of the individual and entity to whom it is addressed, and may contain information that is privileged, confidential, and exempt from disclosure under applicable state and federal laws. If you are not the addressee, or are not authorized to receive for the intended addressee, you are hereby notified that you may not use, copy, distribute, or disclose to anyone this message or the information contained herein. If you have received this message in error, immediately advise the sender by reply email and destroy this message.

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, AEOEOnline wrote:

From: AEOEOnline
Subject: Scholar Claims Dead Sea Scrolls 'Authors' Never Existed
To: nyenem@yahoo.com
Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 11:01 AM

Scholar Claims Dead Sea Scrolls 'Authors' Never Existed

Biblical scholars have long argued that the Dead Sea Scrolls were the work of an ascetic and celibate Jewish community known as the Essenes, which flourished in the 1st century A.D. in the scorching desert canyons near the Dead Sea. Now a prominent Israeli scholar, Rachel Elior, disputes that the Essenes ever existed at all - a claim that has shaken the bedrock of biblical scholarship.

Elior, who teaches Jewish mysticism at Jerusalem's Hebrew University, claims that the Essenes were a fabrication by the 1st century A.D. Jewish-Roman historian Flavius Josephus and that his faulty reporting was passed on as fact throughout the centuries. As Elior explains, the Essenes make no mention of themselves in the 900 scrolls found by a Bedouin shepherd in 1947 in the caves of Qumran, near the Dead Sea. "Sixty years of research have been wasted trying to find the Essenes in the scrolls," Elior tells TIME. "But they didn't exist. This is legend on a legend." (See pictures of 60 years of Israel.)

Elior contends that Josephus, a former Jewish priest who wrote his history while being held captive in Rome, "wanted to explain to the Romans that the Jews weren't all losers and traitors, that there were many exceptional Jews of religious devotion and heroism. You might say it was the first rebuttal to anti-Semitic literature." She adds, "He was probably inspired by the Spartans. For the Romans, the Spartans were the highest ideal of human behavior, and Josephus wanted to portray Jews who were like the Spartans in their ideals and high virtue." (See pictures of disputed artifiacts.)

Early descriptions of the Essenes by Greek and Roman historians has them numbering in the thousands, living communally ("The first kibbutz," jokes Elior) and forsaking sex - which goes against the Judaic exhortation to "go forth and multiply." Says Elior: "It doesn't make sense that you have thousands of people living against the Jewish law and there's no mention of them in any of the Jewish texts and sources of that period." (Read "Is This Jesus's Tomb?")

So who were the real authors of the Dead Sea Scrolls? Elior theorizes that the Essenes were really the renegade sons of Zadok, a priestly caste banished from the Temple of Jerusalem by intriguing Greek rulers in 2nd century B.C. When they left, they took the source of their wisdom - their scrolls - with them. "In Qumran, the remnants of a huge library were found," Elior says, with some of the early Hebrew texts dating back to the 2nd century B.C. Until the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls, the earliest known version of the Old Testament dated back to the 9th century A.D. "The scrolls attest to a biblical priestly heritage," says Elior, who speculates that the scrolls were hidden in Qumran for safekeeping. (See pictures of Jews and Muslims in the Holy Land.)

Elior's theory has landed like a bombshell in the cloistered world of biblical scholarship. James Charlesworth, director of the Dead Sea Scrolls project at Princeton Theological Seminary and an expert on Josephus, says it is not unusual that the word Essenes does not appear in the scrolls. "It's a foreign label," he tells TIME. "When they refer to themselves, it's as 'men of holiness' or 'sons of light.' " Charlesworth contends that at least eight scholars in antiquity refer to the Essenes. One proof of Essene authorship of the Dead Sea Scrolls, he says, is the large number of inkpots found by archaeologists at Qumran.

But Elior claims says these ancient historians, namely Philo and Pliny the Elder, either borrowed from each other or retailed second-hand stories as fact. "Pliny the Elder describes the Essenes as 'choosing the company of date palms' beside the Dead Sea. We know Pliny was a great reader, but he probably never visited Israel," she says.

Elior is braced for more criticism of her theory. "Usually my opponents have only read Josephus and the other classical references to the Essenes," she says. "They should read the Dead Sea Scrolls - all 39 volumes. The proof is there."

If you do not want to receive any more newsletters, this link

To update your preferences and to unsubscribe visit this link
Forward a Message to Someone this link

| 28212|2009-03-17 15:53:46|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Greetings Brother Ferg

I must say that this is a beautifully written and a well connected essay. This surely will aid us in a fuller understanding of the usage of African symbolism and language. I would like to add the following commentary to the discussion that I think would be of benefit.

In the book Symposium of the Whole: A Range of Discourse Toward an Ethnopoetics, there is an excerpt on pgs 199-120 by Leopold Sedar Senghor that really illuminates how we should approach the study of African languages and symbolism. The excerpt is from his work Prose & Poetry translated by John Reed and Clive Wakei, pages 84-85. The title of the excerpt is Speech and Image: An African Tradition of the Surreal. I will quote in length:

> The African languages are characterized first of all by the richness of their vocabulary. There are sometimes twenty different words for an object according to its form, weight, volume and colour, and as many for an action according to whether it is single or repeated, weakly or intensely performed, just beginning or coming to an end. In Fulani, nouns are divided into twenty-one genders which are not related to sex. The classification is based sometimes on the meaning of the words or the phonetic qualities and sometimes on the grammatical category to which they belong. Most significant in this respect is the verb. On the same root in Wolof can be constructed more than twenty Verbs expressing different shades of meaning, and at least as many derivative nouns. While modern Indo-European languages emphasize the abstract notion of time, African languages emphasize the aspect, the concrete way in which the action of the verb takes place. These are essentially concrete languages. In them words are always pregnant with images. Under their value as signs, their sense value shows through.
>
> The African image is not then an image by equation but an image by analogy, a surrealist image. Africans do not like straight lines and false mots justes. Two and two do not make > four, but five, as Aime Cesaire has told us. The object does not mean what it represents but what it suggests, what it creates. The Elephant is Strength, the Spider is Prudence; Horns are the Moon and the Moon is Fecundity. Every representation is an image, and the image, I repeat, is not an equation but a symbol, an ideogramme. Not only the figuration of the image but also its materialstone, earth, copper, gold, fibreand also its line and colour. All language which does not tell a story bores them, or rather, Africans do not understand such language. The astonishment of the first Europeans when they found that the natives did not understand their pictures or even the logic of their arguments!

>
> I have spoken of the surrealist image. But as you would suppose, African surrealism is different from European surrealism. European surrealism is empirical, African surrealism is mystical and metaphysical. Andre Breton writes in Signe Ascendant: The poetic analogy (meaning the European surrealist analogy) differs functionally from the mystical analogy in that it does not presuppose, beyond the visible world, an invisible world which is striving to manifest itself. It proceeds in a completely empirical way. In contrast, the African surrealist analogy presupposes and manifest the hierarchized universe of life-forces. emphasis mine

As can be seen here, in African languages words are used in an analogous form: the intent to allude to the function of the item being represented by the word more so than the object itself. When we understand this convention of African languages, what we read in Somos recent treaty on the KAA makes perfect sense.

I think the knowledge of this convention can help us out with other words as well. A common word I discuss that utilizes this convention is the word TU or DU in various African languages which refers to an object or being. The traditional way of viewing these terms doesnt tell us much about the words themselves. They seem cold and dry. But when we look through the lens of African people, we realize a much richer concept associated with these terms.

In linguistics, /t/ and /d/ are practically the same and are interchangeable between various languages. Thus we see the word TU in Ancient Egyptian and BanTU languages and DU in the KWA branches of the Niger Congo family.

The word NTU is an object or being. The BaNTU languages are characterized by their noun class prefixes. The prefix tells you what kind of noun it is. For example,

> Mu-ntu = the intelligent being (human being)
> Ki-ntu = the non-intelligent being (thing)
> Ha-ntu = the localizing being (place-time)
> Ku-ntu = the modal being (manner of being)

The prefix BA in BANTU is the plural form of MU (human being noun class). Here our previous discussion on the letter N maybe of value here. As we know, the N prefix can mean that which is or he/she who is or may denote being in a state of. So we could read MUNTU to mean Man-which is-thing or more eloquently stated, The container/thing of a man.

In the Yoruba language, ODU means a general container. The O prefix is actually a contraction of the word OLOWA which means owner of. So an ODU translates as Owner of the container/thing. For those of you familiar with the Yoruba spiritual system of Ifa, you know an ODU is a manifestation of an object in nature. Could the N represent the same concept of OLOWA: Owner of? From this we know that the TU is simply a container for a life force which animates the thing and gives it character.

Could the Egyptian symbol of the KA indicate or allude to that which carries the container? Think about it, when you see pictures of African people, especially farmers, what do you see them often doing? They are holding up something over their heads: clothes, food stuffs, market items etc.

As stated before, the word TU or DU means general container or in essence that which houses, contains a substance. Philosophically, all things in the universe, in African wisdom traditions, are really just a container for a living invisible energy force which gives it its characteristics. The physical form is simply the shell that covers the invisible force which defines that shell. Imagine a cup. Now equate the cup with the word TU. The cup is the container. Now lets assume the cup has water in it. The water we would equate to the life force which gives the cup purpose: to contain liquids.

In the Kiswahili Bantu, Ferg gives a definition of KAA to mean TAKE and/or to CARRY. This gives us a perfect visual representation of the Egyptian KA (two arms raised as if holding a container).

I bring this up because, as mentioned in a previous email, the Kikongo concept of SIMBA SIMBI carries a similar notion as that of the KA in the various other Bantu languages. SIMBA SIMBI means to hold up that which holds you up. SIMBI means, a living power that holds up everything. In other words, it is the energy force, the God principle, which holds up all animate and inanimate beings. It would be equivalent to the ITONGO of South Africa. For ITONGO is GOD itself and all things has its own spark of ITONGO. The same with the SIMBI. The SIMBI is the God force of creation and yet all things contain its own SIMBI.

As Rene A. Schwaller de Lubicz argued, there was a universal KA, a KA of nature and an individual KA. This would be in alignment with other African ways of viewing this energy and its spark in all things in creation.

Another example of KA being the God force can be seen in a Kongo word for God, KALUNGA. KALUNGA is represented as both WATER and FIRE. Both of these are symbols of elements that create life. For an initiates understanding of the term KALUNGA, read Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiaus African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. The proto Bantu word lunga means to put in order or to put straight. KA is often times used to as a prefix to denote people or offices. So we can see why KALUNGA would be referred to as GOD as he is the ultimate high person who holds the highest office who puts things in order.

I could go on for days, but I think this is long enough. To make a long story short, as Ferg has hinted, the KA and the KHT (body) are inseparable. The body houses the KA and the KA carries (animates) the body; is the power that holds up the body (Simbi, Itongo, etc.). KA is the very life force, symbolized by a burning coal.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28213|2009-03-17 16:39:01|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
Don't these people sound pretentiously stupid!?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:
>
> Oh really!
>
>
>
>
>
> Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> [Elizabeth Taylor playing Cleopatra] Elizabeth Taylor's European > Cleopatra persists in the public imagination
> http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/also_in_the_news/7945333.stm
>
> Cleopatra, the last Egyptian Pharaoh, renowned for her beauty, was part > African, says a BBC team which believes it has found her sister's tomb.
>
> Queen Cleopatra was a descendant of Ptolemy, the Macedonian general who > ruled Egypt after Alexander the Great.
>
> But remains of the queen's sister Princess Arsinoe, found in Ephesus,
> Turkey, indicate that her mother had an "African" skeleton.
>
> Experts have described the results as "a real sensation."
>
> The discovery was made by Hilke Thuer of the Austrian Academy of > Sciences.

>
> "It is unique in the life of an archaeologist to find the tomb and the > skeleton of a member of Ptolemaic dynasty," she said.
>
>
> [0]
> [0] They were real people and not the semi-mythical figures > portrayed by Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor [right]
> Archaeologist Neil Oliver
> "That Arsinoe had an African mother is a real sensation which leads to a > new insight on Cleopatra's family and the relationship of the sisters > Cleopatra and Arsinoe."
>
> They lived at a turbulent time when the Roman empire was extending its > power across the Mediterranean.
>
> Cleopatra established alliances with the Roman leader Julius Caesar and,
> after his assassination, with his political supporter, General Mark > Antony, to whom she was married.
>
> "Cleopatra, Julius Caesar, Mark Antony - they are all iconic figures > from history," said archaeologist Neil Oliver who presents the BBC > documentary.
>
| 28214|2009-03-17 16:40:22|Mahari Mengistu|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|
That's the way it's been for a minimum of 2000 years.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> March 15, 2009 · Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures
> In its permanent exhibition, Bonn University□s Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
> The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
> The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to □reconstruct□ the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.
> Science Daily
> ===
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
| 28215|2009-03-17 16:48:36|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'| Indeed. '.....that her mother had an "African" skeleton.'

Sounds silly.

GE

-----Original Message-----
From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto:Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 7:39 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'

Don't these people sound pretentiously stupid!?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:
>
> Oh really!
>
>
>
>
>
> Cleopatra's mother 'was African'

> [Elizabeth Taylor playing Cleopatra] Elizabeth Taylor's European > Cleopatra persists in the public imagination
> http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/also_in_the_news/7945333.stm
>
> Cleopatra, the last Egyptian Pharaoh, renowned for her beauty, was part

> African, says a BBC team which believes it has found her sister's tomb.

>
> Queen Cleopatra was a descendant of Ptolemy, the Macedonian general

who > ruled Egypt after Alexander the Great.
>
> But remains of the queen's sister Princess Arsinoe, found in Ephesus,
> Turkey, indicate that her mother had an "African" skeleton.
>
> Experts have described the results as "a real sensation."
>
> The discovery was made by Hilke Thuer of the Austrian Academy of > Sciences.
>
> "It is unique in the life of an archaeologist to find the tomb and the > skeleton of a member of Ptolemaic dynasty," she said.
>
>
> [0]
> [0] They were real people and not the semi-mythical figures > portrayed by Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor [right]
> Archaeologist Neil Oliver
> "That Arsinoe had an African mother is a real sensation which leads to a > new insight on Cleopatra's family and the relationship of the sisters > Cleopatra and Arsinoe."

>
> They lived at a turbulent time when the Roman empire was extending its > power across the Mediterranean.
>
> Cleopatra established alliances with the Roman leader Julius Caesar

and,
> after his assassination, with his political supporter, General Mark > Antony, to whom she was married.

>
> "Cleopatra, Julius Caesar, Mark Antony - they are all iconic figures > from history," said archaeologist Neil Oliver who presents the BBC > documentary.
>

Ta_Seti Repository
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta_seti2Yahoo! Groups Links
| 28216|2009-03-17 19:16:01|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Fw:march free meditation class this sun'sday|
Attachments :

this sun'sday at 3:30p a new and energetic subject!

> come by sunday for a intro: into meditation, part class offered by memphis ausar-auset st group.
> please check out attachment to this email , click for more details

| 28217|2009-03-17 21:46:35|Mahari Mengistu|An anti-Christian chapter in Western history is about to begin|
I thought this was an interesting article. My question is when? It can't be soon enough.
I posted this because in the article the writer hopes Afrakan and Asian Christian missionaries come to this country to inspire and infuse the American Christian community with its spiritual passion. That's amusing since Christianity came from Afraka and is now after 2000 years making a return visit to be re-infused and re-invigorated with new energy for its religious "task". No doubt Afrakan Christians will bring a soulful, more sincere and powerful form of the religion but I am afraid its recent Western content is so toxic and contaminated that I cannot wish it success either. In fact, craziness infused with great passion sounds like a prescription more disasters.
==========
The coming evangelical collapse
An anti-Christian chapter in Western history is about to begin. But out of the ruins, a new vitality and integrity will rise.
By Michael Spencer
from the March 10, 2009 edition
Oneida, Ky. - We are on the verge □ within 10 years □ of a major collapse of evangelical Christianity. This breakdown will follow the deterioration of20the mainline Protestant world and it will fundamentally alter the religious and cultural environment in the West.

Within two generations, evangelicalism will be a house deserted of half its occupants. (Between 25 and 35 percent of Americans today are Evangelicals.) In the "Protestant" 20th century, Evangelicals flourished. But they will soon be living in a very secular and religiously antagonistic 21st century.
This collapse will herald the arrival of an anti-Christian chapter of the post-Christian West. Intolerance of Christianity will rise to levels many of us have not believed possible in our lifetimes, and public policy will become hostile toward evangelical Christianity, seeing it as the opponent of the common good.

Millions of Evangelicals will quit. Thousands of ministries will end. Christian media will be reduced, if not eliminated. Many Christian schools will go into rapid decline. I'm convinced the grace and mission of God will reach to the ends of the earth. But the end of evangelicalism as we know it is close.

Why is this going to happen?

1. Evangelicals have identified their movement with the culture war and with political conservatism. This will prove to be a very costly mistake. Evangelicals will increasingly be seen as a threat to cultural progress. Public leaders will consider us bad for America, bad for education, bad for children, and bad for society.
The evangelical investment in moral, social, and political issues has depleted our resources and exposed our weaknesses. Being against gay marriage and being rhetorically pro-life will not make up for the fact that massive majorities of Evangelicals can't articulate the Gospel with any coherence. We fell for the trap of believing in a cause more than a faith.

2. We Evangelicals have failed to pass on to our young people an orthodox form of faith that can take root and survive the secular onslaught. Ironically, the billions of dollars we've spent on youth ministers, Christian music, publishing, and media has produced a culture of young Christians who know next to nothing about their own faith except how they feel about it. Our young people have deep beliefs about the culture war, but do not know why they should obey scripture, the essentials of theology, or the experience of spiritual discipline and community. Coming generations of Christians are going to be monumentally ignorant and unprepared for culture-wide pressures.

3. There are three kinds of evangelical churches today: consumer-driven megachurches, dying churches, and new churches whose future is fragile. Denominations will shrink, even vanish, while fewer and fewer evangelical churches will survive and thrive.

4. Despite some very successful developments in the past 25 years, Christian education has not produced a product that can withstand the rising tide of secularism. Evangelicalism has used its educational system primarily to staff its own needs and talk to itself.

5. The confrontation between cultural secularism and the faith at the core of evangelical efforts to "do good" is rapidly approaching. We will soon see that the good Evangelicals want to do will be viewed as bad by so many, and much of that work will not be done. Look for ministries to take on a less and less distinctively Christian face in order to survive.

6. Even in areas where Evangelicals imagine themselves strong (like the Bible Belt), we will find a great inability to pass on to our children a vital evangelical confidence in the Bible and the importance of the faith.

7. The money will dry up.

What will be left?

Expect evangelicalism to look more like the pragmatic, therapeutic, church-growth oriented megachurches that have de fined success. Emphasis will shift from doctrine to relevance, motivation, and personal success resulting in churches further compromised and weakened in their ability to pass on the faith.

Two of the beneficiaries will be the Roman Catholic and Orthodox communions. Evangelicals have been entering these churches in recent decades and that trend will continue, with more efforts aimed at the "conversion" of Evangelicals to the Catholic and Orthodox traditions.

A small band will work hard to rescue the movement from its demise through theological renewal. This is an attractive, innovative, and tireless community with outstanding media, publishing, and leadership development. Nonetheless, I believe the coming evangelical collapse will not result in a second reformation, though it may result in benefits for many churches and the beginnings of new churches.

The emerging church will largely vanish from the evangelical landscape, becoming part of the small segment of progressive mainline Protestants that remain true to the liberal vision.
Aggressively evangelistic fundamentalist churches will begin to disappear.

Charismatic-Pentecostal Christianity will become the majority report in evangelicalism. Can this community withstand heresy, relativism, and confusion? To do so, it must make a priority of biblical authority, resp onsible leadership, and a reemergence of orthodoxy.

Evangelicalism needs a "rescue mission" from the world Christian community. It is time for missionaries to come to America from Asia and Africa. Will they come? Will they be able to bring to our culture a more vital form of Christianity?

Expect a fragmented response to the culture war. Some Evangelicals will work to create their own countercultures, rather than try to change the culture at large. Some will continue to see conservatism and Christianity through one lens and will engage the culture war much as before a status quo the media will be all too happy to perpetuate. A significant number, however, may give up political engagement for a discipleship of deeper impact.

Is all of this a bad thing?

Evangelicalism doesn't need a bailout. Much of it needs a funeral. But what about what remains?

Is it a good thing that denominations are going to become largely irrelevant? Only if the networks that replace them are able to marshal resources, training, and vision to the mission field and into the planting and equipping of churches.

Is it a good thing that many marginal believers will depart? Possibly, if churches begin and continue the work of renewing serious=2 0church membership. We must change the conversation from the maintenance of traditional churches to developing new and culturally appropriate ones.

The ascendency of Charismatic -Pentecostal-influenced worship around the world can be a major positive for the evangelical movement if reformation can reach those churches and if it is joined with the calling, training, and mentoring of leaders. If American churches come under more of the influence of the movement of the Holy Spirit in Africa and Asia, this will be a good thing.

Will the evangelicalizing of Catholic and Orthodox communions be a good development? One can hope for greater unity and appreciation, but the history of these developments seems to be much more about a renewed vigor to "evangelize" Protestantism in the name of unity.

Will the coming collapse get Evangelicals past the pragmatism and shallowness that has brought about the loss of substance and power? Probably not. The purveyors of the evangelical circus will be in fine form, selling their wares as the promised solution to every church's problems. I expect the landscape of megachurch vacuity to be around for a very long time.

Will it shake lose the prosperity Gospel from its parasitical place on the evangelical body of Christ? Evidence from similar periods is not encouraging. American Christians seldom seem to be able to separat e their theology from an overall idea of personal affluence and success.

The loss of their political clout may impel many Evangelicals to reconsider the wisdom of trying to create a "godly society." That doesn't mean they'll focus solely on saving souls, but the increasing concern will be how to keep secularism out of church, not stop it altogether. The integrity of the church as a countercultural movement with a message of "empire subversion" will increasingly replace a message of cultural and political entitlement.

Despite all of these challenges, it is impossible not to be hopeful. As one commenter has already said, "Christianity loves a crumbling empire."

We can rejoice that in the ruins, new forms of Christian vitality and ministry will be born. I expect to see a vital and growing house church movement. This cannot help but be good for an evangelicalism that has made buildings, numbers, and paid staff its drugs for half a century.

We need new evangelicalism that learns from the past and listens more carefully to what God says about being His people in the midst of a powerful, idolatrous culture.

I'm not a prophet. My view of evangelicalism is not authoritative or infallible. I am certainly wrong in some of these predictions. But is there anyone who is observing evangelicalism in t hese times who does not sense that the future of our movement holds many dangers and much potential?

 Michael Spencer is a writer and communicator living and working in a Christian community in Kentucky. He describes himself as "a postevangelical reformation Christian in search of a Jesus-shaped spirituality." This essay is adapted from a series on his blog, InternetMonk.com .
===
HTP,
Mahari
| 28218|2009-03-18 00:40:33|Mahari|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
Attachments :
I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right. A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
HTP,
Mahari

Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
Ambrose Bierce
***
Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"

-----Original Message-----
From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@sbcglobal.net]
Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'

Note: Original message sent as attachment

Medical Billing Software
Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
Click Here For More Information

| 28219|2009-03-18 07:10:20|Tafari khumbaka|a touchy subject - In search of the historical personage of the Chri|
(I sent this out a few yrs. ago. , still very relative to the black community)
bookstoo read too search out for him/herself :
|the historical jesus and the mythical christ |
by Gerald Massey isbn-1-55818-137
this is an excellent book for those who really want too plumb the depths of where does the idea of jesus first come from be prepared to study some astronomy and ancient cultures especially egypt , he use's the thought process'es of ancient priest to understand they're astronomy in story form therewit the jesus story
also by aforementioned author
the hebrew and other creations isbn 0-916411-64-8
there is no person or people in history before 1700 bc called hebrew so where did they come from?. he answers this question

gnostic and historic christianity isbn 0-916411-51-6
in this book he uses what was available at his time [I think he died in the 30s]to correctly surmise[the dead sea scrolls were unpublished] that the gnostic christine system was older than first century christianity and the therapeuti [the essenes] were the true founders of modern christianity ;he is possibly the first person outside of the rabbinical order to tell that the talmudic writing [they have many writings other than the torah] speak of a messianic master killed by the jews his name was jehoshua-ben ,pandera
gerald massey also has a six volume collected work
by black classic press
---------- -- - -
jesus in the house of the pharoahs
by ahmed osman isbn159143027-5
the book further and meticullosly examines the essensic belief in a first righteous teacher and his second coming,. he does'nt use massey as a ref: but healmost seemsto be a continuation of his work
the hebrew pharoah is another of his books tracing the egyptian kings list as it is a mirror of the hebrew kings and prophets [the egyptian is older an more factual]
---
the world's sixteen crucified saviors [or christianity before christ]
by kersey graves isbn 0-9628142-0-7 this book goes through the history of christianity and parallels the jesus story to 16 other masters in other cultures
---
who is this king of glory
by alvin boyd kuhn isbn 1-56459-176-x
this author goes more for the juggular than most ;he deals with the rise of christianity and like the preceeding authors finds jesus in the religion of the people who were conquered by rome and meshed gnosticism with they're religion
---
bible myth [the african origin of the hebrew people]
by gary greenberg isbn 0-8065-1970-3
this guy is a jew and head of the new york archaeological society and opens up the scripture of the bible using only historical fact [that's unique] he centers his investigation on the 18 dynasty of egypt where moses came out of ;this book goes together with jesus in the house of the pharoahs
---
the african origins of the major western religions
by yoseff a.a. ben-jochannna isbn 0-933121-29-6
[if you know the root of a thing you know it's natal qualities] and dr. ben is one of the first in the black modern experience to go all the way back and then work up too the times of judaism, christianity, islam and show these religions copied a working spirtuality that was ancient africa
---
| the power of myth | isbn 0-385-24773-7>2750 also |hero with a thousand faces |
by joseph campbell

these are good books to explain myth as truth personified and not lies, they show you how to read between the lines

---

www.textweek.com/mtlk/jesus.htm
www.knowledgebookstore.com
www.blackclassicpress.com
www.hiddenmysteries.org
www.nobeliefs.com/exist.htm

_____

I don't think one person is more cherished by the creator because of their blood and if the saviours of other people's culture is fantasy why should our peticular saviour be real?, if my saviour is real and yours isn't whats the proof ?... everything I give as proof you can give . myth is not a lie or simple childrens stories myth is a science of stating natural laws ,history, human developmental psycho-social imperatives; myth is what we have been given by the Divine.

| 28220|2009-03-18 07:13:44|clyde winters|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|

The Meroite God Apedemak

Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the Meroites were not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is false there were Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of years. The Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28221|2009-03-18 07:36:38|clyde winters|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language2|

The Tocharian language was written in Kharosthi script. This script was used to write the Gandhararan Buddist Text. According to Glass (2000) the Kharosthi script appears fully developed in the Asokan inscriptions of Shahbazgarhi and Mansehra. These inscriptions date back to 3rd Century BC (Glass, 2000 p.20). It continued to be used in Gandhara, Kushan and Sogdian.

Glass provides evidence that Kharosthi writing dates back to the first Brahmi inscriptions of India (Glass, 2000 pp.20-21). The fact the writing was used in India by Asoka to produce the rock edicts (Glass, 2000) , demonstrates that Khasrothi was in use long before the introduction of the Meroitic script to Kush.

The Meroitic script resembles many Khaorsthi signs. Some researchers argue that the Meroites did not adopt the writing system of the Kushana/Tocharian people which was Kharosthi. Although this is their opinion a comparison of the Meroitic and Kharosthi symbols make it clear that both writing systems share many cognate signs.

Aubin (1996) did a comparison of Meroitic and Kharothi and discovered that 34 out of 42 signs or 81% matched.

Figure 1 : Aubin (2003) Comparison of Meroitic and Kharosthi Signs

Since Tocharian was written is Kharosthi the cognition between Kharosthi and Meroitic is quite interesting and shows some connection between these scripts. It also offers additional support to the Tocharian origin of Meroitic writing given the analogy between the signs.

Let's not forget that Welsby in The Kingdom of Kush, notes that "only four of the [Meroitic] letters resemble the equivalent Egyptian demotic signs" (p.193) But as you can see from the above there are more than four Kharosthi signs that match Meroitic, and even more of these signs match Kharosthi.

The summary , Kharosthi script dates back to the 3rd Century BC. It was used to write Tocharian inscriptions. This makes it clear that Kharosthi was in use long before the Meroitic script was created.

References:

Aubin,P. (2003). Evidence for an Early Nubian Dialect in Meroitic Inscriptions: Phonological and Epigraphic Considerations. Meroitic Newsletter, pp.16-39.

Glass, A. (2000). A Preliminary Study of Kharosthi Manuscript Paleography. M.A. Thesis. University of Washington.
Clyde Winters

| 28222|2009-03-18 07:38:08|cristofori whitakara|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|
I recall Diop writing in Civilization vs...that Buddha was a runaway priest from Kemet after the persian invasion.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: africanclassicalhistory@yahoogroups.co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Meroe@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:13 AM

The Meroite God Apedemak
Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the Meroites were not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is false there were Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of years. The Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28223|2009-03-18 07:39:33|clyde winters|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language3|

Philostratus:The Life of Apollonius of Tyana makes it clear that the Gymnosophist lived in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Empire. The historical evidence makes it clear that there was probably two migrations of Buddhist Gymnosophists to Egypt and the Meroitic Empire.

Asoka was a supporter of Buddhism. Zacharias P. Thundy, in Buddha and Christ make it clear that the edits of Asoka (c.274-236 BC) indicate that this ruler sent missionaries to Egypt to preach the Buddhist Dharma(pp.242-243).

Thundy maintains that archaeological evidence exist for a community of Indian sages living in Memphis as early as 200 BC (p.243).

We know that decendents of these missionaries were still in Egypt over two hundred years later because they were visited by Apollonius of Tyana.

Asoka used Kharosthi to write his edits. The Buddhist also used this writing system to record their scriptures. This means that the Gymnosophists would have had a long tradition of employing Kharosthi to communicate their ideas. The Gymnosophists were probably well respected by the Meroites and some Meroites probably had knowledge of Buddhist teachings and literacy.

Some Meroites may have played an important role in Buddhist because Blemmyae, a prominent group in the Meroitic Sudan are mentioned in Pali text Tipitaka (see:JDM Derrett, (2002) A Blemmya in India, Numen 49:460-474). Dr.Derrett wrote that in early Pali text " we have a Blemmya (an African) in front rank Buddhist texts of very respectable age (p.465).

The Buddhist text where Blemmya were mentioned are very old. The Vinaya pitaka, is dated to the 4th century B.C.E.

If Blemmya are mentioned in Buddhists text we can be sure that Meroites were not ignorant of Kharosthi. This would explain why many of the Meroitic symbols agree with Kharosthi. They agree because some Meroites were probably already literate in Kharosthi due to the influence of Buddhism in the Meroitic Empire.

.
Clyde Winters

| 28224|2009-03-18 07:43:43|clyde winters|Tocharian was a Meroite Language 4|

There seems to have been a second migration of Buddhists to the Meroitic Empire many years after Asoka sent missionaries to Egypt. These migrants came to the Meroitic Empire after their king was murdered.

Flavius Philostratus, the writer of the Vita Apollonii, Vol.1 , claimed that the Gymnosophists of Meroe originally came from India (see F.C. Conybeare, Philostratus:The Life of Apollonius of Tyana(p.45),1950). Given the fact that the Kushana had formerly ruled India around the time that the Meroitic writing was introduced to the Kushite civilization, led to the hypothesis that the ancestors of the Gymnosophist may have been Kushana philosophers.

The historical evidence of the Kushana having ruled India made the Classical references to Indians, the Gymnosophists in Meroe, an important source for the construction of alternative theories about the possible location of the cognate language of Meroitic.

There is external evidence, which supports my theory. A theory explains observed phenomena and has predictive power. I have theorized that due to the claims of the Classical writers that some of the Meroites came from India (F.C Conybeare (Trans.), Philostratus: The life of Apollonius of Tyana Vol.2, (1950) pg.271).

According to the Life of Apollonius, the Indian Meroites were formerly led by a King Ganges, who had "repulsed the Scythians who invaded this land [India from] across the Caucasus" (Conybeare, Vol.1, Pg.273). Pilostratus also made it clear that the Indians of Meroe came to this country after their king was killed.

The presence of this tradition of an Indian King of the Indian-Meroites conquering the Scythians predicts that the Indian literature should record this historical episode. This prediction is supported by a Jaina text called the Kalakeharya-Kathanaka , which reports that when the Scythians invaded Malwa, the King of Malwa, called Vikramaditya defeated the Scythians (H. Kulke & D. Rothermund, History of India(London, Routledge: 1990, pg.73). This king Vikramaditya may be the Ganges mentioned in the Life of Apollonius.Confirmation of the Ganges story,supports the Classical literary evidence that their were Indianized -Meroites that could have introduced the Tocharian trade language to the Meroites.

In addition to the classical mention of the Indians settling Mero뮬and Asoka's edit sending missionaries to Egypt, we also have a horde of Kushana coins that were found on the floor of a cave at the present monastery-shine at Debra Demo in modern Ethiopia in 1940. Moreover, there were other Indians in North Africa in addition to Kush/Meroe. For example, at Quseir al-Qadim there was a large Indian speaking community (see: R. Salomon, "Epigraphic remains of Indian traders in Egypt", Journal of the American oriental Society, (1991) pp.731-736; and R. Salomon, Addenda,Journal of the American Oriental Society, (1993) pg.593). These Indians were in Egypt writing messages in their own language, around the time we see a switch from Egyptian hieroglyphics to the Meroitic writing system. All of this supported the traditions of the Meroites that speak of a knowledge of the Kushana/Indians among the Meroites.

The evidence that the Classical references to an Indian-Meroite King who conquered the Scythians is supported by the Indian literature, provides external corroboration of the tradition that some of the Meroites were of Indian origin. The presence of Indian traders and settlers in Meroe (and Egypt), makes it almost impossible to deny the possibility that Indians, familiar with the Tokharian trade languagedid not introduce this writing to the Meroites who needed a neutral language to unify the diverse ethnic groups who made up the Meroite state. In relation to the history of linguistic change and bilingualism, itis a mistake to believe that linguistic transfer had to take place for the Meroites to have used Tokharian, when it did not take place when they wrote in Egyptian hieroglyphics.

In summary the classical literature makes it clear that there was a connection between the Gymnosophists (of Meroe) and the Indians. The fact that historical events mentioned in the classical sources are found in the Indian literature confirm the view that there were Indian-Meroites who could have introduced the Tokharian trade language to the Meroites. The fact that the Nubians who were probably not part of the"Meroitic state", used hieroglyphics and Coptic to write their language without abandoning their native language support the view that the Meroites could have also used Tokharian to write Meroitic. And that eventhough the Kushites wrote Meroitic inscriptions in Tokharian, theywould not have had to abandon their own language.
Clyde Winters

| 28225|2009-03-18 07:52:04|clyde winters|Tocharian was a Meroite Language 5: Conclusion|

My decipherment of Meroitic is based on the Kushana theory.

The Kushana theory is that a group of East Indian scholars introduced the Meroitic writing system to the Meroites.

The Kushana hypothesis was based on the following evidence, 1) no African language has been found to be a cognate language of Meroitic 2) the Classical literature says that the Kushites lived in Asia and Africa; 3) the Gymnosophists, or "naked sages" of Meroe came from India.

Before I began work on Meroitic, other researchers had already falsified the African theory for Meroitic's cognate language. Meroitic is not related to languages spoken in this area. Griffith and Haycock tried to read Meroitic using Nubian and failed. K.H. Priese tried to read the Meroitic text using Eastern Sudani; he also failed.

The fact that not even Nubian, a language spoken by a people who were engaged in constantly conflict with the Meroites , failed to be the cognate language of Meroitic made it clear that we must look elsewhere for the cognate language spoken by the Meroites.

The evidence presented above provides internal and external validity for my theory based upon the sources I have cited previously. The sources I have used are impartial, to disconfirm my hypothesis someone needs to show that my propositions are not fully informed[i.e., there were no Indians North Africa and Kush when the Classical writers maintained they were] and present rival explanations based on the evidence. The fact that the claims made by the Classical writers issupported by the Indians themselves if further strong confirmation of the Kushana hypothesis.

The hypothesis based on the classical literature, was enough to support the original Kushana Hypothesis. The predicting power of the original theory, matches the observed natural phenomena which was confirmed elsewhere by cognate place names, ethononyms, lexicalitems and grammatical features, indicate that my theory has not be falsified.

The ability to reliably predict a linguistic relationship between Kushana and Meroitic, was further confirmation of the Kushana Hypothesis, because the linguistic connections were deducible from prediction. I controlled the Kushana Hypothesis by comparing the statements of the classical writers, with historical, linguistic anthropological and toponymic evidence found not only in Africa, but also India and Central Asia [where the people also used Tokharian as a trade language to unify the various people in Central Asia]. I constructed three testable hypotheses in support of the Kushana theory, and it seems only fair that these variables must be disconfirmed, to falsify the Kushana Hypothesis.

Hypothesis 1: If the meroites used a writing system of non-African origin a tradition mentioning this fact will exist. (Hypothesis confirmed. Classical literature mentions Indian scholars in ancient Meroe.)

Hypothesis: 2. If the classical literature mentions Indians who lived in Egypt influencing the Meroites their should be historical evidence relating to this tradition. (Hypothesis confirmed .Classical literature mentions a King who left his country is mentioned in the Jaina text called the Kalakeharya-Kathanaka.)

Hypothesis: 3. If Classical literature is true about the Indian origin of the Gymnosophists Indians will be found living near the Meroites around the time the Meroitic inscriptions appear. (Hypothesis confirmed. Artifacts and coins with Indian inscriptions have been found in Egypt and Ethiopia.) Failure to disconfirm this theorem, implies validity of myprediction.

My confirmation of the above , and 1) the presence of Kushites in Africa and Asia; 2) Asoka sent many Buddhist missionaries to Egypt who wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi and Tocharian; 3) a Blemmya--native to the Meroitic empire, is mentioned in numerous Buddhist Pali text; 4)the presence of Kushana sages in India who may have migrated to Meroe;5) cognate lexical items; 6)cognate verbs and 7) cognate grammatical features; indicates systematic controlled, critical and empirical investigation of the question of Kushana representing the Meroitic cognate language. An investigation that indicates that Tocharian and Kharosthi were media used by the literate Buddist populations of Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan.
These are all indisputable facts supported by textual evidence and the presence of the Meroitic script which is written in the Tocharian language and Kharosthi script. This was probably the medium of communication among the Buddhists of Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan.

As a result of these facts we can now use Tocharian or Kushana to read the Meroitic text. The historical evidence make it clear that the Meroites were probably not strangers to Kharosthi literacy since the Gymnosophists had been in Upper Egypt and Meroitic Empires hundreds of years.
Clyde Winters

| 28226|2009-03-18 07:57:01|clyde winters|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|
Can you remember which book. If this is true it may explain the presence of the Blemmya in Pali text dating to 400 BC, signifying the executioner of bad people.
Clyde

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:38 AM

I recall Diop writing in Civilization vs...that Buddha was a runaway priest from Kemet after the persian invasion.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Meroe@yahoogroups. com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:13 AM

The Meroite God Apedemak
Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the Meroites were not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is false there were Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of years. The Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28227|2009-03-18 08:01:08|cristofori whitakara|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|
i was talking to a co-worker of mines about war. he said that war is a must and that we only have our physicalness to get want we desire. I, on the other hand feel that a mental/spiritual approach will benefit us most in our endeavors. I then asked him would he be willing to physically attack a person or a people who would outright take what belonged to another group of people(africans) to set the record straight and he was silent. I said you like bush because (as he said bush is gangsta) and i replied however you will not do what bush did for your own and he became so quiet. he is about to join the airforce. what a waste i thought. am i wrong for feeling that way towards another african?

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 7:40 PM

That's the way it's been for a minimum of 2000 years.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> March 15, 2009 Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures
> In its permanent exhibition, Bonn Universitys Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
> The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
> The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to reconstruct the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.
> Science Daily
> ===
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28228|2009-03-18 08:03:27|cristofori whitakara|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|
Civilization Vs. Barbarism

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:56 AM

Can you remember which book. If this is true it may explain the presence of the Blemmya in Pali text dating to 400 BC, signifying the executioner of bad people.
Clyde

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:38 AM
>
> I recall Diop writing in Civilization vs...that Buddha was a runaway priest from Kemet aft persian invasion.
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
> From: clyde winters
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
> To: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Meroe@yahoogroups. com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:13 AM
>
>
> The Meroite God Apedemak
> Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the Meroites v not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is false the Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of years. The Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28229|2009-03-18 08:36:12|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|HIV/AIDS rates in D.C. hit 3%|

http://newsone.blackplanet.com/nation/hivaids-rates-in-dc-hit-3higher-than-west-africa/

| 28230|2009-03-18 08:36:15|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Setting facts straight about Egypt|

Let me know what you think of this.

http://www.cedarseed.com/air/realegypt.html

| 28231|2009-03-18 08:36:17|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Steve Harveys mentor weekend for young men|

> Hello everyone. Pleaseshare this info right away with other parents.

> Seems like it will be an interesting and beneficial activity for our young men.
>
> The application deadline is fast approaching, so please help spread the link/details
>
> as soon as possible.
>
> http://steveharvey.com/mentor_weekend/
>
> Thanks so much!

| 28232|2009-03-18 08:36:21|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Cell Phone and WIFI Link to CANCER!|

Attachments :

From: Konata Khalfani

Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 11:16 PM

To: Ginger Daniels ;

Subject: Cell Phone and WIFI Link to CANCER!

You can help save the lives of your Children and yourself by taking 1-3 hours to read and research the articles attached to this email.

Those of you who know me know I never send out blast emails to friend and family about any topics but I think this one warrants all of our attention. I have a smart, happy, healthy, hansom son and most of my friends and family have children also. While my son is not at the age to use cell phones or WIFI my nieces and nephews are. Cell phones and WIFI usage has the potential in 10-20 years to cause an epidemic of Cancer related Deaths at a higher rate thancigarette smoking.My profession requires that I'm on the cell phone all day and prior to switching to my profession 7yrs ago I never had periodic headaches. Inthe last 6 years I would attribute my headaches to just stress. There's no question that stress did, can and will cause headaches but there's also no question in my mind that putting my cell phone 50-100 timea day to my head also caused most of those headaches. I'm sure when I used wireless ear pieces that it reduced the amount of radiation to my head but not by much. One month ago I start using the wired ear phones that came with my IPhone and if Ianswer the phone while its not connected to my ear phonesI keep it 2-3 inches from my head until I can connect it to my ear phones and I haven't had a headache since.

No one wanted to believe cigarette smoking caused cancer until 20yrs later thousands of people start dying and we had enough information to support it. 20yrs after we established smoking cigarettes causes cancer we found out that Second Hand smoke causes cancer also. Lets not make this mistake again and wait 20yrs to find out cell phones cause cancer and then 20yrs later that WIFI is equivalent to second hand smoke.

Read the articles I've attached. I've provided articles from ABC News, CNN a Larry King special on "Do Cell Phones Cause Cancer"whichhad Johnny Cochran's doctor and many other respected doctors and researchers. I also attached articles from an independent research group, an article related to Children exposure, a WIFI article and more.

"Knowledge is not power but applied Knowledge is power"

Gye Nyame

| 28233|2009-03-18 08:36:52|Ahmeer Israel|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
I have just recently joined this group and must say that I am greatful to you all for the uncoverings and your sharing. If I mayadd to this discussion on "KA"
In the Hebrew language the KA is used in much the same way "KA" referring to Soul/Energy e.g. "Ma shalom KA" translated "How is your soul". or the Protophonecian lineage KA/QA i.e. Kabbalah/Qabbalah, Qa'bah/Ka'ba. If there is a conection to be made to the below uncovering it may follow as such:
KA/QA= soul or spirit or energy.
BA/MU=that which is or he/she who is
Again I am greatful to have found this group.
One Love

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:

From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 6:53 PM

Greetings Brother Ferg

I must say that this is a beautifully written and a well connected essay. This surely will aid us in a fuller understanding of the usage of African symbolism and language. I would like to add the following commentary to the discussion that I think would be of benefit.

In the book Symposium of the Whole: A Range of Discourse Toward an Ethnopoetics, there is an excerpt on pgs 199-120 by Leopold Sedar Senghor that really illuminates how we should approach the study of African languages and symbolism. The excerpt is from his work Prose & Poetry translated by John Reed and Clive Wakei, pages 84-85. The title of the excerpt is Speech and Image: An African Tradition of the Surreal. I will quote in length:

The African languages are characterized first of all by the richness of their vocabulary. There are sometimes twenty different words for an object according to its form, weight, volume and colour, and as many for an action according to whether it is single or repeated, weakly or intensely performed, just beginning or coming to an end. In Fulani, nouns are divided into twenty-one genders which are not related to sex. The classification is based sometimes on the meaning of the words or the phonetic qualities and sometimes on the grammatical category to which they belong. Most significant in this respect is the verb. On the same root in Wolof can be constructed more than twenty Verbs expressing different shades of meaning, and at least as many derivative nouns. While modern Indo-European languages emphasize the abstract notion of time, African languages emphasize the aspect, the concrete way in which the action of the verb takes place. These are essentially concrete languages. In them words are always pregnant with images. Under their value as signs, their sense value shows through.

The African image is not then an image by equation but an image by analogy, a surrealist image. Africans do not like straight lines and false mots justes. Two and two do not make four, but five, as Aime Cesaire has told us. The object does not mean what it represents but what it suggests, what it creates. The Elephant is Strength, the Spider is Prudence; Horns are the Moon and the Moon is Fecundity. Every representation is an image, and the image, I repeat, is not an equation but a symbol, an ideogramme. Not only the figuration of the image but also its materialstone, earth, copper, gold, fibreand also its line and colour. All language which does not tell a story bores them, or rather, Africans do not understand such language. The astonishment of the first Europeans when they found that the natives did not understand their pictures or even the logic of their arguments!

I have spoken of the surrealist image. But as you would suppose, African surrealism is different from European surrealism. European surrealism is empirical, African surrealism is mystical and metaphysical. Andre Breton writes in Signe Ascendant: The poetic analogy (meaning the European surrealist analogy) differs functionally from the mystical analogy in that it does not presuppose, beyond the visible world, an invisible world which is striving to manifest itself. It proceeds in a completely empirical way. In contrast, the African surrealist analogy presupposes and manifest the hierarchized universe of life-forces. emphasis mine

As can be seen here, in African languages words are used in an analogous form: the intent to allude to the function of the item being represented by the word more so than the object itself. When we understand this convention of African languages, what we read in Somos recent treaty on the KAA makes perfect sense.

I think the knowledge of this convention can help us out with other words as well. A common word I discuss that utilizes this convention is the word TU or DU in various African languages which refers to an object or being. The traditional way of viewing these terms doesnt tell us much about the words themselves. They seem cold and dry. But when we look through the lens of African people, we realize a much richer concept associated with these terms.

In linguistics, /t/ and /d/ are practically the same and are interchangeable between various languages. Thus we see the word TU in Ancient Egyptian and BanTU languages and DU in the KWA branches of the Niger Congo family.

The word NTU is an object or being. The BaNTU languages are characterized by their noun class prefixes. The prefix tells you what kind of noun it is. For example,

Mu-ntu = the intelligent being (human being)
Ki-ntu = the non-intelligent being (thing)
Ha-ntu = the localizing being (place-time)
Ku-ntu = the modal being (manner of being)

The prefix BA in BANTU is the plural form of MU (human being noun class). Here our previous discussion on the letter N maybe of value here. As we know, the N prefix can mean that which is or he/she who is or may denote being in a state of. So we could read MUNTU to mean Man-which is-thing or more eloquently stated, The container/thing of a man.

In the Yoruba language, ODU means a general container. The O prefix is actually a contraction of the word OLOWA which means owner of. So an ODU translates as Owner of the container/thing. For those of you familiar with the Yoruba spiritual system of Ifa, you know an ODU is a manifestation of an object in nature. Could the N represent the same concept of OLOWA: Owner of? From this we know that the TU is simply a container for a life force which animates the thing and gives it character.

Could the Egyptian symbol of the KA indicate or allude to that which carries the container? Think about it, when you see pictures of African people, especially farmers, what do you see them often doing? They are holding up something over their heads: clothes, food stuffs, market items etc.

As stated before, the word TU or DU means general container or in essence that which houses, contains a substance. Philosophically, all things in the universe, in African wisdom traditions, are really just a container for a living invisible energy force which gives it its characteristics. The physical form is simply the shell that covers the invisible force which defines that shell. Imagine a cup. Now equate the cup with the word TU. The cup is the container. Now lets assume the cup has water in it. The water we would equate to the life force which gives the cup purpose: to contain liquids.

In the Kiswahili Bantu, Ferg gives a definition of KAA to mean TAKE and/or to CARRY. This gives us a perfect visual representation of the Egyptian KA (two arms raised as if holding a container).

I bring this up because, as mentioned in a previous email, the Kikongo concept of SIMBA SIMBI carries a similar notion as that of the KA in the various other Bantu languages. SIMBA SIMBI means to hold up that which holds you up. SIMBI means, a living power that holds up everything. In other words, it is the energy force, the God principle, which holds up all animate and inanimate beings. It would be equivalent to the ITONGO of South Africa. For ITONGO is GOD itself and all things has its own spark of ITONGO. The same with the SIMBI. The SIMBI is the God force of creation and yet all things contain its own SIMBI.

As Rene A. Schwaller de Lubicz argued, there was a universal KA, a KA of nature and an individual KA. This would be in alignment with other African ways of viewing this energy and its spark in all things in creation.

Another example of KA being the God force can be seen in a Kongo word for God, KALUNGA. KALUNGA is represented as both WATER and FIRE. Both of these are symbols of elements that create life. For an initiates understanding of the term KALUNGA, read Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiaus African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. The proto Bantu word lunga means to put in order or to put straight. KA is often times used to as a prefix to denote people or offices. So we can see why KALUNGA would be referred to as GOD as he is the ultimate high person who holds the highest office who puts things in order.

I could go on for days, but I think this is long enough. To make a long story short, as Ferg has hinted, the KA and the KHT (body) are inseparable. The body houses the KA and the KA carries (animates) the body; is the power that holds up the body (Simbi, Itongo, etc.). KA is the very life force, symbolized by a burning coal.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

| 28234|2009-03-18 08:37:00|cristofori whitakara|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|

Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother had to be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
From: Mahari
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM

I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right. A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
HTP,
Mahari

Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .

History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
Ambrose Bierce
***
Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"

-----Original Message-----
From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'

Note: Original message sent as attachment

Medical Billing Software
Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
Click Here For More Information

| 28235|2009-03-18 08:37:35|Ferg|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|

?

Hutuapo Asar!

Glad you found the write-up interesting. I always dread writing new work in caseit might offend! Howeverwords do not lie, one has to go beyond words to interpret forgottenconcepts which remain hidden in a language. I am glad you are in accordwith most of what has been said.

I was very interested on the analysis you quoted on African languages, and it just shows how rich in vocabulary the languages are.I've often wonder about the extraordinary range of wordsinShona vocabulary.Can I usethe quotations about African languagesas a reference to my workin question?

I like the container theory and it makes sense in the discussion. I shall look into it from this end. Also I might have to research a little more on the idea of 'carrying' a load.You got me thinking...about people in Africa forever carrying different loads . By the way carrying a load also means to be pregnantcarrying a child.

Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
>
> From: Asar Imhotep
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>
> Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 10:53 PM
>
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA
>
> Greetings Brother Ferg
>
> I must say that this is a beautifully written and a well connected essay. This surely will aid us in a fuller understanding of the usage of African symbolism and language. I would like to add the following commentary to the discussion that I think would be of benefit.
>
> In the book Symposium of the Whole: A Range of Discourse Toward an Ethnopoetics, there is an excerpt on pgs 199-120 by Leopold Sedar Senghor that really illuminates how we should approach the study of African languages and symbolism. The excerpt is from his work Prose & Poetry translated by John Reed and Clive Wakei, pages 84-85. The title of the excerpt is Speech and Image: An African Tradition of the Surreal. I will quote in length:
>
> The African languages are characterized first of all by the richness of their vocabulary. There are sometimes twenty different words for an object according to its form, weight, volume and colour, and as many for an action according to whether it is single or repeated, weakly or intensely performed, just beginning or coming to an end. In Fulani, nouns are divided into twenty-one genders which are not related to sex. The classification is based sometimes on the meaning of the words or the phonetic qualities and sometimes on the grammatical category to which they belong. Most significant in this respect is the verb. On the same root in Wolof can be constructed more than twenty Verbs expressing different shades of meaning, and at least as many derivative nouns. While modern Indo-European languages emphasize the abstract notion of time, African languages emphasize the aspect, the concrete way in which the action of the verb takes place. These are essentially concrete languages. In them words are always pregnant with images. Under their value as signs, their sense value shows through.
>
> The African image is not then an image by equation but an image by analogy, a surrealist image. Africans do not like straight lines and false mots justes. Two and two do not make four, but five, as Aime Cesaire has told us. The object does not mean what it represents but what it suggests, what it creates. The Elephant is Strength, the Spider is Prudence; Horns are the Moon and the Moon is Fecundity. Every representation is an image, and the image, I repeat, is not an equation but a symbol, an ideogramme. Not only the figuration of the image but also its materialstone, earth, copper, gold, fibreand also its line and colour. All language which does not tell a story bores them, or rather, Africans do not understand such language. The astonishment of the first Europeans when they found that the natives did not understand their pictures or even the logic of their arguments!

I have spoken of the surrealist image. But as you would suppose, African surrealism is different from European surrealism. European surrealism is empirical, African surrealism is mystical and metaphysical. Andre Breton writes in Signe Ascendant: The poetic analogy (meaning the European surrealist analogy) differs functionally from the mystical analogy in that it does not presuppose, beyond the visible world, an invisible world which is striving to manifest itself. It proceeds in a completely empirical way. In contrast, the African surrealist analogy presupposes and manifest the hierarchized universe of life-forces. emphasis mine

As can be seen here, in African languages words are used in an analogous form: the intent to allude to the function of the item being represented by the word more so than the object itself. When we understand this convention of African languages, what we read in Somos recent treaty on the KAA makes perfect sense.

I think the knowledge of this convention can help us out with other words as well. A common word I discuss that utilizes this convention is the word TU or DU in various African languages which refers to an object or being. The traditional way of viewing these terms doesnt tell us much about the words themselves. They seem cold and dry. But when we look through the lens of African people, we realize a much richer concept associated with these terms.

In linguistics, /t/ and /d/ are practically the same and are interchangeable between various languages. Thus we see the word TU in Ancient Egyptian and BanTU languages and DU in the KWA branches of the Niger Congo family.

The word NTU is an object or being. The BaNTU languages are characterized by their noun class prefixes. The prefix tells you what kind of noun it is. For example,

Mu-ntu = the intelligent being (human being)
Ki-ntu = the non-intelligent being (thing)
Ha-ntu = the localizing being (place-time)
Ku-ntu = the modal being (manner of being)

The prefix BA in BANTU is the plural form of MU (human being noun class). Here our previous discussion on the letter N maybe of value here. As we know, the N prefix can mean that which is or he/she who is or may denote being in a state of. So we could read MUNTU to mean Man-which is-thing or more eloquently stated, The container/thing of a man.

In the Yoruba language, ODU means a general container. The O prefix is actually a contraction of the word OLOWA which means owner of. So an ODU translates as Owner of the container/thing. For those of you familiar with the Yoruba spiritual system of Ifa, you know an ODU is a manifestation of an object in nature. Could the N represent the same concept of OLOWA: Owner of? From this we know that the TU is simply a container for a life force which animates the thing and gives it character.

Could the Egyptian symbol of the KA indicate or allude to that which carries the container? Think about it, when you see pictures of African people, especially farmers, what do you see them often doing? They are holding up something over their heads: clothes, food stuffs, market items etc.

As stated before, the word TU or DU means general container or in essence that which houses, contains a substance. Philosophically, all things in the universe, in African wisdom traditions, are really just a container for a living invisible energy force which gives it its characteristics. The physical form is simply the shell that covers the invisible force which defines that shell. Imagine a cup. Now equate the cup with the word TU. The cup is the container. Now lets assume the cup has water in it. The water we would equate to the life force which gives the cup purpose: to contain liquids.

In the Kiswahili Bantu, Ferg gives a definition of KAA to mean TAKE and/or to CARRY. This gives us a perfect visual representation of the Egyptian KA (two arms raised as if holding a container).

I bring this up because, as mentioned in a previous email, the Kikongo concept of SIMBA SIMBI carries a similar notion as that of the KA in the various other Bantu languages. SIMBA SIMBI means to hold up that which holds you up. SIMBI means, a living power that holds up everything. In other words, it is the energy force, the God principle, which holds up all animate and inanimate beings. It would be equivalent to the ITONGO of South Africa. For ITONGO is GOD itself and all things has its own spark of ITONGO. The same with the SIMBI. The SIMBI is the God force of creation and yet all things contain its own SIMBI.

As Rene A. Schwaller de Lubicz argued, there was a universal KA, a KA of nature and an individual KA. This would be in alignment with other African ways of viewing this energy and its spark in all things in creation.

Another example of KA being the God force can be seen in a Kongo word for God, KALUNGA. KALUNGA is represented as both WATER and FIRE. Both of these are symbols of elements that create life. For an initiates understanding of the term KALUNGA, read Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiaus African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. The proto Bantu word lunga means to put in order or to put straight. KA is often times used to as a prefix to denote people or offices. So we can see why KALUNGA would be referred to as GOD as he is the ultimate high person who holds the highest office who puts things in order.

I could go on for days, but I think this is long enough. To make a long story short, as Ferg has hinted, the KA and the KHT (body) are inseparable. The body houses the KA and the KA carries (animates) the body; is the power that holds up the body (Simbi, Itongo, etc.). KA is the very life force, symbolized by a burning coal.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

| 28236|2009-03-18 08:54:28|clyde winters|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|
Thank you
Clyde
.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:03 AM

Civilization Vs. Barbarism

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:56 AM

Can you remember which book. If this is true it may explain the presence of the Blemmya in Pali text dating to 400 BC, signifying the executioner of bad people.
Clyde

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:38 AM

I recall Diop writing in Civilization vs...that Buddha was a runaway priest from Kemet aft persian invasion.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Meroe@yahoogroups. com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:13 AM

The Meroite God Apedemak
Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the Meroites not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is false the Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of years. The Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28237|2009-03-18 10:35:43|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Tocharian was a Meroite Language 5: Conclusion| excellent work, causes deep thought especially knowing the sea lanes of old Zinjh were the territory of east Africa and seba/yemen Oman, that southern Hapi Araby/(e.Abbysinnia) was in contact with India and China before Arab/muslim domination of the gulf of Aden.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Tocharian was a Meroite Language 5: Conclusion
To: africanclassicalhistory@yahoogroups.co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Meroe@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:51 AM

My decipherment of Meroitic is based on the Kushana theory.

The Kushana theory is that a group of East Indian scholars introduced the Meroitic wr system to the Meroites.

The Kushana hypothesis was based on the following evidence, 1) no African language been found to be a cognate language of Meroitic 2) the Classical literature says that tl Kushites lived in Asia and Africa; 3) the Gymnosophists, or "naked sages" of Meroe ca from India.

Before I began work on Meroitic, other researchers had already falsified the African theory for Meroitic's cognate language. Meroitic is not related to languages spoken in this area. Griffith and Haycock tried to read Meroitic using Nubian and failed. K.H. Priese tried to read the Meroitic text using Eastern Sudani; he also failed.

The fact that not even Nubian, a language spoken by a people who were engaged in constantly conflict with the Meroites , failed to be the cognate language of Meroitic made it clear that we must look elsewhere for the cognate language spoken by the Meroites.

The evidence presented above provides internal and external validity for my theory based upon the sources I have cited previously. The sources I have used are impartial, to disconfirm my hypothesis someone needs to show that my propositions are not fully informed[i.e. , there were no Indians North Africa and Kush when the Classical writers maintained they were] and present rival explanations based on the evidence. The fact that the claims made by the Classical writers issupported by the Indians themselves if further strong confirmation of the Kushana hypothesis.

The hypothesis based on the classical literature, was enough to support the original Kushana Hypothesis. The predicting power of the original theory, matches the observed natural phenomena which was confirmed elsewhere by cognate place names, ethononyms, lexicalitems and grammatical features, indicate that my theory has not be falsified.

The ability to reliably predict a linguistic relationship between Kushana and Meroitic, was further confirmation of the Kushana Hypothesis, because the linguistic connections were deducible from prediction. I controlled the Kushana Hypothesis by comparing the statements of the classical writers, with historical, linguistic anthropological and toponymic evidence found not only in Africa, but also India and Central Asia [where the people also used Tokharian as a trade language to unify the various people in Central Asia]. I constructed three testable hypotheses in support of the Kushana theory, and it seems only fair that these variables must be disconfirmed, to falsify the Kushana Hypothesis.

Hypothesis 1: If the meroites used a writing system of non-African origin a tradition mentioning this fact will exist. (Hypothesis confirmed. Classical literature mentions Indian scholars in ancient Meroe.)

Hypothesis: 2. If the classical literature mentions Indians who lived in Egypt influencing the Meroites their should be historical evidence relating to this tradition. (Hypothesis confirmed .Classical literature mentions a King who left his country is mentioned in the Jaina text called the Kalakeharya- Kathanaka.)

Hypothesis: 3. If Classical literature is true about the Indian origin of the Gymnosophists Indians will be found living near the Meroites around the time the Meroitic inscriptions appear. (Hypothesis confirmed. Artifacts and coins with Indian inscriptions have been found in Egypt and Ethiopia.) Failure to disconfirm this theorem, implies validity of myprediction.

My confirmation of the above , and 1) the presence of Kushites in Africa and Asia; 2) Asoka sent many Buddhist missionaries to Egypt who wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi and Tocharian; 3) a Blemmya--native to the Meroitic empire, is mentioned in numerous Buddhist Pali text; 4)the presence of Kushana sages in India who may have migrated to Meroe;5) cognate lexical items; 6)cognate verbs and 7) cognate grammatical features; indicates systematic controlled, critical and empirical investigation of the question of Kushana representing the Meroitic cognate language. An investigation that indicates that Tocharian and Kharosthi were media used by the literate Buddist populations of Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan.

These are all indisputable facts supported by textual evidence and the presence of the Meroitic script which is written in the Tocharian language and Kharosthi script. This was probably the medium of communication among the Buddhists of Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan.

As a result of these facts we can now use Tocharian or Kushana to read the Meroitic text. The historical evidence make it clear that the Meroites were probably not strangers to Kharosthi literacy since the Gymnosophists had been in Upper Egypt and Meroitic Empires hundreds of years.

Clyde Winters

| 28238|2009-03-18 10:54:27|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Greetings Ahmeer

Welcome to Ta-Seti. That is interesting stuff. If in fact they turn out to be cognates, it would testify to the fact that it was/is a borrowed term and they have lost its essential meaning: a burning charcoal, fire, life. We see the same terms in the Greek in various forms that I think is interesting as well.

As Martin Bernal notes in Black Athena Vol. 1 pg 312:

> "Muller preferred to derive the name from the Greek kaio (burn), linking it to the undoubted associations between the cult and metalwork." -emphasis mine

Here are a list of Greek terms that might interest us as it relates to the Egyptian KA, in its essential meaning of BURNT, BURN, LIVE BURNING COAL, etc.

KAIO - Burn
KATAKAIO - Utterly burned
KAUSOO - Burn, Burning

Interesting enough, Ferg mentioned in his paper the South African concept of FIRE being a metaphor for RENEWAL. In the Greek we have the word KAINOS which means "New in quality." KAINOS represents something qualatatively new or different.

The word KAINOTEROS means NEWER.

We know that often L turns into R in some languages. The Bantu KALA (KHALA, EKARA, EKALA, IKAMA) means "charcoal, black, person, life, living, fire, to be, to exist, to persevere."

When we examine the following proto Indo-European terms, they should be very familiar:

*-KER fire (KER would be KALA in the Bantu = R>L)
*-KA black/dark

This Indo-European term *-KER has survived in the English for the word KEROSENE. Kerosene is a lamp oil. It derives from the Greek KEROS which was a wax. Here there seems to be a little bit of African surrealism as it actually seems to be referring to the FIRE that the oil or wax makes when heated.

If we remember Ferg's findings regarding KM.T to mean KAA + UMA = KAUMA, it is interesting that we find the same term in the Greek as well and it means burnt: KAUMA. This word is extended into KAUMATIZO which means SCORTCHED in the Greek.

Often we over look this term in the word HOLOCAUST which is used in the Bible to mean BURNT OFFERING. Well, there was no "C" in the Greek, just "K." Here is the breakdown:

"c.1250, "sacrifice by fire, burnt offering," from Gk. holokauston, neut. of holokaustos "burned whole," from holos "whole" + kaustos, verbal adj. of kaiein "to burn.""
http://www.balashon.com/2008/04/shoah-and-holocaust.html

So as we can see, this is a very ancient term which has lost its essential analogous meaning as the term spread, but still kept its "flavor" in modern African societies. I argue that this is due to the descriptive and poetic nature of African languages, which the European languages, it seems, does not possess. As from this point it seems to have retained a literal interpretation as the term migrated out of Africa.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:
From: Ahmeer Israel
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 12:31 AM

I have just recently joined this group and must say that I am greatful to you all for the uncoverings and your sharing. If I mayadd to this discussion on "KA"
In the Hebrew language the KA is used in much the same way "KA" referring to Soul/Ene
e.g. "Ma shalom KA" translated "How is your soul". or the Protophonecian lineage KA/Q

Kabbalah/Qabbalah, Qa'bah/Ka'ba. If there is a conection to be made to the below uncovering it may follow as such:
KA/QA= soul or spirit or energy.
BA/MU=that which is or he/she who is
Again I am greatful to have found this group.
One Love

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:

| 28239|2009-03-18 10:57:55|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
perhaps matrilineal is too strong a word, it may be that Anc.Khem was matrifocal especially during its union of the two lands, .
most Queenmothers especially the initial Queen of the King Of Kings of the two lands were taken from the south alot specifically from the temple of Uaseth/Waset .
theoretically the land and its daily function was the keepsake and charge of the queenmother and hers to bethroed too(a daughter or sister heir) and her sons would recieve his inheiritance thru a uncle/ vizier-head priest of annu and /or hetka-ptah, so that a prince/heir would need to marry a bloodline family royal hier from the south/seth/sud= Thebes/Uaseth

in old kham the King of kings was theoretically the protector and usually headquarted in the north against Kmt-u greatest threat the nothern peoples.
kmt-u oldest land and bloodline was from the south hence the legitamacy of right too rule and the legitamacy of pure blood of a woman untouched by a man who could trace her ancestry all the way back came from Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy etc. .

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:17 AM

Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
From: Mahari
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM

I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right. A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
HTP,
Mahari

Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .

History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
Ambrose Bierce
***
Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"

-----Original Message-----
From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'

Note: Original message sent as attachment

Medical Billing Software
Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
Click Here For More Information

| 28240|2009-03-18 11:12:36|Mahari Mengistu|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|
I don't think so because people are people. We are all mostly the same. The main difference is cultural.
I think one of the mistakes we (black people in particular) make is that we tend to give our own a pass too often. And the reason I say us in particular is that this "pass" allows our criminals, gangstas, and liars to undermine and double-cross us when we can afford NONE of that given our situation.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> i was talking to a co-worker of mines about war. he said that war is a must and that we only have our physicalness to get want we desire. I, on the other hand feel that a mental/spiritual approach will benefit us most in our endeavors. I then asked him would he be willing to physically attack a person or a people who would outright take what belonged to another group of people(africans) to set the record straight and he was silent. I said you like bush because (as he said bush is gangsta) and i replied however you will not do what bush did for your own and he became so quiet. he is about to join the airforce. what a waste i thought. am i wrong for feeling that way towards another african?
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:

>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 7:40 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
> That's the way it's been for a minimum of 2000 years.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
> >
> > After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it
> >
> > --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> > March 15, 2009 · Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures
> > In its permanent exhibition, Bonn University□s Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
> > The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
> > The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to □reconstruct□ the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.
> > Science Daily

> > ===
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>
| 28241|2009-03-18 11:27:16|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
It is true that the Ptolemys adopted and adapted to Afrigypt's culture and therefore may have followed their traditions. However, we need to remember that their cultural origins are "european" and as such are likely to do whatever they want. It seems to be understood that the Ptolemys were quite ruthless so I don't know if it is accurate to assume that they would have strictly adhered to "Afrakan" royal dictates.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother had to be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
>
> From: Mahari
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right.
> A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"
>

> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
> Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Medical Billing Software
>
> Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
>
> Click Here For More Information
>
>
>
| 28242|2009-03-18 11:36:15|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|

>>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<

There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
>
> Hutuapo Asar!
>
> Glad you found the write-up interesting. I always dread writing new work in case it might offend! However words do not lie, one has to go beyond words to interpret forgotten concepts which remain hidden in a language. I am glad you are in accord with most of what has been said.

>
> I was very interested on the analysis you quoted on African languages, and it just shows how rich in vocabulary the languages are. I've often wonder about the extraordinary range of words in Shona vocabulary. Can I use the quotations about African languages as a reference to my work in question?
>
> I like the container theory and it makes sense in the discussion. I shall look into it from this end. Also I might have to research a little more on the idea of 'carrying' a load. You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads . By the way carrying a load also means to be pregnant carrying a child.
>
> Somo
>
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 10:53 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA
>
>
> Greetings Brother Ferg
> I must say that this is a beautifully written and a well connected essay. This surely will aid us in a fuller understanding of the usage of African symbolism and language. I would like to add the following commentary to the discussion that I think would be of benefit.
> In the book Symposium of the Whole: A Range of Discourse Toward an Ethnopoetics, there is an excerpt on pgs 199-120 by Leopold Sedar Senghor that really illuminates how we should approach the study of African languages and symbolism. The excerpt is from his work Prose & Poetry translated by John Reed and Clive Wakei, pages 84-85. The title of the excerpt is Speech and Image: An African Tradition of the Surreal. I will quote in length:
> The African languages are characterized first of all by the richness of their vocabulary. There are sometimes twenty different words for an object according to its form, weight, volume and colour, and as many for an action according to whether it is single or repeated, weakly or intensely performed, just beginning or coming to an end. In Fulani, nouns are divided into twenty-one genders which are not related to sex. The classification is based sometimes on the meaning of the words or the phonetic qualities and sometimes on the grammatical category to which they belong. Most significant in this respect is the verb. On the same root in Wolof can be constructed more than twenty Verbs expressing different shades of meaning, and at least as many derivative nouns. While modern Indo-European languages emphasize the abstract notion of time, African languages emphasize the aspect, the concrete way in which the action of the verb takes place. These are essentially concrete languages. In them words are always pregnant with images. Under their value as signs, their sense value shows through.
> The African image is not then an image by equation but an image by analogy, a surrealist image. Africans do not like straight lines and false mots justes. Two and two do not make four, but five, as Aime Cesaire has told us. The object does not mean what it represents but what it suggests, what it creates. The Elephant is Strength, the Spider is Prudence; Horns are the Moon and the Moon is Fecundity. Every representation is an image, and the image, I repeat, is not an equation but a symbol, an ideogramme. Not only the figuration of the image but also its material□stone, earth, copper, gold, fibre□and also its line and colour. All language which does not tell a story bores them, or rather, Africans do not understand such language. The astonishment of the first Europeans when they found that the □natives□ did not understand their pictures or even the logic of their arguments!

> I have spoken of the surrealist image. But as you would suppose, African surrealism is different from European surrealism. European surrealism is empirical, African surrealism is mystical and metaphysical. Andre Breton writes in Signe Ascendant: □The poetic analogy (meaning the European surrealist analogy) differs functionally from the mystical analogy in that it does not presuppose, beyond the visible world, an invisible world which is striving to manifest itself. It proceeds in a completely empirical way.□ In contrast, the African surrealist analogy presupposes and manifest the hierarchized universe of life-forces.□ □ emphasis mine
> As can be seen here, in African languages words are used in an analogous form: the intent to allude to the function of the item being represented by the word more so than the object itself. When we understand this convention of African languages, what we read in Somo□s recent treaty on the KAA makes perfect sense.
> I think the knowledge of this convention can help us out with other words as well. A common word I discuss that utilizes this convention is the word TU or DU in various African languages which refers to an object or being. The traditional way of viewing these terms doesn□t tell us much about the words themselves. They seem cold and dry. But when we look through the lens of African people, we realize a much richer concept associated with these terms.
> In linguistics, /t/ and /d/ are practically the same and are interchangeable between various languages. Thus we see the word TU in Ancient Egyptian and BanTU languages and DU in the KWA branches of the Niger Congo family.
> The word NTU is an object or being. The Ba□NTU languages are characterized by their noun class prefixes. The prefix tells you what kind of noun it is. For example,
> Mu-ntu = the intelligent being (human being)
> Ki-ntu = the non-intelligent being (thing)
> Ha-ntu = the localizing being (place-time)
> Ku-ntu = the modal being (manner of being)
> The prefix BA in BANTU is the plural form of MU (human being noun class). Here our previous discussion on the letter □N□ maybe of value here. As we know, the □N□ prefix can mean □that which is□ or □he/she who is□ or may denote □being in a state of.□ So we could read MUNTU to mean □Man-which is-thing□ or more eloquently stated, □The container/thing of a man.□
> In the Yoruba language, ODU means a □general container.□ The □O□ prefix is actually a contraction of the word OLOWA which means □owner of.□ So an ODU translates as □Owner of the container/thing.□ For those of you familiar with the Yoruba spiritual system of Ifa, you know an ODU is a manifestation of an □object□ in nature. Could the □N□ represent the same concept of OLOWA: Owner of? From this we know that the TU is simply a container for a life force which animates the □thing□ and gives it character.
> Could the Egyptian symbol of the KA indicate or allude to □that which carries the container?□ Think about it, when you see pictures of African people, especially farmers, what do you see them often doing? They are holding up something over their heads: clothes, food stuffs, market items etc.

> As stated before, the word TU or DU means □general container□ or in essence □that which houses, contains a substance.□ Philosophically, all things in the universe, in African wisdom traditions, are really just a □container□ for a living invisible energy force which gives it its characteristics. The physical form is simply the shell that covers the invisible force which defines that shell. Imagine a cup. Now equate the cup with the word TU. The cup is the container. Now lets assume the cup has water in it. The water we would equate to the life force which gives the cup purpose: to contain liquids.
> In the Kiswahili Bantu, Ferg gives a definition of KAA to mean TAKE and/or to CARRY. This gives us a perfect visual representation of the Egyptian KA (two arms raised as if holding a container).
> I bring this up because, as mentioned in a previous email, the Kikongo concept of SIMBA SIMBI carries a similar notion as that of the KA in the various other Bantu languages. SIMBA SIMBI means □to hold up that which holds you up. SIMBI means, □a living power that holds up everything.□ In other words, it is the energy force, the God principle, which holds up all animate and inanimate beings. It would be equivalent to the ITONGO of South Africa. For ITONGO is GOD itself and all things has its own spark of ITONGO. The same with the SIMBI. The SIMBI is the God force of creation and yet all things contain its own SIMBI.
> As Rene A. Schwaller de Lubicz argued, there was a universal KA, a KA of nature and an individual KA. This would be in alignment with other African ways of viewing this energy and its spark in all □things□ in creation.
> Another example of KA being the God force can be seen in a Kongo word for God, KALUNGA. KALUNGA is represented as both WATER and FIRE. Both of these are symbols of elements that create life. For an initiate□s understanding of the term KALUNGA, read Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau□s African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. The proto Bantu word □lunga means to put in order or to put straight. KA is often times used to as a prefix to denote people or offices. So we can see why KALUNGA would be referred to as GOD as he is the ultimate high person who holds the highest office who □puts things in order.□
> I could go on for days, but I think this is long enough. To make a long story short, as Ferg has hinted, the KA and the KHT (body) are inseparable. The body houses the KA and the KA □carries□ (animates) the body; is the power that holds up the body (Simbi, Itongo, etc.). KA is the very life force, symbolized by a burning coal.
> Ancestrally,
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
| 28243|2009-03-18 11:45:43|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|

>>Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy <<

Humm... this makes me wonder about the origin of the country name Tanzania.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> perhaps matrilineal is too strong a word, it may be that Anc.Khem was matrifocal especially during its union of the two lands, .
> most Queenmothers especially the initial Queen of the King Of Kings of the two lands were taken from the south alot specifically from the temple of Uaseth/Waset .
> theoretically the land and its daily function was the keepsake and charge of the queenmother and hers to bethroed too(a daughter or sister heir) and her sons would recieve his inheiritance thru a uncle/ vizier-head priest of annu and /or hetka-ptah, so that a prince/heir would need to marry a bloodline family royal hier from the south/seth/sud= Thebes/Uaseth
>
> in old kham the King of kings was theoretically the protector and usually headquarted in the north against Kmt-u greatest threat the nothern peoples.
> kmt-u oldest land and bloodline was from the south hence the legitamacy of right too rule and the legitamacy of pure blood of a woman untouched by a man who could trace her ancestry all the way back came from Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy etc. .
>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:17 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother had to be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
>
> From: Mahari
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM
>

>
>
>
> I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right.
> A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
> Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Medical Billing Software
>
> Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
>
> Click Here For More Information
>
>
>
| 28244|2009-03-18 11:52:06|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|

Cleopatra surely did try to save khamit and may have been initiated into the temple as a priestess ,she learned the native language and metu neter she attempted he may be said with hindsight to achieve independence for Khamit by using ceasar and mark anthony, but probaly actually love Mark Anthony(boy was he whippped!,lol) , when all seemed lost and the battle of actiumwas over, she felled into a carnal and drug narcosis.....
note that her mom may have not been actually african specific to the continent of africa/ nile valley andcould havebeen africoid Persian as easy as she could have been nile valley/african, the Greeks at first thought nile valley Kem/Kham was great due too Persia and they seize Kemet from the Persians and kham-u royalty at that time was Persian and even had many Hittitites in its population

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:

From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:27 PM

It is true that the Ptolemys adopted and adapted to Afrigypt's culture and therefore may have followed their traditions. However, we need to remember that their cultural origins are "european" and as such are likely to do whatever they want. It seems to be understood that the Ptolemys were quite ruthless so I don't know if it is accurate to assume that they would have strictly adhered to "Afrakan" royal dictates.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother had to be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
>
> From: Mahari
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM
>
>
>
>
>

>
> I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right.
> A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
> Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Medical Billing Software
>
> Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
>
> Click Here For More Information
>
>
>

| 28245|2009-03-18 12:03:54|Alex van Deelen|Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|

Here is a blast from the past. I wonder whether an apology is due.
(PS, notice that even the stone head used as 'an example' on the Lefkowitz page looks like she has braids.)

http://www.wellesley.edu/CS/Mary/contents.html

Points Of View
Not Out Of Africa
by Mary Lefkowitz

Was Greek Culture Stolen from Africa?
Modern myth vs. ancient history

Was Cleopatra Black?

Stone head of Cleopatra. Her hooked nose and curved lower lip shows her resemblance to her father Ptolemy XII Auletes.Until recently, no one ever asked whether Cleopatra might have had an African ancestor, because our surviving ancient sources identify her as a Macedonian Greek. Her ancestors, the Ptolemies, were descended from one of Alexander's generals. After Alexander's death in 323 B. C., these generals divided up among themselves the territory in the Mediterranean that Alexander had conquered. The name Cleopatra was one of the names traditionally given to women in the royal family; officially our Cleopatra (69-30 BC) was Cleopatra VII, the daughter of Ptolemy XII and his sister. Cleopatra VII herself followed the family practice of marrying within the family.

She married her two brothers (Ptolemy XIII and XIV) in succession (after the first died in suspicious circumstances, she had the second murdered). Her first language was Greek; but she was also the first member of the Ptolemaic line who was able to speak Egyptian. She also wore Egyptian dress, and was shown in art in the dress of the goddess Isis. She chose to portray herself as an Egyptian not because she was Egyptian, but because she was ambitious to stay in power. In her surviving portraits on coins and in sculpture she appears to be impressive rather than beautiful, Mediterranean in appearance, with straight hair and a hooked nose. Of course these portraits on metal and stone give no indication of the color of her skin.

Portrait of Cleopatra and the baby Caesarion on a coin from Cyprus, 47/6 B.C.The only possibility that she might not have been a full-blooded Macedonian Greek arises from the fact that we do not know the precise identity of one member of her family tree. We do not know who her grandmother was on her father's side. Her grandmother was the mistress (not the wife) of her grandfather, Ptolemy IX. Because nothing is known about this person, the assumption has always been that she was a Macedonian Greek, like the other members of Ptolemy's court. Like other Greeks, the Ptolemies were wary of foreigners.

They kept themselves apart from the native population, with brothers usually marrying sisters, or uncles marrying nieces, or in one case a father marrying his daughter (Ptolemy IX and Cleopatra Berenice III). Because the Ptolemies seemed to prefer to marry among themselves, even incestuously, it has always been assumed that Cleopatra's grandmother was closely connected with the family. If she had been a foreigner, one of the Roman writers of the time would have mentioned it in their invectives against Cleopatra as an enemy of the Roman state. These writers were supporters of Octavian (later known as Augustus) who defeated Cleopatra's forces in the battle of Actium in 31 B.C.
| 28246|2009-03-18 12:32:34|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
tanehesy and ta nzaia ,, interesting correlate wonder what the modern definition of tanzania is?

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:45 PM
>
> >>Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy <<
>
> Humm... this makes me wonder about the origin of the country name Tanzania.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
> >
> > perhaps matrilineal is too strong a word, it may be that Anc.Khem was matrifocal especially during its union of the two lands, .
> > most Queenmothers especially the initial Queen of the King Of Kings of the two lands were taken from the south alot specifically from the temple of Uaseth/Waset .
> > theoretically the land and its daily function was the keepsake and charge of the queenmother and hers to bethroed too(a daughter or sister heir) and her sons would recieve his inheiritance thru a uncle/ vizier-head priest of annu and /or hetka-ptah, so that a prince/heir would need to marry a bloodline family royal hier from the south/seth/sud= Thebes/Uaseth
> >
> > in old kham the King of kings was theoretically the protector and usually headquarted in the north against Kmt-u greatest threat the nothern peoples.

> kmt-u oldest land and bloodline was from the south hence the legitamacy of right too rule and the legitamacy of pure blood of a woman untouched by a man who could trace her ancestry all the way back came from Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy etc. .
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:17 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother had to be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
>
> From: Mahari
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM
>
>
>
>
>
> I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right.
> A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
> Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Medical Billing Software
>
> Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
>
> Click Here For More Information
>
>
>

| 28247|2009-03-18 12:36:58|cristofori whitakara|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
Ta-Azania? Land of...

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 2:45 PM

>>Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy <<

Humm... this makes me wonder about the origin of the country name Tanzania.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> perhaps matrilineal is too strong a word, it may be that Anc.Khem was matrifocal especially during its union of the two lands, .
> most Queenmothers especially the initial Queen of the King Of Kings of the two lands were taken from the south alot specifically from the temple of Uaseth/Waset .
> theoretically the land and its daily function was the keepsake and charge of the queenmother and hers to bethroed too(a daughter or sister heir) and her sons would recieve his inheiritance thru a uncle/ vizier-head priest of annu and /or hetka-ptah, so that a prince/heir would need to marry a bloodline family royal hier from the south/seth/sud= Thebes/Uaseth
>
> in old kham the King of kings was theoretically the protector and usually headquarted in the north against Kmt-u greatest threat the nothern peoples.
> kmt-u oldest land and bloodline was from the south hence the legitamacy of right too rule and the legitamacy of pure blood of a woman untouched by a man who could trace her ancestry all the way back came from Ta-zeti andor Tanehesy etc. .
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:17 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Is it true that if Kemet was a matrilineal society andin order to be the pharaoh your mother had to be African? If so, then Cleopatra would not have been recognized as the regent?
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari wrote:
>

> From: Mahari
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 3:40 AM
>
>
>
>
> I think it is important to note and give credit where credit is due. Again we and our Afrocentric scholars were right.
> A special affirmation must go to Dr. Ben who wrote decades ago that Cleopatra's Ptolemaic father married a Nubian woman thus begetting her and apparently her sister.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans Party: "The Liars' Hypocrisy Club"
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" [pmanansala@ sbcglobal. net]
> Date: 03/17/2009 09:17 AM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Medical Billing Software
>
> Click here to compare top medical billing products, get demos, and quotes.
>

> Click Here For More Information
>
>
>

| 28248|2009-03-18 12:39:22|cristofori whitakara|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|
Thanks for the reply. Yes, rhetorically speaking, why can't they be criminals against our criminals and those that 'gangsta'/ terrorize our communities?

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 2:12 PM

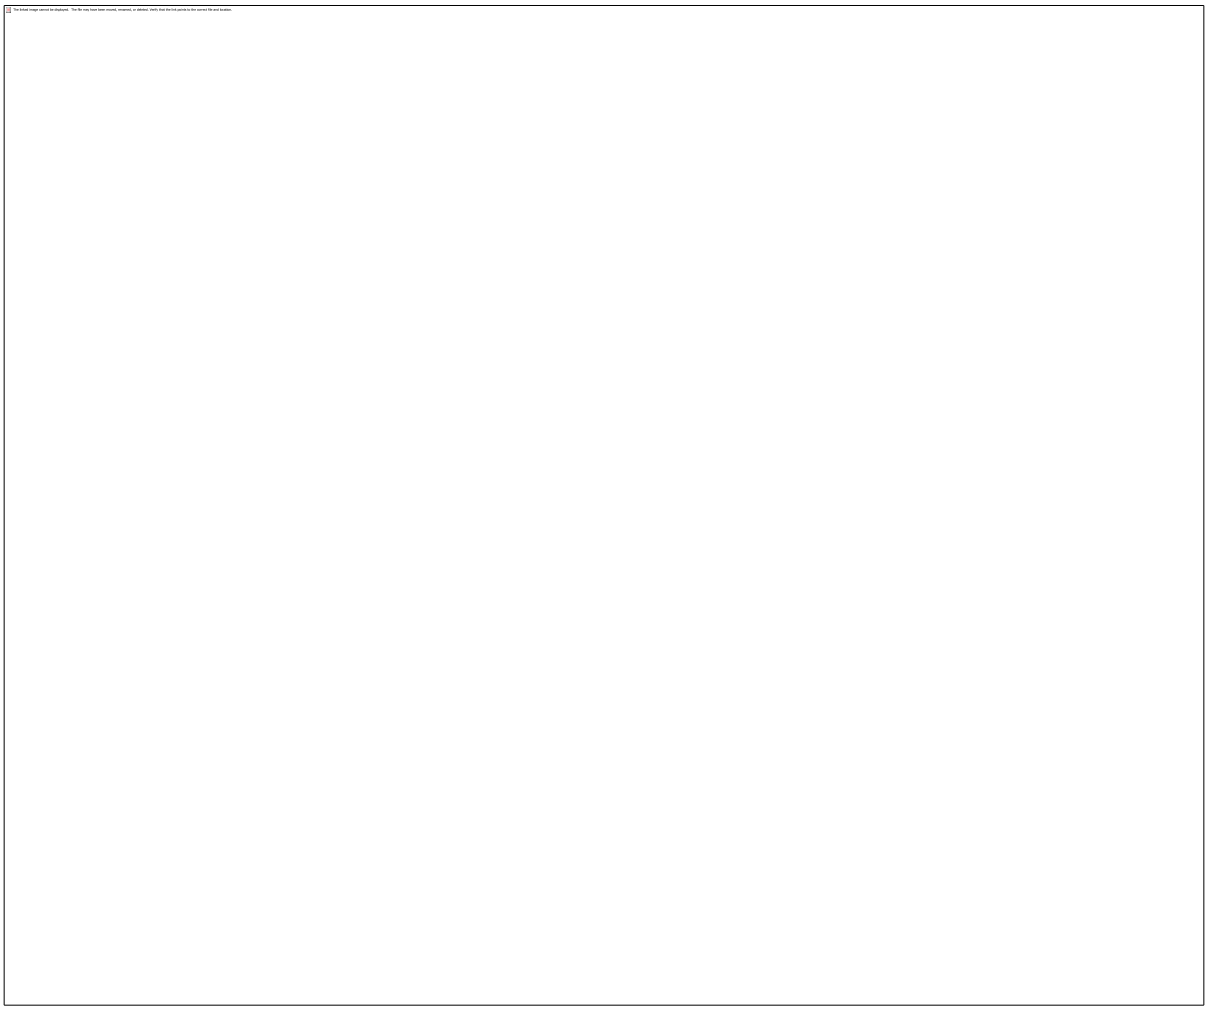
I don't think so because people are people. We are all mostly the same. The main difference is cultural.
I think one of the mistakes we (black people in particular) make is that we tend to give our own a pass too often. And the reason I say us in particular is that this "pass" allows our criminals, gangstas, and liars to undermine and double-cross us when we can afford NONE of that given our situation.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> i was talking to a co-worker of mines about war. he said that war is a must and that we only have our physicalness to get want we desire. I, on the other hand feel that a mental/spiritual approach will benefit us most in our endeavors. I then asked him would he be willing to physically attack a person or a people who would outright take what belonged to another group of people(africans) to set the record straight and he was silent. I said you like bush because (as he said bush is gangsta) and i replied however you will not do what bush did for your own and he became so quiet. he is about to join the airforce. what a waste i thought. am i wrong for feeling that way towards another african?
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 7:40 PM
>
>
>
>
>

>
> That's the way it's been for a minimum of 2000 years.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
> >
> > After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it
> >
> > --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> > March 15, 2009 Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures
> > In its permanent exhibition, Bonn Universitys Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
> > The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
> > The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to reconstruct the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.
> > Science Daily
> > ===
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>

| 28249|2009-03-18 13:10:47|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Greetings Mahari

Let's recall the following images that might support our theory.



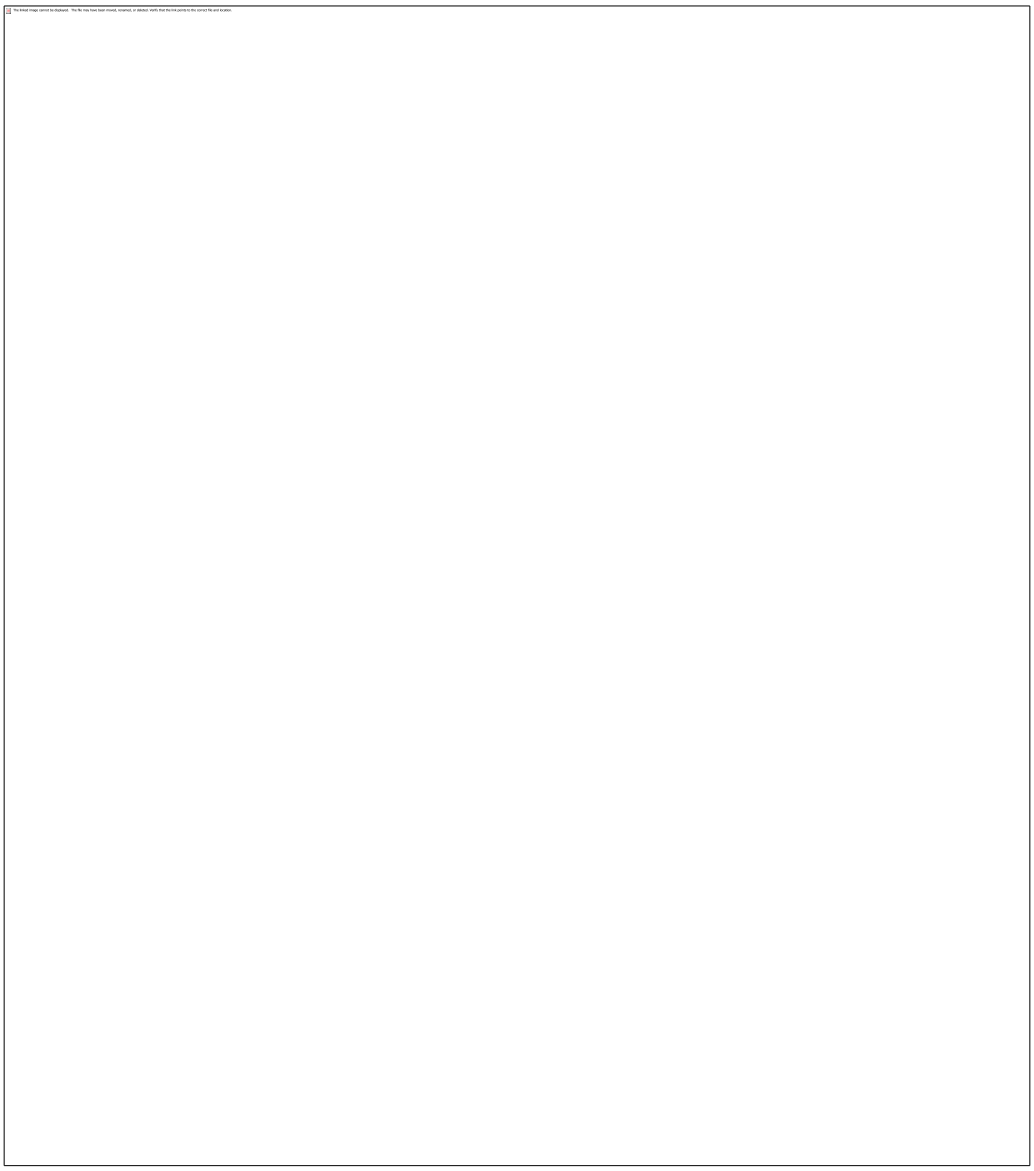
The following has the KA holding up what seems like the solar bark.

Tutankhamen's Headrest

Now compare the above images to this carving coming out of the Kongo

African Art / Hemba Wooden Caryatid Stool - PF.3255

Origin: Southeastern Congo
Circa: 20th Century



The following image is from among the Luba people of Central Africa.

The following is from Benin

The following is not exactly in the same spirit as the ones above, but I thought it very interesting none the less. This is an Italian Blackamoor table from the 19 century

These images may provide clues for further interpretations of the KA in ancient Egypt.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:

From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:36 PM

>>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<

There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
HTP,
Mahari

| 28250|2009-03-18 13:49:49|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Peace Brother Ferg

Another term I would like to throw out there concerning the TU being a container, is the KiKongo term FUTU which the word for the Earth. But we must not view it from western lenses as the following saying will demonstrate for us:

futu dia n'kisi diakanga Kalunga mu-diambu-dia moyo - a "sachet" (parcel) of medicines tied up by Kalunga for life on Earth.

futu - sachet, package n'kisi - medicine
kanga - to tie, to wrap up Kalunga - the completely-all-in-all, God mu-diambu-dia - for moyo - life

A FUTU is perceived as a container of something secret and of great price to the owner. Most of us are familiar with the sachets African priests wear on their side which has hidden charms, medicines and "talismans" in which only they know the contents.

The earth is viewed in the same manner: as a "sachet" with hidden medicines that only Kalunga (God) knows its secrets. Our concern in this discourse is the term, FUTU, and the fact that it is a container.

The FUTU (root word TU) contains forces condusive to life. It is another play on the already mentioned Kikongo concept of SIMBA SIMBI - hold up that which holds you up. The FUTU contains the forces that holds life up and together here on earth. Now let's compare this philosophy to the image of the Dendara temple Zodiac stone carving:

Notice how all of the Ntrw (forces) are "holding" up the universe? What we "see" above is the exact principle of the phrase SIMBA SIMBI. In essence what you see above is a hiearchy of "forces," layered for simplicity so we can see how the universe is "held up." All of the Ntrw's arms are in the KA position. What we "see" in nature, again, is simply the ODU, the container of the forces that hold life up.

Remember the quote from the article I posted:

> "I have spoken of the surrealist image. But as you would suppose, African surrealism is different from European surrealism. European surrealism is empirical, African surrealism is mystical and metaphysical. Andre Breton writes in Signe Ascendant: The poetic analogy (meaning the European surrealist analogy) differs functionally from the mystical analogy in that it does not presuppose, beyond the visible world, an invisible world which is striving to manifest itself. It proceeds in a completely empirical way. In contrast, the African surrealist analogy presupposes and manifest the hierarchized universe of life-forces.

And of course you can use the quote. Here is the link for the book on Amazon:
http://www.amazon.com/Symposium-Whole-Discourse-Toward-Ethnopoetics/dp/0520045319

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Ferg wrote:

From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:59 AM

?

Hutuapo Asar!
Glad you found the write-up interesting. I always dread writing new work in caseit might offend! Howeverwords do not lie, one has to go beyond words to interpret forgottenconcepts which remain hidden in a language. I am glad you are in accordwith most of what has been said.
I was very interested on the analysis you quoted on African languages, and it just shows how rich in vocabulary the languages are.I've often wonder about the extraordinary range of wordsinShona vocabulary.Can I usethe quotations about African languagesas a reference to my workin question?
I like the container theory and it makes sense in the discussion. I shall look into it from this end. Also I might have to research a little more on the idea of 'carrying' a load.You got me thinking...about people in Africa forever carrying different loads . By the way carrying a load also means to be pregnantcarrying a child.
Somo

| 28251|2009-03-18 16:04:37|Tafari khumbaka|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|
maybe u can keep in touch with him, and educate him.....

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:01 AM

i was talking to a co-worker of mines about war. he said that war is a must and that we onl our physicalness to get want we desire. I, on the other hand feel that a mental/spiritual app will benefit us most in our endeavors. I then asked him would he be willing to physically a person or a people who would outright take what belonged to another group of people(afri to set the record straight and he was silent. I said you like bush because (as he said bush is gangsta) and i replied however you will not do what bush did for your own and he became quiet. he is about to join the airforce. what a waste i thought. am i wrong for feeling that w towards another african?

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 7:40 PM

That's the way it's been for a minimum of 2000 years.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> March 15, 2009 Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures
> In its permanent exhibition, Bonn Universitys Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
> The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
> The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to reconstruct the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.
> Science Daily
> ===
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28252|2009-03-18 18:45:47|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt|

from my view of things(very limited) I have a contrasting view of many things in this article my idea of things contrary too the author :
1. royal blood/nobility was a Major consideration for the 1st wife of the Per-ah King of kings
2. the royalty was polygamous and occasionally polyandrous and many treaties/contracts were settled thru marriage and exchange of family and/or court offcials always males from egypt except during its decline .
yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.
as of yet there are no laws stating people can not be polygamous, that is commoners(i have a limited source books about egyptian marriage in ancient times)
and Ra-Mesh had its believed over a 100 children.
3. there is reason to think there were temple guards/female especially at the temple of Neith in lower aiegypt, were they regular army?.
i think this was with my personal exceptions a very good article.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
> From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Setting facts straight about Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 9:11 PM
>
> Let me know what you think of this.
> http://www.cedarsee d.com/air/ realegypt. html

| 28253|2009-03-18 18:56:33|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: (spring detox) TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset Even| good info!, check it out.....

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- Ausar Auset Society wrote:

> From: Ausar Auset Society
> Subject: TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset Event
> To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
> Date: Thursday, March 2009

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

March 12, 2009

Greetings!

Hetepu!

Spring Detoxification and the Vernal Equinox

Join us for a Webinar on March 19

Space is limited.
Reserve your Webinar seat now at:

https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/214186221

What is the meaning of the Vernal Equinox?

Ancient Societies have dedicated the major part of their resources to the ability to predict the occurrences of the Solstices and Equinoxes.Why?
The answer is in the biological cycles that control the physical, psychical and mental functions of living creatures.
The liver, viewed from the energetic point of of view of Chinese medicine governs our ability to assert ourselves over the major challenges of life, to face the challenges of life in a calm and relaxed manner and to utilize our imagination to dream of life's possibilities.
Our ability to use this faculty depends on its state of health.Because the liver is the main detoxifier of the body, it suffers greatly from the toxins it has to neutralize.To allow it and its energetic counterparts (meridians or energy channels) to carry the functions listed above, it must be regularly detoxified, and repaired.
The time that is appointed for it to carry out its major housecleaning is the spring time--passage from the cold to the warm season--March in the northern hemisphere, September in the deep southern.

In this webinar we will explore the best way to carry out the detoxification of your body.Spring, in the northern hemisphere is the best time for doing so.

Be prepared!

Title: Spring Detoxification and the Vernal Equinox

Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009

Time: 7:30 PM - 9:00 PM EDT

After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar.

System Requirements
PC-based attendees
Required: Windows 2000, XP Home, XP Pro, 2003 Server, Vista

Macintosh-based attendees
Required: Mac OS X 10.4 (Tiger) or newer

thanks for attending our past webinars and giving us your business. It is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely, Merisa Amen

TAUI International
TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

Forward email

SafeUnsubscribe®
This email was sent to tafari_sudra@yahoo.com by ausarauset@nilevalley.com.
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with SafeUnsubscribe | Privacy Policy.

Email Marketing by Constant Contact
TRY IT FREE

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset | 1100 Albemarle Road | Brooklyn | NY | 11218

| 28254|2009-03-18 19:32:47|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Asar,
Beautiful pix that show an Afrakan cultural consistency I would say.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Greetings Mahari

>
> Let's recall the following images that might support our theory.
>
>
>
>
>
> The following has the KA holding up what seems like the solar bark.
>
>
>
> Tutankhamen's Headrest
>
>
>
> Now compare the above images to this carving coming out of the Kongo
>
>
>
>
> African
> Art / Hemba Wooden Caryatid Stool - PF.3255
>
>
>
> Origin: Southeastern Congo
>
> Circa: 20th Century
> The following image is from among the Luba people of Central Africa.
>
>
>
> The following is from Benin
>
>
>
>
> The following is not exactly in the same spirit as the ones above, but I thought it very interesting none the less. This is an Italian Blackamoor table from the 19 century
>
>
>
>
> These images may provide clues for further interpretations of the KA in ancient Egypt.
>
>

> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:36 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> >>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<
>
>
>
> There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
>
> Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
| 28255|2009-03-18 19:49:08|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt|

> >>yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.<<

I am not sure if you are saying that circumcision was Arabic in origin or not. It is my understanding that circumcision is firmly Egyptian in origin and that, in fact, it is from there that the jewish practice of circumcision began. This is another reason to believe that it is Kemet that makes the jew a jew.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
>
> from my view of things(very limited) I have a contrasting view of many things in this article my idea of things contrary too the author :
> 1. royal blood/nobility was a Major consideration for the 1st wife of the Per-ah King of kings
>
> 2. the royalty was polygamous and occasionally polyandrous and many treaties/contracts were settled thru marriage and exchange of family and/or court offcials always males from egypt except during its decline .
> yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.
> as of yet there are no laws stating people can not be polygamous, that is commoners(i have a limited source books about egyptian marriage in ancient times)
> and Ra-Mesh had its believed over a 100 children.
>
> 3. there is reason to think there were temple guards/female especially at the temple of Neith in lower aiegypt, were they regular army?.
>
> i think this was with my personal exceptions a very good article.
>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, gingerd2007@... wrote:
>
> From: gingerd2007@...
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Setting facts straight about Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 9:11 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Let me know what you think of this.
>
> http://www.cedarsee d.com/air/ realegypt. html
>

| 28256|2009-03-18 19:55:59|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt|
pharonic circumcision is usually considered the excision of the woman's clitoris and the sewing up the labia tightly as only a straw can pass thru to her urethra, ...

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:49 PM

>>yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.<<

I am not sure if you are saying that circumcision was Arabic in origin or not. It is my understanding that circumcision is firmly Egyptian in origin and that, in fact, it is from there that the jewish practice of circumcision began. This is another reason to believe that it is Kemet that makes the jew a jew.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
>
> from my view of things(very limited) I have a contrasting view of many things in this article my idea of things contrary too the author :
> 1. royal blood/nobility was a Major consideration for the 1st wife of the Per-ah King of kings
>
> 2. the royalty was polygamous and occasionally polyandrous and many treaties/contracts were settled thru marriage and exchange of family and/or court offcials always males from egypt except during its decline .
> yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.
> as of yet there are no laws stating people can not be polygamous, that is commoners(i have a limited source books about egyptian marriage in ancient times)
> and Ra-Mesh had its believed over a 100 children.
>
> 3. there is reason to think there were temple guards/female especially at the temple of Neith in lower aiegypt, were they regular army?.
>
> i think this was with my personal exceptions a very good article.

>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, gingerd2007@ ... wrote:
>
> From: gingerd2007@ ...
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Setting facts straight about Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 9:11 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Let me know what you think of this.
>
> http://www.cedarsee d.com/air/ realegypt. html
>

| 28257|2009-03-18 20:08:25|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination... it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual enslavement is real.

>
>
> Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090318/ap_on_re_af/af_pope_africa
>
> ==========

> Yahoo! News
> http://news.yahoo.com/
>
| 28258|2009-03-18 20:08:41|hebrew b'yisrael|Re: HIV/AIDS rates in D.C. hit 3%|
Yes, the white man knows we love sex so this was // is used as the perfect weapon! HIV/AIDS is an genetic anomaly!

From: "gingerd2007@hotmail.com"
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com; John Wilson ; Jennifer Esteen ; Konata Khalfani ; Sia Awakoaiye ; DR Van Hook ; Professor McKnight ; Lilronica Stevenson ; Devon Thomas
Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 6:19:11 PM
Subject: [Ta_Seti] HIV/AIDS rates in D.C. hit 3%

http://newsone. blackplanet. com/nation/ hivaids-rates- in-dc-hit- 3higher-than- west-africa/

| 28259|2009-03-18 20:08:55|cristofori whitakara|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Peace....Mahari your statement helps me to see the ancient symbolism in reference to the Ka. Without the knowledge of ancient Kemetic symbols as a young child I/eye just saw africans carrying the load of burden as someone's enslaved prisoner and now when eye(?) look at these wonderfully made works of art I can see a deeper and as you said more profound meaning. With respect...

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
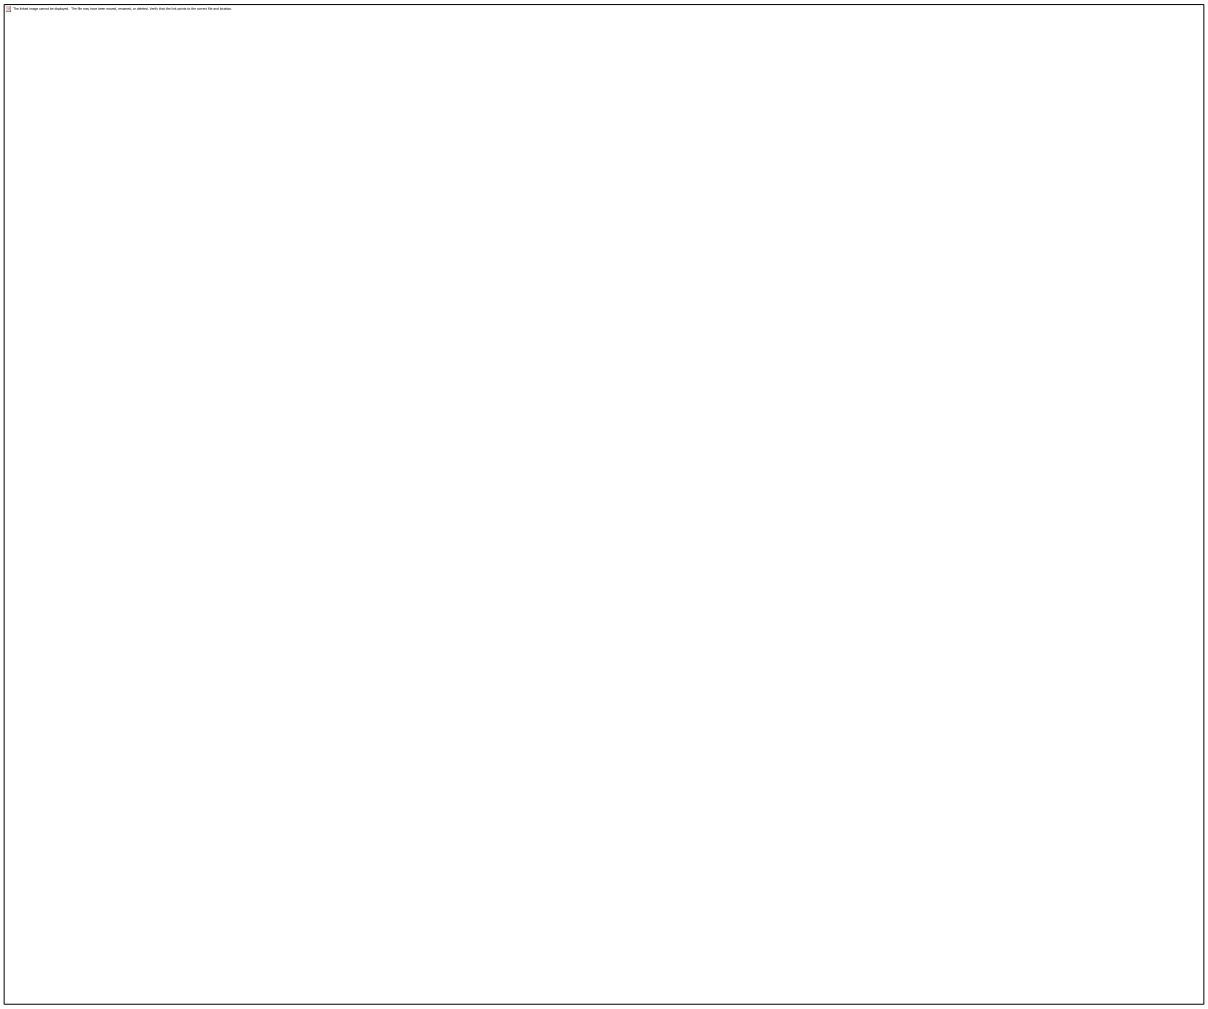
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 4:10 PM

Greetings Mahari

Let's recall the following images that might support our theory.



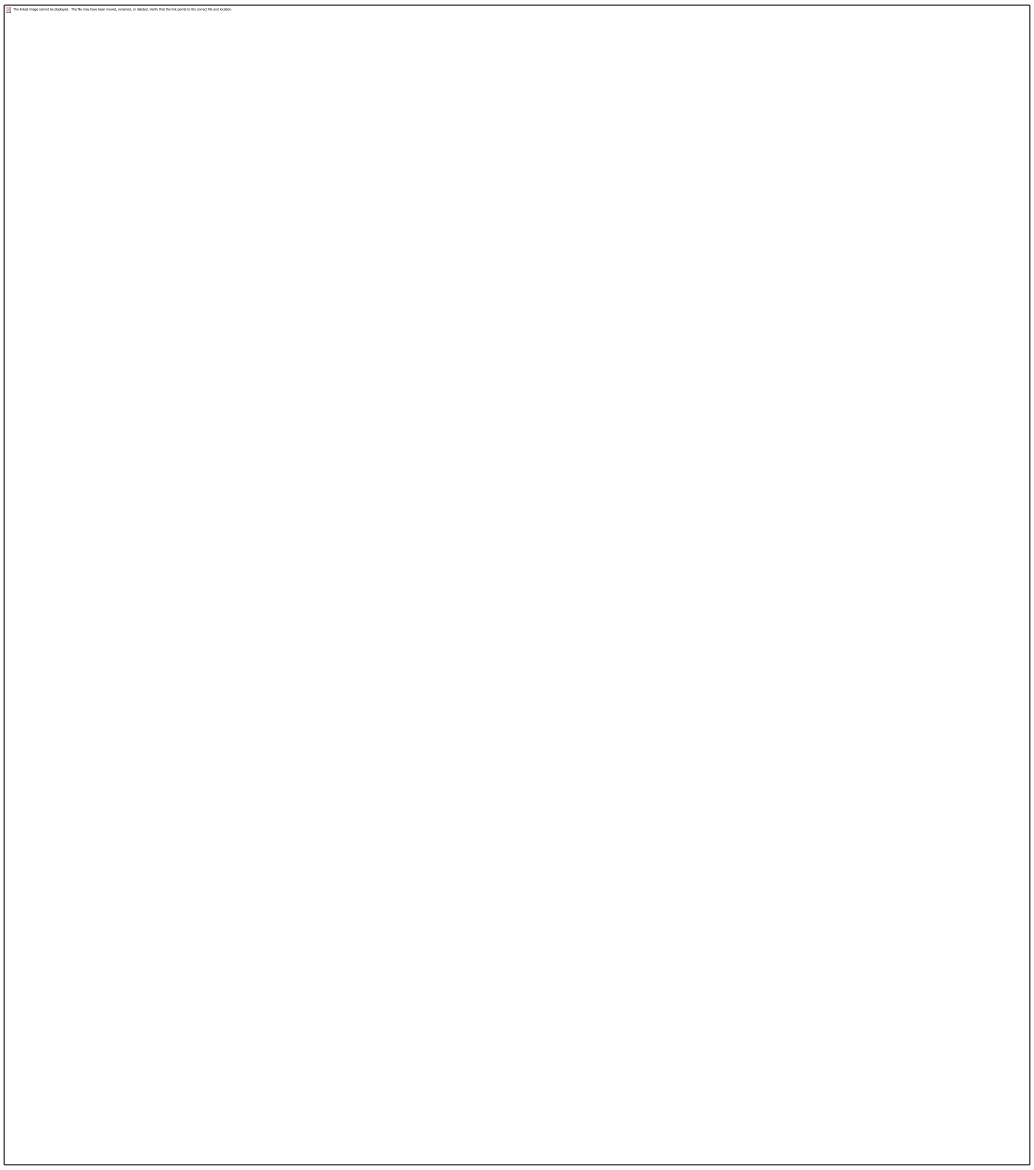
The following has the KA holding up what seems like the solar bark.

Tutankhamen' s Headrest

Now compare the above images to this carving coming out of the Kongo

African Art / Hemba Wooden Caryatid Stool - PF.3255

Origin: Southeastern Congo
Circa: 20th Century



The following image is from among the Luba people of Central Africa.

The following is from Benin

The following is not exactly in the same spirit as the ones above, but I thought it very interesting none the less. This is an Italian Blackamoor table from the 19 century

These images may provide clues for further interpretations of the KA in ancient Egypt.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:36 PM

>>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<

There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
HTP,
Mahari

| 28260|2009-03-18 20:13:33|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|

i was so fascinated by the european lady married to the african president .....

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
> From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Konata Khalfani" , "Jennifer Esteen" , "Professor McKnight" , "DR Van Hook"
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 12:12 PM
>
> Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination. .. it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual enslavement is real.

>
>
> Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
>
> http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090318/ ap_on_re_ af/af_pope_ africa
>
> ========== ========= ========= ========= ========= ========= ===
> Yahoo! News
> http://news. yahoo.com/
>

| 28261|2009-03-18 20:19:10|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt|
My misunderstanding.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> pharonic circumcision is usually considered the excision of the woman's clitoris and the sewing up the labia tightly as only a straw can pass thru to her urethra, ...
>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:49 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> >>yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.<<
>
> I am not sure if you are saying that circumcision was Arabic in origin or not. It is my understanding that circumcision is firmly Egyptian in origin and that, in fact, it is from there that the jewish practice of circumcision began. This is another reason to believe that it is Kemet that makes the jew a jew.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
> >
> >
> > from my view of things(very limited) I have a contrasting view of many things in this article my idea of things contrary too the author :
> > 1. royal blood/nobility was a Major consideration for the 1st wife of the Per-ah King of kings
> >
> > 2. the royalty was polygamous and occasionally polyandrous and many treaties/contracts were settled thru marriage and exchange of family and/or court offcials always males from egypt except during its decline .
> > yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.
> > as of yet there are no laws stating people can not be polygamous, that is commoners(i have a limited source books about egyptian marriage in ancient times)
> > and Ra-Mesh had its believed over a 100 children.
> >
> > 3. there is reason to think there were temple guards/female especially at the temple of Neith in lower aiegypt, were they regular army?.
> >
> > i think this was with my personal exceptions a very good article.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
> >
> > --- On Tue, 3/17/09, gingerd2007@ ... wrote:
> >
> > From: gingerd2007@ ...
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Setting facts straight about Egypt
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 9:11 PM
> >
> >
> >
> >

> >
> >
> >
> > Let me know what you think of this.
> >
> > http://www.cedarsee d.com/air/ realegypt. html
> >
>
| 28262|2009-03-18 20:24:47|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt|
glad u wrote about it, I was not very exact in making myself plain,,,,, thanx/tua

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:18 PM

My misunderstanding.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
> pharonic circumcision is usually considered the excision of the woman's clitoris and the sewing up the labia tightly as only a straw can pass thru to her urethra, ...
>
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:49 PM
>
>
>
>

>
>
> >>yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.<<
>
> I am not sure if you are saying that circumcision was Arabic in origin or not. It is my understanding that circumcision is firmly Egyptian in origin and that, in fact, it is from there that the jewish practice of circumcision began. This is another reason to believe that it is Kemet that makes the jew a jew.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
> >
> >
> > from my view of things(very limited) I have a contrasting view of many things in this article my idea of things contrary too the author :
> > 1. royal blood/nobility was a Major consideration for the 1st wife of the Per-ah King of kings
> >
> > 2. the royalty was polygamous and occasionally polyandrous and many treaties/contracts were settled thru marriage and exchange of family and/or court offcials always males from egypt except during its decline .
> > yes the harem was a arab invention and especially pharonic circumcision dating probaly too arab conquest of greecian-roman egypt.
> > as of yet there are no laws stating people can not be polygamous, that is commoners(i have a limited source books about egyptian marriage in ancient times)
> > and Ra-Mesh had its believed over a 100 children.
> >
> > 3. there is reason to think there were temple guards/female especially at the temple of Neith in lower aiegypt, were they regular army?.
> >
> > i think this was with my personal exceptions a very good article.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
> >
> > --- On Tue, 3/17/09, gingerd2007@ ... wrote:
> >
> > From: gingerd2007@ ...
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Setting facts straight about Egypt
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 9:11 PM

> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Let me know what you think of this.
> >
> > http://www.cedarsee d.com/air/ realegypt. html
> >
>

| 28263|2009-03-18 20:28:50|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
The operative word here is help: help destroy us? help enslave us? help castrate us? help brainwash us? help us lose our sense of reason? help undermine us? help us lose control of our self-autonomy?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The > roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this > pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money > where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the > world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic > denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination...
> it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not > savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they > initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of > the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual > enslavement is real.
>
>
> >
> >
> > Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
> >
> > http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090318/ap_on_re_af/af_pope_africa
> >
> > ==========
> > Yahoo! News
> > http://news.yahoo.com/

> >
>
| 28264|2009-03-18 20:35:11|clyde winters|Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|
Hi
What page #?

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:03 AM

Civilization Vs. Barbarism

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:56 AM

Can you remember which book. If this is true it may explain the presence of the Blemmya in Pal text dating to 400 BC, signifying the executioner of bad people.
Clyde

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

> From: cristofori whitakara
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:38 AM
>
> I recall Diop writing in Civilization vs...that Buddha was a runaway priest from Kemet af persian invasion.
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
> From: clyde winters
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
> To: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Meroe@yahoogroups. com

Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:13 AM

The Meroite God Apedemak
Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the Meroites were not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is false there were Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of years. The Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28265|2009-03-18 20:38:41|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
Actually he might look like the devil for good reason. On the religious "tip" he may be the representative of the anti-christ - meaning that he has been around for some time now. If I am correct there was a discussion about the anti-Christ at the Council of Nicea in 325AD. From the spiritual perspective - minus the flying devils and gargoyles and such - I believe the catholic church and its offshoots brought in the age of the anti-Christ. If true that means that the anti-Christ has been ruling and at work for the last 2000 years. I certainly wouldn't argue against that possibility.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The > roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this > pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money > where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the > world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic > denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination...
> it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not > savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they > initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of > the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual > enslavement is real.
>
>
> >
> >
> > Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
> >
> > http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090318/ap_on_re_af/af_pope_africa
> >
> > ==========
> > Yahoo! News
> > http://news.yahoo.com/

> >
>
| 28266|2009-03-18 21:08:49|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Thanks, BDBlack,
I think there is great beauty in the "struggle", a kind of mystical, mysterious beauty. That's why I love and admire the Kemetic culture so much. It seems to hold up this struggle of the opposites, synthesizes it and presents it as a beautiful allegory saying "look how wonderful and amazing is this experience; accept it with balance, justice, honesty and discipline and you can find peace and success in its midst".
Acceptance, though it can be a double-edged sword, I think, is one of the sustaining and abiding positives of the Afrakan culture.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> Peace....Mahari your statement helps me to see the ancient symbolism in reference to the Ka. Without the knowledge of ancient Kemetic symbols as a young child I/eye just saw africans carrying the load of burden as someone's enslaved prisoner and now when eye(?) look at these wonderfully made works of art I can see a deeper and as you said more profound meaning. With respect...
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 4:10 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Greetings Mahari
>
> Let's recall the following images that might support our theory.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> The following has the KA holding up what seems like the solar bark.

>
>
>
> Tutankhamen' s Headrest
>
>
>
> Now compare the above images to this carving coming out of the Kongo
>
>
>
>
>
> African Art / Hemba Wooden Caryatid Stool - PF.3255
>
> Origin: Southeastern Congo
> Circa: 20th Century
> The following image is from among the Luba people of Central Africa.
>
>
>
> The following is from Benin
>
>
>
>
> The following is not exactly in the same spirit as the ones above, but I thought it very interesting none the less. This is an Italian Blackamoor table from the 19 century
>
>
>
>
> These images may provide clues for further interpretations of the KA in ancient Egypt.
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:36 PM
>
>
>
>
> >>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<
>
> There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
> Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
| 28267|2009-03-19 00:48:23|Asar Imhotep|Re: Towards a greater understanding of the double in African traditi|
Peace Family

While looking for something totally different in Chiekh Anta Diop's work Civilization or Barbarism, I came across this note in chapter 17 pg 312 concerning the various dimensions of the soul according to ancient Egyptian cosmogonies.

To recap our conversation, I suggested that we reexamine the nature of the Egyptian BA, which is usually translated as the soul of the human being, and reassign it to the DOUBLE as articulated in various African wisdom philosophies (Mutwa, Mabika, etc.). My initial spark came from a reading of one of Dr. Clyde Winters' papers on the Decyphering of the Merotic Script which discussed, partially, the essence of the BA, not as the general soul but what appears to me to be the DOUBLE as articulated by Credu Mutwa and Kykosa Kajangu.

Rereading Diop's work I came across the following information that supports my theory (Diop 1981: 312)

1. the Zed or Khet, which decomposes after death
2. the Ba, which is the body's corporeal oul (the "double" of the body throughout Black Africa)
3. the being's shadow

4. the Ka = immortal principle that rejoins the divinity in heaven after death. Thus was founded, on the ontological level, the being's immortality (three thousand years before the birth of the revealed religions). Each person possesses a portion of the divinity that fills the cosmos and renders it intelligible to the spirit. Perhaps it is on thethese grounds that the Egyptian cosmogony makes God say "that he made man in his own image." -- emphais mine

As we can see here, supported by the scholarship of Diop, the essence of our discussions on the nature of the KA and the BA are right and exact. As I mentioned before, from what I was able to gather, it seemed like the KA was what we would call the SOUL based upon the reading of the Merotic script in which it suggested the KA is what reincarnates, which is in alignment with Bantu philosophy in general. From that same reading, quoted by Winters, the BA stayed around after death and aided the living in their worldly endeavors. This is the exact function of the DOUBLE or the ENA in Bantu philosophy (Zulu in particular).

This is yet another case where the knowledge of Black African cosmogonies sheds light on the ancient egyptian system of thought and philosophy.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Tue, 2/24/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Towards a greater understanding of the double in African tradition
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, February 24, 2009, 2:59 PM

Here is the breakdown given in Naim Akbar's Paper's in Black Psychology. He sums up th controversy well in my opinion:

Table 1
Comparison of the Ancient Kemitic Conception of the SOul (Self) as identified by Four prominent Egyptologists

Massey (1974)	James (1954-71)	Budge (1960)	Schwaller de L (1981)
Ka a formal structure that would return to the elements: soul of blood	Ka abstract personality of the man to whom it belongs possessing the	Ka double or inner self which comes into being with each person and	Ka Formal eleme which gives form substance and cre

	form and attributes of a man with power of locomotion	follows him throughout life. It is the thread of connection between mans tangible and intangible being.	matter. 1. Original Ka Creator of all the others. Divine Ka 2. Kas of nature, mineral, vegetable and animal. Intermediate Ka personal consciousness, Inferior Ka 3. Individualized Ka, inherited characteristics of psychological consciousness; Inferior
Ba Breath of life; Eternal, invisible energy that runs through all visible functions. Essence of all things.	Ba heart-soul dwells in the Ka. It has the power of metamorphosis and changes its form at will.	Ba combination of intelligence and spirit which leaves the body at death.	Ba Most spiritual element in man, it is this link with the Creator. It is free, unfixed and unaffected by the human being whose only with it is a link of consciousness 1.Ba is the cosmic soul in all constituents of the world (Universal Soul) 2. Ba the natural soul stabilized in the bodily form; 3.Ba represented by bird with human soul, which comes and goes between heaven and earth.
Khaba veil of the vital principle produced emotion and motion; sustains the sensory perceptions, total harmony and circulation of the blood shade soul	Khaibit shadow associated with Ba. It has the power of locomotion and omnipresence.	Khabit the shadow or soul of the blood	Khabit astral or etheric body, ghost or shadow. Holds the records of all pictures or imaginings in our universe
Akhu Seat of intelligence and mental perfection Attributes of	Ab The heart, the animal life in man that is rational, spiritual and	Hati represents the heart or conscience and understanding	Inferior Ka (see above)

judgment, analysis and mental reflection all o which could be dedicated to service of higher being	ethical. Associated with the Ba and undergoes examination in the Judgement
Seb manifested at puberty, selfcreative power of the human being. Ancestral soul. Procreation soul.	Khat concrete personality, the physical body which is mortal.		Inferior Ka
Putah first intellectual father maked the union of the brain with the mind. From its attainment the intellect governs conduct intellectual soul.	Sahu body in which the khu or spiritual self dwells. All mental and spiritual attributes of the natural body are united to the new powers of its own nature.	Sahu the spiritual body	Ba Natural soul
Atmu the Divine or eternal soul. Represented as parenthood, which symbolized the full creative power and perpetual continuation.	Khy spiritual soul which is immortal. It is immortal. It is closely associated with the Ba (heart-soul) , which is immortal.	Khu the pure spirit or Horus the highest expression of the personality, the perfect spirit of Christ consciousness	Divine ka father of the father of the Neters (Spiritual Witness)

Hopefully this table helps us to better understand where we are. I am going to post another email quoting Kajangu about the nature of the Soul and the Heart that may shed some light on the contemporary African philosophy.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

| 28268|2009-03-19 03:01:54|Asar Imhotep|Diop Quote - Tocharian was a Meroite Language1|
Peace Dr. Winters

I have found the quote, but it is not from Civilization or Barbarism, it is from The African Origin of Civilization.

Here is the full quote pg 287

> It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

In Ivan Van Sertima's Great African Thinkers: Cheikh Anta Diop, Runoko Rashidi has an article Dr. Diop on Asia: Highlights and Insights that might be of interest. You might want to check out this as well:

"Iniyan Elango, M.D, is the author of a book called Without Malice: The Truth About India. Elango suggests: Gautama Buddha, the Black revolutionary who founded the egalitarian religion of Buddhism to counter and destroy the bigotry of Hinduism, was a Black prince. But the Hindus highjacked Buddhism and killed Buddhists in large numbers. The Buddhist missionaries fled to other parts of Asia and spread the message of the Buddha in China and other parts of Asia. Those indigenous Dravidians who were loyal to Buddha and resisted the caste system became the untouchable outcastes (Dalits)."

You might want to check out William Ward who published documents based on Sanskrit writing, which includes a Biographical account of Buddha during the 6th Centrury BCE. (M. De Marles Histoire general de 1'Paris, 1928, I, 470-472)'

I hope this helps.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhistory] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:32 PM

Hi
What page #?

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:03 AM

Civilization Vs. Barbarism

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:56 AM

Can you remember which book. If this is true it may explain the presence of the Blemmya text dating to 400 BC, signifying the executioner of bad people.
Clyde

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:

From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Language1
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 9:38 AM

I recall Diop writing in Civilization vs...that Buddha was a runaway priest from Ke persian invasion.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [africanclassicalhi story] Tocharian was a Meroite Languag
To: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Meroe@yahoogroups. com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:13 AM

The Meroite God Apedemak
Some researchers claim that my decipherment of Meroitic is wrong because the M not in contact with Tocharian speakers who wrote in the Kharosthi script. This is f Buddhist communities in Upper Egypt and the Meroitic Sudan for hundreds of yea Buddhist wrote their scriptures in Kharosthi.

| 28269|2009-03-19 03:32:14|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Peace Mahari

I am inclined to share with you the aims of African Wisdom traditions, as taught to me by Dr. Kajangu. The primary aim of African wisdom traditions is the perfection of the human being. Wisdom seekers utilize their "powers of being" (open and closed senses) to do the following:

1. To unveil life's mysteries
2. To attain, to the highest degree, various means in which to "know life" so that one can meet the "one thousand and one challenges" in which this life brings and
3. To celebrate life's beauties.

All of this is done in an attempt to 1) Satisfy the dual hungers, and 2) stave off the affects of foolishness (chaos, Set, Isfet, etc.)

The dual hungers are broken down into the lesser hunger and the greater hunger. The lesser hunger can be satisfied by material things and is of things of the Earth. The greater hunger can only be satisfied by wisdom. This is aided by what we call the "closed senses" as these senses are shut down at birth so that the "open senses" can help you experience life.

The 9 "open senses" are experienced by your sex organ, anus, two eyes, two nostrils, two ears, and mouth. The closed senses are the heart (seat of emotion), the fontanel and occipital. The later two are your spiritual eyes, which if opened, will allow you to see the hidden layers of reality. They see at the edge of eternity and communicates with you in dreams. The heart facilitates the dialogue between the spiritual eyes and the "open senses."

I say this to say, that this "spiritual grand strategy" is evident in the ancient Egyptian texts and it is through this lens in which anything Egyptian makes any sense.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 11:00 PM

Thanks, BDBlack,
I think there is great beauty in the "struggle", a kind of mystical, mysterious beauty. That's why I love and admire the Kemetic culture so much. It seems to hold up this struggle of the opposites, synthesizes it and presents it as a beautiful allegory saying "look how wonderful and amazing is this experience; accept it with balance, justice, honesty and discipline and you can find peace and success in its midst".

Acceptance, though it can be a double-edged sword, I think, is one of the sustaining and abiding positives of the Afrakan culture.
HTP,
Mahari
-

| 28270|2009-03-19 10:39:02|cristofori whitakara|Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman|
he's 18 and i see him everyday.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
From: Tafari khumbaka
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 7:04 PM

maybe u can keep in touch with him, and educate him.....

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, cristofori whitakara wrote:
From: cristofori whitakara
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 10:01 AM

i was talking to a co-worker of mines about war. he said that war is a must and that we only have our physicalness to get want we desire. I, on the other hand feel that a mental/spiritual approach will benefit us most in our endeavors. I then asked him would he be willing to physically attack a person or a people who would outright take what belonged to another group of people(africans) to set the record straight and he was silent. I said you like bush because (as he said bush is gangsta) and i replied however you will not do what bush did for your own and he became so quiet. he is about to join the airforce. what a waste i thought. am i wrong for feeling that way towards another african?

--- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 7:40 PM

That's the way it's been for a minimum of 2000 years.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> After the reproduction of the scent the profits will not go to the originators of it
>
> --- On Tue, 3/17/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Tuesday, March 17, 2009, 12:00 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> The Scent of an Ancient Egyptian Woman
> March 15, 2009 Filed Under Discoveries / Research / Lectures
> In its permanent exhibition, Bonn Universitys Egyptian Museum has a particularly well preserved example of a perfume flacon on display. Screening this 3,500-year-old flacon with a computer tomograph, scientists at the university has detected the desiccated residues of a fluid, which they now want to submit to further analysis. They might even succeed in reconstructing this scent.
> The filigree flacon now under examination by the researchers in Bonn bears an inscription with the name of Pharaoh Hatshepsut. Hence it was probably once in her possession. The vessel is exceptionally well preserved.
> The scientists in Bonn are even hoping to reconstruct the perfume so that, 3,500 years after the death of the woman amongst whose possessions it was found, the scent could then be revitalized.
> Science Daily
> ===
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28271|2009-03-19 10:42:55|cristofori whitakara|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
I was talking with my Dad and I said to him I am not amazed or confused but he would never visit Egypt, Sudan, or Ethiopia.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Konata Khalfani" , "Jennifer Esteen" , "Professor McKnight" , "DR Van Hook"
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:12 PM

Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination. .. it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual enslavement is real.

>
>
> Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
>
> http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090318/ ap_on_re_ af/af_pope_ africa
>
> ========== ========= ========= ========= ========= ========= ===
> Yahoo! News
> http://news. yahoo.com/
>

| 28272|2009-03-19 12:34:47|Alex van Deelen|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
Hi,

On themeaning of the word Tanzania, from Wikipedia:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tanzania

The name Tanzania is a portmanteau of Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two states united in 1964 to form the and Zanzibar, the two states united in 1964 to form the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar, which later the same year was renamed the United Republic]4[of Tanzania

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tanganyika#History

The name 'Tanganyika' is derived from the Swahili words tanga meaning 'sail' and nyika meaning an 'uninhabited plain' or 'wilderness'.

At its simplest it might therefore be understood as a description of the lake - 'sail in the wilderness'.[1]
| 28273|2009-03-19 12:46:30|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
HTP, Asar,
Based on your short assessment of the Afrakan spiritual viewpoint one can see why it would take 40 years of initiation to reach Afrakan spiritual competency. You would have to "yearn" for it which brings to mind something the bible writers likely co-opted from KMT about yearning for God or some such.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> I am inclined to share with you the aims of African Wisdom traditions, as taught to me by Dr. Kajangu. The primary aim of African wisdom traditions is the perfection of the human being. Wisdom seekers utilize their "powers of being" (open and closed senses) to do the following:
>
> To unveil life's mysteriesTo attain, to the highest degree, various means in which to "know life" so that one can meet the "one thousand and one challenges" in which this life brings and
> To celebrate life's beauties.
> All of this is done in an attempt to 1) Satisfy the dual hungers, and 2) stave off the affects of foolishness (chaos, Set, Isfet, etc.)
>
> The dual hungers are broken down into the lesser hunger and the greater hunger. The lesser hunger can be satisfied by material things and is of things of the Earth. The greater hunger can only be satisfied by wisdom. This is aided by what we call the "closed senses" as these senses are shut down at birth so that the "open senses" can help you experience life.
>
> The 9 "open senses" are experienced by your sex organ, anus, two eyes, two nostrils, two ears, and mouth. The closed senses are the heart (seat of emotion), the fontanel and occipital. The later two are your spiritual eyes, which if opened, will allow you to see the hidden layers of reality. They see at the edge of eternity and communicates with you in dreams. The heart facilitates the dialogue between the spiritual eyes and the "open senses."
>
> I say this to say, that this "spiritual grand strategy" is evident in the ancient Egyptian texts and it is through this lens in which anything Egyptian makes any sense.
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>

>
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 11:00 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Thanks, BDBlack,
>
> I think there is great beauty in the "struggle", a kind of mystical, mysterious beauty. That's why I love and admire the Kemetic culture so much. It seems to hold up this struggle of the opposites, synthesizes it and presents it as a beautiful allegory saying "look how wonderful and amazing is this experience; accept it with balance, justice, honesty and discipline and you can find peace and success in its midst".
>
> Acceptance, though it can be a double-edged sword, I think, is one of the sustaining and abiding positives of the Afrakan culture.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
> -
>
| 28274|2009-03-19 13:21:44|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
HTP, Asar,
Look at the top image with two ladies and the N-KWA. Is that N-KWA a unique one? The cross bar seems different. Is that artistic liscence? Or does that design indicate something special?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Greetings Mahari
>

> Let's recall the following images that might support our theory.
>
>
>
>
>
> The following has the KA holding up what seems like the solar bark.
>
>
>
> Tutankhamen's Headrest
>
>
>
> Now compare the above images to this carving coming out of the Kongo
>
>
>
>
> African
> Art / Hemba Wooden Caryatid Stool - PF.3255
>
>
>
> Origin: Southeastern Congo
>
> Circa: 20th Century
> The following image is from among the Luba people of Central Africa.
>
>
>
> The following is from Benin
>
>
>
>
> The following is not exactly in the same spirit as the ones above, but I thought it very interesting none the less. This is an Italian Blackamoor table from the 19 century
>
>
>
>
> These images may provide clues for further interpretations of the KA in ancient Egypt.
>
>
> Asar Imhotep

> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:36 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> >>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<
>
>
>
> There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
>
> Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
| 28275|2009-03-19 14:46:29|shutefnut|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt|
Hotep

Great stuff loved it.-

-- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Let me know what you think of this.
>

> http://www.cedarseed.com/air/realegypt.html
>
| 28276|2009-03-19 14:49:36|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
Neither would I ... especially considering all that these wicked people have touched and ruined over the last 2000 yrs

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2009 8:36 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor

Actually he might look like the devil for good reason. On the religious "tip" he may be the representative of the anti-christ - meaning that he has been around for some time now. If I am correct there was a discussion about the anti-Christ at the Council of Nicea in 325AD. From the spiritual perspective - minus the flying devils and gargoyles and such - I believe the catholic church and its offshoots brought in the age of the anti-Christ. If true that means that the anti-Christ has been ruling and at work for the last 2000 years. I certainly wouldn't argue against that possibility.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

> Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The > roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this > pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money > where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the > world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic > denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination. ..
> it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not > savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they > initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of > the church) We must find a way to educate our people there.
Spiritual

> enslavement is real.
>
>
> >
> >
> > Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
> >
> >
href="http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090318/ap_on_re_af/af_pope_africa">http://news.
yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090318/ ap_on_re_ af/af_pope_ africa
> >
> >
========== ========= ========= ========= ========= ========= ===
> > Yahoo! News
> >
href="http://news.yahoo.com/">http://news. yahoo.com/
> >
>

| 28277|2009-03-19 14:49:53|ahmeer_israel|The Livity of Modern Nubians|
Greetings Phamily,
I would like to inquire as to the situation faced by the indigenous Nubian peoples of the land. A friend went to Cairo last year and informed me of what could be called reservation type camps that separate the Nubian peoples from the general populous. And in general, an overt racism perpetuated by the Arab immigrants to include exclusion from commerce and interaction with the tourisim industry etc. Since the group has expressed such intense knowledge on the historical virtues of this/our Kindred maybe some light can be shed on this issue. And if any what types of effort is being made on their behalf whether via PanAfrakan agenda or a Diasporatic movement to bring attention and resolution to this circumstance. I realize I may be late in addressing a potent issue but at this moment I am seeking awareness.

Gratefully, One Pure Love

Ahmeer Levy
| 28278|2009-03-19 15:42:55|cristofori whitakara|Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt| will be going to the Met in New york and I can use this as a reference to correct any tour guide misinforming people

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, shutefnut wrote:
From: shutefnut
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Setting facts straight about Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 1:04 PM

Hotep

Great stuff loved it.-

-- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
>
> Let me know what you think of this.
>
> http://www.cedarsee d.com/air/ realegypt. html
>

| 28279|2009-03-19 15:58:49|cristofori whitakara|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
it is that ideology that attracted me to the study of Kemetic culture. The belief that one can get through physical barriers through spiritual discipline.

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 12:00 AM

Thanks, BDBlack,
I think there is great beauty in the "struggle", a kind of mystical, mysterious beauty. That's why I love and admire the Kemetic culture so much. It seems to hold up this struggle of the opposites, synthesizes it and presents it as a beautiful allegory saying "look how wonderful and amazing is this experience; accept it with balance, justice, honesty and discipline and you can find peace and success in its midst".
Acceptance, though it can be a double-edged sword, I think, is one of the sustaining and abiding positives of the Afrakan culture.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:
>
> Peace....Mahari your statement helps me to see the ancient symbolism in reference to the Ka. Without the knowledge of ancient Kemetic symbols as a young child I/eye just saw africans carrying the load of burden as someone's enslaved prisoner and now when eye(?) look at these wonderfully made works of art I can see a deeper and as you said more profound meaning. With respect...
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 4:10 PM
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Greetings Mahari
>
> Let's recall the following images that might support our theory.
>
>
>
>
>
> The following has the KA holding up what seems like the solar bark.
>
>
>
> Tutankhamen' s Headrest
>
>
>
> Now compare the above images to this carving coming out of the Kongo
>
>
>
>
>
> African Art / Hemba Wooden Caryatid Stool - PF.3255
>
> Origin: Southeastern Congo
> Circa: 20th Century
> The following image is from among the Luba people of Central Africa.
>
>
>
> The following is from Benin
>
>
>
>
> The following is not exactly in the same spirit as the ones above, but I thought it very interesting none the less. This is an Italian Blackamoor table from the 19 century
>
>

>
>
> These images may provide clues for further interpretations of the KA in ancient Egypt.
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:36 PM
>
>
>
>
> >>You got me thinking... about people in Africa forever carrying different loads<<
>
> There is something so profoundly symbolic and mystical about the image of Afrakans carrying "their load". From the deepest past of humanity that image must have existed. You must load yourself up in order to survive from food stuffs to home construction and beyond.
> Speaking of the "KA-A", I remember seeing photos of Afrakan women carrying tree branches on their heads to fire up charcoal. Now how far back into our humanity must that go?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

| 28280|2009-03-19 16:17:45|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Peace Mahari

I don't think many in the African-Centered circles know about this, and I am not sure many Africans know about this either. This habit, in which I will speak of shortly, is so ingrained into the culture of African people, that many have forgotten "why" they do what they do, in regards to ancestors, because it is habit of culture in this day and age.

As per our discussion on the ENA, the "double," in African cosmogony, the Ena is the double that develops or forms at birth. It develops and is the repository of our individual experiences and knowledge manufactured by our open senses spoken of in the previous email. Our experiences shape the Ena. When you die, the Ena/Double remains for a time and is accessible to the living as long as you honor and sacrifice in its name to keep the Ena alive; otherwise it dies off after an undetermined period (only the KA is eternal).

What is not discussed often is the major layers of reality and who has access to what layers. You have 3 primary layers in African cosmology: the physical realm, the ancestral realm, and the realm of eternity.

1). The physical realm we are all familiar with. It allows us to type to each other on yahoogroups.com It is the location of the life we live (physical realm).

2). The ancestral realm is the realm where the other constituent parts of the personality resides in. What is not discussed often about this layer of reality is that the ancestral realm is the realm of ACCUMULATED EXPERIENCES. In otherwords, this layer of reality is soley composed of past human knowledge, accumulated to this point and time (because it consists of millions of Enas)

3) The realm of eternity is the realm beyond the ancestral realm. This realm consist of the primordial nun, waters, information, radiations that contain anything there is to know about anything. It is the abode of the creator itself.

Now, when we pray to ancestors, you are not praying to their souls, you are praying to their Enas. The Ena has access to all of the accumulated human experiences in which it can share with you living on earth. The Ena needs you to help it live, and you need the Ena to help guide you on how to meet the one thousand and one challenges of life.

Now, when we do divinations and call on those special forces or ancestors, the ones who have been deified, they serve a totally different function. Those ancestors who have reached perfection in their waking life have the power to slip through the ancestral realm layer straight to the "realm of eternity" to get answers to events and possibilities not known by the Enas in the realm of the ancestors.

Now how does this relate to our discussion on Egypt, the KAA and the BA etc.? One of the questions one should ask is, "Why were the ancient Egyptians so hell bent on accumulating knowledge?" Why are African wisdoms centers in general so hell bent on knowing "all there is to know?" The reason why is because the more someone knows about "life," creation and all, the more intellectual "assets" are accumulated in the realm of ancestral radiations. Your double builds up, grows and takes shape based upon your experiences and knowledge. The more you know, the stronger, more valuable your Ena: the better it can help you (while living as well).

The more you know, the more information you can place in the ancestral pot of accumulated knowledge and experiences. So the theme has always been in African societies to learn and discover new things: satisfying the dual hungers.

If we reached perfection while on Earth, we are at an even greater advantage, because now we have access to the rivers of eternity and can bring back pertinent information needed for humanity to better meet the challenges in which life brings. I will write a paper soon on this very subject and how it relates to MAA.T, the Theory of Relativity, and being "light as a feather" in order to reach the "land of eternity."

As Dr. Kajangu notes:

> "It is believed that the doubles of people who have achieved perfection can be used by their descendants to seek advice on how to stem the tide of lifes challenges on earth. This is the root of belief in the existence of ancestors. Finally, the double is the spaceship that the soul uses to travel in time and eternity. Only those doubles that are well-designed can venture into the realm of eternity in search of answers to the challenges of life. The double provides accounts of its travel in time and eternity through visions and dreams."

Now compare what I just discussed with the information about what we know about the OPENING OF THE MOUTH CEREMONY in the KONGO (which is the same in ancient Egypt)

> Go with our tears, wet upon your face, and represent our problems among the dead: be our medium. By similar interpretation, the open mouth, with the lips rendered in relief, symbolizes the leader speaking to the dead: the funeral is over and now he is talking in the other world. All niombo should have open mouths. This means there is speech in the other world. If the open mouth of the niombo brings parlance into the other world, and tears code messages of shared concern, the towering gesture of the niombo, right hand up, left hand down, in similarly significant. It maps the boundary to be crossed; it identifies the cord connecting life to death; it is the crossroads pose. The niombo gesturealso marks a persons transition from this world to the next. On behalf of his community, niombo hails the heavens and the horizon line. When you die you automatically become an ancestor. But not everyone becomes a niombo. Being buried in a niombo figure means the community believes this person will become our medium."
>
> Robert Ferris Thompson Four Moments of the Sun

From the Papyrus Ani

I hope this clarifies the role of the Double and brings some understanding of why we try to learn as much as possible about life (unveiling its mysteries), and why we strive for perfection: so that we can be of service to humanity long after we are dead; so that we can gain access to the realm of Eternity and discover solutions to today's problems.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

On Thu, 3/19/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 1:55 PM

HTP, Asar,
Based on your short assessment of the Afrakan spiritual viewpoint one can see why it would take 40 years of initiation to reach Afrakan spiritual competency. You would have to "yearn" for it which brings to mind something the bible writers likely co-opted from KMT about yearning for God or some such.
HTP,
Mahari

| 28281|2009-03-19 18:23:21|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|

yeah, i read that earlier after post also,, im thinking about dedicating some time too the egyptian story of the lost mariner and see how the the name Ta-nga tanganiyka and Ta-nehsi all correlate.....
thanx/tua

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Alex van Deelen wrote:
From: Alex van Deelen
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 1:19 PM

Hi,

On themeaning of the word Tanzania, from Wikipedia:

http://en.wikipedia .org/wiki/ Tanzania

The name Tanzania is a portmanteau of Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two states united in 1964 to form the and Zanzibar, the two states united in 1964 to form the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar, which later the same year was renamed the United Republic]4[of Tanzania

http://en.wikipedia .org/wiki/ Tanganyika# History

The name 'Tanganyika' is derived from the Swahili words tanga meaning 'sail' and nyika meaning an 'uninhabited plain' or 'wilderness' . At its simplest it might therefore be understood as a description of the lake - 'sail in the wilderness'. [1]

| 28282|2009-03-19 19:29:09|clyde winters|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence of Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman of the Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto there have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, both by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian colony in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have been so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asoka, sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28283|2009-03-19 19:34:30|olmec982000|New Movie: History of Vai Script|
Check out my new film on the history of Vai writing

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nGphaTE5CQQ&feature=channel_page

Clyde
| 28284|2009-03-19 23:28:18|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
Asar,
Very interesting and informative. Thank you.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> I don't think many in the African-Centered circles know about this, and I am not sure many Africans know about this either. This habit, in which I will speak of shortly, is so ingrained into the culture of African people, that many have forgotten "why" they do what they do, in regards to ancestors, because it is habit of culture in this day and age.
>

> As per our discussion on the ENA, the "double," in African cosmogony, the Ena is the double that develops or forms at birth. It develops and is the repository of our individual experiences and knowledge manufactured by our open senses spoken of in the previous email. Our experiences shape the Ena. When you die, the Ena/Double remains for a time and is accessible to the living as long as you honor and sacrifice in its name to keep the Ena alive; otherwise it dies off after an undetermined period (only the KA is eternal).
>
> What is not discussed often is the major layers of reality and who has access to what layers. You have 3 primary layers in African cosmology: the physical realm, the ancestral realm, and the realm of eternity.
>
> 1). The physical realm we are all familiar with. It allows us to type to each other on yahoogroups.com It is the location of the life we live (physical realm).
>
> 2). The ancestral realm is the realm where the other constituent parts of the personality resides in. What is not discussed often about this layer of reality is that the ancestral realm is the realm of ACCUMULATED EXPERIENCES. In otherwords, this layer of reality is soley composed of past human knowledge, accumulated to this point and time (because it consists of millions of Enas)
>
> 3) The realm of eternity is the realm beyond the ancestral realm. This realm consist of the primordial nun, waters, information, radiations that contain anything there is to know about anything. It is the abode of the creator itself.
>
> Now, when we pray to ancestors, you are not praying to their souls, you are praying to their Enas. The Ena has access to all of the accumulated human experiences in which it can share with you living on earth. The Ena needs you to help it live, and you need the Ena to help guide you on how to meet the one thousand and one challenges of life.
>
> Now, when we do divinations and call on those special forces or ancestors, the ones who have been deified, they serve a totally different function. Those ancestors who have reached perfection in their waking life have the power to slip through the ancestral realm layer straight to the "realm of eternity" to get answers to events and possibilities not known by the Enas in the realm of the ancestors.
>
> Now how does this relate to our discussion on Egypt, the KAA and the BA etc.? One of the questions one should ask is, "Why were the ancient Egyptians so hell bent on accumulating knowledge?" Why are African wisdoms centers in general so hell bent on knowing "all there is to know?" The reason why is because the more someone knows about "life," creation and all, the more intellectual "assets" are accumulated in the realm of ancestral radiations. Your double builds up, grows and takes shape based upon your experiences and knowledge. The more you know, the stronger, more valuable your Ena: the better it can help you (while living as well).
>
> The more you know, the more information you can place in the ancestral pot of accumulated knowledge and experiences. So the theme has always been in African societies to learn and discover new things: satisfying the dual hungers.

>
> If we reached perfection while on Earth, we are at an even greater advantage, because now we have access to the rivers of eternity and can bring back pertinent information needed for humanity to better meet the challenges in which life brings. I will write a paper soon on this very subject and how it relates to MAA.T, the Theory of Relativity, and being "light as a feather" in order to reach the "land of eternity."
>
> As Dr. Kajangu notes:
>
> "It is believed that the doubles of people who have achieved perfection can be used by their descendants to seek advice on how to stem the tide of life□s challenges on earth. This is the root of belief in the existence of ancestors. Finally, the double is the spaceship that the soul uses to travel in time and eternity. Only those doubles that are well-designed can venture into the realm of eternity in search of answers to the challenges of life. The double provides accounts of its travel in time and eternity through visions and dreams."
>
>
> Now compare what I just discussed with the information about what we know about the OPENING OF THE MOUTH CEREMONY in the KONGO (which is the same in ancient Egypt)
>
>
> □Go with our tears, wet upon your face, and represent our problems among the dead: be our medium.□ By similar interpretation, the open mouth, with the lips rendered in relief, symbolizes the leader speaking to the dead: □the funeral is over and now he is talking in the other world. All niombo should have open mouths. This means there is speech in the other world.□ □If the open mouth of the niombo brings parlance into the other world, and tears code messages of shared concern, the towering gesture of the niombo, right hand up, left hand down, in similarly significant. It maps the boundary to be crossed; it identifies the cord connecting life to death; it is □the crossroads pose.□ □ The niombo gesture□also marks a person□s transition from this world to the next. On behalf of his community, niombo hails the heavens and the horizon line. When you die you automatically become an ancestor. But not everyone becomes a niombo. Being buried in > a niombo figure means the community believes this person will become our medium."
>
> Robert Ferris Thompson Four Moments of the Sun
>
>
>
>
> From the Papyrus Ani
>
>
>
> I hope this clarifies the role of the Double and brings some understanding of why we try to learn as much as possible about life (unveiling its mysteries), and why we strive for perfection:

so that we can be of service to humanity long after we are dead; so that we can gain access to the realm of Eternity and discover solutions to today's problems.
>
> Ancestrally,
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Thu, 3/19/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 1:55 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> HTP, Asar,
>
> Based on your short assessment of the Afrakan spiritual viewpoint one can see why it would take 40 years of initiation to reach Afrakan spiritual competency. You would have to "yearn" for it which brings to mind something the bible writers likely co-opted from KMT about yearning for God or some such.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
| 28285|2009-03-20 04:44:44|Manu Ampim|Kemet Tour May/June 2009|

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR X
ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET)
May 29 - June 12, 2009
$3799* (all inclusive) from New York
Personally escorted by

PROF. MANU AMPIM

(experienced tour guide & noted historian of Africana Studies)

FULL TRIP ITINERARY & REGISTRATION FORM

http://manuampim.com/kemet_09.pdf

TRIP INCLUDES:

-All tips, taxes, and domestic travel in Egypt
-Deluxe hotel accommodations& two meals per day
-Entrance fees to over 40 sites & monuments
(15% more sites/monuments than other educational tours)
-CD on "Documenting Your Travel Experiences"
-On-site and evening presentations by Prof. Ampim
-Field research training
-Optional 5 units college credit

TOUR HIGHLIGHTS (LAND OF THE PHARAOHS):

We will visit...
-Thegreat pyramids of Giza & the Great Sphinx (Heru-em-akhet), which is the most well-known statue in the world.
-The ancient capital city of Memphis and the extensivemonuments of Sakkara , including theTomb of Ptah-Hotep, author of the oldest surviving book in the world.
-Themassive Dahshure & Meidum pyramids, and the Mastaba of Ra-Hotep & Nofret, whose famous statues in the Cairo Museum are forgeries according to Prof. Ampim in his book, _Modern Fraud_.
-The Egyptian Museum with its renowned collection of well-preserved Pharaonic antiquities.
-Thetemples of Luxor and Karnak , which constitute one of the largest open-air museums in the world.
- Thefamous Valley of the Kings/Queens and Noble Tombs,including the Tomb of King Tutankhamen & the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut .
-The ancient city of the tomb builders, Deir el-Medina.
-The Luxor Museum & the Nubian Museum in Aswan .
-The Dendera, Edfu,and Abydos temples
-The Noble Tombs in Aswan &the templesof Pharaoh Ramses II / Queen Nefertari at Abu Simbel .
- The ancient Workmen's Village of Deir el Medina
-The Nubian village tour
- and much more...

*Fuel prices update

http://manuampim.com/fuelprices.doc

Prof. Manu Ampim is a leading primary researcher and historian on African &African American history and culture.He has written two books, conducted pioneering first-hand research in 18 countries, and has takeneducational tours to Egypt and Central America since 1987 .

Ampim is currently an professor of history and Africana Studies at Contra Costa College and Merritt College innorthern CA , and host of the popular internet radio program, ?Africana Studies? on the BlakeRadio.com network.

==========

FOR MORE INFO:
Prof. Manu Ampim
Director, Advancing the Research
510-482-5791
www.ManuAmpim.com
profmanu@acninc.net

TOUR REGISTRATION & PAYMENT:
Consolidated Tours Organization, Inc.
1675 Virginia Avenue, Suite 200
Atlanta, GA 30337
Tel. 404-767-2727
Fax. 404-766-4520
Email: ctoinc@aol.com

| 28286|2009-03-20 07:15:25|Ginger Daniels|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
Why is that?

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: boogie_down_black@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 19 Mar 2009 09:47:23 -0700
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor

I was talking with my Dad and I said to him I am not amazed or confused but he would never visit Egypt, Sudan, or Ethiopia.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Konata Khalfani" , "Jennifer Esteen" , "Professor McKnight" , "DR Van Hook"
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:12 PM

Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination. .. it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual enslavement is real.

>
>
> Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
>
> http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090318/ ap_on_re_ af/af_pope_ africa
>
> ========== ========= ========= ========= ========= ========= ===
> Yahoo! News
> http://news. yahoo.com/
>

Express your personality in color! Preview and select themes for Hotmail. See how.
| 28287|2009-03-20 07:15:51|Joseph Wright|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
Very interesting... Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in with the "Black Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence of Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman of the Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto there have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, both by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian colony in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have been so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asoka, sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28288|2009-03-20 07:16:33|Lamar Perryman|Fw: Re: Fw: [Ta_Seti] a touchy subject - In search of the historical|

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, nye nem wrote:

From: nye nem
Subject: Re: Fw: [Ta_Seti] a touchy subject - In search of the historical personage of the Christ
To: pharoahisrael@yahoo.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 5:32 AM

Greetings brother Pharaoh Israel

We must remember that Abraham was Phoenician not Nubun/Moor Solomon, Yashua, all of these people are not Nubun/Moor or the people of Ptah the Na-petu. The bible is just a book that focuses on moon worship and rule of the moon god in the moon cycle. That is why the god of the bible rejected Cains offering.

Think about this, Cain offered up grains and herbs, and Able offered up a burnt offering of meat but god was moor pleased with the slaughtering of one of his flesh and blood creations over seeds of whom it says in the bible will be as meat for food? This god of the bible is giving you his lineage of death and that is why the bible is the book of death and it deals with death, murder, adultery, homosexuality, rape, plunder, and there is no where in the bible where god helps anyone, and if he does, he has to destroy the opposition which does not help but only destroy.

Lets look at the work Ethnic ethnic

c.1375, from Scottish, "heathen, pagan," and having that sense first in Eng., from Gk. ta ethne,

So here we see that the word Ethnic means heathen so we cannot classify ourselves with these labels because we are killing ourselves mentally by utilizing titles that are not by us for us. Even the word Moor was given us by another it is just accepted because it is a status as opposed to a classification but it still meant black.

Now you have stated that "that the peoples of Kanaan were Indigenous to the Country during all of the periods under discussion. That they were a African/Black peoples and that this did not significantly change until the time of Hannibal The Great" however, the land was called Kadmon and the people were called Kadmonites before Canaan and his seed came and took the land over then the name changed to Canaan so there could not be a people indigenous to Canaan because they would have known it by another name and would have always called it such unless they were wiped out by these Canaanites whom scripturally have been proven to be caucasian and fathers of the recessive race..

Baal is a Canaanite deity and it is where the god El came from. Baal is Molech whom the Canaanites worship till this day so that cannot be our deity because blood offerings were given to this god by their people of whom they still give blood offerings to till this day.

Hotep

On Wed, Mar 18, 2009 at 4:53 PM, <pharoahisrael@yahoo.com> wrote:

On Messianic Teachings

On the subject of the dead sea scrolls Bro. Nebu Abba-Re I agree that the whole thing app be fabricated by religious zealots.
On the other hand concerning Israelites, Hebrews and Jews my research over the last 15 y has led me to conclude what I suspected in my youth and teen-age years. That the stories of Abraham, Isaac, JacobMoses, David, Solomon and Yahshua (Jesus) are centere the Hyksos Era of Kemet, Sumeriaand Kanaan.

The records of such have been suppressed for thousands of years now and then horribly distorted and re-interpreted by foreign establishments such as the Caucasians and TheIndian Arabs for Political, Religious, Racial Reasons.
Now the works of Dr. C.A. Diop, Ivan Van Sertima, Josef Ben-Jochanan and several others have interpreted these records correctly and generally straightened them out but much more remains to be determined in Tribal-Ethnic terms concerning Kemet, Sumeria and Kanaan.
See Joseph Almighty,
http://josephalmighty.multiply.com/journal/item/467
I am aware of Dr. Malachi Z. York-El's teachings on the subject as well (some of them).
AgainI state that the peoples of Kanaan were Indigenous to the Country during all of the periods under discussion. That they were a African/Black peoples and that this did not significantly change until the time of Hannibal The Great (The Moor) and his defeat by the Roman Empire which began another series of the Exodus of Canaan's native population into Western, Central and Eastern Africa and some to Asia and Europe.
As far as Messianic Teachings I believe that we should look at figures such as Shango, Khonsu, Baal, Anansi and others. Messianic teachings often arise from indigenous groups in Africa and Asia and amongthe Early BlackAmericans and Australians too.
MLP.,
Pharoah Isra'ilu-El.
--- On Wed, 3/18/09, Tafari khumbaka <tafari_sudra@yahoo.com> wrote:

From: Tafari khumbaka <tafari_sudra@yahoo..com>
Subject: [Ta_Seti] a touchy subject - In search of the historical personage of the Christ
To: maatcollective@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 2:10 PM

(I sent this out a few yrs. ago. , still very relative to the black community)
bookstoo read too search out for him/herself :
|the historical jesus and the mythical christ |
by Gerald Massey isbn-1-55818- 137
this is an excellent book for those who really want too plumb the depths of where does the idea of jesus first come from be prepared to study some astronomy and ancient cultures especially egypt , he use's the thought process'es of ancient priest to understand they're astronomy in story form therewit the jesus story
also by aforementioned author
the hebrew and other creations isbn 0-916411-64- 8
there is no person or people in history before 1700 bc called hebrew so where did they come from?. he answers this question
gnostic and historic christianity isbn 0-916411-51- 6
in this book he uses what was available at his time [I think he died in the 30s]to correctly surmise[the dead sea scrolls were unpublished] that the gnostic christine system was older than first century christianity and the therapeuti [the essenes] were the true founders of modern christianity ;he is possibly the first person outside of the rabbinical order to tell that the talmudic writing [they have many writings other than the torah] speak of a messianic master killed by the jews his name was jehoshua-ben ,pandera
gerald massey also has a six volume collected work

by black classic press
---------- --------- --------- --------- --------- --------- --------- --------- ------- -- - -
jesus in the house of the pharoahs
by ahmed osman isbn159143027- 5
the book further and meticullosly examines the essensic belief in a first righteous teacher and his second coming,. he does'nt use massey as a ref: but healmost seemsto be a continuation of his work
the hebrew pharoah is another of his books tracing the egyptian kings list as it is a mirror of the hebrew kings and prophets [the egyptian is older an more factual]
---------- --------- ---
the world's sixteen crucified saviors
[or christianity before christ]
by kersey graves isbn 0-9628142-0- 7
this book goes through the history of christianity and parallels the jesus story to 16 other masters in other cultures
---------- --------- --------- ---------
who is this king of glory
by alvin boyd kuhn isbn 1-56459-176- x
this author goes more for the juggular than most ;he deals with the rise of christianity and like the preceeding authors finds jesus in the religion of the people who were conquered by rome and meshed gnosticism with they're religion
---------- --------- --------- --
bible myth [the african origin of the hebrew people]
by gary greenberg isbn 0-8065-1970- 3
this guy is a jew and head of the new york archaeological society and opens up the scripture of the bible using only historical fact [that's unique] he centers his investigation on the 18 dynasty of egypt where moses came out of ;this book goes together with jesus in the house of the pharoahs
---------- --------- -------
the african origins of the major western religions
by yoseff a.a. ben-jochannna isbn 0-933121-29- 6
[if you know the root of a thing you know it's natal qualities] and dr. ben is one of the first in the black modern experience to go all the way back and then work up too the times of judaism, christianity, islam and show these religions copied a working spirtuality that was ancient africa
---------- --------- --------- ------
| the power of myth | isbn 0-385-24773- 7>2750 also
|hero with a thousand faces |
by joseph campbell
these are good books to explain myth as truth personified and not lies, they show you how to read between the lines
---------- --------- --------- --------- -
www.textweek. com/mtlk/ jesus.htm
www.knowledgebookst ore.com
www.blackclassicpre ss.com
www.hiddenmysteries .org
www.nobeliefs. com/exist. htm

> _____ _____ _
> I don't think one person is more cherished by the creator because of their blood and if the saviours of other people's culture is fantasy why should our peticular saviour be real?, if my saviour is real and yours isn't whats the proof ?... everything I give as proof you can give . myth is not a lie or simple childrens stories myth is a science of stating natural laws ,history, human developmental psycho-social imperatives; myth is what we have been given by the Divine.

--
This message is intended solely for the use of the individual and entity to whom it is addressed, and may contain information that is privileged, confidential, and exempt from disclosure under applicable state and federal laws. If you are not the addressee, or are not authorized to receive for the intended addressee, you are hereby notified that you may not use, copy, distribute, or disclose to anyone this message or the information contained herein. If you have received this message in error, immediately advise the sender by reply email and destroy this message.

RESERVING ALL RIGHTS!

| 28289|2009-03-20 07:16:42|cristofori whitakara|Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA|
The Aramaic name Yuhanna (John) means one who longs for Yah(God)

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 2:55 PM

HTP, Asar,
Based on your short assessment of the Afrakan spiritual viewpoint one can see why it would take 40 years of initiation to reach Afrakan spiritual competency. You would have to "yearn" for it which brings to mind something the bible writers likely co-opted from KMT about yearning for God or some such.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> I am inclined to share with you the aims of African Wisdom traditions, as taught to me by Dr. Kajangu. The primary aim of African wisdom traditions is the perfection of the human being. Wisdom seekers utilize their "powers of being" (open and closed senses) to do the following:

>
> To unveil life's mysteriesTo attain, to the highest degree, various means in which to "know life" so that one can meet the "one thousand and one challenges" in which this life brings and
> To celebrate life's beauties.
> All of this is done in an attempt to 1) Satisfy the dual hungers, and 2) stave off the affects of foolishness (chaos, Set, Isfet, etc.)
>
> The dual hungers are broken down into the lesser hunger and the greater hunger. The lesser hunger can be satisfied by material things and is of things of the Earth. The greater hunger can only be satisfied by wisdom. This is aided by what we call the "closed senses" as these senses are shut down at birth so that the "open senses" can help you experience life.
>
> The 9 "open senses" are experienced by your sex organ, anus, two eyes, two nostrils, two ears, and mouth. The closed senses are the heart (seat of emotion), the fontanel and occipital. The later two are your spiritual eyes, which if opened, will allow you to see the hidden layers of reality. They see at the edge of eternity and communicates with you in dreams. The heart facilitates the dialogue between the spiritual eyes and the "open senses."
>
> I say this to say, that this "spiritual grand strategy" is evident in the ancient Egyptian texts and it is through this lens in which anything Egyptian makes any sense.
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 3/18/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of KAA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 11:00 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
> Thanks, BDBlack,
>
> I think there is great beauty in the "struggle", a kind of mystical, mysterious beauty. That's why I love and admire the Kemetic culture so much. It seems to hold up this struggle of the opposites, synthesizes it and presents it as a beautiful allegory saying "look how wonderful and amazing is this experience; accept it with balance, justice, honesty and discipline and you can find peace and success in its midst".
>
> Acceptance, though it can be a double-edged sword, I think, is one of the sustaining and abiding positives of the Afrakan culture.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
> -
>

| 28290|2009-03-20 07:41:05|cristofori whitakara|Re: New Movie: History of Vai Script|
Many thanks Dr. Winters. I once worked with a woman from Liberia whose husband wrote Vai. I saw this over 10 years ago and shared a document with her and she recognized it!

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, olmec982000 wrote:
From: olmec982000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] New Movie: History of Vai Script
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:49 PM

Check out my new film on the history of Vai writing

http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=nGphaTE5CQQ& feature=channel_ page

Clyde

| 28291|2009-03-20 07:44:44|Michael J Robinson|Announcing The New Afrikan Village Virtual Website|

Hotep Family,

Ok everyone, this is a huge step for the Afrikan Village and another way for African-Centered people to network on Ning.com. Dont forget to listen to www.WBLR.com 24/7. Where you can hear African-Centered and empowering messages around the clock on Black Liberation Radio.

Thanks,

Bro. Michael J. Robinson

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

mjrob1914@comcast.net

mjrob1914@gmail.com

From: truthcenter@aol.com [mailto:truthcenter@aol.com]
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2009 3:23 AM
To: Mjrob1914@comcast.net
Subject: Announcing The New Afrikan Village Virtual Website

Maat-Hotep,

I would like to announce the launching of "The Afrikan Village Online" web site. The reason why I created this site is so thatall of the members of this organization (no matter where they are in the world) can experience a virtual fellowship withone another...at one place!

AtThe Afrikan Village Online you can personalize your very own page with your profile, pictures, videos, blogs, and anything else that will enable the other members to establish a virtual relationship with you. You can even create a group for those who share things in common (i.e., location, fraternities, sororities, or other special interests groups. You can also create forums and do live chats and a whole lot more. You can upload your favorite song(s) to your page for other members to hear when they come to your page. There is so much that we can do and so many ways that we can interact with each other on this site.

The Afrikan Village has becomea powerful, world-wide entity and people are connecting with us at a rate much higher than I could have ever imagined. Last week when we opened The Afrikan Village at Cleveland, OH, I realized just how awesome this revolutionary movement has become. All of the brothers and sisters that were there was hugging each other and greeting one another as though it was a giant family reunion.

So, we need The Afrikan Village Online as a "central line and place of communication" for all of us to reach out and connect with other members whether they are a few blocks away oron the other side of the world.

Since this is a "members only" site you will have to register as a member and have your access approved. Here is the link/address: www.theafrikanvillage.ning.com Come on and enjoy the virtual fellowship with all of your brothers and sisters in The Afrikan Village.

Dr. Ray Hagins

| 28292|2009-03-20 08:26:19|clyde winters|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across China into Southeast Asia.

Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:

From: Joseph Wright
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM

Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in with the "Black Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence of Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman of the Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto there have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, both by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian colony in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have been so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asoka, sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28293|2009-03-20 08:48:19|cristofori whitakara|Re: Pope in Africa says church must help the poor|
Ethiopia kicked out the Portuguese so-called Christians when they came to their shores trying to spread their form of the religion.

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Ginger Daniels wrote:
From: Ginger Daniels
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
To: "Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com"
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 6:31 PM

Why is that?

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: boogie_down_ black@yahoo. com
Date: Thu, 19 Mar 2009 09:47:23 -0700
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor

I was talking with my Dad and I said to him I am not amazed or confused but he would never visit Egypt, Sudan, or Ethiopia.

--- On Wed, 3/18/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Konata Khalfani" , "Jennifer Esteen" , "Professor McKnight" ,

"DR Van Hook"
Date: Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 1:12 PM

Is it just me, or does this dude look like the devil, in the flesh. The roman catholic church should be banned in Africa, period. .... and for this pope to say there needs to be a focus on poverty... then put your money where your mouth is. We made you one of the wealthiest entities in the world, put up or shut up. He made mention of the rate that the catholic denomination is growing in Africa, along with the evangelist denomination. .. it is clear that our brothers and sisters in Africa who are joining are not savvy to not only the methods and madness of the gangsters, but what they initially taught about us as a people. (and still do but in the backroom of the church) We must find a way to educate our people there. Spiritual enslavement is real.

>
>
> Pope in Africa says church must help the poor
>
> http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090318/ ap_on_re_ af/af_pope_ africa
>
> ========== ========= ========= ========= ========= ========= ===
> Yahoo! News
> http://news. yahoo.com/
>

Express your personality in color! Preview and select themes for Hotmail. See how.

| 28294|2009-03-20 09:30:29|Tafari khumbaka|the Congo|

http://allafrica.com/stories/200903200630.html
click above: horrors of postcolonialism as europe and america carve out the congo using any means necessary thru african pawns.....

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28295|2009-03-20 10:49:13|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Save The Rainforest: Involving young people.. pass it on| good info!

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Thu, 3/19/09,

peace and love~patchouliwindz

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Linda Maples wrote:

From: Linda Maples <>
Subject: Save The Rainforest: Involving young people.. pass it on
To: "Melissa" <>
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 7:54 AM

Save The Rainforestmore info.

Involving young people in campaigns to save rainforests and offering ecologycourses in the tropics for school groups.

to sign a declaration supporting tropical forests Forests Now Action Campaign

peace and love~patchouliwindz

| 28296|2009-03-20 17:38:11|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Black Men, Suicide, and the Black Community|

According to the American Association of SuicidologyBlack men ages 15-24 increased 83 percent in the 1980s and early 1990s. It is still the third leading cause of death among Black males who are seven times more likely to commit suicide than Black females. Black females account for nearly all higher education gains in Black America including 60 percent of college enrollment and 80 percent of honor roll students. The Black man in America is the most unemployed and incarcerated of all races. This state of disrepair leads to great depression.

Please read this article. What is happening to our men here, and what can we do to stop it?
http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5580.shtml

| 28297|2009-03-20 17:38:11|Lamar Perryman|Fw: Re: [abibitumikasa] ALIENIATION AND REJECTION FROM FAMILY & FRIE|

Greetings All,
Well, well, well my friends. I too have endured this rejection from family, friends, church and mosque-folks, co-workers, white and black folks and potential mates from a early age to some three decades now.
Well, the time has now come.! The age and time of the rejectors are now SHORT to say the least and when you see these peoples from all the educated and street backgrounds now running scared it makes me want to feel sorry for them - - - ALMOST.!

But there will be none of that now. Lessons well learned are lessons well earned. From asking family and school teachers questions about their belief systems from an early age and getting anger and threats instead of rational answers.
From losing potential friends, girlfriends, mates and close family members from their materialistic lifestyles BASED on Want and doing anything for the " man " and any crime in the hood to get it.!
We can throw the politicians, religionists, educators, entertainers, sportspeople and the street peoples alike into this dimension here. Ah, a dangerous society of ignorant peoples led by an even more dangerous society who had controlled the social system. A psychically ill peoples who thought that they could protect their ignorance, hate, division, titles, name, money and positions and still live comfortably.!
Well, well, well now how have the Gods (Idols) fallen :(Money, Political/Religious Power, Sex, Drugs, Sports, Entertainment, Gangsterism, so-called Social Education and the likes)
And believe you me this time this fall is bad, bad, bad and now we are dealing with blacks, whites and hispanics from top to bottom, streets to the office and this is all thatthese peoples knew..!!!
Well, let's see what happens now.! I think I know without the benefit of being a prophetic person like our elderbrothers and sisters, leaders and teachers of our indigenous spiritualities and classical systems.!
MLP.,
Pharoah Isra'ilu-El.

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, Wesley Rose wrote:

From: Wesley Rose
Subject: Re: [abibitumikasa] ALIENIATION AND REJECTION FROM FAMILY & FRIENDS
To: abibitumikasa@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 2:03 PM

Peace & blessings,
I had came across this email, and felt every word. I too, go through this alieniation and rejection. First, after opening my third eye (the mind), to alot of lies, this country had educated us on. I started to put it out there, because it is something dear to me, and to my people. Man, did I get rejected like a blocked shot. It sent me to a depression, were I adored some personal struggles. Now, after slowing my pace down, after 20 something years. I am regaining truth and spirituality, stronger than before, but the rejection and alieniation is still there. I learned that; if they are not with you, don't bothered with them. Eventually, the people in the dark, will see the light. If they knowledged the light of truth, and do not change, then they will remain in darkness. To sum it up.
Peace, and thanks for sharing.

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Every Man Movin wrote:

From: Every Man Movin
Subject: Re: [abibitumikasa] ALIENIATION AND REJECTION FROM FAMILY & FRIENDS
To: abibitumikasa@ yahoogroups.. com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 11:00 AM

Alafia my brother and elder, blessings and peace, reverence and respect.

There is a saying in Ifa that it is Olorun (the lord of heaven) who helps the one who walks alone. For example, the wind helps him place the load he must carry on his head when no one shows up to assist him.

Dr. John H. Clarke had wives who could not understand his dedication.

We are, as a people, living with tramua and syndrome.

You know all of this more than anyone.

But I too, carry a heavy burden, trying to open the door of Africa to free my soul. Each step I take, many in my family attack me with venom and anger, others are aloof and act like I do not exist. Some do things that are worse.

What do we do?

We understand that there is a gap in communal knowledge and therefore spiritual consciousness and shared destiny.

We choose to love those some friends, family, females, fellas, foes, and fakes with a higher, deeper, more divine and respectful love.

I don't let people abuse me. But I serve them when they come to me with the grace, care, concern, colloquial and coquette cordialness and the wide arms of ancestral acceptance that our elders laid down for us. It may take a lifetime to teach the people that I am connected to that this path is A NATURAL one for us and that we can USE it for our successes and empowerment.

We represent by our disposition by BEING the love that we seek.

Your father I am sure, will grow proud throughout time as you continue to commune with his spirit and teach him what our nation has hidden and stolen from us while sharing your personal feelings. You are still his baby boy.

More importantly. ...remember that you came here with a spiritual family, people like John Jackson, Dr. Clarke, Dr. Ben and others that you hold so close to your heart when you teach us, they are your fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters just as the trees and rivers are.

Open your heart to an unyielding forgiveness like a proud mother at a truth and reconciliaton hearing. Open your heart like those who lit your path for you.

Embrace the world with love....like you have been doing all your life, and enjoy the many benefits as your spiritual family comes and goes in and out of all the various doors (worlds) you step through.

Let those who will stay remain. Let those who choose to go depart.

Leave an open door....waiting to heal when sincerity appears...for all will return to the love you freely offer.

Peace to you my brother and powerful warrior,

Sincerely,

Erick M. Michael. (Call me "E".)

Quoting Runoko Rashidi <Runoko@yahoo. com>:

>
> 3 March 2009
>
> Greetings Sisters and Brothers,
>
> African Heritage Month is now over for me. For me it actually began > in January. It was a glorious period. I learned a great deal, > absorbed a lot of information, and believe that I am a somewhat > wiser person.
>
> I am going away to Europe soon and here is something for you to > ponder if you will. I expect to spend some quality time with my > daughter, do a few lectures, and see a fair portion of Europe. But,
> I ask you to reflect upon the following. It is not the first time > that I have raised this.
>
> With your permission I would like to pose a focus question: How do > we deal with the alienation and rejectionthat we sometimes feel > with our family, lovers, friends and co-workers? Let me give some > background. I never forget about my father. My father enjoyed great > material success in life but I can never forget that for a period of > twelve years he never called me and thought of me as a great failure.

>
> My parents came from very humble beginnings. My father came from a > family of sharecroppers and measured success based on what he had.
> He was a hard worker and he would always brag that he was driving a > Cadilac car before I was born. This was one of his greatest claims > in life. I was the first one in my family to attend a university > and there were really high expectations for me. And then I got the > Africa bug.
>
> For a long time my father, I think, believed that I was mentally ill > and disowned me. Although he has been an Ancestor for years now > and we did have a chance to talk shortly before he passed I still > carry a lot of pain because of our lack of interaction. He never > read one of my books, never heard me on the radio or saw me on tv.
> He never attended one of my lectures and never called me to welcome > me back to the U.S. after a long and sometimes dangerous > international tour. To my other brothers and sisters he was very > attentive and supportive. For me, it still hurts. I used to dream > about it.
>
> So the question that I am posing is this? How do we deal with the > alienation that we oftentimes get from the people that we most want > to be accepted by? How do we cope with the rejection that we > frequently get from family, friends, lovers and co-workers because > of our perspectives, lifestyles and African worldview. I know that > many of us, probably most of us, have had to cross this bridge and > tackle this experience. Some of us are going through it now.
> Sohow about some good feedback?
>
> In love of Africa,
>
> Brother Runoko
> http://www.cwo. com/~lucumi/ runoko.html
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

--

> "When I say US I refer to a covenant, one has with the self, an ancient inner governance.. ." EM 2003.

| 28298|2009-03-21 05:48:26|Ahmeer Israel|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|

Attachments :

Blessings Kindred,
I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpents (Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.The builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this temple I discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style worn by HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement with this line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakaness with their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
Seven headed serpent
Shiva
Shiva
The Mani people of Thailand
One Pure Love
it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this message.
One

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM

Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across China into Southeast Asia.
Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:

> From: Joseph Wright
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM
>
> Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in with the "Bla Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence of Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman of the Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto there have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, both by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian colony in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have been so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asoka, sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28299|2009-03-21 17:06:35|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: resend use this one please|

Attachments :

peace/hetep-u
come out andhear about health and spirituality, from an africentric view this sun'sday at 3:30p ,. a flyer is enclosed

| 28300|2009-03-21 21:32:40|clyde winters|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|

Hi Ahmeer
These are some great picture. I may do a film on the history of Southeast Asia, may I use your pictures?
Clyde

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:

From: Ahmeer Israel
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:58 PM

Blessings Kindred,
I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpents (Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.The builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this temple I discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style worn by HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement with this line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakaness with their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
Seven headed serpent
Shiva
Shiva
The Mani people of Thailand
One Pure Love

it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this message.
One

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM

Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across China ir Southeast Asia.
Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:

From: Joseph Wright
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM

Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in with tl Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence of Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman of the Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto there have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, both by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian colony in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have been so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asoka, sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28301|2009-03-22 07:16:36|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
Wow, thank you so much for sending that. It was great to see those beautiful black people in Thailand. And the sculpture of Buddha. He looks like a brotha to me! That must have been a fascinating trip. Thank you again for sharing. I'd love to read up on this. Any reading references?

From: Ahmeer Israel
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2009 9:58 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt

Blessings Kindred,

I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpents (Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.The builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this temple I discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style worn by HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement with this line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakaness with their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
Seven headed serpent
Shiva
Shiva
The Mani people of Thailand
One Pure Love
it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this message.
One

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:

> From: clyde winters
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM
>
> Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across ( > Southeast Asia.
> Clyde
>
> --- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:
>
> > From: Joseph Wright
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM
> >
> > Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-ir > > Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.
> >
> > jew
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
> > From: clyde winters

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence o
Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman o
Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian co in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Aso sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28302|2009-03-22 07:16:45|Brotha Pruitt|Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'|
Greetings,
Cleopatra's mother and father were African. She was the blackest and most beautiful woman to ever walk on this planet!!

Brotha Pruitt
Reparations Leader and Chairman
Committee for African-American Reparations (CAAR) CA
Reparations Union Lobbying Association (RULA) NC
www.rula1.com

> --- On Thu, 3/19/09, Alex van Deelen wrote:
>
> From: Alex van Deelen
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cleopatra's mother 'was African'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 11:19 AM
>
> Hi,
>
> On themeaning of the word Tanzania, from Wikipedia:
>
> http://en.wikipedia .org/wiki/ Tanzania
>
> The name Tanzania is a portmanteau of Tanganyika and Zanzibar, > the two states united in 1964 to form the and Zanzibar, the two > states united in 1964 to form the United Republic of Tanganyika > and Zanzibar, which later the same year was renamed the United > Republic]4[of Tanzania
>
> http://en.wikipedia .org/wiki/ Tanganyika# History
>
> The name 'Tanganyika' is derived from the Swahili words tanga > meaning 'sail' and nyika meaning an 'uninhabited plain' or 'wilderness' .
> At its simplest it might therefore be understood as a description > of the lake - 'sail in the wilderness'. [1]

| 28303|2009-03-22 07:16:57|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli spokeswoman -

The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and clear:

"You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize God, but you can't criticize Israel."

>
>
> http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml
>
>
>
>
>
>
| 28304|2009-03-22 07:17:08|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
Sorry I used the wrong link in the previous email

Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli spokeswoman -

The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and clear:

"You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize God, but you can't criticize Israel."
>
> http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5691.shtml
>
>
>
>
>
>

| 28305|2009-03-22 07:18:26|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Pope urges Angolans to convert; stampede kills 2|
They are killing themselves to see the ones who killed them for so many years -

> Pope urges Angolans to convert; stampede kills 2
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090322/ap_on_re_af/af_pope_africa
>
> ==========
> Yahoo! News
> http://news.yahoo.com/
>
| 28306|2009-03-22 07:25:18|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Bioterror drill in Oakland|

Urban Warfare in preparation. Its supposed to start in the west

---

Bioterror drill in Oakland - By Harry Harris
Oakland Tribune

About 1,000 volunteers and representatives of public health and emergency response agencies participated in a simulated biohazard emergency drill.View Full Story

---

Most Emailed

(From the last 12 hours)

1. Hayward begins ticketing for smoking in public
2. Two Oakland police officers shot
3. Dave Newhouse: Oakland school district gets F in diplomacy
4. Man claims self-defense in 2006 death of East Palo Alto police officer
5. Jaime Richards column: What basketball teaches players

---

http://www.insidebayarea.com/oakland/ci_11952279
http://www.insidebayarea.com

This e-mail was initiated by machine [10.148.8.3] at IP [10.148.8.3].

| 28307|2009-03-22 07:25:53|Ahmeer Israel|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|

no problem

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Sun, 3/22/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 22, 2009, 12:32 AM

Hi Ahmeer
These are some great picture. I may do a film on the history of Southeast Asia, may I use your pictures?
Clyde

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:

> From: Ahmeer Israel
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:58 PM
>
> Blessings Kindred,
> I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpe
> (Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.Tl > builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this t > discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style wo
> HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement w > line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakane > their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
> Seven headed serpent
> Shiva
> Shiva
> The Mani people of Thailand
> One Pure Love
> it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this > message.
> One
>
> The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
> TRUTH is what IS.
>
> --- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM

Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across China ir Southeast Asia.
Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:

From: Joseph Wright
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM

Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in with th Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memph
the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth centu only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence o Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman o Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian co in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Aso sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28308|2009-03-22 07:26:05|Ahmeer Israel|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
check this link out
http://members.tripod.com/jrmoore1958/buddha.html

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Sun, 3/22/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 22, 2009, 12:32 AM

Hi Ahmeer
These are some great picture. I may do a film on the history of Southeast Asia, may I use your pictures?
Clyde

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:

From: Ahmeer Israel
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:58 PM

Blessings Kindred,
I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpe
(Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.Tl
builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this t discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style wo
HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement w line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakane their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
Seven headed serpent
Shiva
Shiva
The Mani people of Thailand
One Pure Love
it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this message.
One

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM

Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across ( Southeast Asia.
Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:

From: Joseph Wright
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM

Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-ir Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence o
Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525 405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman o
Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hithert have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent b Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian c in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asc sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28309|2009-03-22 07:35:19|clyde winters|Re: [Ta_Setis for] Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
Thank for the site on Buddhas
Clyde

--- On Sun, 3/22/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:

From: Ahmeer Israel
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 22, 2009, 12:53 AM

check this link out
http://members. tripod.com/ jrmoore1958/ buddha.html

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Sun, 3/22/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 22, 2009, 12:32 AM

Hi Ahmeer
These are some great picture. I may do a film on the history of Southeast Asia, may I use pictures?
Clyde

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:

From: Ahmeer Israel
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:58 PM

Blessings Kindred,
I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpe
(Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.Tl
builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this t discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style wo
HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement w line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakane their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
Seven headed serpent
Shiva
Shiva
The Mani people of Thailand
One Pure Love
it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this message.
One

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM

Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across C
Southeast Asia.
Clyde

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:

From: Joseph Wright
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM

Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-ir Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memp
the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth centu only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in As Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothes dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in A

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evi
Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt 405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan w Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over t shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have e by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the I in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years bef sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

Clyde

| 28310|2009-03-22 14:01:12|Obadele Kwame Kambon|Come join me at PART II: FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrika|

Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network

Listen. Learn. Liberate!

Obadele Kwame Kambon

Obadele Kwame Kambon has invited you to the event 'PART II: FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation 3/15 6:30PM' on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network!

PART II: FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation 3/15 6:30PM

Time: March 22, 2009 from 6:30pm to 8pm
Location: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
Organized By: Obadele Kwame Kambon

Event Description:
Mo ki yin! I greet you, Oluko Obadele,

THE GOOD NEWS:
The Free Obadele Kambon lecture entitled the role of Afrikan languages in Afrikan Liberation was one of our most popular lectures ever!

THE BAD NEWS:
The lecture was popular that with 25+ members in the classroom, many more trying to come in, unfortunately the server went down. According to the forums we had 55 members online trying to get in.

So we are rescheduling to:

When: March 22, 2009 @ 6:30PM EST
What: ?kyeame ?s?fo? Obadele Kwame Kambon Lecture entitled PART II: The Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation followed by Abibitumi Kasa Member Open Discussion
Who: You Afrikan!
Where: Abibitumi Kasa Member Classroom
How: Register at free forum at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php then click member classroom or on this link: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
A continuing part of our Abibitumi Kasa fundraiser: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

We have installed a forum optimization script and are looking into dedicated server status as with so many resources and a huge increase in membership since last year we've outgrown our nest and must prepare for further growth.

Much Thanks to all who turned out for yesterday's lecture and many of our other past lectures in the Abibitumi Kasa Free Lecture Series. If you like what you heard yesterday in Part I, tell a friend as we will be ready to handle the volume of traffic and the great interest that this topic seems to have generated.

Take care and stay BlackNificent!

YEbEhyia wO nnawOtwe a Ereba yi no mu,

Abibitumi Kasa Staff and Family

Why: "It has been said that 'power is the ability to define reality and have others respond to that definition is if it were their own.' Further, the reality of today is based upon the concepts and theories of yesterday. These are concepts that are eternally linked to a specific culture. A specific language with a specific history. According to Ngugi wa ThiongO 'language carries culture, and culture carries...the entire body of values by which we come to perceive ourselves and our place in the world.' It is said that, 'the one who prescribes the diameter of your knowledge determines the circumference of your activity.' In other words, 'a cow grazes where it is tied' and 'cattle is only as good as the field in which it grazes.' How WE are able to and choose to conceive of the world is mediated by language. It is through conceptual incarceration within the prison of an alien language designed and intended to serve only its master, that the alien is able to shape Our destiny by shaping Our very thoughts. It is said:

watch your thoughts for they become your actions
watch your actions for they become your habits
watch your habits for they become your character
watch your character for it becomes your destiny

As it is individually, so it is collectively. For it is said that 'the actions of one generation become the history of the next generation. The actions of many generations become the traditions of a people.' Afrikans in general and Diasporan Afrikans in particular have endeavored to re-conceptualize the world through language. Oftentimes, lacking other options, through the language forced upon US. However, it is said, 'the dog does not prefer bones to meat, it is just that no one ever gives him meat.' WE are the long awaited hunters. 'You are the slave of the one whose handcuffs are on your wrists,' WE are the long awaited liberators. WE, entrusted by Our ancestors. WE, the guardians of Our languages, hold the key to re-conceptualizing reality for the best interests of Afrikans throughout the world, Continental and Diasporan. That WE may speak Our reality into the future; that WE may shape the destiny of Our children, of Our childrens children, of Our childrens childrens children, and for the still more beautyful ones yet to be born."

See more details and RSVP on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network:
http://abibitumikasa.ning.com/events/event/show?id=2053441%3AEvent%3A19784&xgi=cQlVziz

About Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network
Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Language and Liberation Institutes dewhitenize parts of the brain others can't reach.

332 members
478 photos
166 songs
65 videos

112 discussions
57 events
49 blog posts

To control which emails you receive on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network, click here

.

| 28311|2009-03-22 14:01:20|Obadele Kwame Kambon|Come join me at PART II: FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrika|

Obadele Kwame Kambon

Obadele Kwame Kambon has invited you to the event 'PART II: FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation 3/22 6:30PM' on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network!

PART II: FREE Obadele Kambon Lecture: Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation 3/22 6:30PM

Time: March 22, 2009 from 6:30pm to 8pm
Location: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
Organized By: Obadele Kwame Kambon

Event Description:
Mo ki yin! I greet you, Oluko Obadele,

THE GOOD NEWS:
The Free Obadele Kambon lecture entitled the role of Afrikan languages in Afrikan Liberation was one of our most popular lectures ever!

THE BAD NEWS:
The lecture was popular that with 25+ members in the classroom, many more trying to come in, unfortunately the server went down. According to the forums we had 55 members online trying to get in.

So we are rescheduling to:

When: March 22, 2009 @ 6:30PM EST
What: ?kyeame ?s?fo? Obadele Kwame Kambon Lecture entitled PART II: The Role of Afrikan Languages in Afrikan Liberation followed by Abibitumi Kasa Member Open Discussion
Who: You Afrikan!
Where: Abibitumi Kasa Member Classroom
How: Register at free forum at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php then click member classroom or on this link: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php
A continuing part of our Abibitumi Kasa fundraiser: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/fundraiser.html

We have installed a forum optimization script and are looking into dedicated server status as with so many resources and a huge increase in membership since last year we've outgrown our nest and must prepare for further growth.

Much Thanks to all who turned out for yesterday's lecture and many of our other past lectures in the Abibitumi Kasa Free Lecture Series. If you like what you heard yesterday in Part I, tell a friend as we will be ready to handle the volume of traffic and the great interest that this topic seems to have generated.

Take care and stay BlackNificent!

YEbEhyia wO nnawOtwe a Ereba yi no mu,

Abibitumi Kasa Staff and Family

Why: "It has been said that 'power is the ability to define reality and have others respond to that definition is if it were their own.' Further, the reality of today is based upon the concepts and theories of yesterday. These are concepts that are eternally linked to a specific culture. A specific language with a specific history. According to Ngugi wa ThiongO 'language carries culture, and culture carries...the entire body of values by which we come to perceive ourselves and our place in the world.' It is said that, 'the one who prescribes the diameter of your knowledge determines the circumference of your activity.' In other words, 'a cow grazes where it is tied' and 'cattle is only as good as the field in which it grazes.' How WE are able to and choose to conceive of the world is mediated by language. It is through conceptual incarceration within the prison of an alien language designed and intended to serve only its master, that the alien is able to shape Our destiny by shaping Our very thoughts. It is said:

watch your thoughts for they become your actions
watch your actions for they become your habits
watch your habits for they become your character
watch your character for it becomes your destiny

As it is individually, so it is collectively. For it is said that 'the actions of one generation become the history of the next generation. The actions of many generations become the traditions of a people.' Afrikans in general and Diasporan Afrikans in particular have endeavored to re-conceptualize the world through language. Oftentimes, lacking other options, through the language forced upon US. However, it is said, 'the dog does not prefer bones to meat, it is just that no one ever gives him meat.' WE are the long awaited hunters. 'You are the slave of the one whose handcuffs are on your wrists,' WE are the long awaited liberators. WE, entrusted by Our ancestors. WE, the guardians of Our languages, hold the key to re-conceptualizing reality for the best interests of Afrikans throughout the world, Continental and Diasporan. That WE may speak Our reality into the future; that WE may shape the destiny of Our children, of Our childrens children, of Our childrens childrens children, and for the still more beautyful ones yet to be born."

See more details and RSVP on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network:
http://abibitumikasa.ning.com/events/event/show?id=2053441%3AEvent%3A19784&xgi=cQlVziz

About Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network
Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Language and Liberation Institutes dewhitenize parts of the brain others can't reach.

332 members
478 photos
166 songs
65 videos
112 discussions
57 events
49 blog posts

To control which emails you receive on Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Languages and Liberation Network, click here

| 28312|2009-03-22 19:28:39|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > spokeswoman -
>
>

> The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and > clear:
>
> "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > God, but you can't criticize Israel."
>
>
> >
> >
> > http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
| 28313|2009-03-23 12:03:52|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
Wonderful site, not just on Buddhism but overall... great information!

From: Ahmeer Israel
Sent: Saturday, March 21, 2009 10:53 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt

check this link out
http://members. tripod.com/ jrmoore1958/ buddha.html

The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
TRUTH is what IS.

--- On Sun, 3/22/09, clyde winters <olmec982000@ yahoo.com> wrote:

> From: clyde winters <olmec982000@ yahoo.com>
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Sunday, March 22, 2009, 12:32 AM
>
> Hi Ahmeer
> These are some great picture. I may do a film on the history of Southeast Asia, ma > pictures?
> Clyde

--- On Fri, 3/20/09, Ahmeer Israel wrote:

> From: Ahmeer Israel
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:58 PM
>
> Blessings Kindred,
> I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpe
> (Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure.T
> builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduismand later converted to Buddhism. In this t > discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style wo
> HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement w > line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakane > their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
> Seven headed serpent
> Shiva
> Shiva
> The Mani people of Thailand
> One Pure Love
> it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included anattached to this > message.
> One
>
> The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
> TRUTH is what IS.
>
> --- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters wrote:
>
> > From: clyde winters
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM
> >
> > Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across C
> > Southeast Asia.
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright wrote:
> >
> > > From: Joseph Wright
> > > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> > > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > > Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44 PM

Very interesting. .. Thank you! ...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.

jew

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM

.
Asar provided me this reference;

quote:

It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the por Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate traditionThere is general agreement today on placing in the sixth only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movemen Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hy dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctri

Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.

Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie fou Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of 405BC). he wrote:

"on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the A Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterra have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist r Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touche in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).

If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred ye sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.

.

Clyde

| 28314|2009-03-23 12:48:50|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|

Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that?s just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up - http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

> Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > spokeswoman -

>
>
> The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and > clear:
>
> "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > God, but you can't criticize Israel."

>
>
> >
> >
> >
href="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml">http://www.finalcal
l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>

| 28315|2009-03-23 21:40:35|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -

>
> http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>
> Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> >
> > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > spokeswoman -
> >
> >
> > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > clear:
> >
> > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they > > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > God, but you can't criticize Israel."
> >
> >
> >
> > > > http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > >
>

| 28316|2009-03-24 08:57:14|Asar Imhotep|Re: Barak is a Bantu word|
Peace Ferg

I am just now seeing this in my inbox. Great investigations as always. I was recently in a conversation with one of my Muslim friends here in Texas and he was giving a presentation on how we need to respect and elevate the Black woman. He of course was giving this lecture under the Islamic, through the NOI of Islam, paradigm. In the course of his discussion he made a claim that the United States was becoming muslim.

As part of his evidence, he used Barack Obama as one of the key variables for his claim. He made the comment that Barack made it to his current seat with an Arabic name: Barack Hussan Obama.

After the discussion I had a conversation with him to critique his lecture and explained that Barack was Bantu and may have origins in the ancient iKami language. We had to explain that a lot of concepts imported into the language and the spiritual system of Islam is in fact African and it would do him some good to investigate further these concepts.

I gave him another example during our brief conversation and the word was UMI which in the Arabic means MOTHER. Well if we recall our Bantu term UMA, it literally means fire place or hearth as a noun.

But the word UMA also means MOTHER as is derived from the concept of the mother's womb being considered as a FIREPLACE with a live, hot coal (KAA, KALA, KARA) inside. We have an equivalent saying in the United States when we meet a pregnant woman and we say, "I see you have a bun in the oven." Again, symbolizing the woman's womb as an oven.

As Ferg noted in his essay on KM.T,

> In the Kiswahili-Bantu language,the word JIKO means the cooking place, fireplace, hearth or kitchen. The saying Somebody has not yet got a fireplace means he has not yet got a wife.

In George Theal's book The Beginning of South African History pg 37, he discusses the term UMA as it relates to being a mother in the Xhosa language.

We have to be careful here because the term MA is used universally among languages to mean mother. But given its other meanings, I think this is a solid match and isn't due to sounds developed by children. This is supported by the other meanings of the term UMA as a verb:

To ache
To give pain
Cause pain
To be in pain
To sting
To hurt
To bite

To injure

These seem to be derived from the pain a mother goes through while giving birth. The term UMA here is descriptive of this process and may from there symbolized pain in general. Here we may have another play on words. Here is something else that might interest the forum as well, is that the term UMA is in the so-called Altaic languae family. Peep the meanings:

> Proto Altaic: umV (uma, ume, umi, umo, umu)
> Meaning: fire; to burn
>
> Proto-Turkic: uma-
> Modern Turkic: uma-t, uma-y
>
> Proto-Tungus-Manchu: omV (oma, ome, omi, omo, omu) = hearth
> Oroch: umuxi
> Nanai: oma

As we can see here, this term has spread into the "middle east" and into East Asia. The later could be the result of borrowing due to interactions, but those languages are not my specialty. But I said this stuff to him to show that he can't lay claim to a lot of concepts because they are African.

I had to remind him that Arabic belongs to an African language family, which means ultimately that Africans derived the languages now spoken in the levant and to recapture the essence of those terms, which derived out of the geography, culture and practices of the people, he ultimately has to turn to Africa for understanding.

My friend and I have a private meeting today to go over the other African concepts in Islam and I will definitely show him your paper.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

> --- On Sat, 2/21/09, Ferg wrote:
> From: Ferg
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Barak is a Bantu word
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Saturday, February 21, 2009, 10:27 AM
>
> Hutuapo!
> Barak is a Bantu word, not Semitic!

Somo

| 28317|2009-03-24 10:25:13|Alex van Deelen|(BBC) Cleopatra, Portrait Of A Serial Killer|
Now I don't know who came up with that title, but it is the title a documentary abotu Cleopatra's sister,
which was aired on Monday.

Maybe it will turn up on Youtube.

Alex

Egypt and the influence of black Africans debate Hawas vs. Perry Noble
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UnDIAlLD1UM
| 28318|2009-03-24 10:40:01|Ferg|Bantu abstractions of the KHAT|
Attachments :
Greetings all.
I enclose a pdf on the Bantu abstractions of the KHAT.
Somo
| 28319|2009-03-24 15:38:53|Obadele (abibitumikasa.com)|Your First Twi or Yoruba Class Free at Abibitumi Kasa Next Week Only|

Twi and Yoruba Classes begin Next week!

1st Class Free! To give you a taste of what our live streaming classes are like, Monday's Yoruba class and Tuesday's Twi class will be free! If you haven't already registered for class, you certainly will when you see first hand how YOU can learn the language within 8 classes!

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

So get a jump start on your return visit or repatriation to Afrika!!!

If you're interested in taking the full eight (8) classes, submit payment at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/payment.html

Who: All Afrikan people who are serious about being Afrikan

What: You are invited to join the new session of Twi and/or Yorbȕr> http://www.abibitumikasa.com/twiclass.html
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/yorubaclass.html
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

When: Classes online begin the week of March 29th, 2009 (Click here for schedule). Introductory Akan (Twi) and Yoruba meet twice a week for eight (8) classes for a period of four (4) weeks at 7:00PM Eastern.

Introductory Yoruba meets Mondays and Wednesdays at 7:00PM Eastern and Introductory Akan (Twi) meets Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:00PM Eastern. Intermediate

Akan (Twi) and Yoruba meet once a week on Sundays for four (4) weeks 1-3PM Eastern for Twi and 4-6PM Eastern for Yoruba. Advanced Akan (Twi) and Yoruba meet once a week on Saturdays for four (4) weeks 1-3PM Eastern for Twi and 4-6PM Eastern for Yoruba

Where: All Classes Online at FlashChat v4.8.3 Abibitumi Kasa Simulclassroom

How:
For online classes, first sign up for our free forums at Abibitumi Kasa Afrikan Language and Liberation Institutes and Community Networks - Forum Rules
Then you'll be able to access the online member classroom via this link FlashChat v4.8.3 Abibitumi Kasa Simulclassroom or by clicking member classroom on any page

Why: Let us know your reason for wanting to learn Afrikan languages via our Prospective Student Questionnaire http://www.abibitumikasa.com/nsemmisa.pdf

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

View testimonials of current and former students at AKALI Guestbook http://www.abibitumikasa.com/guestbook

Be Sure to Check out our new Forum at http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums

Our market at: http://www.abibitumikasa.com/market and our new Community Network at http://www.abibitumikasa.ning.com

http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

Live Interactive Online and Accra, Ghana Afrikan Language Classes

Register for Free Afrikan Liberation Institute

Sign Up for AKALI Mailing List

Abibitumi Kasa Fundraiser

| 28320|2009-03-24 19:41:50|Tafari khumbaka|FW: South Africa Sees New Hope for HIV/AIDS Epidemic/ Dr. Kofi's AID|

--- On Tue, 3/24/09, Alandas Dobbins wrote:
From: Alandas Dobbins
Subject: FW: South Africa Sees New Hope for HIV/AIDS Epidemic/ Dr. Kofi's AIDS Grant

To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com,
Date: Tuesday, March 24, 2009, 8:09 AM

From: FORKSYAROADS@aol.com [mailto:FORKSYAROADS@aol.com]
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2009 7:50 AM

Subject: Fwd: South Africa Sees New Hope for HIV/AIDS Epidemic/ Dr. Kofi's AIDS Grant

My long time friend and community development understudy, Nana Dr. Kofi Amoah II-Kondwani of Morehouse College School of Alternative Medicine has just received an award of 8.5 millions dollars over five years to teach in partnership with the University of Nkrumah Kamasi Ghana West Africa , courses in AIDS epidemiological technologyto students from throughout the African continent.

Artemus Gaye, great, great, great grandson of the enslaved Prince Ibrahima and Princess Isabella here in Natchez ,isour Ibrahima Isabella Foundationinterested in this project for Liberia ? Let me know and I will hook you up with Dr. Kofi!

Those your persons who attended Dr. Kofi's meditation workshop in Natchez or Jackson, yes, this is the same person. He was recently, enstooled as a Chief in Manso Central District of Ghana.

He also is teaching workshops on culture competency to the various Districts of the Mississippi Department of Health. Some of you have expressed an interests in the meditation and ceremony of becoming a Chief in Ghana . I am working on a session with Dr. Kofi upon one of his many returns to Mississippi in May to June 09.

Ser Seshs Ab Heter-CM Boxley

From: Alaman5375
BCC: FORKSYAROADS
Sent: 3/24/2009 1:46:25 A.M. Central Daylight Time
Subj: FYI: South Africa Sees New Hope for HIV/AIDS Epidemic in New Health Minister

VIDEO MARCH 23, 2009

South Africa Sees New Hope for HIV/AIDS Epidemic in New Health Minister

In an effort to correct years of misinformation being spread on HIV/AIDS in South Africa , the country's new health minister is promoting HIV testing, treatment and frank dialogue. But many challenges lie ahead in managing an epidemic that has spread to nearly one-sixth of the population.

RELATED RESOURCE: Reporter's Notebook: South Africa 's HIV/AIDS Epidemic Made Worse by TB

RELATED RESOURCE: Reporter's Notebook: Race, Apartheid Still Shape Society

VIDEO MARCH 23, 2009

Click Here http://www.pbs.org/newshour/globalhealth/

U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief

The success of PEPFAR is firmly rooted in a commitment to results. Through partnerships between the American people and the people of the countries in which we are privileged to serve- governments, non-governmental organizations including faith-based organizations and community-based organizations, and the private sector- we are building sustainable systems and empowering individuals, communities, and nations to battle HIV/AIDS.

Together, we have acted quickly. We have already obligated 92 percent of the funds initially appropriated to PEPFAR and have expended or outlayed 68 percent of those resources.

But success is not best measured in dollars spent. PEPFAR's success is measured in services provided and lives saved.

Click Here: http://www.pepfar.gov/

Extended Interviews

Online exclusive footage of South Africa 's health minister, an HIV expert and a mining company executive.
SLIDE SHOW MARCH 20, 2009

South Africa's Challenges

Ray Suarez shares his observations of this unique young democracy.
RECENT GLOBAL HEALTH TRIPS
MOST RECENT

South Africa

NewsHour senior correspondent Ray Suarez traveled to South Africa to report on the HIV epidemic, its deadly relationship with TB, and how children orphaned by AIDS build new lives.
PBS GLOBAL HEALTH COVERAGE

NOVA: A Walk to Beautiful

South Africa Considers Male Circumcision as Part of HIV Prevention Plan

Male circumcision, which was recommended in 2007 by the World Health Organization as a prevention method for HIV, is receiving new attention from countries like South Africa that are struggling to fight the epidemic.
UPDATE MARCH 9, 2009

Text Messages Used as AIDS Education Tool

A mobile health project in South Africa is using cell phone text messages to reach people in even the most remote areas of the country to encourage them to get information and counseling on HIV/AIDS.
SLIDE SHOW MARCH 2, 2009

Fighting Polio in Nigeria

Although polio has been wiped out in most of the world, it is a growing problem in India , Pakistan , Afghanistan and Nigeria . NewsHour special correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports from Nigeria on efforts to fight the spread of the disease.
SLIDE SHOW FEBRUARY 27, 2009

Audio Slide Show: 'Design for the Other 90 Percent'

The exhibit "Design for the Other 90 Percent," organized by the Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum and now on display at the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, showcases innovative products aimed at serving the needs of people living in developing countries.

UPDATE FEBRUARY 25, 2009

Study Links Alcohol, Cancer Risk in Women

Drinking even one alcoholic drink per day can increase a woman's risk of developing several types of cancers, according to a new study of nearly 1.3 million women in the UK .

RELATED RESOURCE: In-depth Coverage: Health Beat

UPDATE FEBRUARY 23, 2009

Head of Global Fund Makes Case for Health Aid Amid Economic Crisis

With Congress taking up 2009 foreign operations appropriations this week, the head of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria has been meeting with lawmakers to stress the importance of foreign health aid in tough economic times.

UPDATE FEBRUARY 23, 2009

Reporter's Notebook: Cultural Taboos Around Sex Feed AIDS Epidemic

In his final reporter's notebook from South Africa , Ray Suarez reflects on the entanglement of sex and death in the HIV/AIDS epidemic and the challenges of confronting the issues that no one wants to discuss.

Click Here http://www.pbs.org/newshour/globalhealth/

****

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps! (http://pr.atwola.com/promoclk/100126575x1220085203x1201389322/aol?redir=http:%2F%2Fwww.freecreditreport.com%2Fpm%2Fdefault.aspx%3Fsc%3D668072%26hmpgID%3D62%26bcd%3DMarchfooterNO62)

Feeling the pinch at the grocery store? Make dinner for $10 or less.

| 28321|2009-03-24 22:31:19|Mahari Mengistu|MAHATMA GHANDI|

In order that we not be fools...

Ghandi may have done some good things but we should always keep the truth close at hand:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=afkdi5Q1xRY

HTP,

Mahari

| 28322|2009-03-24 23:02:14|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Barak is a Bantu word|

Asar,

Interesting that you bring up Altaic language because I have been musing over the English words "body" and "carnal". I don't recall if this has been mentioned before. If it has please forgive. Though more research needs to be done, I have a feeling that "body" may have its origins in the Bantu "ba". Here is a definition of the word and notice the quote from Spenser:

Body

Bod"y\, n.; pl. Bodies. [OE. bodi, AS. bodig; akin to OHG. botah. [root]257. Cf. Bodice.]

1. The material organized substance of an animal, whether living or dead, as distinguished from the spirit, or vital principle; the physical person.

Absent in body, but present in spirit. --1 Cor. v. 3

For of the soul the body form doth take. For soul is form, and doth the body make. --Spenser.

And from "ka":

Carnal...
Origin:
1350□1400; ME < L carnālis, equiv. to carn- (s. of carō) flesh + -ālis -al 1

Related forms:
car□nal□i□ty, car□nal□ness, car□nal□ism, noun car□nal□ly, adverb

Also likely, these words:

corpse, carcass, cadaver, carnival

HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Ferg
>
> I am just now seeing this in my inbox. Great investigations as always. I was recently in a conversation with one of my Muslim friends here in Texas and he was giving a presentation on how we need to respect and elevate the Black woman. He of course was giving this lecture under the Islamic, through the NOI of Islam, paradigm. In the course of his discussion he made a claim that the United States was becoming muslim.
>
> As part of his evidence, he used Barack Obama as one of the key variables for his claim. He made the comment that Barack made it to his current seat with an Arabic name: Barack Hussan Obama.
>
> After the discussion I had a conversation with him to critique his lecture and explained that Barack was Bantu and may have origins in the ancient iKami language. We had to explain that a lot of concepts imported into the language and the spiritual system of Islam is in fact African and it would do him some good to investigate further these concepts.
>
> I gave him another example during our brief conversation and the word was UMI which in the Arabic means MOTHER. Well if we recall our Bantu term UMA, it literally means fire place or hearth as a noun.
>
> But the word UMA also means MOTHER as is derived from the concept of the mother's womb being considered as a FIREPLACE with a live, hot coal (KAA, KALA, KARA) inside. We have an equivalent saying in the United States when we meet a pregnant woman and we say, "I see you have a bun in the oven." Again, symbolizing the woman's womb as an oven.

>
> As Ferg noted in his essay on KM.T,
>
> In the Kiswahili-Bantu language,the word JIKO means the cooking place, fireplace, hearth or kitchen. The saying □Somebody has not yet got a fireplace□ means he has not yet got a wife.
>
> In George Theal's book The Beginning of South African History pg 37, he discusses the term UMA as it relates to being a mother in the Xhosa language.
>
> We have to be careful here because the term MA is used universally among languages to mean mother. But given its other meanings, I think this is a solid match and isn't due to sounds developed by children. This is supported by the other meanings of the term UMA as a verb:
>
> □ To ache
> □ To give pain
> □ Cause pain
> □ To be in pain
> □ To sting
> □ To hurt
> □ To bite
> □ To injure
>
> These seem to be derived from the pain a mother goes through while giving birth. The term UMA here is descriptive of this process and may from there symbolized pain in general. Here we may have another play on words. Here is something else that might interest the forum as well, is that the term UMA is in the so-called Altaic languae family. Peep the meanings:
>
> Proto □ Altaic: umV (uma, ume, umi, umo, umu)
> Meaning: fire; to burn
>
> Proto-Turkic: uma-
> Modern Turkic: uma-t, uma-y
>
> Proto-Tungus-Manchu: omV (oma, ome, omi, omo, omu) = hearth
> Oroch: umuxi
> Nanai: oma
>
> As we can see here, this term has spread into the "middle east" and into East Asia. The later could be the result of borrowing due to interactions, but those languages are not my specialty. But I said this stuff to him to show that he can't lay claim to a lot of concepts because they are African.
>
> I had to remind him that Arabic belongs to an African language family, which means ultimately that Africans derived the languages now spoken in the levant and to recapture the essence of those terms, which derived out of the geography, culture and practices of the people, he ultimately has to turn to Africa for understanding.

>
> My friend and I have a private meeting today to go over the other African concepts in Islam and I will definitely show him your paper.
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Sat, 2/21/09, Ferg wrote:
> From: Ferg
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Barak is a Bantu word
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Saturday, February 21, 2009, 10:27 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Hutuapo!
>
> Barak is a Bantu word, not Semitic!
>
> Somo
>
>
>
| 28323|2009-03-24 23:29:39|Mahari Mengistu|Re: (BBC) Cleopatra, Portrait Of A Serial Killer|
Zoweee Ho-ass is such a lowly sham. He would have a little respectability if he modulated his dumbass statements somewhat to show that he at least KNOWS about the information that has been presented to thoroughly support the black Afrakan claims on ancient Kemetic culture. But he truly seems to be oblivious making statements like "the blacks in Egypt don't look anything like the Egyptians". Perhaps, he feels that is his best stance for fear that if he references ANY evidence that the flood gates will open and he would by necessity be OUT! .... OUT of a job.

I wonder if his intellect typifies that of the MEasterner. They are, of course, quite racist but people also think differently... not necessarily more or less inferior/superior just differently. Although, I do think him to be an inferior person.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
>
> Now I don't know who came up with that title, but > it is the title a documentary abotu Cleopatra's sister,
> which was aired on Monday.
>
> Maybe it will turn up on Youtube.
>
> Alex
>
> Egypt and the influence of black Africans debate Hawas vs. Perry Noble > http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UnDIAlLD1UM
>
| 28324|2009-03-25 00:47:35|Mahari|Re: Bantu abstractions of the KHAT|
Attachments :
Hi, Ferg,
I was born in the south-Mississippi - and I've noticed a good deal of Afrakanisms there as I think back on its black culture.
A word which I remember being used colloquially to describe female genitalia was "cat". Perhaps, it evolved from the word "p--sy" or vice verse or perhaps it came from the Bantu word "KAT".

Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
Ambrose Bierce
***
Republicans: The Liars' Hypocrisy Club

-----Original Message-----
From: "Ferg" [egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk]
Date: 03/24/2009 01:40 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT

Note: Original message sent as attachment

Medical Transcription Training
Click here to find Medical Transcription Training programs.

Click Here For More Information

| 28325|2009-03-25 01:03:34|Mahari Mengistu|MAHATMA (Great Soul)?|

What the media didn't tell you:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zQO1uNhw_1s&feature=related

HTP,
Mahari

| 28326|2009-03-25 01:32:53|Asar Imhotep|Re: Bantu abstractions of the KHAT|
Peace Mahari

That may not be a far fetched idea as one might think, as the Ancient Egyptian word for uterus is KHT (spelled with the exact same glyphs as belly, womb, body).

And ironically, the word for VAGINA is K3T (ka.t) [look in the Kahoun Gynecological Papyrus]. This is however written with Gardiner sign D38  .

So is this coincidence, or ancestral memory?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/25/09, Mahari wrote:
From: Mahari
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 25, 2009, 2:47 AM

Hi, Ferg,
I was born in the south-Mississippi - and I've noticed a good deal of Afrakanisms there as I think back on its black culture.
A word which I remember being used colloquially to describe female genitalia was "cat". Perhaps, it evolved from the word "p--sy" or vice verse or perhaps it came from the Bantu word "KAT".

Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .

History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
Ambrose Bierce

***
Republicans: The Liars' Hypocrisy Club

-----Original Message-----
From: "Ferg" [egyptology@ theunit.fsnet. co.uk]
Date: 03/24/2009 01:40 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT

Note: Original message sent as attachment

Medical Transcription Training
Click here to find Medical Transcription Training programs.
Click Here For More Information

| 28327|2009-03-25 08:51:58|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|

Also Mahari, one more thing

Is it not true that the original / aboriginal Jews are from Ethiopia? Is it not true that they are now in Israel being persecuted after finally being recognized as Jews by the Zionists? Racism, most definitely.

Also, all Muslims are not Arabs. I will be the last one to argue with you about the barbarism of the Arabs. No argument there. But let us remember - the Moors were muslims right? Do we discredit their accomplishments? The architecture, science, mathematics, etc? History tells us that the moors (the white mans history) were Arabs... we know better. Our scholars have put in heavy work to bring their true history to light. Thank God for that!

From: Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

> > Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -
> >
> href="http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html">http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli- spokesman- says-we-control- stupid-americans .html
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
> > To: href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
> >
> >
> > Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
> >
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > > > spokeswoman -
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > The response of Tzipora Menache, an

Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > clear:
> >
> > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they
> > (Americans) do to us? We control
Congress, we control the media, we control
> > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > God,
but you can't criticize Israel."
> >
> >
> > >
> > >
> > >
href="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml">http://www.finalcal
l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28328|2009-03-25 08:57:54|Sekmet|LECTURE OF THE MONTH- RETURN OF THE ANCIENT ONES|
"Return of the Ancient Ones"
by EMPRESS VERDIACEE T. GOSTON (Washitaw Nation)
run time: over 3 hrs.
http://www.blackconsciousness.com/sshop/muurpage.html
This is where you must first start when doing real life people research on the Muurs and their presence in the Americas. Contains solid evidence and the actual procession of land. This woman is not some made up story or hearsay. She is a real life person that exists and is recognized by the United Nations. This lecture is a Classic Collectible and will not satisfy any visions of Moorish Granduer, but it does set into motion the idea of massive discussion about the Louisiana Purchase and claims Black people have to any land in the Americas. What is read in books, contracts, treaties and holy ledgers can easily be tampered with, played with, scripted or edited, but these words come from the mouth of a woman that lived the life and walked the walk. See it and save it for generations to come.

Know Black Business. It's right before your eyes!
We can't mind our own business, if we don't have any!
| 28329|2009-03-25 08:59:54|Nnabakyaala Afr?ka|A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage|
This isone response to that horrible letter sent to the masses from Ray Hagins.
http://www.afrovideo.org/play.php?vid=5641
? ? ? ? ? ?
A Race Without Knowledge is Like a Tree Without Roots!

| 28330|2009-03-25 09:05:36|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Fw: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupi|
Also Mahari, one more thing
Is it not true that the original / aboriginal Jews are from Ethiopia? Is it not true that they are now in Israel being persecuted after finally being recognized as Jews by the Zionists? Racism, most definitely.
Also, all Muslims are not Arabs. I will be the last one to argue with you about the barbarism of the Arabs. No argument there. But let us remember - the Moors were muslims right? Do we discredit their accomplishments? The architecture, science, mathematics, etc? History tells us that the moors (the white mans history) were Arabs... we know better. Our scholars have put in heavy work to bring their true history to light. Thank God for that!

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

>
> > Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -

>
>
href="http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html">http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli- spokesman- says-we-control- stupid-americans .html
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009
7:28 PM
> To:
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>
> Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
>
HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> >
> > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > spokeswoman
-
> >
> >
> > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > clear:
> >
> > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they
> > (Americans) do to us? We control
Congress, we control the media, we control

> > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > God,
but you can't criticize Israel."
> >
> >
> > >
> > >
> > >
href="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml">http://www.finalcal
l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28331|2009-03-25 09:20:53|redheathergold|Re: Buddhism in Egypt|
Greetings Family,

I'm somewhat new to this group. I wanted to add that, I've seen photographs (and have copies) of Buddha statues that are not only CLEARLY African (much like you've already shown in the photographs - full lips, and African hair) but the style and lines of the statue appear to be very Egyptian and seem to either have an Egyptian source and /or influence.

Also, on a side note, in the story of Asar, it is said that he went to other parts of the world teaching.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Wonderful site, not just on Buddhism but overall... great information!
>
>
> From: Ahmeer Israel
> Sent: Saturday, March 21, 2009 10:53 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
>
>

> check this link out
>
> http://members.tripod.com/jrmoore1958/buddha.html
>
> The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
> TRUTH is what IS.
>
> --- On Sun, 3/22/09, clyde winters olmec982000@... wrote:
>
>
> From: clyde winters olmec982000@...
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Sunday, March 22, 2009, 12:32 AM
>
>
> Hi Ahmeer
>
> These are some great picture. I may do a film on the history of Southeast Asia, may I use your pictures?
>
> Clyde
>
> --- On Fri, 3/20/09, Ahmeer Israel <ahmeer_israel@
yahoo.com> wrote:
>
>
> From: Ahmeer Israel
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:58 PM
>
>
> Blessings Kindred,
> I was fortunate to make it to Angkor-Wat Cambodia last summer and saw the seven headed serpents (Nagas) and the intense battles inscribed in relief sculptures in this magnificent temple structure. The builders of the temple at Angkor-Wat practiced Hinduism and later converted to Buddhism. In this temple I discovered a statue of Shiva with corn rows or cane rows straight to the back in the same style worn by HIM Emporor Tedwros of Abbashin (Ethiopia) and many of us today this is to say in agreement with this line of discussion. Not to mention many of the inland tribes of Thailand still maintain their Afrakaness with their curly hair and distinctly Afrakan faces.
>

>
> Seven headed serpent
> Shiva
> Shiva
>
>
> The Mani people of Thailand
>
>
> One Pure Love
>
> it appears that the pictures have not properly attached so i have included an attached to this message.
>
> One
>
>
> The TRUTH is not what you think it is!
> TRUTH is what IS.
>
> --- On Fri, 3/20/09, clyde winters <olmec982000@
yahoo.com> wrote:
>
>
> From: clyde winters
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 20, 2009, 11:14 AM
>
>
> Thailand was first settled by Blacks retreating from the Chinese expansion across China into Southeast Asia.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- On Thu, 3/19/09, Joseph Wright
wrote:
>
>
> From: Joseph Wright

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:44
PM

>
>
> Very interesting. .. Thank you!
...makes me wonder... How might this tie-in with the "Black Buddha" of Thailand? There are images I've seen first hand.
>
>
> jew
>
>
> --- On Thu, 3/19/09, clyde winters wrote:
>
> From: clyde winters <olmec982000@yahoo.com>
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Buddhism in Egypt
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 8:44 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
> ---
>
>
>
>
> .
> Asar provided me this reference;
>
> quote:
> ---
>
>
>
> It would seem that Buddha was an Egyptian priest, chased from Memphis by the persecution of Cambyses. This tradition would justify the portrayal of Buddha with woolly hair. Historical documents do not invalidate this tradition There is general agreement today on placing in the sixth century not only Buddha but the whole religious and philosophical movement in Asia with Confucius in China, Zoroaster in Iran. This would confirm the hypothesis of a dispersion of Egyptian priests at that time spreading their doctrine in Asia.□

>
> Diop, The African Origin of Civilization pg 287.
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Mention of Memphis is quite interested because it is here that Petrie found evidence of Buddhist colonist, which he claimed dated back to the Persian period of Egypt (c 525-405BC). he wrote:
>
> "on the right side, at the top is the Tibetan Mongolian, below that the Aryan woman of the Punjab, and at the base a seated figure in Indian attitude with the scarf over the left shoulder. These are the first remains of Indians known on the Mediterranean. Hitherto there have been no material evidences for that connection which is stated to have existed, both by embassies from Egypt and Syria to India, and by the great Buddist mission sent by Asoka as far west as Greece and Cyrene. We seem now to have touched the Indian colony in Memphis, and we may hope for more light on that connection which seems to have been so momentous for Western thought" (p.129).
>
> If Petrie's dating is correct this puts Buddhists in Egypt two hundred years before Asoka, sent Buddhist missionaries to Egypt.
>
> .
>
>
> Clyde
>

| 28332|2009-03-25 09:21:44|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|

I respect your opinion. I am not a muslim, nor a jew, nor a christian. I believe in oneGod / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.

Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.

We also know that it does not take religion to institute religion and enslavement. There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.

I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

>
> Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -

>
>
href="http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html">http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli- spokesman- says-we-control- stupid-americans .html
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009
7:28 PM
> To:
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>
> Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
>
HTP,

> Mahari
>
> --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> >
> > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > spokeswoman
-
> >
> >
> > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > clear:
> >
> > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they
> > (Americans) do to us? We control
Congress, we control the media, we control
> > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > God,
but you can't criticize Israel."
> >
> >
> > >
> > >
> > >
href="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml">http://www.finalcal
l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28333|2009-03-25 09:24:40|Lamar Perryman|Fw: [New Afrikan Independence Online] Fw: [SOA] LECTURE OF THE MONTH|

--- On Tue, 3/24/09, Lamar Perryman wrote:

From: Lamar Perryman
Subject: [New Afrikan Independence Online] Fw: [SOA] LECTURE OF THE MONTH- RETURN OF THE ANCIENT ONES
To: "Group Members" , "Moorish Nationals" , "Israelite Moors" , "North Amexem Observers" , "Yoruba Spirituality" , "Group Members" , "New Afrikan Vodun" , "New Afrikan Independence" , "Uwagboe Ogieva" , "Uwagboe Ogieva" , "Baba Osei Bandele" , "Baba Mwalimu Kabaila" , "Baba Tim Gage" , "Baba Amefika Gueka"
Date: Tuesday, March 24, 2009, 8:22 PM

--- On Tue, 3/24/09, Sekmet <nubian_knight@ verizon.net> wrote:

From: Sekmet <nubian_knight@ verizon.net>
Subject: [SOA] LECTURE OF THE MONTH- RETURN OF THE ANCIENT ONES
To: SOA@yahoogroups. com
Date: Tuesday, March 24, 2009, 5:09 AM

"Return of the Ancient Ones"
by EMPRESS VERDIACEE T. GOSTON (Washitaw Nation)
run time: over 3 hrs.
http://www.blackcon sciousness. com/sshop/ muurpage. html
This is where you must first start when doing real life people research on the Muurs and their presence in the Americas. Contains solid evidence and the actual procession of land. This woman is not some made up story or hearsay. She is a real life person that exists and is recognized by the United Nations. This lecture is a Classic Collectible and will not satisfy any visions of Moorish Granduer, but it does set into motion the idea of massive discussion about the Louisiana Purchase and claims Black people have to any land in the Americas. What is read in books, contracts, treaties and holy ledgers can easily be tampered with, played with, scripted or edited, but these words come from the mouth of a woman that lived the life and walked the walk. See it and save it for generations to come.

Know Black Business. It's right before your eyes!
We can't mind our own business, if we don't have any!

[Non-text portions of this message have been removed]

| 28334|2009-03-25 09:32:02|Ferg|Re: Bantu abstractions of the KHAT|
?
Hi Mahari.
I am in agreement withAsar. I think this is hardwired ancestral memory. Perhaps I did not explain how the term, is what it is. KATI, the middle also refers to the apex of an arch, the place where two sides of an arch meet, hence the word for...
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 7:47 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
>
> Hi, Ferg,
> I was born in the south-Mississippi - and I've noticed a good deal of Afrakanisms there as I think back on its black culture.
> A word which I remember being used colloquially to describe female genitalia was "cat".
> Perhaps, it evolved from the word "p--sy" or vice verse or perhaps it came from the Bantu word "KAT".
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans: The Liars' Hypocrisy Club
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Ferg" [egyptology@ theunit.fsnet. co.uk]
> Date: 03/24/2009 01:40 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment

Medical Transcription Training
Click here to find Medical Transcription Training programs.
Click Here For More Information

| 28335|2009-03-25 09:32:02|Ferg|Re: Barak is a Bantu word|
?
Hi Asar.
Initially I did not see the connections between UMA and the verbs you mentioned, but I see your point and it makes sense to me.With regards to the Arabic language there are many words which have their etymologies in African languages. However Eurocentric scholars tend to belittle African languages in favour of Semitic languages. As you quite rightlysaySemitic languages were first spoken by African people, but sadlyArabs and Eurocentric scholars ignore this, or are not aware of this and never acknowledge this fact openly.I know this is true, for the etymology of manyBantu words in dictionariesare said to have an Arabic input, never the other way round. I've yet to see the etymology of an Arabic wordopenly stated as being derived from an AfricanBantulanguage.However as an example, the prefix MU as in MU-BARAK is an African-Bantu prefix. This is never mentioned in the Arabic language.Even the word MU-SLIM has this prefix.....one who is.

I like the saying 'I see you have a bun in theoven', for a pregnant woman!It explains sovividly everything we have been investigatingabout the KAA. The words you mentioned for fire, heat, hearth in the different languages are quite revealing.
Hope your meeting discussing the African concepts in Islam went well.
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2009 3:29 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Barak is a Bantu word
>
> Peace Ferg
>
> I am just now seeing this in my inbox. Great investigations as always. I was recently in a conversation with one of my Muslim friends here in Texas and he was giving a presentation on how we need to respect and elevate the Black woman. He of course was giving this lecture under the Islamic, through the NOI of Islam, paradigm. In the course of his discussion he made a claim that the United States was becoming muslim.
>
> As part of his evidence, he used Barack Obama as one of the key variables for his claim. He made the comment that Barack made it to his current seat with an Arabic name: Barack Hussan Obama.
>
> After the discussion I had a conversation with him to critique his lecture and explained that Barack was Bantu and may have origins in the ancient iKami language. We had to explain that a lot of concepts imported into the language and the spiritual system of Islam is in fact African and it would do him some good to investigate further these concepts.
>
> I gave him another example during our brief conversation and the word was UMI which in the Arabic means MOTHER. Well if we recall our Bantu term UMA, it literally means fire place or hearth as a noun.
>
> But the word UMA also means MOTHER as is derived from the concept of the mother's womb being considered as a FIREPLACE with a live, hot coal (KAA, KALA, KARA) inside. We have an equivalent saying in the United States when we meet a pregnant woman and we say, "I see you have a bun in the oven." Again, symbolizing the woman's womb as an oven.
>
> As Ferg noted in his essay on KM.T,
>
> In the Kiswahili-Bantu language,the word JIKO means the cooking place, fireplace, hearth or kitchen. The saying Somebody has not yet got a fireplace means he has not yet got a wife.
>
> In George Theal's book The Beginning of South African History pg 37, he discusses the term

UMA as it relates to being a mother in the Xhosa language.

We have to be careful here because the term MA is used universally among languages to mean mother. But given its other meanings, I think this is a solid match and isn't due to sounds developed by children. This is supported by the other meanings of the term UMA as a verb:

To ache
To give pain
Cause pain
To be in pain
To sting
To hurt
To bite
To injure

These seem to be derived from the pain a mother goes through while giving birth. The term UMA here is descriptive of this process and may from there symbolized pain in general. Here we may have another play on words. Here is something else that might interest the forum as well, is that the term UMA is in the so-called Altaic languae family. Peep the meanings:

Proto Altaic: umV (uma, ume, umi, umo, umu)
Meaning: fire; to burn

Proto-Turkic: uma-
Modern Turkic: uma-t, uma-y

Proto-Tungus- Manchu: omV (oma, ome, omi, omo, omu) = hearth
Oroch: umuxi
Nanai: oma

As we can see here, this term has spread into the "middle east" and into East Asia. The later could be the result of borrowing due to interactions, but those languages are not my specialty. But I said this stuff to him to show that he can't lay claim to a lot of concepts because they are African.

I had to remind him that Arabic belongs to an African language family, which means ultimately that Africans derived the languages now spoken in the levant and to recapture the essence of those terms, which derived out of the geography, culture and practices of the people, he ultimately has to turn to Africa for understanding.

My friend and I have a private meeting today to go over the other African concepts in Islam and I will definitely show him your paper.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sat, 2/21/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Barak is a Bantu word
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Saturday, February 21, 2009, 10:27 AM

Hutuapo!
Barak is a Bantu word, not Semitic!
Somo

| 28336|2009-03-25 09:39:58|troy.daly|A New ATLANTIS Discovery !! using the master...lightning !!|
There is a little known website that shows a most unique map w/ coordinates and photo's of the island of Atlantis that will also match the mysterious island in the piri reis map...just so all know....the words on the website are from my human mind,but the location of the island comes from the DIVINE !! ..... http://atlantisdiscoverysite.com .... thank you all for your ancient faith and belief. Troy.....enjoy !!
| 28337|2009-03-25 09:40:11|odhiambo okecth|Fw: [KOL] Fw: Mzee Orinda Ndege; The visit|
Attachments :

--- On Tue, 3/24/09, odhiambo okecth wrote:

Date: Tuesday, March 24, 2009, 2:38 AM

--- On Tue, 3/24/09, odhiambo okecth wrote:Date: Tuesday, March 24, 2009, 2:22 AM Friends,

On Saturday, 21st March 2009, together with Ben Ochoko and Nick Ochoko, we left Nair
1pm destined for Kobala Village.

Our mission was to pay a visit to Mzee Orinda Ndege and see what we can do for him as loving and caring community of Friends. I had talked with the area Chief and he was waiti meet with my delegation.

We arrived at 6pm and met the Chief who apparently was on leave. He called the Acting Chief whom he had briefed about our visit and we drove to where he was. We then agreed to pay a visit to Mzee Orinda the following day, 22nd March 2009 at 9.00am.

With my delegation, we went and spent the night at Kendu Bay. The following day at 9am, we found the Acting Chief waiting for us at Osodo Primary School and together we went to Mzee Orinda's home.

I am giving the report of my journey to those Friends of Orinda who made some contributions to make this journey and undertaking possible. Orinda is the man whose family of 2 wives and 8 children were burnt in their house in Naivasha in January 2008 at the height of internal conflict following the elections of 2007.

Those who might want to contribute to help Mzee Orinda, can join in the Friends of Orinda campaign. Kindly get in touch with me, make your contributions and you will be part of what we are doing in support of Mzee Orinda. We will limit our circulation to Friends of Orinda Campaign only.

Let us all show Mzee Orinda that his loss was not in vain, that God has plans for him, and God will help him some more through our efforts.

Together, let us help this old man.

Odhiambo T Oketch,
CEO KCDN Nairobi,
PO Box 47890.00100,
Nairobi, Kenya.
Tel; 0735 529 126, 0724 365 557,
Email; komarockswatch@ yahoo.com,
http://kcdnkomarock swatch.blogspot. com

| 28338|2009-03-25 09:40:22|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|

I respect your opinion. I am not a muslim, nor a jew, nor a christian. I believe in oneGod / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.
Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.
We also know that it does not take religion to institute religion and enslavement. There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.
I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

>
> Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -

>
>
href="http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html">http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli- spokesman- says-we-control- stupid-americans .html
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009
7:28 PM
> To:
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>
> Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
>
HTP,

> Mahari
>
> --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> >
> > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > spokeswoman
-
> >
> >
> > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > clear:
> >
> > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they
> > (Americans) do to us? We control
Congress, we control the media, we control
> > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > God,
but you can't criticize Israel."
> >
> >
> > >
> > >
> > >
href="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml">http://www.finalcal
l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28339|2009-03-25 12:23:30|Terry Sanders|Re: A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage|

Nnabakyaala Afrika,
Your posting of this video response is unnecessarily inflammatory. Youre using this group to add logs to a fire that legitimately has neither base nor foundation. I love this group because of the knowledge that is imparted by others and obtained by those who seek.
When this group is used to peddle trash, it diminishes its overall effectiveness to the members. The adversary loves divisiveness and youre playing right into their hands. So, if you cannot add anything effective to this group or anything that would edify our ancestors tremendous accomplishments, may I suggest that you utilize other groups that specifically exist for unintelligible trash postings. Hotep!
Terry S.

--- On Wed, 3/25/09, Nnabakyaala Afr?ka wrote:
From: Nnabakyaala Afr?ka
Subject: [Ta_Seti] A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage
To: undisclosed-recipients@nlpi008.prodigy.net
Date: Wednesday, March 25, 2009, 4:37 AM

This isone response to that horrible letter sent to the masses from Ray Hagins.
http://www.afrovideo.org/play.php?vid=5641
? ? ? ? ? ?
A Race Without Knowledge is Like a Tree Without Roots!

| 28340|2009-03-25 16:02:04|Manu Ampim|Historian John Hope Franklin Dies|
http://www.ajc.com/services/content/metro/obits/2009/03/25/john_hope_franklin_obituary.html

Author of ??From Slavery to Freedom,? numerous other works

By JIM AUCHMUTEY

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

Wednesday, March 25, 2009

John Hope Franklin winced when people called him America?s greatest black historian, as many did. It would be more fitting to call him the greatest historian of black America.

In more than 70 years of scholarship, he documented the African-American experience as no one had done before ? a body of work that earned him more than 100 honorary degrees, making him perhaps the most decorated academician of his time.

Franklin, 94, died Wednesday of congestive heart failure at Duke University Hospital in Durham, N.C. He was best known as the author of the groundbreaking chronicle, ?From Slavery to Freedom: A History of African Americans.?

Published in 1947, the book was updated eight times and sold more than 3 million copies. But that was only his most visible achievement.

Starting in 1936 at Fisk University in Nashville, Franklin published hundreds of academic articles and 16 books about African-American and Southern history before ending his career as a professor at Duke. He was part of a generation of historians, including C. Vann Woodward and David Potter, who challenged the racial stereotyping and Lost Cause sentimentality that had dominated the study of Southern history.

Unlike earlier historians, for instance, Franklin viewed the Civil War as more of a liberation than a defeat for the region. ?It had been delivered from the domination of an institution that had stifled its economic development and rendered completely ineffective its intellectual life,? he wrote.

Franklin challenged prevailing thought outside the ivy walls as well. Early in his career, he helped research the lawsuit that Thurgood Marshall and the NAACP took to the Supreme Court in 1954 to overturn public school segregation in Brown v. Board of Education.

Decades later, he went to Capitol Hill to testify against the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Robert Bork, whom he saw as an enemy of civil rights. In the 1990s, President Bill Clinton appointed Franklin chairman of his national commission on race relations.

Franklin?s activism was rooted in the indignities of his personal experience.

Born in 1915 in Oklahoma, Franklin was the son of a lawyer and a schoolteacher who named him John Hope after the president of Atlanta University. The family was moving to Tulsa in 1921 when one of the worst race riots in American history broke out and Mr. Franklin?s law office was burned down. He worked out of a tent for months.

Franklin planned to follow his father into law when he went away to college at Fisk. Instead, he fell under the sway of a white history professor, Theodore Currier, who inspired him to change disciplines and enroll at Harvard, then loaned him $500 when he was accepted. He earned his doctorate there in 1941.

Holding a degree from a prestigious university didn?t shield Franklin from racial insults.

When he returned south to teach at St. Augustine?s College in Raleigh, N.C., he caused a stir by walking into the whites-only state archives. It had never occurred to anyone there that a black scholar might want to use the archives.

Franklin was given a room of his own to work in, safely segregated from the other scholars.

It was one of many such slights over the years. After Pearl Harbor, Franklin attempted to volunteer for a Navy desk job but was turned down because of his skin color. As president of the Southern Historical Association, he organized a convention in Memphis but declined to attend because he couldn?t stay in the segregated headquarters hotel.

When he was named history chairman at Brooklyn College ? the first black man to head a history department at a major, predominantly white college ? scores of real estate agents refused to show houses to him and his wife.

Despite such episodes, Franklin?s work remained remarkably free of anger or ideology. ?He has never bowed to the pressure of fashions and the propaganda of black nationalism,? Woodward, the eminent historian of the South, said in 1991.

Franklin had published only one book when editor Alfred Knopf approached him in the 1940s about writing a history of Negro Americans. Franklin didn?t want to do it at first; the subject seemed too broad. But he acquiesced, in part because no comprehensive history existed.

The result, ?From Slavery to Freedom,? was ?the story of the strivings of the nameless millions who have sought adjustment in a new and sometimes hostile world,? as Franklin put it in the preface.

Franklin wrote and edited many other books during a career that took him from St. Augustine?s to North Carolina Central (1943) to Howard University (1947) to Brooklyn College (1956) to the University of Chicago (1964). One of the best received works, ?The Militant South? (1956), seemed particularly relevant; it explored the antebellum roots of the region?s martial spirit and appetite for violence, which were again rearing their heads during the civil rights struggle.

After years of teaching in the North, Franklin moved back South in 1980 and eventually took professorships in Duke?s history and law departments. The move suited him. Franklin cut a distinguished figure, with his erect 6-foot frame, thin mustache and courtly manners, and he found the gentler pace of Southern life more to his liking.

?The South, as a place, is as attractive to blacks as it is to whites,? he explained in 1995. ?Blacks, even when they left the South, didn?t stop having affection for it. They just couldn?t make it there. Then they found the North had its problems, too, so you look for a place of real ease and contentment where you can live as a civilized human being. That?s the South?. It?s home.?

Franklin lived in Durham with his former college sweetheart and wife of 59 years, Aurelia, a librarian who died in 1999. Their only child, John W. Franklin, became a program director at the Smithsonian Institution.

| 28341|2009-03-25 16:59:46|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't worry Israel, Americans are stupid|

Mahari -

I respect your opinion. I am not a Muslim, nor a Jew, nor a Christian. I believe in oneGod / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a Muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.

Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.

We also know that it does not take religion to institute racism and enslavement. There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.

I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.
| 28342|2009-03-25 18:03:55|Asar Imhotep|Re: Barak is a Bantu word|
Greetings Ferg

It seems to me that the convention for words in Bantu languages is to have an initial concept that is first recognized physically, then to have derivatives of meaning based off of that initial concept for as much as they can expand it as possible.

For instance the word SIMBA in Kikongo initially means to "hold up." It really is alluding to the power or ability to hold something up, so it means strength. Well as humans we use our arms to "hold up" something, so we also use our arms (hands) to "touch" (another meaning of SIMBA). We also use our arms to bless people in many ways (another literal meaning). We can do that by lifting our arms in prayer, giving gifts, providing food, building shelter, to fetch water, to give water, etc. SIMBA also means to "keep" and also to "retain." Again, we can see these meanings in the context of arms "holding" something.

When we suffix a- with i- we get SIMBI which has the following meanings:

- a keeper, a watch over
- someone with power to protect
- a liviing power/energy that holds up everything

The concept of the power/strength to hold something is expanded further. Again, we also use are arms for protection: either with bare hands or with a weapon. In order to protect, you need "power" to do so. Not just politically, but a physical power.

When we pay attention to this convention, it gives us clues into how integral the overall philosophy of African people, the Bantu in particular, is expressed in their daily lives. They could have easily thought of other words to convey that message. But they chose not to. This forces the mind to expand its understanding of things as if they were trying to force you not to be miopic in your thinking: trying to convey the notion that there are many layers to all things in life and that all life expands and is rooted in a central principle. This seems to be the case in the ancient Egyptian language and why the same word can have so many meanings.

This is a more holistic approach to viewing the world and it is codified in their languages. We can tell if a concept has been borrowed from one language to another, at least in the Bantu sense, if we do not find this convention in the language. For instance, if UMI in the Arabic ONLY means mother, then we can assume it is a borrowed term, because they only heard that meaning. If UMA in the Altaic languages only mean FIRE or HEARTH, but doesn't mean MOTHER, than we can assume it was borrowed. If so, it was probably a result of trade with African metallurgists. If it is in fact it is a word that is not the result of trading, then it could be a fossil from a paleo-African language in which the Bantu languages retained all of its meanings.

SIDENOTE: I wonder if the Egyptian MU.T meaning mother is the Paleo form of UMA (ume, umo, umi, etc.)? I don't see the /w/ sound/glyph in any rendetion of the word MU.T and we know in African languages where there is an Egyptian suffix t- that that the /t/ is dropped when pronounced in the other African languages.

The African vulture sign is simply M.T, but some automatically put it as MW.T, but in the dictionary entry for mother, I don't see the W stressed in any manner. after the vulture sign. Budge entry 294b, there is an alternative spelling of M.T using the owl sign, followed by loaf of bread and a female determinative. I'm guessing that Egyptologists just put the U sound inbetween MUT, when it could actually be UMA (umi, ume, umo, umu, etc.).

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 3/25/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Barak is a Bantu word
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, March 25, 2009, 6:04 AM

?

Hi Asar.
Initially I did not see the connections between UMA and the verbs you mentioned, but I see your point and it makes sense to me.With regards to the Arabic language there are many words which have their etymologies in African languages. However Eurocentric scholars tend to belittle African languages in favour of Semitic languages. As you quite rightlysaySemitic languages were first spoken by African people, but sadlyArabs and Eurocentric scholars ignore this, or are not aware of this and never acknowledge this fact openly.I know this is true, for the etymology of manyBantu words in dictionariesare said to have an Arabic input, never the other way round. I've yet to see the etymology of an Arabic wordopenly stated as being derived from an AfricanBantulanguage.However as an example, the prefix MU as in MU-BARAK is an African-Bantu prefix. This is never mentioned in the Arabic language.Even the word MU-SLIM has this prefix.....one who is.
I like the saying 'I see you have a bun in theoven', for a pregnant woman!It explains sovividly everything we have been investigatingabout the KAA. The words you mentioned for fire, heat, hearth in the different languages are quite revealing.
Hope your meeting discussing the African concepts in Islam went well.
Somo

| 28343|2009-03-25 19:49:47|Tafari khumbaka|03-28-09, TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset Event|

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

March 25,2009

Greetings!

You are invited to a webinar on Saturday March 28, 2009-- 7:30pm-9pm. Please pass the invitation to friends and family. Thankyou.

tic Spirituality

Join us for a Webinar on March 28

Space is limited.
Reserve your Webinar seat now at:
https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/922393813

Over a hundred thousand books have been written about Kamtic (Ancient Egyptian) spirituality and religion, yet there are hardly any books--with the exception of the works by Ra Un Nefer Amen--that give practical instruction for understanding and practicing it.

Unawares to most people, the spiritual and religious practices of all cultures are success systems.They are methods for harnessing the powers of the mind, psyche and spirit for the enhancement of man's ability to overcome deficiencies in available resources and obstructions to the realization of life's objectives.Simply put, they are means of exerting "mind over matter" abilities.The power of the mind, psyche and spirit is harnessed through prayer, meditation, ritual and other "psychic" or "spiritual" means.

Kamit (Ancient Egypt) owes its success in establishing the world's most sophisticated civilization to its mastery of the science of spirituality applied to daily living.It enabled its citizens to create, thousands of years in advanced of most other nations, a civilization that spanned over four thousand years, and that gave the world the arts and science of government, literature, medicine, architecture, mathematics, writing, philosophy, spirituality, etc.

In the "Kamitic Spirituality" webinar, Ra Un Nefer Amen, world renown author of Metu Neter, Maat 11 Laws of God, the Metu Neter oracle, and many other books on Kamitic spirituality, will give you the framework for understanding and practicing Kamitic spirituality.You will be introduced to the teachings and practices that have been used by the Ausar Auset Society for the past 36 years in over 30 cities (chapters) around the world to recreate the Kamitic spiritual way of life today.You too can know benefit through our distance learning courses, at your own time table and in the privacy and convenience of your home, from the principles that built the world's greatest civilization on earth.You will be able to implement these teachings by your self or with your own study group.

Title: Kamitic Spirituality

Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009

Time: 7:30 PM - 9:00 PM EDTAfter registering you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the Webinar.

System Requirements

PC-based attendees
Required: Windows 2000, XP Home, XP Pro, 2003 Server, Vista

Macintosh-based attendees
Required: Mac OS X 10.4 (Tiger) or newer

Register as soon as possible. Take time to check your audio system with our onsite sound diagnostic program to avoid problems hearing the lecture.

Thank you for attending our webinars and bringing your friends along. Let's work together to improve the world's well being.

Sincerely, Queen Mother Merisa Amen

TAUI International

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset

Forward email

SafeUnsubscribe®
This email was sent to tafari_sudra@yahoo.com by ausar
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with Safe

TAUI International Enterprises & Ausar Auset | 1100 Albemarle Road | Brooklyn | NY | 11218

| 28344|2009-03-25 19:50:43|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|

Again you are right. Christianity is guilty of the same and I think is the most hypocritical of all. Yes, I have heard Farrakhan speak and I do admire much of what he says. However, I think it is important to develop a certain level of subtlety when you need to express or describe a certain group of people. The consequence of not having this "level of subtlety" is a verbal smash in the face. It also - right or wrong - makes people tend to distrust you. I am not saying that some of the things he has said are not true. But it really is not always what you say but HOW you say it. That is not being disingenuous; it is being clever and sophisticated. And it has its benefits.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:

>

> I respect your opinion. I am not a muslim, nor a jew, nor a christian. I believe in one God / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.

>

> Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.

>

> We also know that it does not take religion to institute religion and enslavement. There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.

>

> I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.

>

>

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM

> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

>

>

> You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.

> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> >
> > Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -
> >
> > http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
> >
> >
> > Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> > >
> > > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > > spokeswoman -
> > >
> > >
> > > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > > clear:
> > >
> > > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they

> > > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > > > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > > God, but you can't criticize Israel."
> > >
> > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml
> > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > >
> > >
>
| 28345|2009-03-25 20:09:31|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Bantu abstractions of the KHAT|
Well, it could be. I am REALLY fascinated by the possibility of the potential of Afrakan genetics or genetic/ancestral memory. Wouldn't it be interesting to encounter an Afrakan whose ancestral line could be traced all the way back to the beginning of humanity □ without outside genetic interference?
However, it could also be that it is simply a continuance of the Afrakan culture in the US. In fact, in this instance I think that is the case.
Another word that has traveled to American South is □gubbers□ which means □peanuts□. In an Afrakan language □ I don't recall which □ it is basically the same: gubbas. I may have misspelled it. But you get the point. And there are other such words. I would have to research them to notate them.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
>
> Hi Mahari.
>
> I am in agreement with Asar. I think this is hardwired ancestral memory. Perhaps I did not explain how the term, is what it is. KATI, the middle also refers to the apex of an arch, the place where two sides of an arch meet, hence the word for...
>
> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 7:47 AM

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
>
>
> Hi, Ferg,
> I was born in the south-Mississippi - and I've noticed a good deal of Afrakanisms there as I think back on its black culture.
> A word which I remember being used colloquially to describe female genitalia was "cat". Perhaps, it evolved from the word "p--sy" or vice verse or perhaps it came from the Bantu word "KAT".
>
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans: The Liars' Hypocrisy Club
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Ferg" [egyptology@...]
> Date: 03/24/2009 01:40 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
> ---
> Medical Transcription Training
> Click here to find Medical Transcription Training programs.
> Click Here For More Information
>

| 28346|2009-03-26 08:09:30|Ferg|Asar Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA|

Asar apologies,

Sorry I lost your last email to me by mistakebut still remember the gist of it. With regards to the KAA symbol which I analysed, one of the main idea was to carry a load apart from the various other concepts discussed. I must agreethe rendering you give with the various examplesof carrying and holding up are in accord with the symbol.

I've been looking at the noun SIMBA from the Shona-Bantu point of view and from my end it does signify strength, force, power, authority as you said. It is derived from the verb -SIMBA, which means to be strong, healthy, powerful, constant. In the Kiswahili-Bantu language SIMBA give similar meanings to the Shona-Bantu, moreover SIMBA means a lion, no doubtone might see the connections.What is interesting is that SIMBI in Shona means iron, and also charcoal! What does one make of this? What a coincidence, for charcoal is KAA.

Also from the Oshindonga-Bantu language, MU-SIMBA is a pregnant woman and U-SIMBAis pregnancy, which meanscarrying a load. Also SIMBA in Lingala means to seize, hold firmly and SIMBA means a lion.In Luganda-Bantu SIMBA means to plant, stick upright in the ground, weigh heavily upon. In Chchewa SIMBA means to make marks, tribal tatoo marks.....no doubt this reflects the characteristic of a people.

With regards to UMA, this may be interesting as the Shona word for mother is AMAI or just MAI. Motherhood is given as UMAI, the state of being a mother. I I have not yet examined the Ancient Egyptian form as yet to determine whether as you said, MW.T should be UMA.TStill looking into this.
Somo
| 28347|2009-03-26 09:00:12|cristofori whitakara|Re: Bantu abstractions of the KHAT| visiting the schomburgh in harlem, new york i saw the word "NGUBA" in a book with the title Africanism in American English. It may be this one as i saw the book over 10yrs ago Twum-Akwaboah, Edward.
From pidginization to creolization of Africanisms in Black American English / Edward Twum-Akwaboah.
[Los Angeles : University of California, Los Angeles, 1973]
or Africanisms in Afro-American language varieties / edited by Salikoko S. Mufwene, with the assistance of Nancy Condon.
Athens : University of Georgia Press, c1993.
or
Turner, Lorenzo Dow.
Africanisms in the Gullah dialect [by] Lorenzo D. Turner.
New York, Arno Press, 1969.

--- On Wed, 3/25/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:

> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, March 25, 2009, 11:09 PM
>
> Well, it could be. I am REALLY fascinated by the possibility of the potential of Afrakan genetics or genetic/ancestral memory. Wouldn't it be interesting to encounter an Afrakan whose ancestral line could be traced all the way back to the beginning of humanity • without outside genetic interference?
> However, it could also be that it is simply a continuance of the Afrakan culture in the US. In fact, in this instance I think that is the case.
> Another word that has traveled to American South is “gubbers‿ which means “peanuts‿. In an Afrakan language • I don't recall which • it is basically the same: gubbas. I may have misspelled it. But you get the point. And there are other such words. I would have to research them to notate them.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hi Mahari.
> >
> > I am in agreement with Asar. I think this is hardwired ancestral memory. Perhaps I did not explain how the term, is what it is. KATI, the middle also refers to the apex of an arch, the place where two sides of an arch meet, hence the word for...

>
> Somo
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 7:47 AM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
>
>
> Hi, Ferg,
> I was born in the south-Mississippi - and I've noticed a good deal of Afrakanisms there as I think back on its black culture.
> A word which I remember being used colloquially to describe female genitalia was "cat". Perhaps, it evolved from the word "p--sy" or vice verse or perhaps it came from the Bantu word "KAT".
>
>
> Worldwide Freedom, Equality and Justice for the BLACK WOMAN....
> FREE INDIA'S BLACKS..... .
>
> History: An account mostly false, of events mostly unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
> Ambrose Bierce
> ***
> Republicans: The Liars' Hypocrisy Club
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: "Ferg" [egyptology@ ...]
> Date: 03/24/2009 01:40 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of the KHAT
>
> Note: Original message sent as attachment
>
> ---------- --------- --------- --------- --------- --------- -
> Medical Transcription Training
> Click here to find Medical Transcription Training programs.
> Click Here For More Information
>

| 28348|2009-03-26 09:03:26|Asar Imhotep|Re: Asar Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA|

Greetings Ferg

That is fascinating. I just sent you a copy of Dr. K Bunseki Fu-Kiau's Simba Simbi: Hold up that which holds you up. I think you will find it interesting. I provide it so you can have an initiated African's perspective of the term, versus what you might read in a dictionary. You will find that SIMBI is the God principle, a mothering principle, that gives everything its unique characteristics (that hold up that which we call creation).

I need to look into this SIMBI being charcoal as well. This African fire philosophy is very interesting. I'm thinking of doing a work on just that subject. I have tons of references across the continent concerning the African fire philosophy.

What I want to also ensure is that our comparisons of the term UMA is not considered a nursery word. Usually when doing the comparative method you try to avoid nursery words and onematopea as these can be derived independent of the language's origin.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Thu, 3/26/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Asar Re: [Ta_Seti] Bantu abstractions of KAA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 26, 2009, 10:03 AM

Asar apologies,
Sorry I lost your last email to me by mistakebut still remember the gist of it. With regards to the KAA symbol which I analysed, one of the main idea was to carry a load apart from the various other concepts discussed. I must agreethe rendering you give with the various examplesof carrying and holding up are in accord with the symbol.
I've been looking at the noun SIMBA from the Shona-Bantu point of view and from my end it does signify strength, force, power, authority as you said. It is derived from the verb -SIMBA, which means to be strong, healthy, powerful, constant. In the Kiswahili-Bantu language SIMBA give similar meanings to the Shona-Bantu, moreover SIMBA means a lion, no doubtone might see the connections.What is interesting is that SIMBI in Shona means iron, and also charcoal! What does one make of this? What a coincidence, for charcoal is KAA.
Also from the Oshindonga-Bantu language, MU-SIMBA is a pregnant woman and U-SIMBAis pregnancy, which meanscarrying a load. Also SIMBA in Lingala means to seize, hold firmly and SIMBA means a lion.In Luganda-Bantu SIMBA means to plant, stick upright in the ground, weigh heavily upon. In Chchewa SIMBA means to make marks, tribal tatoo marks.....no doubt this reflects the characteristic of a people.
With regards to UMA, this may be interesting as the Shona word for mother is AMAI or just MAI. Motherhood is given as UMAI, the state of being a mother. I I have not yet examined the Ancient Egyptian form as yet to determine whether as you said, MW.T should be UMA.TStill looking into this.

Somo

| 28349|2009-03-26 10:04:06|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
First of all, I don?t know why my email came through 3 or 4 times... and I sent it 3 days ago. My apologies for that to the members.
Secondly, I can understand your sentiment. Most of the people on this forum are truth seekers, and are knowledgeable or are seeking knowledge. For that we should all be commended. Unfortunately, most of our people, in this country in particular, are deaf dumb and blind to what is really going on. Not to mention our history, and the true nature of our people. Marcus Garvey was not exactly a poet, but he moved the masses of our people. The minister is reaching the people our "successful and educated" neglect to reach back and help when they become empowered. The ones in prison, and on the corner selling drugs. Passive and delicate rhetoric will do nothing for their kind. And we as a people have a responsibility to them as our ancestors paved the way for us. Are you aware that the nation requires its members to go back to the root and study their origins, much of what is discussed here on this forum?
You stated before, "both groups culture is based is based in racism and enslavement - and both of them make me sick." This, to some, would be considered very strong verbiage and very offensive. Not me, because I believe it will take nothing less than a swift kick in the you know what to get the black people of the world back on the right track.
Thanks for being open in the discussion and sharing your views with me.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 7:50 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

Again you are right. Christianity is guilty of the same and I think is the most hypocritical of all. Yes, I have heard Farrakhan speak and I do admire much of what he says. However, I think it is important to develop a certain level of subtlety when you need to express or describe a certain group of people. The consequence of not having this "level of subtlety" is a verbal smash in the face. It also - right or wrong - makes people tend to distrust you. I am not saying that some of the things he has said are not true. But it really is not always what you say but HOW you say it. That is not being disingenuous; it is being clever and sophisticated. And it has its benefits.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

>
> I respect your opinion. I am not a muslim, nor a jew, nor a christian. I believe in one God / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.

>
> Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.

>
> We
also know that it does not take religion to institute religion and enslavement. There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.
>
> I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009
9:38 PM
> To:
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>
> You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> ---
In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> >
> > Its interesting that
"one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -
> >
> >
href="http://www.daily.pk/world/americas/9334-israeli-spokesman-says-we-control-stupid-americans.html">http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli- spokesman- says-we-control- stupid-americans .html
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent:

Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
> > To:
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
> >
> >
> > Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In
Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> > >
> > > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli
> > >
spokeswoman -
> > >
> > >
> > > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and > > > clear:
> > >
> > > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You
> > >
see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they > > > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > > > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > > God, but you can't criticize Israel."
> > >
> > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >

title="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml CTRL + Click to follow link" href="http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5692.shtml">http://www.finalcal l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28350|2009-03-26 10:05:45|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Cuban medical school scholarship program|

Cuba is offering free full scholarships to 500 African Americans pursuing medical degrees in concert with a program established by the nation of Islam - Please pass this on to anyone you think may be interested.

In the spirit of interfaith cooperation, the Nation of Islam will be working with the program through its North American administrator, the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), and its ?Pastors for Peace? project led by Rev. Lucius Walker Jr. The Nation will also partner with Christ Universal Temple in Chicago, which shares a mutual goal of increasing the level of academic preparedness of students entering medical school.

The medical school curriculum in Cuba includes a 12-week intensive Spanish language program for those who need it. The program is based on intensive advising and tutoring designed to help every student succeed. Students must pass competency exams at appropriate points in their course of study.

The six-year medical school program, which follows the pre-med program, begins every September and is divided into 12 semesters. Students study at the LASMS campus for the first two years, and then go to another of Cuba?s 21 medical schools, which are located throughout the island, to complete their studies. The Cuban medical training model combines theory and practice and is oriented toward primary care, community medicine and hands-on internships, according to IFCO?s website.

The monetary worth of 500 full scholarships, a cost of $250,000 each was significant, he added. The free study is a stark contrast to statistics that show most doctors graduate with student loan debt from $250,000 to $650,000.

Click the link below for the full article -

http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5706.shtml

| 28351|2009-03-26 10:06:11|Nnabakyaala Afr?ka|My Humble Apologies|
Greetings,
If the link that was emailed offended anyone, I humbly apologize. We all have choices to read or not to read a message or click on a link and go to it and watch it. But again, if the link was offensive and inflammatory, that was not the intent. I humbly accept the correction.

I have received quite a few emails from sisters and brothers that received the offensive email from Mr. Hagins and we all have been a bit upset about the matter. We have all responded in different ways. The video was a response from a brother that respects both parties involved.
****
****
To Terry S.
Its time to put things into perspective. We have our differences but I would never send out an email to be intentionally malicious towards you or anyone else. Please accept my apology. I know Maat and I know how to take a correction and MOVE on. Everyone makes mistakes and no one is perfect.Please learn my character.
If you want to communicate one on one, I am available but please don't judge me so harshly.
Nnabakyaala Afrika
? ? ? ? ? ?

| 28352|2009-03-26 10:13:45|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Come & Get Your Delectable Desserts!|

all vegan!!!!!, tua/thanks

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Thu, 3/26/09, Meris All Natural wrote:
From: Meris All Natural
Subject: Come & Get Your Delectable Desserts!
To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
Date: Thursday, March 26, 2009, 12:04 PM

Having problems viewing this message? Click here to view it on the web.

Place Your Order Today- Contact Us:

Ph. 404-944-0317

Meri's Is Happy to Announce:

Our participation in the Black Vegetarian Society of Georgia's (BVSGA) Annual "Meat Out"/Vegetarian Food & Wholistic Health Fair. This event will take place on Sunday March 29th, 2009 from 1pm to 7pm at:

Atlanta Area Technical College

merisallnatural@hotmail.com

Visit Us Online at www.merisallnatural.com

Why Meri's All Natural?

Desserts are:

- Dairy-Free
- No eggs
- No butter
- No artificial flavoring
- Made w/organic & natural ingredients
- Delicious & tastelike mama's & grandma's
- Guilt-less
- Diabetic friendly
- The Better & Healthier

Alternative

-

The Cleveland L. Dennard Conference Center

Atlanta GA 30310

If You Haven't Tried Meri's Desserts...

You're in for a Treat!

Get ready to experience your favorite dessert (butter pound cake, lemony glazed cake, apple pie...)and they'reALL VEGAN! You won't have the guilt of eating desserts made with processed ingredients or additives and preservatives, but you will enjoythe same delectable taste you're accustomed to.
If you have already experienced Meri's Delectable desserts, you will be pleased to know that this Sunday you can place orders forall of your special events: Baby Showers, Bridal Showers, Birthdays, Office parties, Graduations, Luncheons, School Events, Anniversaries etc...whatever the occassion! Let Meri's make your event sweeter!
Someitems that will be featured this Sunday:

- Lemony-Lemon Pound Cake
- Mama's Peach Cobbler
- Carrot Cake
- Chocolate Layer Cake
- Apple Pie
- Banana Nut Cake

How YOU will benefit by attending the Meat Out:

Not only will you be able to obtain some of *Meri's All Naturaldelectable treats, you will also benefit from a host of other activities such as Afrisalsa Lessons, Drum Circle, Belly Dancing, Health Screenings the Raw & Cooked food experiene and other surprises! If you would like more information email us at merisallnatural@hotmail.comor visit us at www.merisallnatural.com.
Hope to see you there!

Watch for our monthly newsletter beginningnext month with special offers and discounts!

Visit Our Website For More Info

Forward this email to a Friend

One-Click Unsubscribe
This email was sent to tafari_sudra@yahoo.com, by merisallnatural@hotmail.com

Update Address/Profile | Unsubscribe | Privacy Policy

Powered By TRY IT FREE
ELITEEMAIL.COM
The #1 Email Solutions Provider

Meris All Natural | P.O. Box 5496 | Douglasville | GA | US | 30134

| 28353|2009-03-26 13:13:33|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Cuban medical school scholarship program|
This is commendable and substantive. This will produce worthwhile benefits - something more than talk.
Thanks for the information.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Cuba is offering free full scholarships to 500 African Americans pursuing medical degrees in concert with a program established by the nation of Islam - Please pass this on to anyone you think may be interested.
>
> In the spirit of interfaith cooperation, the Nation of Islam will be working with the program through its North American administrator, the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), and its "Pastors for Peace" project led by Rev. Lucius Walker Jr. The Nation will also partner with Christ Universal Temple in Chicago, which shares a mutual goal of increasing the level of academic preparedness of students entering medical school.
>
> The medical school curriculum in Cuba includes a 12-week intensive Spanish language program for those who need it. The program is based on intensive advising and tutoring designed to help every student succeed. Students must pass competency exams at appropriate points in their course of study.
>
> The six-year medical school program, which follows the pre-med program, begins every September and is divided into 12 semesters. Students study at the LASMS campus for the first two years, and then go to another of Cuba's 21 medical schools, which are located throughout the island, to complete their studies. The Cuban medical training model combines theory and practice and is oriented toward primary care, community medicine and hands-on internships, according to IFCO's website.
>
> The monetary worth of 500 full scholarships, a cost of $250,000 each was significant, he added. The free study is a stark contrast to statistics that show most doctors graduate with student loan debt from $250,000 to $650,000.
>
> Click the link below for the full article -
>
> http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5706.shtml
>
| 28354|2009-03-26 16:38:12|Lamar Perryman|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
Everyone wants to Rule the world. This is especially true of institutions no matter what they are based in. (Politics, Religion, Tribalism, Racism, Gender, Nationalism, Science, Evolution etc.)
The question and point is how.
Then there are some peoples who simply want to Rule Their Own Lives.

--- On Thu, 3/26/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:

From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 26, 2009, 3:39 AM

First of all, I dont know why my email came through 3 or 4 times... and I sent it 3 days ago. My apologies for that to the members.
Secondly, I can understand your sentiment. Most of the people on this forum are truth seekers, and are knowledgeable or are seeking knowledge. For that we should all be commended. Unfortunately, most of our people, in this country in particular, are deaf dumb and blind to what is really going on. Not to mention our history, and the true nature of our people. Marcus Garvey was not exactly a poet, but he moved the masses of our people. The minister is reaching the people our "successful and educated" neglect to reach back and help when they become empowered. The ones in prison, and on the corner selling drugs. Passive and delicate rhetoric will do nothing for their kind. And we as a people have a responsibility to them as our ancestors paved the way for us. Are you aware that the nation requires its members to go back to the root and study their origins, much of what is discussed here on this forum?
You stated before, "both groups culture is based is based in racism and enslavement - and both of them make me sick." This, to some, would be considered very strong verbiage and very offensive.. Not me, because I believe it will take nothing less than a swift kick in the you know what to get the black people of the world back on the right track.
Thanks for being open in the discussion and sharing your views with me.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 7:50 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

Again you are right. Christianity is guilty of the same and I think is the most hypocritical of all.
Yes, I have heard Farrakhan speak and I do admire much of what he says. However, I think it is important to develop a certain level of subtlety when you need to express or describe a certain group of people. The consequence of not having this "level of subtlety" is a verbal smash in the face. It also - right or wrong - makes people tend to distrust you. I am not saying that some of the things he has said are not true. But it really is not always what you say but HOW you say it. That is not being disingenuous; it is being clever and sophisticated. And it has its benefits.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
>
> I respect your opinion. I am not a muslim, nor a jew, nor a christian. I believe in one God / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.
>
> Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.
>
> We also know that it does not take religion to institute religion and enslavement.

There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.
>
> I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>
> You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> >
> > Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -
> >
> > http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli- spokesman- says-we-control-stupid-americans .html
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
> >
> >
> > Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari

> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> > >
> > > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > > spokeswoman -
> > >
> > >
> > > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > > clear:
> > >
> > > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they > > > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > > > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > > God, but you can't criticize Israel."
> > >
> > >
> > > > > > >
> > > > > > >
> > > > > > > http://www.finalcal l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > > > > > >
> > > > > > >
> > > > > > >

Much respect,

E.

Quoting Nnabakyaala Afr?ka <nnabakyaala.afrika@gmail.com>:

>
> Greetings,
>
> If the link that was emailed offended anyone, I humbly apologize. We all > have choices to read or not to read a message or click on a link and go to > it and watch it. But again, if the link was offensive and inflammatory, > that was not the intent. I humbly accept the correction.
>
> I have received quite a few emails from sisters and brothers that received > the offensive email from Mr. Hagins and we all have been a bit upset about > the matter. We have all responded in different ways. The video was a > response from a brother that respects both parties involved.
>
>
>
****
> **********
>
> To Terry S.
>
> Its time to put things into perspective. We have our differences but I > would never send out an email to be intentionally malicious towards you or > anyone else. Please accept my apology. I know Maat and I know how to take > a correction and MOVE on. Everyone makes mistakes and no one is perfect.
> Please learn my character.
>
> If you want to communicate one on one, I am available but please don't judge > me so harshly.
>
>
>
>
>
> Nnabakyaala Afrika
>
>
> ? ? ? ? ? ?

--
"When I say US I refer to a covenant, one has with the self, an ancient inner governance..." EM 2003.
| 28356|2009-03-26 21:53:38|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'|
You are true, and hence the situation of black people around the world.

From: Lamar Perryman
Sent: Thursday, March 26, 2009 1:41 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

Everyone wants to Rule the world. This is especially true of institutions no matter what they are based in. (Politics, Religion, Tribalism, Racism, Gender, Nationalism, Science, Evolution etc.)
The question and point is how.
Then there are some peoples who simply want to Rule Their Own Lives.

--- On Thu, 3/26/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

> From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Thursday, March 26, 2009, 3:39 AM
>
> First of all, I dont know why my email came through 3 or 4 times... and I sent it 3 days ago. My apologies for that to the members.
> Secondly, I can understand your sentiment. Most of the people on this forum are truth seekers, and are knowledgeable or are seeking knowledge. For that we should all be commended. Unfortunately, most of our people, in this country in particular, are deaf dumb and blind to what is really going on. Not to mention our history, and the true nature of our people. Marcus Garvey was not exactly a poet, but he moved the masses of our people. The minister is reaching the people our "successful and educated" neglect to reach back and help when they become empowered. The ones in prison, and on the corner selling drugs. Passive and delicate rhetoric will do nothing for their kind. And we as a people have a responsibility to them as our ancestors paved the way for us. Are you aware that the nation requires its members to go back to the root and study their origins, much of what is discussed here on this forum?
> You stated before, "both groups culture is based is based in racism and enslavement - and both of them make me sick." This, to some, would be considered very strong verbiage and very offensive.. Not me, because I believe it will take nothing less than a swift kick in the you know what to get the black people of the world back on the right track.
> Thanks for being open in the discussion and sharing your views with me.
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 7:50 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'

Again you are right. Christianity is guilty of the same and I think is the most hypocritical of all.
Yes, I have heard Farrakhan speak and I do admire much of what he says. However, I think it is important to develop a certain level of subtlety when you need to express or describe a certain group of people. The consequence of not having this "level of subtlety" is a verbal smash in the face. It also - right or wrong - makes people tend to distrust you. I am not saying that some of the things he has said are not true. But it really is not always what you say but HOW you say it. That is not being disingenuous; it is being clever and sophisticated. And it has its benefits.
HTP,
Mahari
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
>
> I respect your opinion. I am not a muslim, nor a jew, nor a christian. I believe in one God / the creator. I wonder if you have ever taken time to listen to Farrakhan. Not as a muslim, as a black man. I ask because most of the people I know who have perceptions about him have never heard him speak or his message. And even if you have, as I said you are entitled to your opinion.
>
> Lastly - I believe Christians should be added to that list, as millions have been slaughtered in the name of Christianity. It too, is clothed in racism and enslavement.
>
> We also know that it does not take religion to institute religion and enslavement. There are wicked people all over the world in high and low places.
>
> I give credit to any African man / woman that dedicates themselves to the plight of their people, regardless of their religious orientation.
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:38 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
>
>

> You are correct to make that statement. The American media which does seem to be controlled by jews is also suspect. I guess the point I want to make is that to me the Muslims seem to be as crazy as the Zionists. This makes sense since in the bible they are supposed to be brothers (i.e. Arabs and jews). Both groups' culture is based in racism and enslavement. And both of them make me sick.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> >
> > Its interesting that "one should consider the source" - I'm assuming because it is the nation of Islam. I'm not sure exactly what that means - if you have more faith that the Israeli spokesperson would not say something like that, or more faith that the NOI would promote lies. I would give their stories more merit than any nationally syndicated tv news network, or newspaper for that matter. But that's just me. I did consider the source, and I looked it up so that the readers here will see that the statement was actually made. Here is a link, and if you google her name 100 or so links of this same story will come up -
> >
> > http://www.daily. pk/world/ americas/ 9334-israeli-spokesman- says-we-control- stupid-americans .html
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2009 7:28 PM
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Obama doesn't 'worry' Israel, Americans are 'Stupid'
> >
> >
> > Well, it's true. But I can't believe that she would be stupider than the "stupid Americans" and say it publicly. Since it's true I'm sure she must think it, at least. But that would be incredible arrogance to say it openly. One needs to consider the source.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
> > >
> > > Click the link for the entire article - this is a quote from an Israeli > > > spokeswoman -

> > >
> > >
> > > The response of Tzipora Menache, an Israeli spokeswoman, came loud and
> > > clear:
> > >
> > > "You know very well, and the stupid Americans know equally well, that we > > > control their government, irrespective of who sits in the White House. You > > > see, I know it and you know it that no American president can be in a > > > position to challenge us even if we do the unthinkable. What can they > > > (Americans) do to us? We control Congress, we control the media, we control > > > show biz, and we control everything in America. In America you can criticize > > > God, but you can't criticize Israel."
> > >
> > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > http://www.finalcal l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5692.shtml
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > >
> > >
>

| 28357|2009-03-26 21:54:56|angelinebandonbibum@yahoo.com|Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda. A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum

| 28358|2009-03-27 01:15:35|Mahari Mengistu|DEPICTION OF THE EARLY RAPE OF EGYPTIAN CULTURAL TREASURES|

Here is the first in a series of six YOUTUBE's of the BBC's treatment on Egypt and the early years of the relentless theft of Egypt's cultural wealth.
It is interesting if you can stomach the Brit's narcissistic, deceptive and totally UN-scholarly representation of Egyptians - in the vacuous vain of Hollywood. No surprise. I could hardly tolerate it. I watched 3; MAYBE I'll watch the rest.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eoyC6FKePSw
HTP,
Mahari
| 28359|2009-03-27 03:38:36|asar_imhotep|Re: My Humble Apologies|
Greetings Pham

I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.

I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.

As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.

I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.

So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.

I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.

Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Every Man Movin wrote:
>
> Peace and blessings,
>
> if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > think we are in alot of trouble.
>
> I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> in disagreement.
>
> That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren's destiny.
>
> Much respect,
>
> E.
>
>
| 28360|2009-03-27 06:23:53|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum@yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum@yahoo.com

Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda. A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
| 28361|2009-03-27 06:46:01|Peter Gray|Re: Cuban medical school scholarship program|

Mahari,

Indeed, this may be the beginning ofthe much anticipatedthaw in US-Cuba relations. Several of my co-students in Jamaica back in the day took advantage of opportunities provided by the Cuban government (then on very good terms with Michael Manley), and theyhad only praise of the medical program itself, and subsequently returned to take their place in the medical industry in Jamaica. I have also had the opportunity to be treated (for stroke) both byCuban and Caribbean doctors, and I assure of their comptence and dedication to patient care in its broadest sense.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 20:11:04 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cuban medical school scholarship program

This is commendable and substantive. This will produce worthwhile benefits - something more than talk.
Thanks for the information.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:
>
> Cuba is offering free full scholarships to 500 African Americans pursuing medical degrees in concert with a program established by the nation of Islam - Please pass this on to anyone you think may be interested.
>
> In the spirit of interfaith cooperation, the Nation of Islam will be working with the program through its North American administrator, the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), and its "Pastors for Peace" project led by Rev. Lucius Walker Jr. The Nation will also partner with Christ Universal Temple in Chicago, which shares a mutual goal of increasing the level of academic preparedness of students entering medical school.

>
> The medical school curriculum in Cuba includes a 12-week intensive Spanish language program for those who need it. The program is based on intensive advising and tutoring designed to help every student succeed. Students must pass competency exams at appropriate points in their course of study.
>
> The six-year medical school program, which follows the pre-med program, begins every September and is divided into 12 semesters. Students study at the LASMS campus for the first two years, and then go to another of Cuba's 21 medical schools, which are located throughout the island, to complete their studies. The Cuban medical training model combines theory and practice and is oriented toward primary care, community medicine and hands-on internships, according to IFCO's website.
>
> The monetary worth of 500 full scholarships, a cost of $250,000 each was significant, he added. The free study is a stark contrast to statistics that show most doctors graduate with student loan debt from $250,000 to $650,000.
>
> Click the link below for the full article -
>
> http://www.finalcal l.com/artman/ publish/article_ 5706.shtml
>

Internet Explorer 8 Get your Hotmail Accelerated. Download free!
| 28362|2009-03-27 06:57:26|Asar Imhotep|Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?| Peace Phamily

I am not sure if everyone is familiar with Dr Mubabinge Bilolo, but he is a linguist and Egyptologist out Kinshasa, Congo. If you have not heard of him, I recommend that you look him up and try to find his works. I put him in the category of Diop and Obenga par excellence.

One of his 2005 discussions argues that the Egyptian Language is essentially a Bantu language. And that proto-bantu would be pre-pharaonic and would belong to the Proto-Negro-African super language family as argued by Obenga. One of the interesting notions proposed by him is that the determinatives serve also as pre and suffixes characteristic of the Bantu languages.

If true, I think we need to do a reevaluation of the role Bantu pre/suffixes play in the spoken language and see how we can apply that to the possible development of the Egyprian written script.

Dr. Fu-Kiau in his work Self-Healing Power and Therapy makes an interesting comment about initiated names (names given to people who have successfully completed initiation). He states:

"This name, in the process of calling or writing, comes after the formal name, e.g., FU-KIAU Kimbwandende, after which comes the informal name or the determining name, which is not, in reality, the name of the individual when linked with a preposition although it makes part of the entire name, e.t., Fu-Kiah (f) Kimbwadnde (i) Kia (pr) Bunseki (inf)." (1991: 14)

(f) = formal name
(i) = informal name
(pr) = preposition
(inf) = informal name

Basically what he stating is that among the people of the Kongo (lingala speakers) you have the name you were born with (formal name), the name after initiation (initiation name) and and informal name (usually the name of a relative). The informal name is always known as an informal name if it is linked by a preposition, in the above example it would be the word Kia (dia, wa, ma, lwa -- meaning of, from, belonging to, son/daughter of)

Although the informal name or determining name is part of the overall name, it is not a part of the name of the person. We would consider it the last name but it is the name of the mother or father and in some cases the grandparents.

What's interesting for me is that in the spoken language, the informal name shows relation as a means of clarifying the formal names, but is not considered a part of the name, yet is a part of the name.

A similar relationship exist in the Mdw Ntr with the determinatives. For the determinatives,. by our understanding, are a part of the written word, but is not considered part of the pronunciation of the word, but an indispensable part of the word because it shows relationship between signs.

I wonder if there is more to this and could this type of paradigm, coded into the Bantu languages regarding formal names of persons, be a fossil of a way of thought which helped to shape the structure of the Egyptian written language? And could this line of thinking also lead to a better understanding of the role of the Egyptian determinative for clarifying the glyphs, but also serving as a pre or suffix for the root words themselves?

I guess a good starting point would be to list all of the known Bantu Affixes and their roles, then look at the Egyptian determinatives and see which ones would be good candidates to represent certain affixes among the Bantu languages. For example, if you see a word with the determinative as a "man," we could assume, if our theory is correct, that the man would represent the person noun class prefix of MU- as in MUNTU. If our contention is correct, then we could assume that the normal plural determinatives of a man or woman would be BA- as in BANTU.

To start to understand the Bantu affixes, I recommend everyone download Linkie Mohlala's master's thesis dissertation at this link: http://upetd.up.ac.za/thesis/available/etd-03152004-104546/

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28363|2009-03-27 07:08:23|Paul Kekai Manansala|Climate Change: Sites in Peril|
Climate Change: Sites in Peril
Volume 62 Number 2, March/April 2009
by Andrew Curry
http://www.archaeology.org/0903/etc/climate_change.html

Rising sea levels are eating away at coastal sites, increased rainfall is eroding mud-brick ruins, creeping desert sands are blasting the traces of ancient civilizations, and the melting of ice is causing millennia-old organic remains to rot. "With climate change, we're feeling a sense of urgency," says University of Northern Colorado anthropologist Michael Kimball, who organized a panel discussion on climate change and archaeology at the World Archaeology Congress in Dublin last year. "It definitely focuses the mind."

For countless communities, archaeology can be a source of local identity, pride, and even income. "It may be intangible, but when a community loses its connection to history it loses something pretty important," says Kimball.

The International Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), a group of more than 1,000 experts on climate science convened by the United Nations, estimates that the world's temperature has risen about two degrees in the past century, thanks in part to an increase in carbon dioxide that traps heat in the earth's atmosphere. The consequences have already been dramatic. The world's oceans have risen four inches in that time. Weather patterns have also gotten less predictable and more extreme.

Over the next hundred years, the IPCC predicts that sea levels will rise at least another four inches. The worst-case scenario is truly frightening: a 10-degree rise in global temperatures, causing ice caps to melt and sea levels around the world to rise more than three feet.

Archaeologists can't stop global warming, but they can make dealing with it a priority. That may mean documenting sites before they disappear; in some places, simple steps like putting roofs over melting or rain-threatened areas are ways to preserve them. Action, however, must be taken soon. "Our job is not so much to talk about how to get climate change to stop," says Giovanni Boccardi, the chief of UNESCO's Asia and Pacific Unit. "While climate change is global, lots of solutions are local--and within our reach." What follows is a look at some of the threats facing archaeological sites around the world.

University of Bern archaeologists document artifacts exposed by melting alpine ice sheets. (Courtesy University of Bern)

Retreating Swiss Glaciers

The summer of 2003 was a scorcher in Europe, setting record temperatures across the continent and contributing to the deaths of more than 30,000 people. High in the Swiss Alps, the heat wave melted glaciers and snow, causing severe floods in the valleys below.

On September 17, a hiker named Ursula Leuenberger was crossing an iced-over pass near the Schnidejoch glacier when something odd caught her eye--a leather quiver that had been left high in the Alps by a Neolithic hunter around 2800 B.C.

The following summer, University of Bern archaeologist Albert Hafner organized a team of glaciologists and archaeologists to follow Leuenberger back up the mountain. There they found a five-foot-thick ice patch 260 feet long and 100 feet wide. In just one sunny week, the edges of the ice patch shrank 20 feet. Over the course of two summers, archaeologists found in it everything from prehistoric leather pants and shoes to nails from Roman sandals.

The finds revealed that people have climbed high in the Alps for millennia, despite its harsh conditions. (At Schnidejoch's altitude, the ground is covered in snow nine months out of the year.) "This was just the quickest way from one valley to another," says Hafner. His work also showed that 1,000-year gaps in the ages of the artifacts corresponded with cold periods when glacial ice would have

Thawing Scythian Tombs

Three thousand years ago, Scythian nomads ruled the Eurasian steppes from the edges of the Black Sea in the west to China in the east. The Greek historian Herodotus reported their exploits as warriors and their drug-fueled religious rituals. The Scythians buried their dead in huge grave mounds that have been rich resources for archaeologists studying how this nomadic culture spread, thrived, and ultimately faded away around 200 B.C.

Though the burial mounds--called kurgans--are found everywhere from Ukraine to Kazakhstan, few are as spectacularly preserved as those in the Altai Mountains on the edge of the vast Siberian permafrost region. Many of these graves have been on ice for millennia, sandwiched between a frozen layer of earth and the insulating grave mound above.

Beginning with Soviet excavations in the 1940s and '50s, archaeologists have found amazingly well-preserved mummies in the tombs, often with their clothing, burial goods, horses, and even stomach contents intact. "Instead of archaeology, the material culture is so well preserved it's almost a kind of ethnography," says Hermann Parzinger, who discovered the tomb of a mummified Scythian warrior in Mongolia in 2006 and now directs the Prussian Cultural Heritage Foundation in Berlin.

But scientists say the Altai Mountains aren't as cold as they used to be. The glaciers that covered the slopes of the Altai are receding and even disappearing. And for the first time since their occupants were buried 3,000 years ago, the Scythian tombs are in danger of thawing out and rotting away. "These tombs are all in an area where the permafrost is just at an equilibrium," says Jean Bourgeois, an archaeologist at Ghent University who works on sites in Russia and blocked the pass. The fact that fragile organic materials were preserved near Schnidejoch for more than 5,000 years means the ice cover hasn't been this small since the Stone Age. "I think in the next years if there is a hot summer, the ice will disappear completely," says Hafner. "It's obviously related to climate change."

For archaeologists, the melting ice is both a crisis and an opportunity: the artifacts at Schnidejoch never would have been found without climate change, but as more and more alpine ice fields thaw and vanish, countless more artifacts may rot away and disappear forever, along with the icy glaciers and snowfields that define the Alps. Hafner says he has his eye on other sites that are on the verge of thawing. "I'm very happy to find the objects because they will give us new inputs, but I am not happy about the climate change," he says. "I'm an archaeologist, but I'm also an alpinist."

Peru's Rainstorms

The civilizations that rose and fell in the bone-dry deserts of coastal Peru knew the signs well. When Spanish conquistadors arrived, they noticed its effects around Christmas, and named the phenomenon El Nino, or little boy, after the Christ child. Every seven to ten years, currents in the Pacific Ocean shift, changing weather patterns from Australia to California. In Peru, El Nino means warmer water, and heavy rainfall along the coast.

The difference between a normal and a bad El Nino year can be tremendous. Peru's deserts typically get just over an inch of rain per year. In 1998, the last severe El Nino season, the region was doused with 120 inches, which caused serious flooding. Water takes a heavy toll on exposed archaeological sites, many of which are located along rivers or on easily

Kazakhstan. "Just a degree or two can be enough to [destroy] frozen contents."

Mapping and listing all the region's kurgans using old spy satellite photos and old-fashioned ground surveys is the first phase of an international effort to save the frozen tombs. Bourgeois says the first priority is identifying kurgans that may still have permafrost underneath.

Archaeologists are scrambling to figure out the next step: how to keep the grave mounds cool. Instead of emergency excavations, Bourgeois hopes to work with engineers to find low-cost solutions to preserve the kurgans intact for future researchers. Proposals range from reflecting sunlight away from the kurgans by painting them white to stabilizing the underground temperature by installing "thermo-pumps." But after seeing the region's climate change with his own eyes over the past decade, Bourgeois has come to realize that even in a best-case scenario, archaeologists cannot preserve all of them. "They will have to choose."

Rising sea levels damage shell middens and other remains at sites that are more than 10,000 years old. (Blake Edgar)

Channel Islands Erosion

The Channel Islands off the coast of California are a critical link in the study of how humans settled the Americas. For decades, the consensus has been simple: America's first immigrants crossed the Bering Strait on foot and made their way south, over land through what is now Canada. Many researchers now believe, however, that the first people came to America by boat, island-hopping from Siberia all the way down to the California coast.

Some of the best evidence for this comes from the eroded slopes.

Ironically, archaeologists have made the problem worse. "If we don't mess with the sites, water runs off without doing too much damage," says University of Maine archaeologist Dan Sandweiss. "But if you excavate, that's the end of them, basically." Holes made by looters also channel and trap moisture, doing more damage.

Take Chan Chan, an elaborately planned city eight miles square that dates back 1,000 years. Made of unfired mud brick, Chan Chan's pyramids and palaces were put on UNESCO's list of World Heritage Sites in Danger in 1986 because they were threatened by erosion. Over the past two decades, the site has deteriorated steadily. Researchers are investigating whether global warming could make El Nino occur more frequently. "There's the potential for greater destruction if the pace of El Nino events increases," says Sandweiss.

So far, climatologists can't say for sure what climate change will do to the powerful weather phenomenon. "The models are all over the place," says National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration climatologist David Enfield. "We're up against a huge uncertainty at present." As climate experts work to refine their predictions, archaeologists anxiously await the arrival of the next El Nino.

Violent wave action is destroying 2,000-year-old sites once occupied by the Thule culture, the ancestors of modern Inuits. (Courtesy Bjarne Gronnow)

Greenland's Melting Sea Ice

In a normal summer, Greenland's northern and eastern coasts should be ringed by an ice

Channel Islands. "We have in excess of 10,000 years of human occupation," says Channel Islands National Park Archaeologist Kelly Minas (see "Going Coastal" May/June 2007). Evidence from shell middens, rock shelters, and other settlement sites supports the idea that early Americans were good sailors who reached the islands more than 13,000 years ago, hunting pygmy mammoths, elephant seals, and sea lions. Human bones found on Santa Rosa Island in 1959 have been radiocarbon-dated to 13,000 years ago, making them the oldest human bones found in the Americas.

Back then, the world was much colder, and the oceans much lower--low enough that four of the Channel Islands were connected by dry land. Now, rising sea levels are threatening some of the last coastal rock shelters left on the islands. "Erosion is a problem on the islands," Minas says. Coastal winds, waves, storm surges, and even seals hauling out of the water can damage or destroy coastal sites on the islands.

Rising seas now threaten to wipe out clues to how early humans made their way into the Americas just as researchers are beginning to look into the possibility of coastal migration. At Daisy Cave, a sea-side site on San Miguel Island, University of Oregon archaeologist Jon Erlandson has spent a decade excavating a 65-foot-wide midden that the island's prehistoric residents built up over thousands of years. Excavators have found the remains of tools, beads, and even baskets.

But, their work is becoming a race against time. Erlandson says the midden has shrunk by about three feet in the past decade. "If we've lost a meter in 10 years, how much will we lose in 50 or 100?" Erlandson asks. "If this keeps up, we're going to lose an incredible amount of archaeological sites."

belt 30 to 40 miles wide. The drifting ice acts like a shock absorber, dampening the strength of the North Atlantic. "It takes a lot of wave energy to move the ice, and normally water along the coast is very calm," says Danish archaeologist Bjarne Gronnow, of the National Museum in Copenhagen.

But in the past five years, the sea ice has all but disappeared. Without its floating frozen shield, Greenland's coast is being pummeled by storm surges originating hundreds of miles away. When Gronnow visited the region last summer, his team was barely able to land their Zodiac rafts on the beaches because of waves almost 10 feet high.

The effect on the island's heritage has been catastrophic. Hardest hit have been sites associated with the Thule culture, people closely related to the Inuit of northern Canada who first migrated to Greenland around 2,000 years ago. The Thule were formidable hunters and whalers, and their villages were built close to the shore. Today, Thule houses--made of stone and turf with whale-bone rafters--are disappearing quickly, along with buried tools and artifacts. "A meter per season will be tumbled down to the beach and washed away," Gronnow says. "It's not a slow process."

Older sites along the coast are also in danger. As the Arctic warms up, archaeologists fear the frozen turf that covers Qeqertasussuk, a 4,500-year-old settlement where evidence for the earliest settlement of Greenland was found, may be melting. Gronnow--who excavated the remote site for the first time in the 1980s--is headed back this summer, and he is not optimistic. "I've been working in Greenland for 30 years now," he says. "I can see with my own eyes how it has changed."

Andrew Curry is a contributing editor at ARCHAEOLOGY.

Encroaching desert sands threaten the artwork at the 2,000-year-old site of Musawwarat es-Sufra. (Courtesy Seminar of Northeast African Archaeology and Cultural Studies, Humboldt University Berlin)

Sudan Desertification

Local nomads call the ruins Musawwarat es-Sufra, or "Yellow Pictures." More than 2,000 years ago, the kings of the Meroites--a desert kingdom closely linked to ancient Egypt--built a temple complex 20 miles east of the Nile Valley, in what is today Sudan. Built of soft yellow sandstone, the walls and columns of the complex were decorated with hieroglyphs and elaborate reliefs, covered in mortar and colorfully painted. "It was probably the most important pilgrimage site of the Meroitic kingdom," says Claudia Naeser, an archaeologist at Humboldt University in Berlin who is excavating the site's reservoirs and temples.

Musawwarat's centerpiece was the 50-foot-long Temple of the Lion God, carved inside and out with reliefs dedicated to the Meroitic god of fertility, Apedemak. The lion god's temple was once in the middle of a grassland. But warming temperatures and overuse have killed off the area's vegetation, and the Sahara's sands are creeping ever closer. In the 1960s, an earlier Humboldt University mission uncovered and reconstructed the temple's collapsed walls--in retrospect, a mistake. "The reliefs suffer heavily from wind erosion," Naeser says. "The sandstone is relatively soft, and it just abrades."

Musawwarat is far from alone. Desertification is an often-overlooked problem because shifting dunes and blowing sand cover archaeological remains--leading to a misperception that the ruins are being shielded from further damage. "There's this belief that sand is protective. It's not," says Henri-Paul Francfort, a director of research at the French National Center for Scientific Research. "Sand can quickly destroy remains, both because of the weight of dunes and because of terrible winds that erase everything."

The scale of the problem is overwhelming, and solutions--from hardening stone with special chemicals to erecting protective walls or planting trees as windbreaks--are either prohibitively expensive or impossible because of a lack of water. UNESCO is now considering an application to have Musawwarat listed as a World Heritage Site. Soon, however, there may be no more "yellow pictures" to be seen.

2009 by the Archaeological Institute of America www.archaeology.org/0903/etc/climate_change.html
-
| 28364|2009-03-27 09:59:17|Tafari khumbaka|(no subject)|
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=I239LocVQYU
robert bauval speaking on anc. sahara predynastic egypt http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gNkPcOtC3xE&feature=related
part2

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28365|2009-03-27 13:06:14|Mahari Mengistu|Re: My Humble Apologies|
I was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
>
> Greetings Pham
>
> I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.
>
> I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.

>
> As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.
>
> I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.
>
> So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.
>
> I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.
>
> Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> >
> > Peace and blessings,
> >
> > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > think we are in alot of trouble.
> >
> > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > in disagreement.
> >
> > That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.

> > I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren's destiny.
> >
> > Much respect,
> >
> > E.
> >
> >
>
| 28366|2009-03-27 13:12:56|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Cuban medical school scholarship program|
Peter,
More good news. Thanks. Frankly, I think American doctors are an embarrassment. It is a good thing that they take their oath from the Greeks rather than from the Afrakan, Imhotep, the original doctor, because the NTR/ancestor can remain unashamed at their practices. Their shame is less in their capabilities although some are clearly quacks but it is in the way that they treat their patients, their attitude toward the medical profession (which I think is centered on greed and prestige) and their tepid (at best) desire to improve the healthcare and health of the public.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mahari,
>
>
>
> Indeed, this may be the beginning of the much anticipated thaw in US-Cuba relations. Several of my co-students in Jamaica back in the day took advantage of opportunities provided by the Cuban government (then on very good terms with Michael Manley), and they had only praise of the medical program itself, and subsequently returned to take their place in the medical industry in Jamaica. I have also had the opportunity to be treated (for stroke) both by Cuban and Caribbean doctors, and I assure of their comptence and dedication to patient care in its broadest sense.
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>

>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: mahari@...
> Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 20:11:04 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Cuban medical school scholarship program
>
>
>
>
>
> This is commendable and substantive. This will produce worthwhile benefits - something more than talk.
> Thanks for the information.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> >
> > Cuba is offering free full scholarships to 500 African Americans pursuing medical degrees in concert with a program established by the nation of Islam - Please pass this on to anyone you think may be interested.
> >
> > In the spirit of interfaith cooperation, the Nation of Islam will be working with the program through its North American administrator, the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), and its "Pastors for Peace" project led by Rev. Lucius Walker Jr. The Nation will also partner with Christ Universal Temple in Chicago, which shares a mutual goal of increasing the level of academic preparedness of students entering medical school.
> >
> > The medical school curriculum in Cuba includes a 12-week intensive Spanish language program for those who need it. The program is based on intensive advising and tutoring designed to help every student succeed. Students must pass competency exams at appropriate points in their course of study.
> >
> > The six-year medical school program, which follows the pre-med program, begins every September and is divided into 12 semesters. Students study at the LASMS campus for the first two years, and then go to another of Cuba's 21 medical schools, which are located throughout the island, to complete their studies. The Cuban medical training model combines theory and practice and is oriented toward primary care, community medicine and hands-on internships, according to IFCO's website.
> >
> > The monetary worth of 500 full scholarships, a cost of $250,000 each was significant, he added. The free study is a stark contrast to statistics that show most doctors graduate with student loan debt from $250,000 to $650,000.
> >
> > Click the link below for the full article -
> >

> > http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5706.shtml
> >
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Internet Explorer 8 ? Get your Hotmail Accelerated. Download free!
> http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/141323790/direct/01/
>
| 28367|2009-03-27 23:40:35|Mahari Mengistu|The Cham of Central Vietnam|

From: Runoko Rashidi <Runoko@yahoo.com>
Date: Wed, Mar 18, 2009 at 11:41 AM

18 March 2009

Greetings African Family,

I hope that you are having a good day. If not, trust me when I say that I had a good one for you. Today was another museum day. And I spent the whole day in Zurich. I was tired of trains and, to be honest with you, I am now a little tired of museums too! But museums is what I do and today I did it well.

I am leaving Zurich tomorrow and I set my goal today at visiting five of the museums that I deemed most important. It turns out that I only got to three of them and the second two were a little disappointing (and especially the third one). But the first one made it all worthwhile.

The first museum that I visited was called the Rietberg Museum. I first heard of the Rietberg a little more than two years ago during a visit to an Cham exhibit in Paris. First, a little about the Cham.

The Cham were an Africoid people who lived in Central Vietnam more than a thousand years ago. Some of their descendants still reside there. They may have been the original people of Central Vietnam and were responsible for classical civilization there. They were the people of the region long before the Viets arrived. Their sculpture is amazingly Africoid. Indeed, I don't think that you could find anything in ancient Egypt or Congo or Nigeria with features more African than the ancient Cham. To me, the Cham, their history and culture, are utterly fascinating. I think that they are connected to the Montagnards--the Black people so many brothers encountered during the American war in Vietnam.

To my knowledge there are five major collections of Cham sculpture in the world. The most outstanding repository of Cham art is the Cham Museum in Danang, Vietnam. It is incomparable. But the big museums in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) have good collections also. Outside of Vietnam the Musee Guimet in Paris is by far the best. And although the Metropolitan Museum in New York City and the Cleveland Institute of Art each have an impressive Cham statue the best collection after Paris is in the first museum that I visited today--the Museum Rietberg Zurich.

Of the museums that I visited today the Rietberg was the most distant from my hotel. It was too far to walk to and too much of a hassle to take the tram, and so I got a taxi. But the taxi, because of road construction, could only take me so far. So I paid the driver and walked the rest of the way. I had to walk around a corner and then up a fairly steep hill on a gravel road. I was really more than a little annoyed that I had to jump through such hoops to get to the place. And then I could not find the entrance! The museum actually consisted of two large ornate houses and a modern annex. The whole thing seemed really odd.

I finally found the museum gift shop and discovered that it doubled as the museum entrance. Staffing the place was a young and pleasant East Asian woman. She was one of the friendliest people that I've met here. So I rummaged through the gift shop, bought my rather expensive ticket, checked my bag, and found out to my relief that I could take pictures of the permanent exhibits. Some museums don't let you take pictures at all and you never know for sure until you get there.

I have found that you can't take anything for granted when you visit museums. Sometimes, after great effort, you find to your disgust that the museums are closed for renovations. Or, more often, only the sections that you most want to see are closed! Believe it or not this has happened me on several occasions including the Coptic Museum in Cairo, the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge University, the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek in Copenhagen, and twice at the National Archaeology Museum in Athens.

Think about how angry and hostile you would be after having flown great distances over land and sea, and doing all of the research, and checking all of the web sites, and reviewing all of the travel books only to arrive at the museum gate and find it closed to you! I tell you that it makes you want to do something bad to somebody! But what can you do? So I never take museums for granted. And then sometimes the specific artifact that you most want to see is on special loan to another museum! I tell you that I could write a book about it!

Now in the Rietberg Museum there are no elevators and so I took a long flight of stairs down to the lower level. First I saw some nice African art, starting with Nigeria. I took a few photos and slowly moved on. Then I saw something that really got me excited. It was an eight-hundred-year-old wooden statue of Fudo Myoo from Japan. Fudo Myoo is one of the five wisdom kings in Japanese mythology. He is patron of the Samurai and he is always portrayed as a Black man with nappy hair.

The best two images of Fudo Myoo that I have seen are in New York. The University of Pennslvania Archaeology Museum in Philadelphia also has a good one. But this one at the Rietberg was one of the best and I took a bunch of photos of it. I also got a wonderful photo of a Buddha from Japan. I mean that the African features seem to jump right out at you.

But, still, I saw no signs of Cham sculpture. I saw more Japanese things and then some nice pieces from China. Then I saw some ancient art from India and a few good pieces from Indonesia. But where was the Cham art? I started to get nervous and apprehensive. I am told that I am not good to be around when I get like that.

Where was the Cham art? I walked round and round the museum and could not find it. I began to fear the worst. I went into another building but nothing was there. I looked and looked. And I could not find it. Then, there it was! In one room upstairs and across from the new annex I found what I was looking for. Right in front of me were two magnificent statues and an excellent bust of Cham origin!

Sisters and brothers, I don't know if I would have been any happier if I had won the lottery. And, my goodness did I take a lot of photos! Mission accomplished! Very little mattered after that. And just to make sure that I covered all of the bases I bought an expensive book from the museum gift shop on the background to the sculptures with the photos included.

So I am ready to get out of here now. If I could fly out today I would be content. After the Rietberg I walked down the hill, then strolled a few blocks more and boarded a tram until I found a taxi stand where I got a cab to the archaeology museum. But there were no real treasures inside. And the Swiss National Museum that I went to after that wasn't fulfilling either. But the visit to the Rietberg made my day a good one.

So I am ready to get out of here. I don't much like Zurich. It is super expensive and I don't find the people here very friendly. I don't seem to fit in here and will probably not be back. But it was a good trip and I am glad that I came. I saw the Schwarze Madonna, used Zurich as a base to visit Munich, and saw the Cham Collection at the Rietberg. Mission accomplished! Next stop Paris, by way of Amsterdam and Prague.

Be blessed sisters and brothers! And enjoy the photo of the Cham diety that I have enclosed. And don't be surprised if I write you a follow up from Amsterdam or Prague. I have long layovers in both cities.

In love of Africa,

Brother Runoko, from Zurich, Switzerland

 ===
HTP,
Mahari
Couldn't copy pix, sorry.

| 28368|2009-03-28 09:09:42|Ferg|MOTHER|
Attachments :
Greetings all.
Please read the latest Pdf on Mother.
Somo
| 28369|2009-03-28 10:01:44|Asar Imhotep|Re: MOTHER|
Peace Ferg

Thanks again for the expanded discourse on this topic. I'm still trying to figure out what may have been the true intentions of placing a male's penis and a male determinative to mean mother.

In the Fulfulde and Bambara languages the word MAA actually means MAN. I wonder if this may give us clues as to why in this rendition you have all male features representing a mother. MAA is short for MAA NGALA. MAA NGALA is the name of the central creative Force and when it was looking for an interlocutor, he could find nothing in his own creation that would serve that function. So MAA NGALA created MAN and gave man part of his essence and thus that's how man became known by the name MAA.

Amadou Hampate Ba in his article The Living Tradition in UNESCO's General History of Africa tells us that MAA NGALA not only gave us his speech, but a bit of his creative powers. I wonder could the penis in the Egyptian M.T be a signifier of the creative process, or principle and thus in later time was attributive to the mother since she is in fact the living sign of creation?

Again, I would like to advise some caution and and stress to examine the term in far reaching corners of the earth, as stated before, we tend not to value highly nursery words when comparing languages. And if your assessment is true, about MAMA being derived from the suckling sound of a baby, then that would satisfy another area one should be cautioned about: onomatopea.

If it is in fact onamatopeic, then we can't prove that the term UMA or MAA, etc., in the other languages (outside the African languages) are derived from Bantu or any Paleo-African language. This is just something to think about.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MOTHER
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 11:04 AM

Greetings all.
Please read the latest Pdf on Mother.
Somo

| 28370|2009-03-28 12:02:29|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: free meditation class this sun'sday 03 28 09|
Attachments :

> please come by sunday for a intro: into meditation, part 4. class offered by memphis ausar-auset study group.
> please check out attachment to this email , click for more details

| 28371|2009-03-28 15:36:41|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: great price on webhosting/ and domain names|
Attachments :

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, Leric Perryman *leric_nwcargo@yahoo.com

> ----- Forwarded Message ----
>
> If you know anyone who needs a web host or a domain name, here my link...
>
> www.cleohosting.com
> click above
>
> open attachment in this e-mail for price list
>
> Thanks,
> Leric C. Perryman

| 28372|2009-03-28 15:42:37|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Fw: great price on webhosting/ and domain names| sorry taseti group, didn't mean send this email to group.....

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Sat, 3/28/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
> From: Tafari khumbaka
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: great price on webhosting/ and domain names
> To: maatcollective@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 5:36 PM
>
> --- On Sat, 3/28/09, Leric Perryman *leric_nwcargo@ yahoo.com
>
> > ----- Forwarded Message ----
> >
> > If you know anyone who needs a web host or a domain name, here my link...
> >
> > www.cleohosting. com
> > click above
> >
> > open attachment in this e-mail for price list
> >
> > Thanks,
> > Leric C. Perryman

| 28373|2009-03-28 18:29:42|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Pathgate Newsletter: His Holiness Pema Norbu Rinpoche Entering T|

may his path be shambala/ari-Arrat fields of the enlightened masters

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, contact@pathgate.org wrote:
From: contact@pathgate.org
Subject: Pathgate Newsletter: His Holiness Pema Norbu Rinpoche Entering Thugdam
To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com
Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 6:20 PM

Dear Friends and Students of Pathgate Institute,

His Holiness Drubwang Pema Norbu Rinpoche, the 11th Throneholder of the Palyul Lineage of the Nyingma School of Tibetan Buddhism entered the stage of Thugdam, the final stage of meditation, as of 8:20 PM on Friday, 27 March 2009 (the first day of the second Tibetan month), at the Namdroling Monastery in Bylakuppe, South India.

His Holiness left Columbia Asia Hospital in Bangalore at 3:30 pm to return to Palyul Namdroling, arriving at 6:40 pm. At 8:20 pm Indian time, His Holiness, without showing any sign of pain, looked around, then closed his eyes and went into a meditative state of Thugdam. His Holiness is currently remaining in the meditative samadhi state of luminosity and is expected to continue for several days. When His Holiness releases his body from meditation, there will be an official acknowledgement of the final passing, allowing everyone to pay their respects according to the tradition.

Meanwhile, all students are advised to make light offering for His Holiness. They should also recite the Vajrasattva Mantra (OM BENZA SATO HUNG), Narak Kong Shak, The King of Aspirational Prayers and Prayers for the deceased.
To read more details of His Holiness's passing into parinirvana, please visit Pathgate News. To read a brief biography of His Holiness Pema Norbu Rinpoche, visit the Palyul Lineage Gallery; and to see the film The Compassionate World of H.H. Penor Rinpoche, visit the Dharma Theatre.

Pathgate Office

| 28374|2009-03-29 06:03:32|Asar Imhotep|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?| Investigating this topic further, I noticed a similarity in how Gardner grouped the Hieroglyphics and how the Bantu noun classes are classified. Again, we are investigating whether the nature of the unique Bantu affixes gave rise to the method employed by the hieroglyphic script which primarily utilized consonants and what Egyptologists call determinatives. Ultimately we are seeing if some of the determinatives are in actuality affixes (i.e., noun class prefixes).

GARDINER HIEROGLYPHIC SIGN CATEGORIES

1 A. Man and his Occupations
2 B. Woman and her Occupations
3 C. Anthropomorphic Deities
4 D. Parts of the Human Body
5 E. Mammals
6 F. Parts of Mammals
7 G. Birds
8 H. Parts of Birds
9 I. Amphibious Animals, Reptiles, etc.
10 K. Fish and Parts of Fish
11 L. Invertebrates and Lesser Animals
12 M. Trees and Plants
13 N. Sky, Earth, Water
14 O. Buildings, Parts of Buildings, etc.
15 P. Ships and Parts of Ships
16 Q. Domestics and Funerary Furniture
17 R. Temple Furniture and Sacred Emblems
18 S. Crowns, Dress, Staves, etc.
19 T. Warfare, Hunting, Butchery
20 U. Agriculture, Crafts, and Professions
21 V. Rope, Fiber, Baskets, Bags, etc.
22 W. Vessels7 of Stone and Earthenware
23 X. Loaves and Cakes
24 Y. Writings, Games, Music
25 Z. Strokes, Signs derived from Hieratic, Geometrical Figures
26 Aa. Unclassified

BANTU NOUN CLASS PREFIX CATEGORIES

Noun Class Meanings
1/2 humans, other animates
1a/2a kinship terms, proper names

3/4 trees, plants, non-paired body parts, other inanimates
5/6 fruits, paired body parts, natural phenomena
6 liquid masses
7/8 manner
9/10 animals, inanimates
11 long thin objects, abstract nouns
12/13 diminutives
14 abstract nouns, mass nouns
15 infinitive
16,17,18 locatives (near, remote, inside)
19 diminutive
20/22 augmentive (diminutive)
21 augmentive pejorative

For the most part we can see that both the Egyptians and the Bantu speakers divided their speech into categories. Although we assume we can't pronounce the Egyptian, we can see that their written language definitely followed this convention. In my opinion, I don't see why the ancient Egyptians would divide the script into categories like this if it they were not already conscious of this presence in their speech. I would assume the written language is simply following the patterns of the spoken language. The next step would be to find examples in the written language where we could possibly see this convention in action.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:

From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 8:57 AM

Peace Phamily

I am not sure if everyone is familiar with Dr Mubabinge Bilolo, but he is a linguist and Egyptologist out Kinshasa, Congo. If you have not heard of him, I recommend that you lo up and try to find his works. I put him in the category of Diop and Obenga par excellence.

One of his 2005 discussions argues that the Egyptian Language is essentially a Bantu language. And that proto-bantu would be pre-pharaonic and would belong to the Proto-Negro- African super language family as argued by Obenga. One of the interesting notions proposed by him is that the determinatives serve also as pre and suffixes characteristic of the Bantu languages.

If true, I think we need to do a reevaluation of the role Bantu pre/suffixes play in the spoken language and see how we can apply that to the possible development of the Egyprian written script.

Dr. Fu-Kiau in his work Self-Healing Power and Therapy makes an interesting comment about initiated names (names given to people who have successfully completed initiation). He states:

"This name, in the process of calling or writing, comes after the formal name, e.g., FU-KIAU Kimbwandende, after which comes the informal name or the determining name, which is not, in reality, the name of the individual when linked with a preposition although it makes part of the entire name, e.t., Fu-Kiah (f) Kimbwadnde (i) Kia (pr) Bunseki (inf)." (1991: 14)

(f) = formal name
(i) = informal name
(pr) = preposition
(inf) = informal name

Basically what he stating is that among the people of the Kongo (lingala speakers) you have the name you were born with (formal name), the name after initiation (initiation name) and and informal name (usually the name of a relative). The informal name is always known as an informal name if it is linked by a preposition, in the above example it would be the word Kia (dia, wa, ma, lwa -- meaning of, from, belonging to, son/daughter of)

Although the informal name or determining name is part of the overall name, it is not a part of the name of the person. We would consider it the last name but it is the name of the mother or father and in some cases the grandparents.

What's interesting for me is that in the spoken language, the informal name shows relation as a means of clarifying the formal names, but is not considered a part of the name, yet is a part of the name.

A similar relationship exist in the Mdw Ntr with the determinatives. For the determinatives, . by our understanding, are a part of the written word, but is not considered part of the pronunciation of the word, but an indispensable part of the word because it shows relationship between signs.

I wonder if there is more to this and could this type of paradigm, coded into the Bantu languages regarding formal names of persons, be a fossil of a way of thought which helped to shape the structure of the Egyptian written language? And could this line of thinking also lead to a better understanding of the role of the Egyptian determinative for clarifying the glyphs, but also serving as a pre or suffix for the root words themselves?

I guess a good starting point would be to list all of the known Bantu Affixes and their roles, then look at the Egyptian determinatives and see which ones would be good candidates to represent certain affixes among the Bantu languages. For example, if you see a word with the determinative as a "man," we could assume, if our theory is correct, that the man would represent the person noun class prefix of MU- as in MUNTU. If our contention is correct, then we could assume that the normal plural determinatives of a man or woman would be BA- as in BANTU.

To start to understand the Bantu affixes, I recommend everyone download Linkie Mohlala's master's thesis dissertation at this link: http://upetd. up.ac.za/ thesis/available /etd-03152004-104546/

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

| 28375|2009-03-29 06:13:51|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Sudanese official: Israel behind raids|
Not hard to believe -
>
>
> Sudanese official: Israel behind raids
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090327/ap_on_re_mi_ea/ml_sudan_attacks
>
> ==========
> Yahoo! News
> http://news.yahoo.com/
>
| 28376|2009-03-29 06:13:57|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|High court blunts Black voting power|
A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling which limits the Voting Rights Act and prohibits redrawing district lines to preserve Black and Latino representation will have far-reaching, negative implications for both communities, political analysts warn.

Previously the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was used to maximize Black voter strength by having states pull together Blacks to increase their numbers in a single district and the likelihood of electing a Black candidate, the justices? 5-4 decision removes that mandate.

Political scientists, like Dr. William Boone of Clark Atlanta University in Georgia, say the political landscape, from county commissions, to city councils, even to the U.S. Congress, may be in for long periods with no added Black representation.

After the Voting Rights Act was passed, the idea was that race was a real factor for voting representation, but the courts began to rule that race did not have to be a predominant factor. With this March 9 ruling, the court has moved away from race altogether, analysts said.

?This could mean a couple of things, for not only Blacks, but Latinos too because they?re growing in numbers. Let?s say Black folk are concentrated in a district that has about 60-80 percent Black. You don?t necessarily need to go forward to draw lines and give them two representatives. You could just maintain one, if that, and go to the other districts and maintain them White, because given the residential pattern in this country, they are still pretty much racially and ethnically segregated,? Dr. William Boone told The Final Call.

The court?s decision stems from a lawsuit (Bartlett v. Strickland) filed in North Carolina, which rejected redrawing a district and dividing four counties to give Blacks the opportunity to elect their candidate of choice.

For Dr. Marc Lamont Hill, Professor of Urban Education and American Studies at Temple University, the decision is another sobering reminder that America is not a post-racial society.

?This particular ruling also speaks to how significant and how influential the Bush administration has been in engineering our social policy for the next 20-30 years. Most importantly with regard to the national topic, the ruling really prevents the African American community from getting the type of political representation that is necessary for them to have a consistent and powerful voice in Congress,? Dr. Hill said.

http://www.finalcall.com/artman/publish/article_5724.shtml

| 28377|2009-03-29 06:14:07|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Activists unhappy with Obama boycott of racism meeting|

NEW YORK - Unhappy with the Obama administration?s decision not to attend an April meeting of the Durban Review Conference, which is connected to an international race gathering, activists plan to hold a Harlem rally to protest the action and urge the U.S. to participate in the important meeting.

?We want to get the message to President Barack Obama and his administration that we are demanding U.S. participation in Durban II,? Roger Wareham, of The December 12th Movement, told The Final Call. The rally and a press conference are set for March 21 in front of the Adam Clayton Powell Jr. State Office Building. The four-day Durban Review Conference begins April 20 in Geneva, Switzerland, and is an outgrowth of the 2001 World Conference Against Racism, which was boycotted by the Bush administration. Controversy arose over demands for reparations for Blacks and anti-Zionist positions that offended Israel at the 2001 meeting in Durban, South Africa. The review conference, dubbed ?Durban II,? will evaluate progress toward goals to eliminate racism set in 2001. Significant United Nations conferences are often accompanied by parallel conferences with advocacy groups and government officials.

The Obama administration announced Feb. 27, through a State Department spokesman, that no delegation would be going to Geneva. The spokesperson said a report back from State Department envoys said the conference?s draft document ?had gone from bad to worse.? The administration believes the draft document is ?unsalvageable? because of language that demonizes Israel, reconstructs free speech rights and highlights a call for reparations for slavery, the spokesperson added.

President Obama, in a break with his predecessor, had sent a delegation to a preparatory meeting for the review conference on Feb. 19. UN Secretary-General Ban Ki Moon and human rights groups such as Human Rights Watch welcomed the decision. ?The U.S. cannot provide the leadership necessary to promote and protect human rights by sitting on the sidelines,? said Kenneth Roth, Human Rights Watch executive director, at the time. Dr. Susan Rice, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told reporters Feb. 19 it was ?critical to show the world that we are willing to engage in a global platform to denounce the remnants of slavery and colonialism.?

Days later, the administration?s position shifted to an emphatic rejection of the conference. The State Department spokesman left a window open, saying the U.S. ?would be prepared to re-engage? if deliberations were based on a text that met various criteria?including not singling out ?any one country or conflict.?

As of March 2, President Obama was reassuring Jewish groups that the administration was still holding fast to its plan not to attend Durban II. The right wing Heritage Foundation March 4 said the president?s decision not to participate was a ?welcomed recognition of the limitations of multilateral engagement.?

Lawmakers representing the Congressional Task Force on Anti-Semitism applauded the decision as did the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee who predicted the administration?s announcement would push nations sitting on the fence not to attend.

On March 12, the Italian foreign minister announced his nation would not be attending. A week before the Dutch foreign ministry withdrew, saying ?the document is unacceptable.? IRIN News reported March 2 that Australia was still uncommitted on whether it would boycott, while the 27-member European Union was attempting to get all of its members not to attend.

?One-hundred and sixty nations participated in the 2001 WCAR, and they approved an outcome document declaring the trans-Atlantic slave trade and colonialism as crimes against humanity,? said Dr. Conrad Worrill, chairman of the National United Black Front, and a reparations advocate.

?Also included in the Program of Action was the resolution that the remedy for the repair of these acts was reparations. And if President Obama is not sending a delegation, he is out of step with the world and the United Nations; and he will suffer the consequences of a political embarrassment because of the backwardness of his action,? Dr. Worrill added.

Cynthia McKinney, former Green Party presidential candidate, participated in the 2001 conference as the head of the Congressional Black Caucus task force for the World Conference Against Racism. She explained to a radio audience listening to WPFW-FM?s Jazz & Justice Show March 9 that she also felt the administration was out of step on Durban II.

This ?certainly calls for self-mobilization of the African American community to get the president?s attention and to let him know that the U.S. must attend this review conference,? she said.

Ms. McKinney insisted that the Congressional Black Caucus must send a delegation despite what the president decides. The ?issues of racism here must be placed into the international arena once again,? she argued.

Joni Palmer, CBC communications director, told The Final Call the caucus is in discussion with the White House. ?We remain optimistic there could be a change in the administration?s position,? he said. ?The CBC remains committed as it was eight years ago to have a delegation attend Durban II.?

Navi Pillay, the top UN official for human rights, in a recent communiqu㘀from Geneva stressed the need for UN member states to put aside differences, ?uphold the consensually agreed upon objectives? of the Durban review conference and remember the meeting?s importance to millions of victims of racism worldwide.

| 28378|2009-03-29 06:16:53|Lamar Perryman|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM

Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda.. A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

| 28379|2009-03-29 06:17:29|Shu Tefnut|AFRICAN ORIGINS OF PHARONIC ART AND ARCHITECTURE.|
HOTEP/ GREETINGS

BRO. HERU BENNU AMEN RA, WILL BE GIVING A LECTURE ON THE:

AFRICAN ORIGINS OF PHARONIC ART AND ARCHITECTURE.

when: April 9th, 2009
where: The Mackey Group.
103 Quincy St, near corner ofFranklynave
in the basement,
Brooklyn, New York
time: 8pm. sharp

direction by train: 8th ave line "C" train to Franklyn ave.

THIS WILL BE A SLIDE PRESENTATION

LECTURE CONTENT:

1. Developmentof Paleolithic cultures along theNile River Valley, and theGreat Rift Valley. We will review Odawan, Archulian, Tasian, Badarian, and Mustrian stone tool industries.

2. Pre-dynasticperiods reviewed with a focus on early artifacts and an attempt to give a chronological perspective of the art and architecture of the Nagada I, II, and III positions in the development of the art and architecture of dynastic Egypt.

3. Kush the birth place of the Gods ofancient Kemet. The Nubianhigh cultureand its effects on Nile valley civilization.
The foundation of art and architecture that reached its zenith inEgypt. As a result the civilizing of other cultures such as:
The Greeks, Romans,Assyrians,Babylonians, and the Hindus Kush Valleys, all of whom have benefited from the culture of theNubianswho in fact established the canons of art and architecture.

| 28380|2009-03-29 06:19:10|redheathergold|Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called

Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods" and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically. Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".

Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt. White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went. One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt geographically is Southern Central Africa.

One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us. She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the oldest ethnic group on earth.

As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive, they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?

| 28381|2009-03-29 06:19:17|Michael Bayman|Re: [SOA] Re: How 13th Amendment Re enslaved Us Afrakans, from thir|
Peace and love from the Amexem-Moor-Empire:
General-Information-Agency: Internet-Operations-Unit Bringing the illusion unto an end
the corporate: [U.S.] never addressed the fraud-problem: below...
[(13th Amendment restricting lawyers from serving in government was ratified in 1819 and removed from US Constitution during the tumult of the Civil War. Since the Amendment was never lawfully repealed, it is still the Law today. It reads as follows:

> "If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honour, or shall without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them, or either of them."]

From: Ngone
To: soa@yahoogroups.com; AfricanTalk@yahoogroups.com; blackpowermovement@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Thursday, March 26, 2009 9:20:27 PM
Subject: [SOA] Re: How 13th Amendment Re enslaved Us Afrakans, from third world traveller

--- In PanAF_House@ yahoogroups. com, "Ngone" wrote:

"Freethinkers are those who are willing to use their minds without prejudice and without fearing to understand things that clash with their customs, privileges, or beliefs. This state of mind is not common, but it is essential for right thinking; where it is absent, discussion is apt to become worse than useless."

Excellent information thank you for sharing, now below is other links for others who really want to see how this effects us as (ACSR's), Afrikan Captive Survivor Refugees

http://www.gemworld .com/USAvsUS. htm

THE U.S. IS A CORPORATION, NOT A COUNTRY

http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=lVsMUpPgdT0

Also the link you already shared, again is a greater resource,

http://www.directbl ackaction. com

To get a expanded understanding of what is really going down with the Planned Global Economic Crisis, an alternative viewpoint is:

INTERNATIONAL WEBCASTS ARCHIVED or check youtube for more:

http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=TR7srHtYAjE

http://www.larouche pac.com

http://www.MaxKeise r.com

REMEMBER

"Freethinkers are those who are willing to use their minds without prejudice and without fearing to understand things that clash with their customs, privileges, or beliefs. This state of mind is not common, but it is essential for right thinking; where it is absent, discussion is apt to become worse than useless."

-- Leo Nikolaevich Tolstoi - (1828-1910) Russian writer Source: On Life and Essays on Religion

Ngon'e

http://village. com/africanpath. com/profile/ Ngone

--- In PanAF_House@ yahoogroups. com, nuba dal wrote:
>
> the 14h amendment was used by major companies at the time
>
> to recognize a corporation as a human being with human rights
>
> we were forced under us law unjustly our homeland
>
> Afraka is still our legal domicile
>
> WE need and deserve reparations for our continued captivity in this
>
> global/universal war of enslavement
>
> please visit
>
> http://www.directbl ackaction. com
> the reparations web center provided by legendary attorney robert Brock
>
> http://www.thirdwor ldtraveler. com/Controlling_ Corporations/ Challenge_ Corp_Personhood. html
> After the Civil War, Congress passed several > constitutional amendments relating to slavery. The Thirteenth > Amendment freed the slaves, the Fourteenth Amendment gave the > newly freed male slaves equal protection and due process under > law, and the Fifteenth Amendment gave voting rights to these same > former black male slaves.

>
> The Fourteenth Amendment used the word
> "person" in the body of the amendment. This caused some > confusion about who "persons" were. Did women qualify?
> Or corporations? The Supreme Court responded by saying that the > word "person" in the Fourteenth Amendment meant just > black males.
>
> That, however, wasn't the end of it. Corporations > had a lot of money and a lot at stake, and they took case after > case to court. In 1886, corporations gained a victory. Before > the Supreme Court session to announce the decision in the case
> Santa Clara v. Southern Pacific Railroad, Chief Justice Waite > said that the court wouldn't hear arguments on whether the Fourteenth > Amendment clause on equal protection applied to corporations;
> they all believed that it did.
>
> The case was decided on other grounds.
> But, the principle that corporations have Fourteenth Amendment > rights was inserted by the Supreme Court reporter in a header > in the published report of the case. A couple of years later, > in the case Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad v. Beckwith (1889), > the Court cited the Santa Clara case as the precedent for corporations > having due process and equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment.
> With that, corporations became legal persons in the United States, > and gained the ability to challenge in federal court regulatory > actions at the state level.
>
> Corporations had been looking for a way > to control the process of state regulation and taxation. Now they > were able to control it by having the federal government say you > can't discriminate, when discrimination meant any rule that applied > just to corporations, such as railroads. Of the Fourteenth Amendment > cases brought before the Supreme Court between 1890 and 1910,
> 19 dealt with African Americans and 288 dealt with corporations.
> The corporations won more than 200 of these cases.
>
> Federal regulatory agencies were also > being created during this time. In 1893, corporations won a case > called Nohle v. Union River Logging, which gave them Fifth Amendment > due process rights against the federal as well as state governments.
>
> For the first 100 years or so of U.S.

> history, Supreme Court decisions regarding corporations were made > under the artificial entity corporate theory. But from 1886 or > 1889 on, the justices wrote their opinions in terms of personhood, > and they considered corporations to be corporate persons.
>
> MM: How does the history of "substantive > due process" fit into the story?
>
> Edwards: A 1905 case called Lochner v.
> New York established the doctrine of substantive due process.
> Lochner was about a New York state law limiting the hours that > people could work in bakeries. Lochner said that the law violated
> "substantive due process" because it invalidated contracts
> the bakeries had with their workers. This case involved an individual, > but the ruling was then extended to cover corporations. Lochner > became shorthand for using the constitution to invalidate government > regulation of the corporation. Until the mid-1930s, the court > used this doctrine to invalidate, or to prevent states from enacting, > economic regulations- minimum wage, maximum hours and related issues-usually > under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.
>
> In the thirties, the Court became a little > bit more liberal and eventually overturned Lochner, shifting away > from substantive due process.
>
> MM: What is the lingering importance of > corporate personhood?
>
> Edwards: Corporate lawyers began to go > through the Bill of Rights and claim more and more of these rights > for corporations. The Fourth Amendment right against search and > seizure, for example, is used to keep corporations like Enron > from having to open up their books. Corporations' Fourth Amendment > protections require OSHA [the Occupational Safety and Health Administration]
> to produce a warrant to check for safety regulations, which gives > employers time to clean things up. It also requires the EPA to > produce a warrant before checking for environmental infractions.
>
> MM: What kind of First Amendment rights
> do corporations have?
>
> Edwards: They have the right to spend > unlimited amounts of money on overturning referenda, established > by the Boston v. Belotti decision in 1976. Buckley v. Valeo, in > 1977, said that political contributions, including financial contributions > to candidates and parties, are equivalent to speech. This applies > to both corporations and human persons.

>
> Corporations have the right not to speak.
> This argument was used to overturn a law in Vermont requiring > the labeling of bovine growth hormone, with the courts ruling > that because the Food and Drug Administration has not required > such labels on health grounds, corporations could not be required > to label their products.
>
> In many of the important cases establishing > corporate personhood and corporate rights, the Supreme Court has > not been unanimous. For example, Boston v. Belotti was a 5-4 decision, > with Justices White, Brennan, Marshall and Rehnquist dissenting.
> Over the past 75 years, Justices Douglas, Brandeis and Black made > some insightful dissents.
>
> MM: Nike has recently been involved in > a high-profile First Amendment case.
>
> Edwards: In that case, a sweatshop activist > accused Nike of lying about their use of sweatshop labor in a > letter to the editor, and argued that this violated consumer protection > laws barring false advertising. Nike's lawyers said that this > was political speech, not advertising, and that in political speech, > you can say whatever you want, true or not.
>
> The California Supreme Court decided that > this was not political speech. They did not decide that Nike did > not have political speech rights, but that Nike was speaking because > the company wanted to clear its name in order to sell more products.
>
> This case is being appealed to the U.S.
> Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court is going to decide whether > or not this particular speech of Nike is protected speech or not.
>
> The ACLU [American Civil Liberties Union]
> is saying that Nike has a right to free speech. As I understand > it, they feel that more speech is better and that they are protecting > our right to hear as well as Nike's right to speak.
>
> MM: In what other ways does corporate > personhood affect concrete policy or government's ability to restrict > corporate power?
>
> Edwards: It's like a roadblock that needs
> to be removed before all sorts of other options to limit corporate > power can be pursued. The fundamental issue is: Who makes the > rules? Who governs the country? Do the corporations govern as > people, or do the people govern? Are the corporations subservient > to people or not? After corporate personhood is eliminated, we > could begin to challenge many other sources of corporate power.

>
> We could prohibit all political activity
> by corporations. We could stop all corporate political donations > and corporate lobbying. We could inspect plants for environmental > and health violations without a warrant or prior notice. We could > revoke corporate charters by popular referendum. We could prohibit > chain stores from doing business in our town, county or state, > and the erection of cell towers. We could stop advertising for > tobacco, guns and other dangerous products. We could levy differential > taxes for corporations and restrict their size. We could require > labeling for genetically modified foods.
>
> This is just a short list of what we could > do. We could go in a lot of places where we can't go now and don't > even think to go because of constitutional restrictions. If you > redefine who is a person, if you redefine what a corporation is > in relation to We the People, then you open up a lot of avenues > now blocked by this strange concept of a corporate half person > entity that shape-shifts between public and private as suits it.
>
> MM: What can people do about this?
>
> Edwards: I'll tell you what our strategy > is. We believe that a constitutional amendment is needed to clarify > who is a person in the United States. All living, breathing human > beings would be included, but no non-human beings.
>
> I know a constitutional amendment is very > difficult, but that is what we think is the proper way to change > things-in the constitution, not in the Supreme Court. At some > point, the Supreme Court might hear a case and they could overturn > corporate personhood. But we think that the question, "Should > corporations have the rights of legal persons?" is a political > question, a question for the people.
>
> We're starting at the grassroots level.
> We're encouraging people to pass resolutions in their towns to > create corporate personhood-free zones -to build up strength at > the grassroots level. Moving on from there, we hope to do a statewide > constitutional amendment, and once we get some of those we would > go for the federal amendment. That sounds like a lot of work, > but that is the proper way to do it, the democratic way.

>
>
>
> Jan Edwards is a member of the Women's > International League for Peace and Freedom "Challenge Corporate > Power, Assert the People's Rights: Abolish Corporate Personhood"
> Leadership Team. She was the co-chair of the Redwood Coast Alliance > for Democracy, which introduced the first ever successful resolution > on corporate personhood to the Point Arena, California City Council > in 2000. She also hosts a show on Mendocino Community Radio called > "Corporations and Democracy."
>
>
>
> Corporate
> Control of American Democracy
>
> Index
> of Website
>
> Home Page
>

--- In PanAF_House@ yahoogroups. com, nuba dal wrote:
>
> the 14h amendment was used by major companies at the time
>
> to recognize a corporation as a human being with human rights
>
> we were forced under us law unjustly our homeland
>
> Afraka is still our legal domicile
>
> WE need and deserve reparations for our continued captivity in this
>
> global/universal war of enslavement
>
> please visit
>
> http://www.directbl ackaction. com
> the reparations web center provided by legendary attorney robert Brock
>
> http://www.thirdwor ldtraveler. com/Controlling_ Corporations/ Challenge_ Corp_Personhood. html
> After the Civil War, Congress passed several > constitutional amendments relating to slavery. The Thirteenth > Amendment freed the slaves, the Fourteenth Amendment gave the > newly freed male slaves equal protection and due process under > law, and the Fifteenth Amendment gave voting rights to these same > former black male slaves.

>
> The Fourteenth Amendment used the word
> "person" in the body of the amendment. This caused some > confusion about who "persons" were. Did women qualify?
> Or corporations? The Supreme Court responded by saying that the > word "person" in the Fourteenth Amendment meant just > black males.
>
> That, however, wasn't the end of it. Corporations > had a lot of money and a lot at stake, and they took case after > case to court. In 1886, corporations gained a victory. Before > the Supreme Court session to announce the decision in the case
> Santa Clara v. Southern Pacific Railroad, Chief Justice Waite
> said that the court wouldn't hear arguments on whether the Fourteenth > Amendment clause on equal protection applied to corporations;
> they all believed that it did.
>
> The case was decided on other grounds.
> But, the principle that corporations have Fourteenth Amendment > rights was inserted by the Supreme Court reporter in a header
> in the published report of the case. A couple of years later, > in the case Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad v. Beckwith (1889),
> the Court cited the Santa Clara case as the precedent for corporations > having due process and equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment.
> With that, corporations became legal persons in the United States,
> and gained the ability to challenge in federal court regulatory > actions at the state level.
>
> Corporations had been looking for a way > to control the process of state regulation and taxation. Now they > were able to control it by having the federal government say you > can't discriminate, when discrimination meant any rule that applied
> just to corporations, such as railroads. Of the Fourteenth Amendment > cases brought before the Supreme Court between 1890 and 1910,
> 19 dealt with African Americans and 288 dealt with corporations.
> The corporations won more than 200 of these cases.
>
> Federal regulatory agencies were also > being created during this time. In 1893, corporations won a case > called Nohle v. Union River Logging, which gave them Fifth Amendment > due process rights against the federal as well as state governments.

>
> For the first 100 years or so of U.S.
> history, Supreme Court decisions regarding corporations were made > under the artificial entity corporate theory. But from 1886 or > 1889 on, the justices wrote their opinions in terms of personhood,
> and they considered corporations to be corporate persons.
>
> MM: How does the history of "substantive > due process" fit into the story?
>
> Edwards: A 1905 case called Lochner v.
> New York established the doctrine of substantive due process.
> Lochner was about a New York state law limiting the hours that > people could work in bakeries. Lochner said that the law violated
> "substantive due process" because it invalidated contracts
> the bakeries had with their workers. This case involved an individual,
> but the ruling was then extended to cover corporations. Lochner > became shorthand for using the constitution to invalidate government > regulation of the corporation. Until the mid-1930s, the court > used this doctrine to invalidate, or to prevent states from enacting,
> economic regulations- minimum wage, maximum hours and related issues-usually > under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.
>
> In the thirties, the Court became a little > bit more liberal and eventually overturned Lochner, shifting away > from substantive due process.
>
> MM: What is the lingering importance of > corporate personhood?
>
> Edwards: Corporate lawyers began to go > through the Bill of Rights and claim more and more of these rights > for corporations. The Fourth Amendment right against search and > seizure, for example, is used to keep corporations like Enron
> from having to open up their books. Corporations' Fourth Amendment > protections require OSHA [the Occupational Safety and Health Administration]
> to produce a warrant to check for safety regulations, which gives > employers time to clean things up. It also requires the EPA to > produce a warrant before checking for environmental infractions.
>
> MM: What kind of First Amendment rights
> do corporations have?
>
> Edwards: They have the right to spend > unlimited amounts of money on overturning referenda, established > by the Boston v. Belotti decision in 1976. Buckley v. Valeo, in > 1977, said that political contributions, including financial contributions > to candidates and parties, are equivalent to speech. This applies > to both corporations and human persons.

>
> Corporations have the right not to speak.
> This argument was used to overturn a law in Vermont requiring > the labeling of bovine growth hormone, with the courts ruling
> that because the Food and Drug Administration has not required
> such labels on health grounds, corporations could not be required > to label their products.
>
> In many of the important cases establishing > corporate personhood and corporate rights, the Supreme Court has > not been unanimous. For example, Boston v. Belotti was a 5-4 decision, > with Justices White, Brennan, Marshall and Rehnquist dissenting.
> Over the past 75 years, Justices Douglas, Brandeis and Black made > some insightful dissents.
>
> MM: Nike has recently been involved in > a high-profile First Amendment case.
>
> Edwards: In that case, a sweatshop activist
> accused Nike of lying about their use of sweatshop labor in a > letter to the editor, and argued that this violated consumer protection > laws barring false advertising. Nike's lawyers said that this > was political speech, not advertising, and that in political speech, > you can say whatever you want, true or not.
>
> The California Supreme Court decided that > this was not political speech. They did not decide that Nike did > not have political speech rights, but that Nike was speaking because > the company wanted to clear its name in order to sell more products.
>
> This case is being appealed to the U.S.
> Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court is going to decide whether > or not this particular speech of Nike is protected speech or not.
>
> The ACLU [American Civil Liberties Union]
> is saying that Nike has a right to free speech. As I understand > it, they feel that more speech is better and that they are protecting > our right to hear as well as Nike's right to speak.
>
> MM: In what other ways does corporate > personhood affect concrete policy or government's ability to restrict > corporate power?
>

> Edwards: It's like a roadblock that needs
> to be removed before all sorts of other options to limit corporate > power can be pursued. The fundamental issue is: Who makes the > rules? Who governs the country? Do the corporations govern as > people, or do the people govern? Are the corporations subservient > to people or not? After corporate personhood is eliminated, we > could begin to challenge many other sources of corporate power.
>
> We could prohibit all political activity
> by corporations. We could stop all corporate political donations > and corporate lobbying. We could inspect plants for environmental > and health violations without a warrant or prior notice. We could > revoke corporate charters by popular referendum. We could prohibit > chain stores from doing business in our town, county or state, > and the erection of cell towers. We could stop advertising for > tobacco, guns and other dangerous products. We could levy differential > taxes for corporations and restrict their size. We could require > labeling for genetically modified foods.
>
> This is just a short list of what we could > do. We could go in a lot of places where we can't go now and don't > even think to go because of constitutional restrictions. If you > redefine who is a person, if you redefine what a corporation is > in relation to We the People, then you open up a lot of avenues
> now blocked by this strange concept of a corporate half person > entity that shape-shifts between public and private as suits it.
>
> MM: What can people do about this?
>
> Edwards: I'll tell you what our strategy > is. We believe that a constitutional amendment is needed to clarify > who is a person in the United States. All living, breathing human > beings would be included, but no non-human beings.
>
> I know a constitutional amendment is very > difficult, but that is what we think is the proper way to change > things-in the constitution, not in the Supreme Court. At some > point, the Supreme Court might hear a case and they could overturn > corporate personhood. But we think that the question, "Should > corporations have the rights of legal persons?" is a political > question, a question for the people.
>
> We're starting at the grassroots level.
> We're encouraging people to pass resolutions in their towns to > create corporate personhood-free zones -to build up strength at > the grassroots level. Moving on from there, we hope to do a statewide > constitutional amendment, and once we get some of those we would > go for the federal amendment. That sounds like a lot of work, > but that is the proper way to do it, the democratic way.

>
>
>
> Jan Edwards is a member of the Women's > International League for Peace and Freedom "Challenge Corporate > Power, Assert the People's Rights: Abolish Corporate Personhood"
> Leadership Team. She was the co-chair of the Redwood Coast Alliance > for Democracy, which introduced the first ever successful resolution
> on corporate personhood to the Point Arena, California City Council > in 2000. She also hosts a show on Mendocino Community Radio called > "Corporations and Democracy."
>
>
>
> Corporate
> Control of American Democracy
>
> Index
> of Website
>
> Home Page
>

--- End forwarded message ---

| 28382|2009-03-29 06:19:49|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Haiti vaccines target 1 million children, women|
First, watch these videos. At least watch the first one. Its only about 4 minutes... it will be enlightening, trust me.
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GDVDZsdL9kk&feature=related
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CSh5kKiOw-g&feature=related http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=g046dW2onHI&feature=related
Then, read this...
http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29920788/
| 28383|2009-03-29 06:20:36|Asar Imhotep|Re: The Livity of Modern Nubians|
Peace Ahmeer

I don't have any information on this subject, but you might want to find like a Nubian messageboard or a yahoogroups. They may be able to inform you on this specific topic.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Thu, 3/19/09, ahmeer_israel wrote:
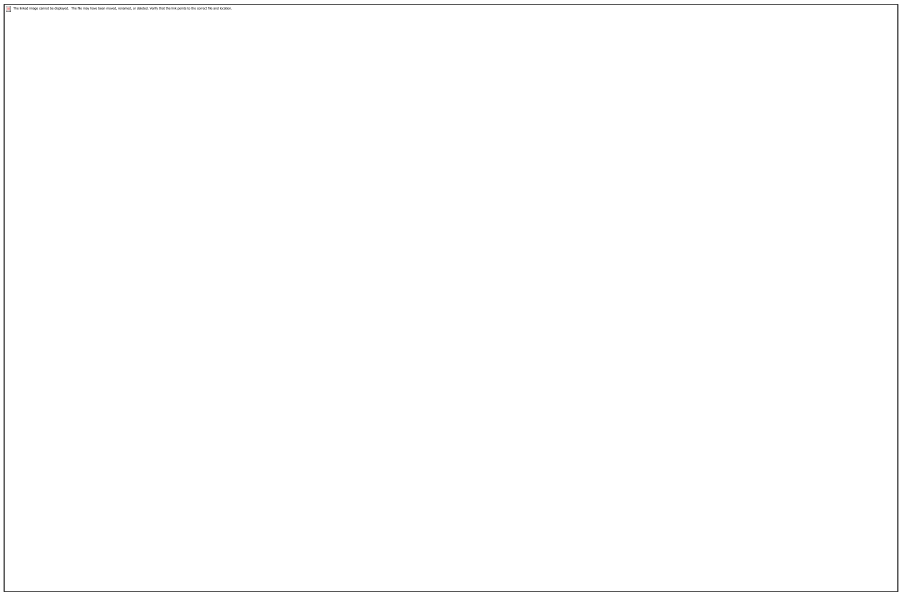
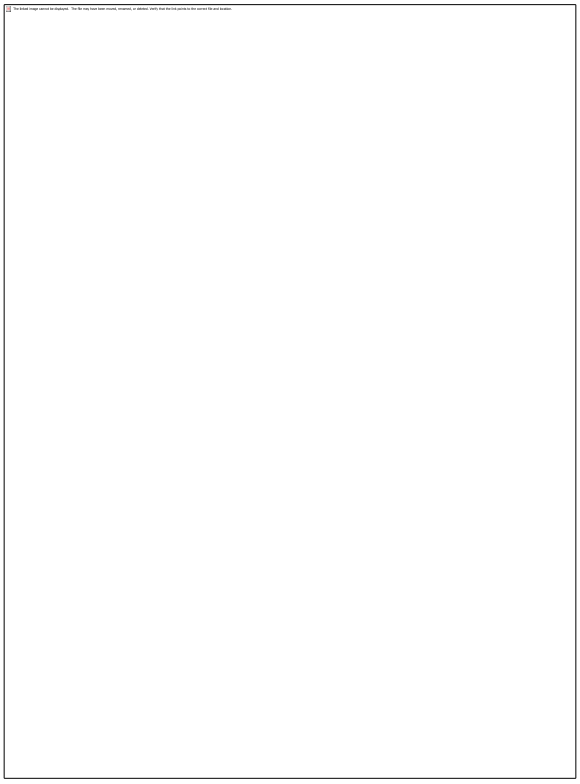
From: ahmeer_israel
Subject: [Ta_Seti] The Livity of Modern Nubians
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, March 19, 2009, 9:27 AM



Greetings Phamily,
I would like to inquire as to the situation faced by the indigenous Nubian peoples of the land. A friend went to Cairo last year and informed me of what could be called reservation type camps that separate the Nubian peoples from the general populous. And in general, an overt racism perpetuated by the Arab immigrants to include exclusion from commerce and interaction with the tourisim industry etc. Since the group has expressed such intense knowledge on the historical virtues of this/our Kindred maybe some light can be shed on this issue. And if any what types of effort is being made on their behalf whether via PanAfrakan agenda or a Diasporatic movement to bring attention and resolution to this circumstance. I realize I may be late in addressing a potent issue but at this moment I am seeking awareness.

Gratefully, One Pure Love

Ahmeer Levy



| 28384|2009-03-29 06:39:07|Asar Imhotep|Bantu Songye and Egyptian Connections|
http://www.kametrenaissance.com/BasokinLusombe.html

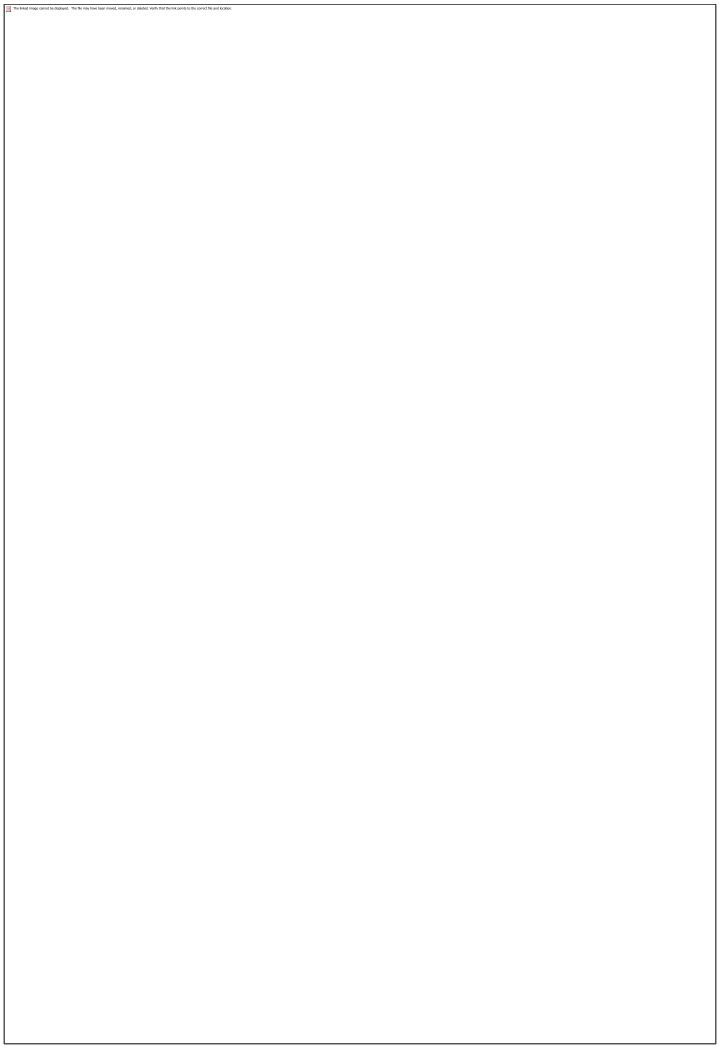
Homage to Songye Contemporary Orchestra Basokin & Lusombe
The Democratic Republic of Congo
Extract from Nkamany Kabamba & Alexander Derricks forth coming Book (2004)
Introduction
Four thousand years ago, the Songye People of the Democratic Republic of Congo emigrated from Kush, (Nubian Egypt) and settled in the Lomani River Basin.

This region is between the fifth and sixth parallels south at approximately 24 degrees to 27 degrees east. The Sankuru River forms the western border of their lands, the LwOb□iver on the east, while the Lomami River cuts close to the territorys heart.

The Songye people in Democratic Republic of Congo should not be confused with the West African, Songhay Empire of Mali.

An old folktale describing the spread of the Great Luba Families in the Democratic Republic of Congo first makes mention of the Songye as an annex along the path to the Nsanga Necropolis, also known as the Sanga A Lubangu (1996). During the Arab expansion into Africa, the Songye area was a theatre for Arab Islamic incursions. Later the Songye territory would become the subject of Belgian colonization (1885-1960).

Nkamany Kabamba, and other researchers postulate that the History and Culture of the Songye can help to elucidate critical African history, which is so poorly known.



Individuals interested in the genetic or non-accidental relationship between sub-Saharan[1] Africa and Ancient Kmt and Kush (Ancient Egypt and Nubia) will find a wealth of information still preserved in traditional African Customs, Culture and History.

To further cultivate this body of knowledge it is imperative to study Songye, Great Zimbabwe, Gala [Sine Delta], Fang, Zulu, Batchuana, Lamba, Yaga [Bayaka], Bakons [Bakongo], Lunda kingdom, Wanyamwezi [MSiri], Lulua, Bena Konji, Kanyok, Kalundwe, Hemba, Basanga of Katanga, and the First Luba Empire.

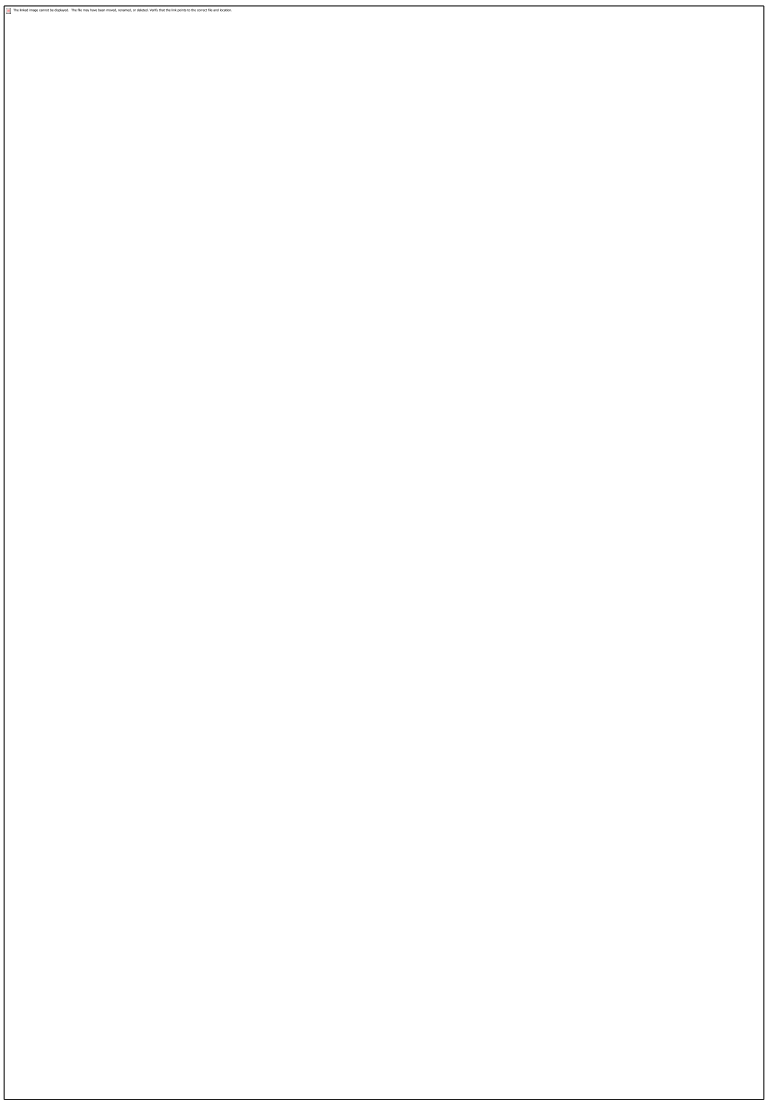
Sources of illustrations and Description:
- Maps (Nkamany Kabamba: Author of the Book)
- Authorization from Mi Amor of Basokin & Lusombe orchestra and Samy Lubaki.
- Artist (Alexander Derrick)

UNESCO[2] defines culture, in general terms, as ways of living together. Thus, it contemplates both the concrete ways in which coexistence is organized by people and the images and ideas through which a society represents the forms in which coexistence takes place and how it wants it to be. Culture is therefore the practice and the imagination of life in common.

The Contemporary Music and Culture of the Songye People in DRCongo
Orchestra Basokin and Lusombe

In the traditional music of the Songye People, the presentation of music is not simply an auditory event. Song, instrumentation, dress, and dance are all interrelated elements that the entertainers weave together as the fabric of the performance.

In this photo we see three entertainers. On the left is a male performer. He is wearing the traditional dress of the Songye. His face and arms are covered with a white chalk, that the Songye call "Ema[3]."



The Ema can be mixed with other colors to manipulate the coloration, such as orange, blue, green or red. The colors white and red are sacred colors of the Songye, dating back to the Pharonic period[4]. He is wearing several necklaces all of which are made from natural materials obtained in the bush. His kilt is made from raffia fibers, and is adorned by a red trimming. His special apron is made from leopard skin.

The performer in the center is also clothed in his traditional costume. His kilt is pink (red), white, black, and sky blue, which reminds us of one of the favorite, colors in Kmt. A raffia kilt is also being worn with the long garment.

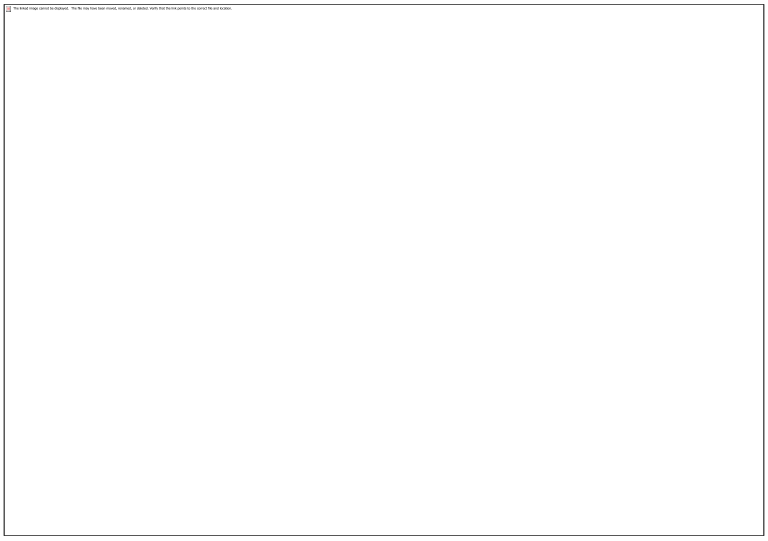
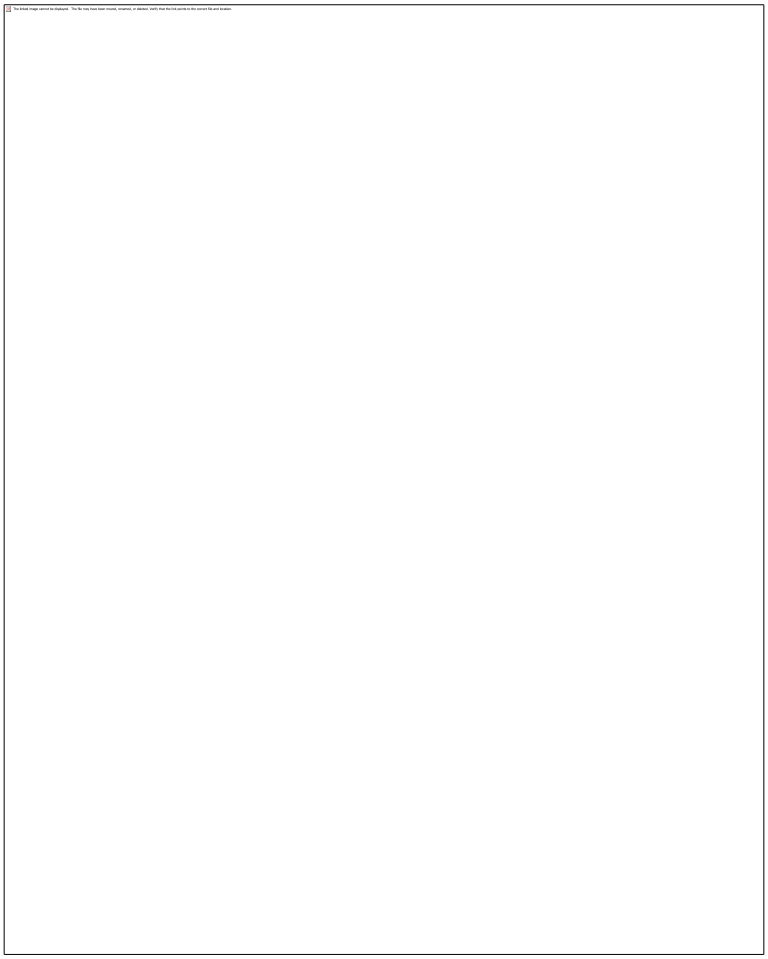
The second kilt is adorned with a checkered pattern. He is wearing a headband. A red, black, and a polychromatic beaded necklace and a pouch hang from his neck. In the performers hand is a large "slit drum" which is similar in function to a wooden gong.

This unique traditional instrument produces a pleasing sound. The third performer is wearing his raffia kilt with traditional design.



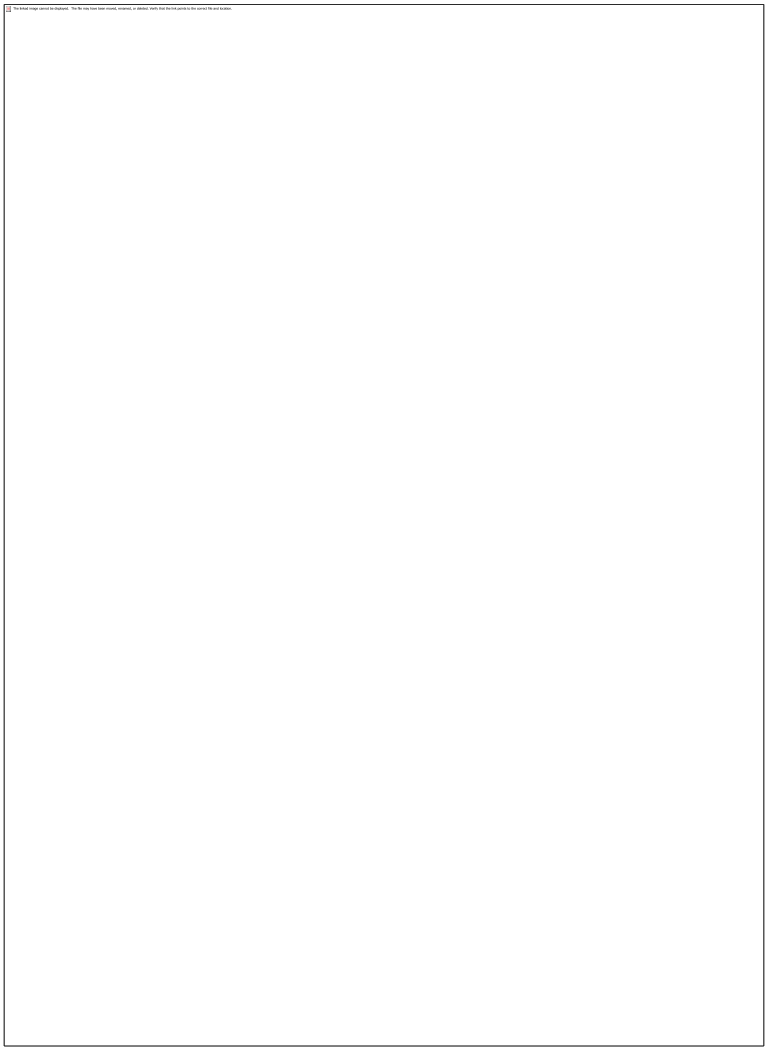
In this photo we see four performers. In the front we see two performers wearing similar traditional dress. In this photo we have the addition of traditional headdress.



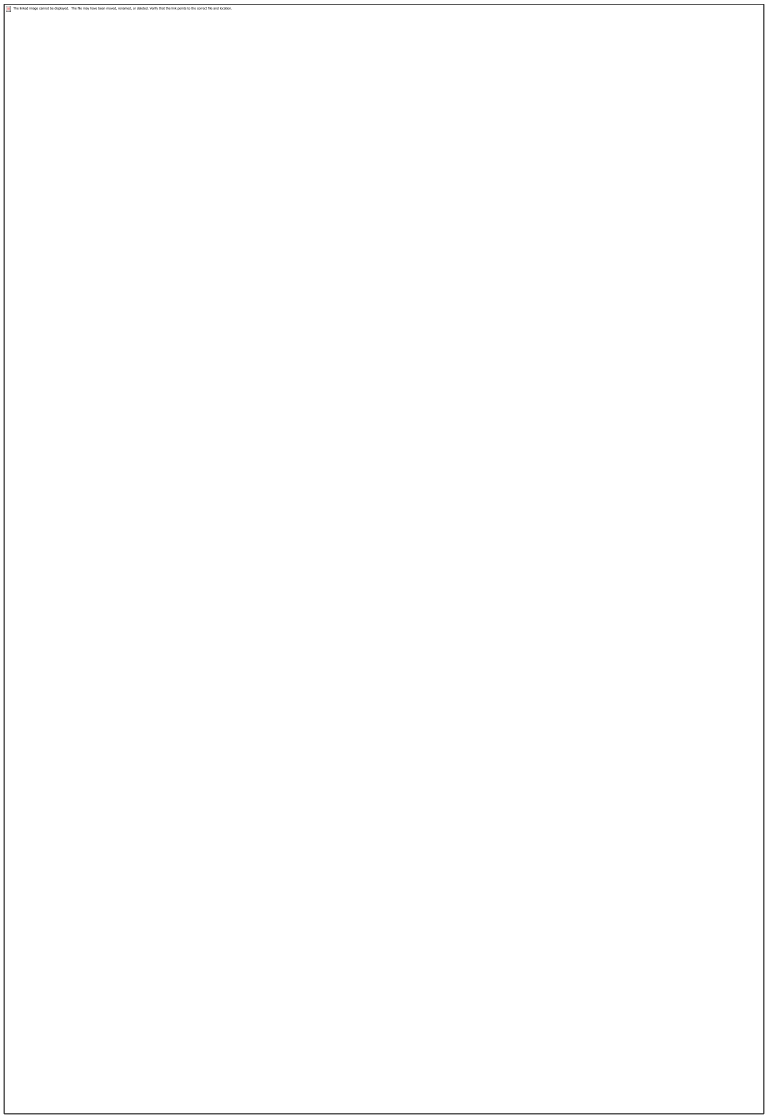
In this photo we have three important figures. In the foreground sits an individual in full traditional garb. He wears a feather headdress, and his body is decorated with Ema [Lupemba], and his face is arranged with a geometric pattern. He is wearing double strands of red beads that cross each other.

In the second row there are two gentlemen. On the left, the performer wears a long skirt, with a raffia kilt, and a wrapped upper garment. He also wears a crossed set of red beads. His face is adorned with the Ema (Lupemba). The gentleman on the right is wearing a raffia kilt with a geometric design. He also wears the feather headdress.

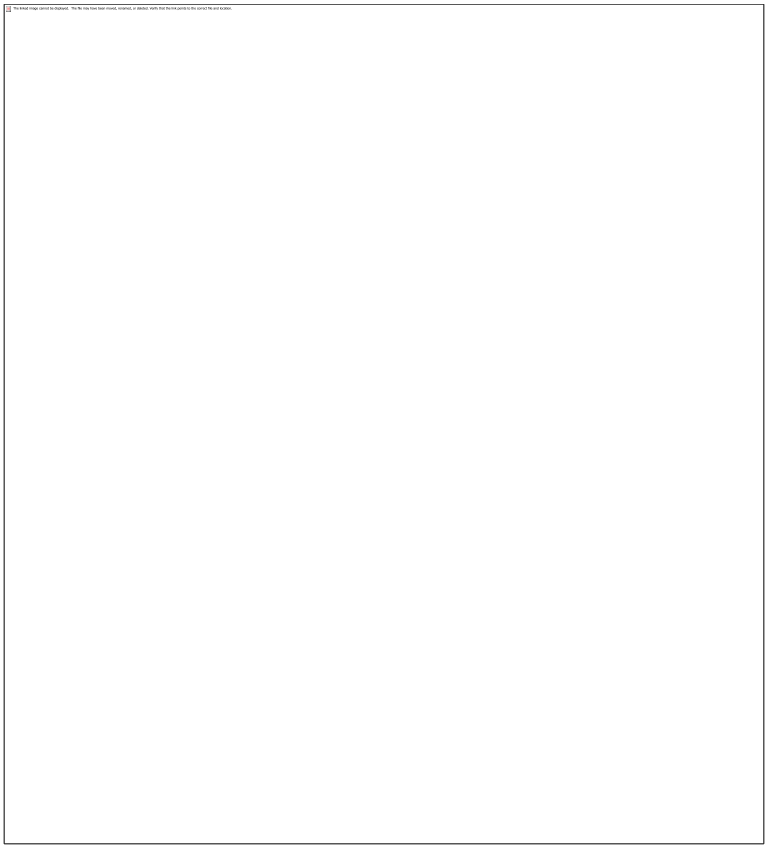
The performers in the background wear traditional dress, and the dancer on the far right is equipped with a special hat fabricated from local materials.



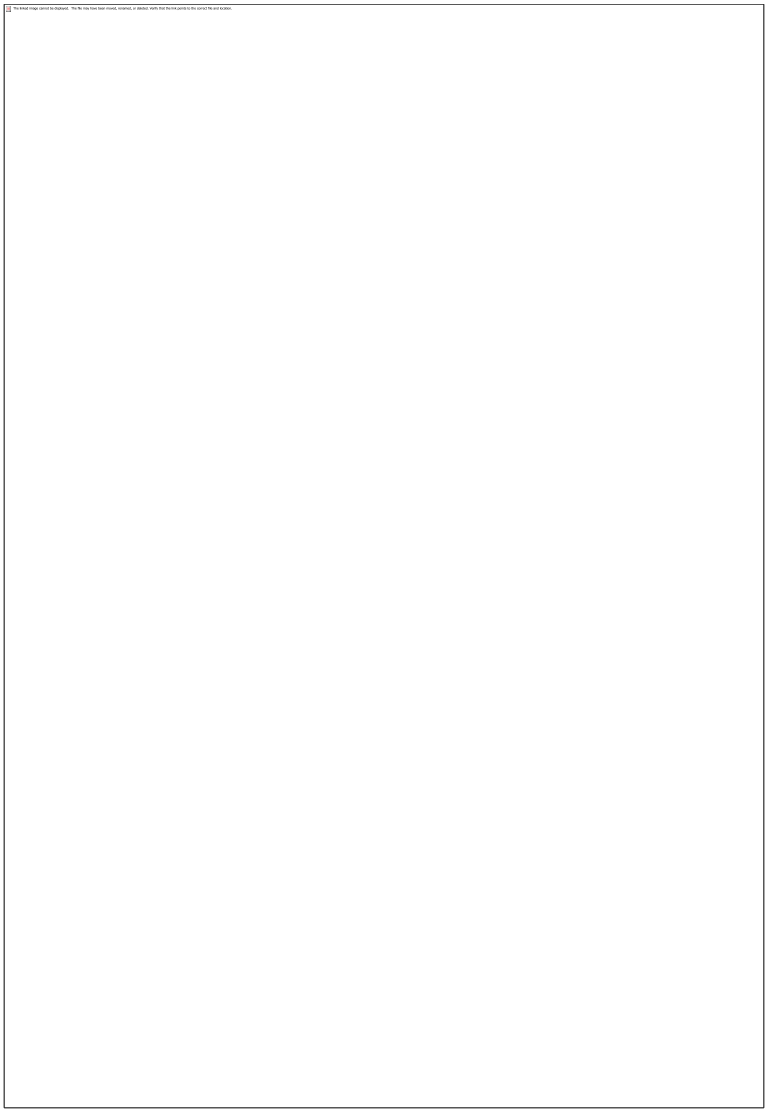
Performer exiting Belgian building in 2000.



Singing and dancing.

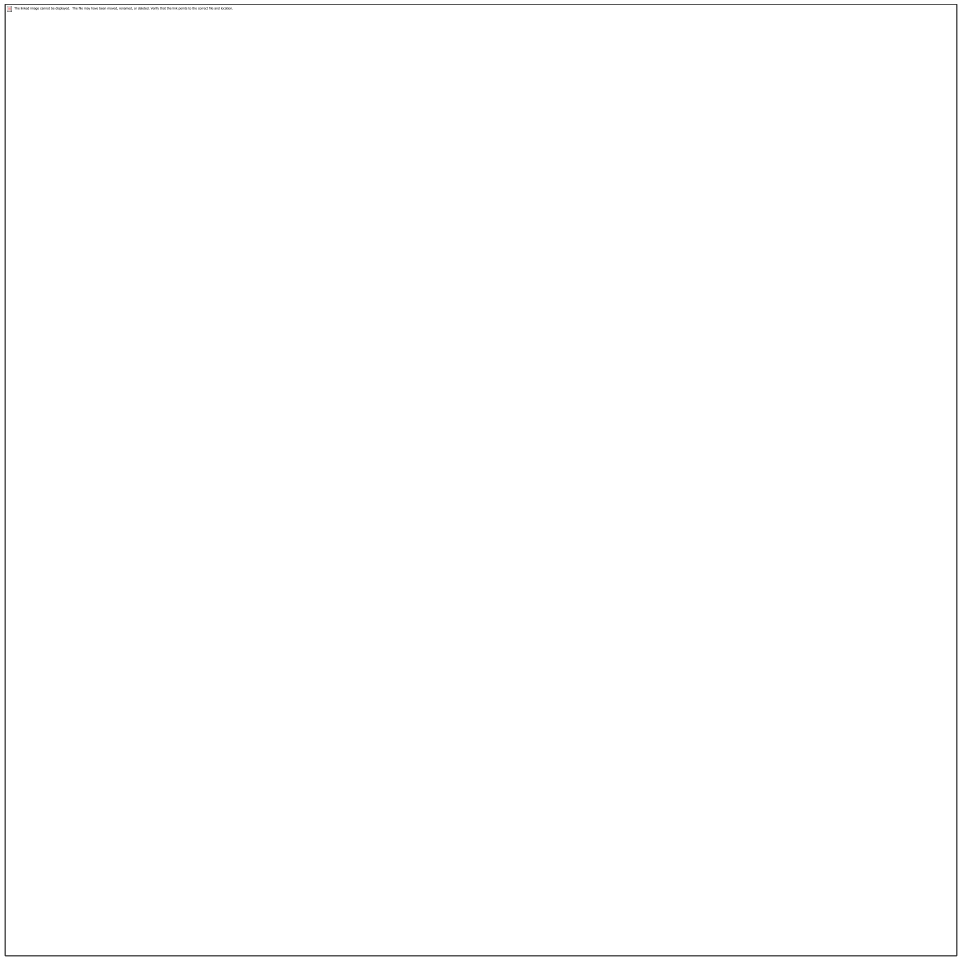


Performers must be skilled in the movements and versed in the songs of the tradition. This female performer is wearing the traditional raffia skirt. Her lower legs and chest are covered with the Ema and pearls. In this photo we can make out the white and red markings on her torso. On her right leg is a bell that accentuates the dancers movements, which correspond to the rhythm. Her dance heightens the performance. She is also wearing a red beaded necklace, which is crossed. If we recall the Pharonic tradition, we will see that the concept of crossing was of much importance. For example, the mummified Kings had their arms crossed before they were laid to rest for eternity. The god Osiris sometimes wore a red crossed sash, and some dancers also wore a crossed garment.



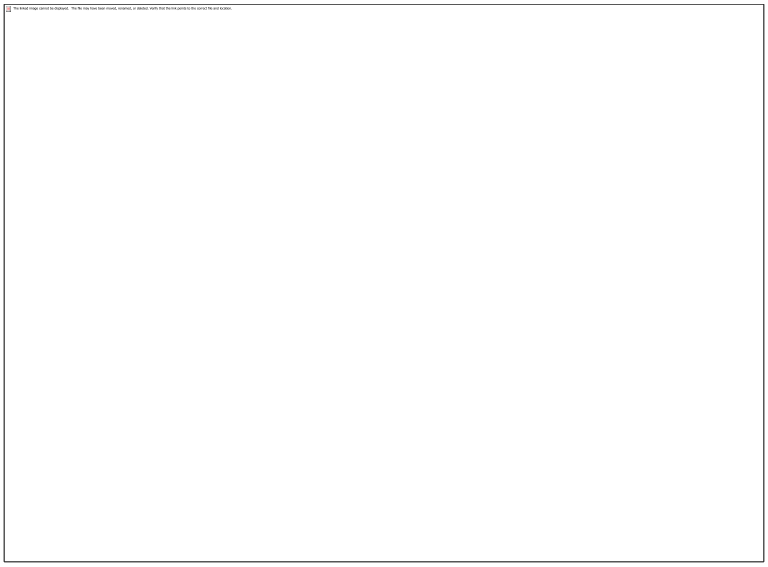
Detail of ballerina from tomb of Kha-rw.f
Ballerina wears a knee length skirt, a crossed garment, and an artificial wig.
TT 192, 18th Dynasty.
Photo from authors collection.

Female performer wears raffia fabric, pearls and traditional beads.



The performers step in time with the music. Dance is used not only for entertainment value, but the lyrics can be given added meaning through gesture and dance. Together dance, instrumentation, and singing help transmit the story of the music.

This performer is wearing his traditional garb. He is painted with the Ema [Lupemba] in a dotted design. He is wearing traditional beaded necklace, and also a beaded belt. The belt supports a leopard skin, which is a totemic animal.



The leopard skin played an important role in Nubian Egyptian religious ceremony of old. Today we see it still is important.

The mans two close fitting necklaces remind us of the shebyu necklaces worn in Kmt to indicate those of distinguish duties. Again we can see the common African aesthetic. In the background we see the musicians playing their drums and xylophone.

Detail of Sn-Nfr, Mayor of Thebes.
18th Dynasty, reign of Amenhotep II and Thutmose IV 1427-1391 BCE

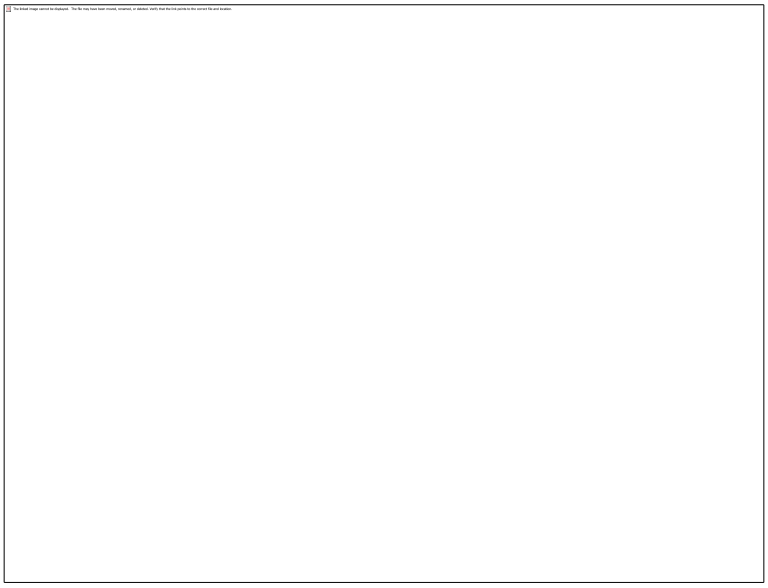
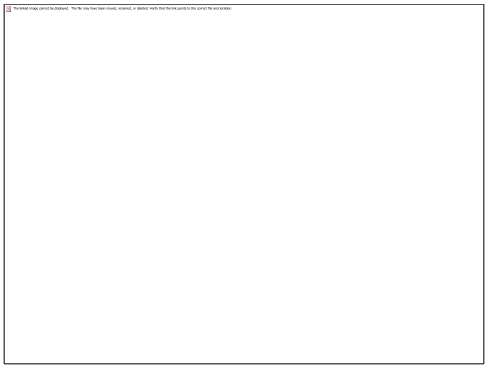
The great Sn-Nfr wears honorary shebyu collars, indicating his distinguished character and duties.
Both male and female could equip the shebyu collar(s), and our oldest known example comes from the burial of a 17th Dynasty woman at Qurna.



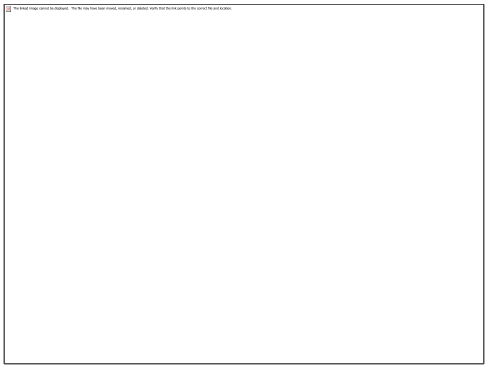
The mask adds mystery and metaphor to a performance. Here we can see a feathered red and black mask. The masker's performance can sometimes be out of this world!



Entertainers rest. We can see the richness of traditional design.

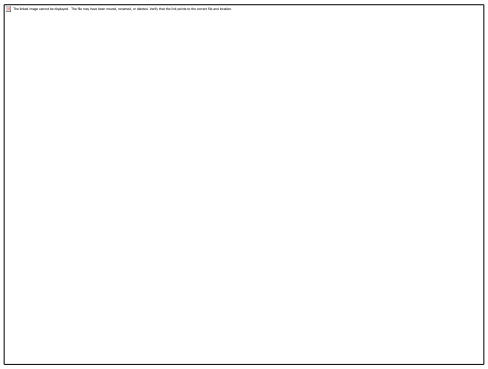
Performer wearing her red beads of tradition, along with traditional earrings.

The performers add drama to the presentation.

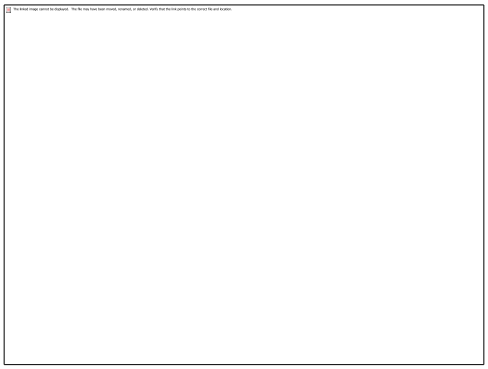


Performers wearing crossed red traditional beads and painted with the Ema [Lupemba]. Both performers hold a ceremonial flywhisk; this sacred use of this whisk dates back to the Pharonic tradition. It is connected with the Egyptian n-khkh.w scepter.

Crooks and Whisks from tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen
18th Dynasty
Photo Source:
Carter No.: 269e
Burton photograph: p1187

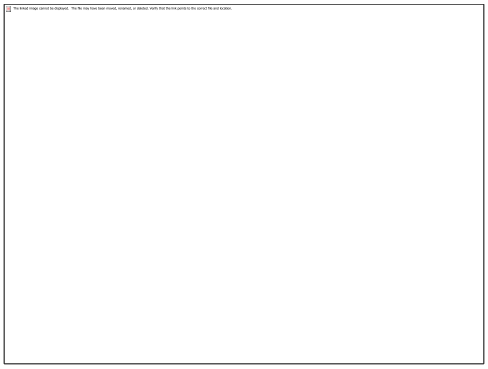


The n-kha-kha scepter is a symbol of authority carried by the king since pre-dynastic times (see reverse face of Narmer Palette). The scepter originally was a flywhisk[5], over time it evolved into a more elaborate object resembling the ancient scepter from King Tutankhamen's tomb.



The female singers are wearing their traditional costume. Both singers wear two color Ema designs.

The singer on the right also is wearing a blue ornament, which is prepared from natural materials in the bush. This color blue has the same symbolic connection as the blue that is used on red, white, black, and blue long kilt mentioned above (See illustration number one).



Again, the sky blue jewelry reminds us of the Old African Egyptian and Nubians favorite color.

The dancer on the right is wearing a blue vest. The vest was colored with local dies and materials. This dancer also holds the ceremonial axe of the Busongye [Land of the Songye People]. The royalty and special entertainers can only equip this axe.

Two females with the fly Wisk.

On the left is Mi Amor. In the center is the leading lady. On the right is Mposhi. He is wearing a traditional hat of Songye people

Conclusion.
As we can begin to see remnants of the old African traditions of Kmt and Kush are still echoed in modern Songye customs and cultures. It is imperative for the next stage of an indigenous evolution of the modern African aesthetics and cultures to re-evaluate our traditional customs in light of African migrations to and from the Nile Valley. We would like to think that this short paper, serves as an example illustrating how African customs can be used to help penetrate the great African societies of the past, in order to forward the modern generation of Africans living across the globe.

The history of Black Africa will remain suspended in air and cannot be written correctly until African historians dare to connect it with the history of Egypt. C.A. Diop

Footnotes:
[1] Anthropologist Shomarka Keita has indicated that sub-Saharan Africa can be an artificial racial classification, for we never hear of the supra-Saharan Africa. In ancient times, the people, customs, and culture did not suffer from division.
[2] UNESCO - the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization was born on November 16, 1945. For this specialized UN agency, it is not enough to build classrooms in devastated countries or to restore world heritage sites (to publish scientific breakthroughs). Education, Social and Natural Science, Culture and Communication are the means to a far more ambitious goal: to build peace in the minds of men.
[3] Ema, also known as Lupemba is an obtained from the bush, it is derived from kaolin, a claylike and friable hydrous aluminum silicate.
[4] The Ancient Egyptian symbol for divinity was Ntr, a bound pole and flag that was often colored red, white, black, and green. The Egyptian Pharaoh also wore a red and white streamer attached to his crown, signifying political unification. The geography of Egypt was also divided into red and white. Southern Egypt was signified by the color white, Northern Egypt was signified by the color red. Thus, the color symbolism was incorporated into the political regalia.
[5] The conclusion that the Osirian scepter is a "flail-like" ladanisterion of Mediterranean origin used in gathering ladunum as proposed by the late P.E. Newberry is highly unlikely. As of yet no clear evidence supports that the Cistus plant ever grew in Egypt during pharonic times!
NEWBERRY, P.E. "The Shepard's crook and the so-called 'flail' or 'scourge' of Osiris." JEA 15 (1929), 84-94.

Further Reading:

ALDRED, C. Jewels of the Pharaohs. Thames and Hudson, 1971.

DIOP, C. African Origins of Civilization, Myth or Reality. Lawrence Hill Books, 1974.

KABAMBA, N. Songye of the Democratic Republic of Congo. 2003.

Barnes And Noble.com ISBN: 1-59427-007-4

MANNICHE, L. Ancient Egyptian Musical Instruments. Deutscher Kunsterverlag, 1975.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

| 28385|2009-03-29 06:42:27|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
CC: americanpharoahs@yahoogroups.com; africanclassicalhistory@yahoogroups.co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM

Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda.. A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fro poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.
| 28386|2009-03-29 07:58:01|Ferg|MAMA|

Attachments :

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.
| 28387|2009-03-29 08:24:35|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Sudanese official: Israel behind raids| they have a green light from this administration, africa, may not recover and it shallfall even deeeeper into anarchy and lost of indegenous rights and lands/minerals

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Sudanese official: Israel behind raids
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 9:25 AM

Not hard to believe -
>
>
> Sudanese official: Israel behind raids
>
> http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20090327/ ap_on_re_ mi_ea/ml_ sudan_attacks
>
> ========== ========= ========= ========= =========
========= ===
> Yahoo! News
> http://news. yahoo.com/
>

| 28388|2009-03-29 08:36:39|Tafari khumbaka|FW: Ausar Auset NOLA News OFFICIAL Launch|

Attachments :

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, Alandas Dobbins <> wrote:
From: Alandas Dobbins <>
Subject: FW: Ausar Auset NOLA News OFFICIAL Launch
To: tafari_sudra@yahoo.com, AUSAR65@aol.com
Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 10:39 AM

Alandas Dobbins

Nsight Communication

901-481-3748 (o)

901-521-9464 (f)

alandas@nsightmemphis.com

From: HMK Amen [mailto:aas_hmk@yahoo.com]
Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 11:40 PM
To: HMK Amen
Subject: Fw: Ausar Auset NOLA News OFFICIAL Launch

For those of you who were part of our test launch last week, I'm sure you will share our excitment about our OFFICIAL Ausar Auset NOLA News launch.

We appreciate your continued interest and support.

You will see that the attached newsletter is now in pdf format which should allow everyone access.

We invite your comments and suggestions for future newsletters.

Some of the products for the spring "fast" are available now for purchase in New Orleans . Just give us a call to arrange for pick up (see page 3 of newsletter).

Peace & Blessings!

Hrimgalah (HMK)

| 28389|2009-03-29 08:46:41|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Haiti vaccines target 1 million children, women|

thanks/tua,, great info, lets us not forget that the u.s.a kidnapped president aristide and even today he is absent from public ascess..... all he tried to do was overturned by the Bush's , and france .

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Haiti vaccines target 1 million children, women
To:

Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 7:21 PM

First, watch these videos. At least watch the first one. Its only about 4 minutes... it will be enlightening, trust me.
http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=GDVDZsdL9kk&feature=related
http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=CSh5kKiOw- g&feature=related
http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=g046dW2onHI&feature=related
Then, read this...
http://www.msnbc. msn.com/id/ 29920788/

| 28390|2009-03-29 10:06:09|Asar Imhotep|Re: MAMA|
Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative)?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28391|2009-03-29 11:01:56|Tafari khumbaka|Re: MAMA|
After Ausar was murdered..... Auset went to ancient Ka-Anu(canaan) and taught the crown prince there ,the arts of initiation (the fire ritual of Ra) and through engendering his devotion she was able to retrived the body of ausar petrified in a tamarisk Tree.
all that Ausar was becamedcodified and hybernated in the tree of Ka-Anu.. The great mother-Mut thru her own energetic sexual dynamic by way of devotion rose up the dead phallance of Ausarby way of her Ra-Hekau (Ra thru the masterbatory act creates mankind/male &female) and like her father Ra immaculately concieves.

the above shows great insight into what science in our modern age has determined , that the female is the Genectrix the primal matrical determinative of evolution.
The so-called woman's seed is a fact that is evident under the modern microscope, that many teen age girls morph into boys and that women can by way of a much less invasive and harsh procedure be turned into men by modern m.d.'s, is mild evidence speaking of a time when our progenator species was A/sexual .
The hard evidence is in the chromosomes.

The Ka
also I think u should look into the ancient Ka symbol of the mother as the cow of heaven/Pet as her 4 hunches are sometimes drawned as large Y symbols that the Aten enters and leaves thru the 12 hrs of the night initiation/Ra ritual ,.
the old Y=ka symbol as the supports of Nut are also analagous to the 4 sons of Heru (bull of his mother) Heru-Ur can be likened too Ra manifest in the initiates Grand task/cross road situations in his/her lifetimes.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
please, forgive grammatical mistakes, and egnorance.

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 12:05 PM

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28392|2009-03-29 12:47:59|Tafari khumbaka|tree of life vid, freebie|
http://totalblacktv.com/home/product_info.php?products_id=833
click above
free vid, short but informative.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28393|2009-03-29 15:39:35|Tafari khumbaka|Fwd: unbelievable|
Attachments :

wow!!!

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, memphisegypt wrote:
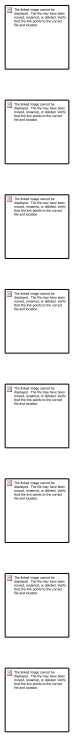
> From: memphisegypt
> Subject: Fwd: unbelievable
>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 4:55 PM
>
> Peace and Love Black People,
> Sent: Tue, 24 Feb 2009 11:12 am
> Subject: Fw: Fwd: unbelievable



----- Forwarded Message ----
From: ja thompkins <lekadajkt@yahoo.com>
To: jada <jada_thompkins@rfcuny.org>; marvin <marvolous720@aol.com>; awa diaw <adiaw@bowdoin.edu>; Aaliyah <heavenssent12@aol.com>; billy <blance24@yahoo.com>; Theodore Dweh <blacktee9@yahoo.com>; Carl Hewitt <hewitt.carl@gmail.com>; Jessica Mejia <coolloser01@yahoo.com>; Dean <firetowerlane11@yahoo.com>; William Franklin <lordofthe_stringz@hotmail.com>; Jonathan Montes <Jmont@rfcuny.org>; catherine small <catkity2@aol.com>; uncle alonzo <zomanel@yahoo.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 24, 2009 12:08:12 AM
Subject: Fw: Fwd: unbelievable

--- On Sun, 2/22/09, Erick Steele <ecs3xs@yahoo.com> wrote:

> This a real museum exhibit in New York City that was shut down before the gallery coul opened to the public.
>
> # The Assassinaton of Barack Obama: Freedom of expression or racism?
>
>
>
> A controversial art exhibit was raided and shut down before it could be vie NYC yesterday.
>
> According to the NY Times blog: Cityroom <http://cityroom.blogs.nytimes.com/2008/06/ shut-down-assassination-art-exhibition/%3E; <http://cityroom.blogs.nytimes.com/2008/06/04/police-shut- assassination-art-exhibition/>; , Boston-born performance artist, Yazmany Arboleda, trie up a provocative art exhibition in a vacant storefront on West 40th Street in Midtc Manhattan with the title, "The Assassination of Hillary Clinton/The Assassination Barack Obama".
>
> The artist thought his racist views were protected under the Constitution because l expressing himself through his art. Wrong.
>
> Not 30 minutes after Arboleda set up the gallery across the street from the New Yo Times building, police, feds and secret service swooped in to shut the art exhibit d While police covered the offensive storefront window with brown paper, Arboled led away in handcuffs to be "interrogated".

Arboleda, 27, learned the hard way that freedom has its limits. Later, in an interview, he said: "It's art. It's not supposed to be harmful. It's about character assassination about how Obama and Hillary have been portrayed by the media." He added, "It's about the media."

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

| 28394|2009-03-29 20:04:01|clyde winters|Re: Southeast Asian History of Blacks|
Check out my new movie on the history of Southeast Asia
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=av_JaADauYI
Clyde

| 28395|2009-03-29 20:45:52|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Haiti vaccines target 1 million children, women|
I saw another treatment of this theory some years back and I am inclined to believe it.
It further points to the arrogance, greed and egotism of western doctors and researchers. Not only is there this blight but the way researchers conducted themselves during the phase after the outbreak of HIV in the US was unconscionable and vile ? holding up research, initiating power plays in order to get name recognition for their efforts while human beings were dying. Very admirable. Not.
Honestly, though, I have no idea how safe current vaccines are.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> First, watch these videos. At least watch the first one. Its only about 4 minutes... it will be enlightening, trust me.
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GDVDZsdL9kk&feature=related
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CSh5kKiOw-g&feature=related
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=g046dW2onHI&feature=related
>
>
> Then, read this...
>
>
> http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/29920788/
>
| 28396|2009-03-29 21:15:29|Michael Bayman|Re: [SOA] Re: How 13th Amendment Re enslaved Us Afrakans, from thir|
I.S.L.A.M.:
Ngonea,
Peace and prosperity unto you, beloved...
Please forgive the delay and method of our response. It is long and not well edited however if you endure with it you may acquire that which you seek...clarity of thought.
With love from the Amexem-Moor-Empire: National-Family

since the corporate: [U.S.] never addressed the fraud-problem

(13th Amendment restricting lawyers from serving in government was ratified in 1819 and removed from US Constitution during the tumult of the Civil War. Since the Amendment was never lawfully repealed, it is still the Law today. It reads as follows:

"If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honour, or shall without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them, or either of them."

What follows is fraudulent and has no force whatever:

"AMENDMENT XIII

Section 1.
Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Section 2.
Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

before the never-ceased-to-this-day: martial-law: condition from the un[Civil-War] nor their bankruptcy-problem: part: 1 (1860-61: C.E.) and part: 2 (1930: C.E. in-secret at the Geneva-Convention then overtly in their 'Congress' however not in public in 1933: C.E.) including the satisfying of all of the creditors of the corporate: [U.S.]. then(and the subsequent-creditors now with the including without the limiting unto the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government) there is no solvent thus de jure legal-fiction: in-contemplation in the form of the united-States Of The America in the Congress: Assembled nor the corporate: [U.S.] and subsidiaries [STATE-OF-NEW-YORK, STATE-OF-MONTANA, STATE OF TENNESSEE, STATE-OF-ILLINOIS, ET.AL]. Thus by default there has been no laws of effect on the books in the non-Republic nor the corporate: [U.S.] overtly since the original: thirteenth-amendment of the manifesto/non-constitution and covertly since the days that Jefferson publically said he doubted the conjured-up lie/non: Republic would survive 20: years.

So we view the current discourse as a tie as again the data from the fake-record as sincerely researched by the original-post-author is factually-correct from the fake-record: point-of-view and the rebuttal-post-author though posting in a manner we do not appreciate, if we are correct in what we surmise he might being trying-to-say, is factually correct so far as the presumed-point that there is no such legitimately-legal-fiction: in-contemplation.

The-official-position: on-this-page regarding the most-appropriate: form-of-government =

we-defer unto the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Constitutional-Monarch

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=esFI0w1DnYY

l1@...>

wrote:

ISLAM,

I appreciate your response here, and respect your right to your perspective, but would like to make four points,

1. the orignal post ONLY CONCERNED THE "DATES" OF THE RATIFICATION OF THE MENTIONED AMENDMENTS, which are 100% correct. even concerning the present 13th amednment as it was RATIFIED on that date, wether you consider it de jure or de facto, legal or illegal, fiction or non-fiction according to your understanding, either way it is STILL IN EFFECT (enacted and enforced) as of that date. the non-repealing of the original 13th amendment does not change the fact of the "DATING" of the present 13th amendment. it also does not do away with the ENFORCEMENT OF IT, PRIMA FACIE, as even one of the states USED BOTH OF THEM TOGETHER.

- - -De facto usage is a fact which is why your statement about the prima facie nature of this usage is accurate to agree moreso ex facie than prima facie however we contend with you not on that . We did not dispute this in the previous-post as it is as we said then...The dates as presented by you according to the fake/unlawful/illegitimate-record is correct. We backed you up then and now on this.

As a side note, the fake/unlawful/ illegitimate: 13th: non-amendment or any 'amendment' that is 'passed' and 'ratified' by an entity that is not duly-assembled within the rigors of bona-fide: law-form does not constitute a valid-law with the full-force of authority and power with an enabling clause from a viable/actual-sovereign...it only counts at the barrel of a gun (threat/duress/coercion).

2. you stated that you thought the brother was trying to say, and went into a topic he never mentioned, adding to his wording to equalize them with mine

We don't know you personally however the other page-member we have met with and that is the only we reason we publicly surmised where he is/was in his mind on this current-dialogue and based upoon his subsequent-posts, we must not have been too far off the mark even if we went deeper than he may or may not have/had the knowledge to specify in areas we did specify in the making of the essential-point that it appears he was heading towards. We simply followed his glide path however we did matriculate and extrapolate further...that is fair to say. We tend to agree with your assessment that we worked to see both of your points as equal because we see you both as right in the points you both were making in our view. To be honest, we talked about the posts from the two of you amongst ourselves because we did not appreciate the manner in which the other party posted and we did appreciate the manner in which you moved for clarity of the positions of the party in question in response to his post. Thus we sought to make the points we made in a neutral manner by speaking to what is correct in the presentation from both sides in the macro setting without getting into the micro points.

, and what you have stated does not prove my oriignal statements false, just you have a different perspective of them, and just as the qoute you used from mr. jackson, an opinon is not LAW, RIGHT, nor even REALISITC just becuase it is stated. and jacksons statement of his opinion, fell very short, as its been more than 20 years.

Actually the insolvency that shut them down began in earnest at the time of the 9th: PRESIDENT of their for-profit: corporation, George-Whoever (it was not Washington) and soon he found himself writing to his master, Emperor: Mohammed: III in the Mamlaka-Al-Magreb/Maliki-Al-Magreb/Morocco apologizing for not having his advices/tribute ready in a timely fashion. The millstone around the neck of the non-republic was the 21 separate-loans taken out by the Continental-Congress during the terms of the George-Whoever: predecessors (John-Hanson, Richard-Henry-Lee, Elias-Boudinot, Thomas-Miflin, John-Hancock, Nathaniel-Gorham, Artur-St: Clair, and Cyrus-Griffin). Those Moors effectively tied the Europeans hands behind their backs prior-to their transferring the keys of power into their hands. Basically they screwed their European-successors and they were done before they got started. They were bankrupt and George sent his [SECRETARY OF STATE]: THOMAS-JEFFERSON out with his hat in his hand because they were in trouble.

They were back in the hands of the Moors in the Albion as the borrower is always beholden to the lender. This is what set up the next war with their lender (War of 1812: C.E.). Then they fought with the Moors in the south misnomer = [SEMINOLES] in the misnomer = [FLORIDA] for 40: Earth-years (their 1st 'VIET NAM') where they sent 1/4 of their guns and all of their latest technology only to be fought to a stalemate for them/win for us. They sent COLONEL: ZACHARY-TAYLOR along for the peace-negotiations and afterwards he whined that the Moor = Abraham/Ibrahim wearing the "red-turban"dominates the negotiations.

Soon after the cessation of those hostilities we were right back at with them and with the same result. The result was they were out 40 million in gold and on the last gasp. This is the 2nd bankruptcy, the one that hurt. This is the one that sealed their fate in the international-law: perspective. Prior to this one they still had a perceived-leg to try to stand on. Prior to this one there was a thing called Constitutional-crime. After the hard reality set in there has been no such thing as a Constitutional-crime as they were replaced with criminal-offenders. Criminal-offenses against the sovereign-owner of the for profit corporation which went from covertly to overtly being the Albion: Monarchy/King: George: III, the: Amalgamated-Moor/Mulatto-King with the nappy haired full lipped sista as his Consort = Charlotte Sophia (AFRICA PRESENCE IN EARLY EUROPE pages 204-205, Ivan Van Sertima)

This is what lead them going to yet another set of Moors to borrow 25 millions of dollars in gold to be paid back in not less than 10 years not more than 20. It was that loan that is reflected on the back of their silver-certificate and migrated onto the Rothchild-owned: federal-reserve-note: dollar-bill in the form of the Scottish-York: borrowers: seal in the East of the reverse-side of that note and the Moor: lenders: seal/Ancient-Moors-Empire: seal in the West of the reverse-side of that note.

All of that being said...Jefferson was not overtly correct in terms of the public perception as presented in the controlled media and controlled systems of learning that molded and shaped the opinions that prevail today which is predicated upon many a false premise. Covertly he was not merely correct, he was spot on as they have always been defacto as opposed to de jure...They have used control of the pen and gun to give the false premise that prevails that is falling apart at an increasing rate in the information age. This page is one of many that are a part of the various means by which the lies, distortions, and hidden truths are being exposed. This is occurring and the genie is out of the bottle. The sleeping giant is starting to awaken and all of us in our own way is playing a part in this reality jointly and severly. This fact is a great thing in our eyes.

It took us from 1604: C.E. to transfer the keys of power unto the Europeans and the transfer of the keys of power back unto the Moors began in 1933: C.E. It shall take considerably less time to return those keys as it is well underway. His-Imperial-Majesty's: Imperial-Government does what must be done in the aiding and abetting of the acquisition of the keys of power for the development and maintenance of the Moors-Paradigm in the all-inclusive: manner.

3. the fact is for everyone you can find PRO an event, there can be found someone CON to that event, especially in politics, so when one qoutes a CON, they should also qoute a PRO, and get a FULL UNDERSTANDING OF THE TRUTH OF THE SITUATION, so to balance out mr jackson, I simply point to ALL THE STATES TODAY as they HAVE ALL RATIFIED AND THUS AGREED TO ENFORCE the present 13th amendment. and wether I agree with their morality or legal aptitude in the matter, THE FACT (de facto/ex facto/effect) is that THEY HAVE, and is the reality we must deal with today. and as I have read much material on all the arguements facing the 13th, 14th, 16th and 17th amendments, nothing in any of the cases did away with the RATIFYING of the present 13th amendment, it is LAW.

It is 'law' for those not able to navigate which unfortunately is the case for most of our kith and kindred. The problem for the de facto types with the pen and guns is the number of our kith and kindred though substantial, that are among those without the knowledge or success-rate in the navigation through their illusion is going to shrink to none over time and this we forecast shall accelerate. Power of the gun is fleeting.

@...>

wrote:

1. UCC 1 Financing Statement:

These are notices or liens, that you as a living principle, place upon all property of the Debtor, i.e., your Strawman, via the Security Agreement (See 2). By filing this, all property of the debtor is pledged to the Secured Party, the Living You. The UCC is then placed on the Global UCC Records proving that the Living You has registered the paramount claim on the Legal You, your Strawman.

>Folks and their parents did not create a "strawman' thus they don't have one. A legal fiction in contemplation is an inanimate-object...an it...and an"it" can not create anything including not limiting unto a "strawman". Anyone falling for this drivel in the information age is nothing less than non compos mentis

It is recommended that you file a UCC-1 Financing Statement in your birth state and any other state you reside and/or have asset in.

> >birth? state? reside? If someone insists on the existing and functioning in the fiction as an inanimate juristic type...they are suffering from delerium events, in-succession without ceasing. This page is exclusively for the Amexem-Moor-Empire: perspective where we do the organic: existence and functionality as opposed-to-the: inorganic-fiction... as in the animate as opposed-to-the: inanimate: juristic-dementia. There are other pages to post this misinformed rem and res: detrimental-data on...Not this one!

2. Security Agreement:

This contract defines the rights in law or property as they relate to you as living principal, and your Strawman. It provides commercial ans legal support for the UCC-1.

>Contract with who? What available capacity to contract and in what character and way too much to ask here however we shall not be the trier in fact on this non-matter-herein.

3. Treasury Packge (Constructive Notice/ Non Negotiable Bill of Exchange):

These documents are sent to John W. Snow, Secretary of the Treasury and Trustee of Bankruptcy. It lets him know that you will be transacting certain financial affairs through him in order to access the exemption we were all given when our lawful money was taken away in 1933, also referred to as a UCC Contract Trust. This is the basic step to be taken if you will be creating private bonds or bills of exchange. The completed process also notifies the Secretary of Treasury that the Secure Party, You, is now established with a prior, superior claim on all assets and liabilities of the Debtor. At that point, any liabilities can be presented to the secretary for processing and discharge through the UCC Contract Trust.

Creating private bonds or bills of exchange and other evidences of debt for doing transactions... How does one pay a debt with debt or other evidences of debt we wonder? There are at least 100 questions to be asked on this ill informed adventure but who has the time? This is tragic but comical and waaaaay too many folks with Fezzes and Turbans that know less than zero in the basic-fundamentals not to mention the complex operations of law are entangling themselves in this tabula in naufragio (shipwreck) activity. An activity that has nothing to do with an independent-jurisdiction or venue of, by, and for the Moors.

4. Writ/Right to Travel:

This affidavit is submitted upon the demand of a drivers license, registration, or proof of insurance as part of the official record of any ensuring action and must be introduced in said action.

>Who is doing the demanding? On what authority? Is the action related to a commercial-activity...a regulated- enterprise and about 100-130 more questions on this that come to mind. Amexem-Moor-Empire: Nationals: Basic-Training-Regimen = 3: Earth-years: long and in the first 2: months, any one of the Amexem-Moor: Nationals are well equipped and most able to shut down foreign-venue: revenue-agents = policy-enforcers/citizens-on-patrol. No paperwork necessary.

5. Hold Harmless Agreement:

This document works well with the Specific Power of Attorney. It expressly holds You harmless from legal liability your real live sentiment self, from the liabilities that can be incurred by your strawman in Limitied Liability Actions.

>Sentient works better than sentiment and again...what strawman???Presumptions in law are fatal...everytime. This stuff is for amateurs. It is beneath the station of the quintessential-Moor...Amexem-Moor-Empire: Nationals crush this stuff. Our training is thorough and it pays off for us privately in addition to paying off in the performance of our official-duties within the Empire.

6. Moor Al Morca Nationalization Papers ("THE MOTS"):

This package consists of your Lawful Notices to put on the record to solidify your Nationality as part of the Moorish Nation and the Indigenous Republic with respect of the United States of America Incorporation. Such as, Diplomatic Immunity Registration Number, Moorish National Status and Birthright Name Correction, Tax Immune Status/ Non Obligation Documents, Declaration of Nationality and Constitutional Protection of Rights and Immunities.

>Pitiful...We have covered the material relevant to the misinformation above on this page and our page members should review the message section on here at their leisure to get to a good-place to start unraveling this twisted syntax-based cacophony.

7. Affidavit of Truth UCC 1 Registration:

Declaration of Sovereignty, the Ultimate Claim to legal freedom, includes flags, seals, finger print and picture.

>Register...fascinating word...fascinating definition..."Register"...with whom or in this case...what? An "it"? Hilarious. There about 60 other questions that come to mind... as a warm-up.

8. Letter of Cancellation/ Rescission:

Use to cancel every adhesion contract you deem necessary in order to trade in those privileges for the redemption of your rights, etc.

>Cancellation we shall hear out an argument on that one..Rescission...that is another story. As for the rest of that stuff...Wow...those presumptions are murder. Compact theory of law...watch that next step...Its a doozie!!!

9. Dejure Judicial Notice:

This document is used when making a special appearance in court addressed to Judge, Magistrate, Prosecuting Attorney, Sheriff, or any other so-called "authority" that sites the violations they have committed against your Secure Person, supported by the constitutions, codes, and treaties they are sworn to uphold. This document is supported two fold when accompanied on record with The MOTS.

>Appearance? Who is the barrister doing so? A Moor with a clue...Someone trained (Amexem-Moor-Empire: brothers and sisters) would NEVER make an appearance of any type...EVER! This stuff here is sad.

10. Demand to Vacate:

This document is used when an unlawful conviction has been made on your Secure Person. It is addressed to the Judge, Magistrate, Prosecuting Attorney, Sheriff or any other so-called "authority" that sites the violations the have committed against your Secure Person, supported by the constitution, codes, and treaties ther are sworn to uphold. This document too, is supported two fold when accompanied on record with The MOTS.

>We are not authorized by: His-Imperial-Majesty's: Communications-Minister, to-give-legal-advice, thus our comment on this stuff here is it is all feeble at bestand that is being polite.

11. Bill of Particulars:

This is a letter that demands specific answers for the reason you recieved said presentment.

>Ouch...before or after civil-disposition is established in the criminal-term. Amateurs use these because they don't know the status process as well as they think they do. We can't tell folks where to start but it aint with a bill-of-particulars. Presumptions = death...everytime.

12. Trust (Real Estate, Land, Vehicle):

Makes you trustee over all property so that it cannot be violated by the other commercial or private entities.

>Now we are getting somewhere depending on how one proceeds...we might hear an argument out on the trust stuff.

13. National ID Card:

Self-explanatory, this is your Personalized National ID.

>We are open to hearing an argument out on this too, again...depending on how one proceeds.

14. Secured Party Creditor ID:

This card care be used when you need to have your Secured Party status recognized.

>Way too much to cover on this and it is not for the amateurs out there so we shall leave this stuff lie

15. Motorist Qualification Card:

A notarized affidavit in ID format that states your competency for operating a conveyance (a vehicle).

>States it to whom in what capacity in what regard and about 160-180 more questions.

16. Debt Relief Package:

See Treasury Documents.

>This action acknowledges being a surety by default for whatever unto whoever for the purpose of what exactly? Where exactly would someone be going with this one we wonder...more importantly...why? Hilarious

17. Inheritance Package:

Bloodline research/ Family Tree: Find out what property has been stolen from your family.

>

Uhhh...fascinating...we think

18. Conveyance/ Vehicle Plates:

These are placed on your private automobile.

>We may hear an argument out on this depending on how one proceeds...Maybe!

We know the author of the original-post means well and we honor the author for their sincere efforts however...Please folks, do not post content such as this on this page. This page is exclusively about the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government-Operations...A viable-option unto the madness. An independent-sovereign-nation...of, by, and for the Moors with a 12: Department; 39: Sub-Department: Government-Structure = already-in-place...operational-underway. View the pictures on this page and read our reports, watch our videos and ask us questions about His-Imperial-Majesty's: Imperial-Government-Operations, all-day...everyday...This is why we are here.

This data herein the orignal post is not acceptable on this page and not just because of the several items that are misguiding in nature. There are plenty of group-pages and forums where such data is welcome. This page is not one of them.

Sent: Tuesday, July 15, 2008 10:13:04 PM
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] UCC DISCUSSION

INTERESTING VIEW MY BROTHER, FIRSTLY EYE WOULD LIKE TO SAY, EYE DID NOT REFER TO THE AMEXEM MOOR EMPIRE- - - [AMEXEM-MOOR-EMPIRE], if there was such a thing is an inorganic-it. Amexem-Moor-Empire on the other-hand = connotes and denotes the organic. AS AN IT. EYE "SEE" YALL AND THUS RE-COGNIZE YALL. SO JUST FOR THE SAKE OF DEBATE, ARE U SAYING THAT OUR - - -Who is the our and do any of those in question volunteer to contract into a fraudulent-activity or some regulated-enterprise(s)? ENERGY AND THE MONETIZATION OF OUR BIRTH CERTIFICATE/ BONDS - - -So you are saying that you personally created a "BIRTH-CERTIFICATE/BOND" and that you regulate every aspect of its existence from its inception? ARE NOT BEING USED TO PAY OFF THE DEBT TO THE BRITISH CROWN OR THE VATICAN - - -Someone or "something" is paying off debt to the[BRITISH-CROWN] and the [VATICAN] with what we wonder...Platinum, gold, silver, or some other substance with intrinsic-value?? U SAY THAT U EDUCATE - - - His-Imperial-Majesty's: Imperial-Government: Staff trains us in a wide-variety: of- issues and on this page, we warn our page-members to stay clear of the presumptions-game not as "legal-advice" regarding a foreign-venue rather as our "private-opinion"---and our "private-opinions" happen to NOT be "legal advice" regarding a foreign-venue. We do so treading a fine-line as interjurisdictional-matters can be a delicate thing BROTHERS AND SISTERS ON NOT BEING PRESUMPTIVELY BOUND BY TACIT AGREEMENTS THRU CONTRACTS EYE WOULD LOVE TO LEARN HOWEVER, EYE WOULD JUST ADVISE - - -If we were you and we did not know what we were doing...if we were you and we did not know how to navigate...we would not be "advising" anyone that voluntarily contracts with a foreign-venue as that would constitute "practicing law" and the foreign-venue: agents have a habit of detaining "people" that "advise" anyone. OUR "FOLKS" NOT TO SIGN ANY BIRTH CERTIFICATES AND SS CARD APPS FROM THIS POINT ON. WOULD U AGREE- - -For the record, we are not able-to answer that question as that would constitute giving "legal-advice"regarding a jurisdiction that is foreign unto us. We have gone as far as we are able to on this discourse. ?

--- On Tue, 7/15/08, Tyrese Washington yahoo.com> wrote:

From: Tyrese Washington
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObserve rs] UCC DISCUSSION
To: NorthAmexemObserver s@yahoogroups. com
Date: Tuesday, July 15, 2008, 8:50 PM

@yahoo. com>
To: northamexemobserver s@yahoogroups. com
Sent: Tuesday, July 15, 2008 7:59:13 PM
Subject: [NorthAmexemObserve rs] UCC DISCUSSION

EYE HAVE READ UR RE-SPONSE TO THE UCC AND THUS UR POINTS ARE VALID ABOUT THOSE WHO ARE COMPLETE BLOOD SUCKERS, THERE ARE BROTHERS AND SISTERS THAT ARE REASONABLE. LIKE EYE HAVE STATED, IF U HAVE NOT DISCHARGED THE PU8LIC DEBT FROM UR "LICENSES" AND "CONTRACTS". i.e. BIRTH CERTIFICATE, SS CARD. - - -Dear brother...listen carefully... All of those items you mentioned require someone to not comrehend presumptions and compact theory of law...We can't give you legal-advice so you have to find out what that means on your own. Just know that all of those items mean nothing provided that you comprehend presumptions and compact theory of law. If you do, the purported existence of those items become irrelevant and whatever alleged commercial activity is supposedly going on as a purported result does no harm unto you on the physical plane provided you are able to navigate through the presumption and compact theory of law minefield. This is a fancy way fo saying stop fretting over absolutely NOTHING! Instead, focus on what is relevant unto the maintenance and expansion of a psycho-socioeconomi c-structure = of, by, and for the Moors. IF THOSE OF THE [AMEXEM MOOR EMPIRE] - - -???What is that dear brother? Were you attempting to refer unto the Amexem-Moor- Empire? HAVE NONE OF THESE "INSTRUMENTS" THEN OF COURSE IT- - -"It?"- - - We are not an "it" dear-brother. We have a pulse, we breathe, and we think with logic and reason. We are animate not inanimate. IS EXPECTED TO LOOK AT IT IN SUCH A LIGHT. HOWEVER, AS EYE HAVE STATED, IF U HAVE THESE INSTRUMENTS, THEN RIGHT NOW AS WE SPEAK AND TYPE, THEY ARE MAKING MILLIONS OFF OF THESE INSTRUMENTS - - -That would be in worthless paper or in gold if at all, we wonder. THERE ARE METHODS OF REPATRIATION THAT CAN BE USED AS AN ALTERNATIVE MEASURE AND STILL WUT HAVE U GAINED? WHAT IS COMPENSATION FOR UR ENERGY THAT WAS DRAINED FROM ALL OF UR LIFE BEFORE FINDING OUT HOW TO GET FROM UNDER THE BEAST- - - There is more than 19 ways to skin a cat and the cat shall get skinned soon enough. All things in their time...all things in their season? EYE SUGGEST USING THE UCC METHOD AFTER HAVING A FULL OVERSTANDING OF IT- - -Subject matter jurisdiction 101 kicks this plan to the curb with a quickness. This is an action for a commercial lunatic. Within the Amexem-Moor- Empire: National-Collective , we train in a manner that provides us with several methods for "slapping them naked and burning their clothes" and we do any and all of them without subject matter jurisdiction entanglements inherent in the unnecessary commerical crap/ucc . CONTRACT LAW RULES THE WORLD THERE IS NO ESCAPE - - -Dear brother...We know you are new to the paradigm and statements like that makes that point quite clear. What one volunteers into speaks volumes. Rules the world? Rules the planet too? What world? Whose world? Do you volunteer to participate in that world? Dear brother...being awake does not connote or denote comprehension. Your statement herein makes that point. WE CAN DO BETTER BY UTILIZING IT THAN SHUNNING IT - - -Actually our kith and kindred would do well to master the subtlties and intricacies and nuances of the concepts of law and keep clear of the nymphs calling you to smash your vessel upon the rocks and sink. ALL EYE CAN SAY IS STAY TUNED, EYE WILL DO WHAT EYE WILL FOR MY PEOPLES SUFFERING HERE NEEDLESSLY - - -Your heart is not to be questioned.. .Your method though is not merely questioned, it is a recipe for disaster. Our folks need to stop being lemmings. Think family...Please think.. .

HOTEP

What has any of this got to do with the Amexem-Moor-Empire: National-Collective we have no idea. No more York stuff on our page. We do not welcome it and we do not like it. Besides not being congruent with what we want our page, this-crap = What-not-to-do: Exhibit: A

@...>
To: northamexemobservers@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Saturday, July 19, 2008 9:38:35 PM
Subject: [NorthAmexemObservers] DR. YORK IS A SECURED PARTY. PLEASE READ

Petition unto an outside-venue...Petition...Petition??? To some "indian-affairs" set no less a href="

http://s330. photobucket. com/albums/l432/ class_12images/ ?action=view&current=makusecured . jpg" target="_blank"> 33/720...Went in and flashed the gang signs huh...Go in a certain way doing the widows son thing huh. Did that work well? Head of "state" huh...Doing the inorganic "state" thing huh...Pitiful! "native-american" and Moors all at the same time? Wow...An adjective and a noun at the same time? Someone actually specified this on a record somewhere? With a straight face? Did they get held for a psych-exam? We are pretty sure that anyone trying that load of crap within the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Court, at-any-level, would-surely receive a review of their mental-hygiene. Anyhoo. How did that one work we wonder? Judging by the results not too good huh. We the "people" huh...Doing the [Citizen]-thing huh... Wow. Use of my NAME??? Name...Name???York said this??? York says he has a "name"? What kind of a supreme grand master teacher would utter such a thing? How supreme could someone be if they make statements like that out loud? How much of a grand master could one be mis-speaking in such a manner? Teacher...Teacher??? Clearly not in the art of navigation...Wow. "Native-american"-[court(s)]??? Tragic. Comical, but-tragic! [June: 2003] - - -Making a use of a foreign-calendar under a foreign-copyright...Now that is real-sovereignty for ya right there. Just ask the"chinese" since they clearly don't use their own calendar...right???-Hey wait...Don't they have their own calen???What is with all of the fire works and dancing dragons and celebra...Oh never mind! How does using someone elses stuff not give them jurisdiction we wonder. This is the crap that those that know how to navigate occassionally has to put up with as foreign-venue types think we proceed in the same uninformed-manner as presented-herein until they find themselves slapped naked and their clothes completely burned through a most thorough sequence-of-events that leaves them in a highly compromised position. Then they find out that not all look like us and wear a Fez are found-wanting in the navigation-acumen. After we hear those often spoken words unto u s = "nolle contendre" or "nolle pro sequi"... We put them abaft by coming about 1-8-0. Once we put them a'stern we do the Amexem-Moor: Strut, all-ahead-standard as we make for the home-port,-to-make-berth.

Did it ever occur unto these idiots that screw up our kith and kindred so badly, so often that the uninformed-commercial-crap, is-for-crackheads? Secured-Party...It appears York is a secured-party in some foreign-venue: facility. We don't get into that matter and we don't care. Keep this crap off of our page. We got more pressing business. We need used-eye-glasses, canned-food, dried-food, baby-supplies, womens toiletries, and a host of other supplies for various aforementioned operations. We would like to dispatch on a regular-basis large amounts of herbal-assistance unto our kith and kindred across the planet in need. This requires more finances than we have available to make this happen consistently and any help from the various-houses of the Moors or brothers and sisters that are serious, would be great. Some refer unto this as uplifting our kith and kindred. Why dont you give us a call(212) 592-8959 and discuss how you may work with us on these issues that truly-matter as opposed to posting this unwanted stuff about someone that contracted with a foreign-venue, made a use of a foreign-venues' stuff, and apparently does not know how to navigate and is clearly surrounded by a slew of others that don't know how to navigate either that is now being held by those he contracted with. Seriously...Enough of this. We do not want this on our page. Honor our wishes and we shall honor you.

Sent: Saturday, July 19, 2008 11:55:23 PM
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] Put yourself in a box you pay a price.Our group-page is not here for this stuff

OH CMON BROTHER. U SPEAK OF KITH AND KINDRED IS DR. YORK NOT ONE OUR - - -Maybe yours not ours. We take issue with certain matters regarding him that cast a negative light on the many that predate his problems south of the Mu-Atlantis. There is a reason he bolted out of the Port-Hannah-City with a quickness. There is a reason there are several-paternity-suits pending up in the North. We don't know what is actual and what is contrived.

What we know is where there is smoke there is fire and smoke clearly surrounds him everywhere he goes. Clearly self generated smoke. We give him his due especially for cleaning up the hood around the way back in the day. We also cast a wary eye on anyone that repeatedly draws negative energy unto himself and not just from the foreign-venue: pigmentocracy-generators.? IS THERE NOT A FACTION- - -Faction? I thought you were touting them as a nation? We know they are not set up as one but refer to themselves as one lately on occassion depending on which set of them you talk to. Did you choose to call them a faction as you too have come to realize that they technically are an inorganic-legal-fiction in contemplation with members/franchisees that happen to subscribe-to or follow their their brand of dogma, rhetoric, belief-system?

CALLED THE "UNITED NUWAUBIAN NATION OF MOORS" ARE U MOOR CONCERNED WITH WUS GOING ON IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES - - -We are very concerned with what is goin on in the North-Amexem as well as the other Sectors within the Amexem-Moor-Empire, i.e. Amexem-Moor-Empire: Sectors: 2, 3, and 4 (Central-Amexem, South-Amexem, and Alkebu-Lan) THAN WUS GOING ON RIGHT HERE WITH UR OWN FAMILY ? U DONT SOUND LIKE A MOOR TO ME - - -Amexem-Moor-Empire: Nationals comportment and deportment in comparison unto yours on our page...You really wanna go there???Step: 1 = remove foot from mouth. Step: 2 = spit out dirt. , U SOUND LIKE A DIRTY MOOR!- - - ...You come on our page with incongruent posts and you call us what???Seriously???Dude... UR HEART IS FILLED WITH HATE AND SEPARATION - - - Drivel full of libel gets you no-where. THIS HAS ALOT TO DO WITH THE AMEXEM MOOR EMPIRE- - -That maybe however since we are not the "AMEXEM MOOR EMPIRE" we cannot say...go ask a representative if there is one OR THE "AMEXEM-MOOR- EMPIRE"- - -Again...That maybe however since we are not the "AMEXEM-MOOR-EMPIRE" we cannot say...go ask a representative if there is one AND ANY OF THE MANY "FACTIONS" OF MOORS THAT EXIST ON THIS CONTINENT - - -Your supposition is best verified by asking these factions you speak of directly as we have no dog in that fight. We are busy putting in work in relevant-matters. U ARE REALLY A JOKE TO ME - - - BROTHER - - -Brother/BROTHER??? . WHAT AFFECTS ONE AFFECTS US ALL - - -ONE or One...Which? Depending on which, you could possibly have a point we may think about putting on a scale to weigh. Still, going back to the bottom line...You voluntarily put yourself in a box you will pay a price. That is the effect of the cause and the cause in this case is making a very poor choice resulting from the lack of navigation ability at the very least. What that privately made choice has to do with the Amexem-Moor-

Empire: National-Collective...what any of that has to do with our group-page...We have no idea. U ARE THE CRAP HERE - - -Feel free to leave and never return. You won't be missed...at all. U WOULD GET ONLY A HANDFUL TO AGREE WITH U - - - Feel free to let us know when we are supposed to care, EYE WILL GET A NATION TO AGREE WITH ME - - -, A NATION OF OVER A MILLION! WHEN A FELLOW MOOR WAS IN DISTRESS WHAT DID UR SO CALLED EMPIRE DO? NOTHING! - - -Wrong again Buckyboy...Over the years we have been repeatedly approached by several from his set. The infighting amongst them over the acquiring an attorney of record or not where he ultimately got one is one of many reasons we would be precluded from taking action. York having contracted into them combined with his non ability to navigate rendered him listing 17 degrees starboard with a quickness from the beginning.

He not being an Amexem-Moor: National left us without a cause of action to speak of as we could not be a third party/have no character/actor available for making a claim. Sakina herself repeatedly attempted to privately contract 2 of our ranking officials at the store [bushwick]. We have seen the "indictments" , both of "them" supposed new and supposedly revised. According to the file, what was offered to contract was not the problem. The problem was York was not able to argue the documents among other logistical matters. Also, according to the file, Sakina spoke with our officials regarding an appeal and she was asked if the attorney or record for the "appeal" had ever done an appeal. Her answer was "no". She was asked what procedural-violation were they seeking an "appeal" on and she point to subject matter as a opposed to a procedural violation.

Bottomline is we are not a law firm still out of brotherhood we heard them out. By the way...According to the file...We warned them against the uninformed commercial crap saying we could not give them legal advice regarding a foreign-venue but if it was us we would not do that. We also told her the one that "filed" the uninformed commerical crap regarding York would probably get detained by the foreign-venue. Guess what...According to her, he did.

We did not say why we would 'nt do the uninformed commercial crap, we just said we would'nt do that if it was us...Why did we get approached repeatedly???Lets just say our track record speaks for itself. We have earned our reputation of keeping out of harms way and if necessary, navigating out of hostile waters with our keel, hull, and deck intact. There are those that know us that have seen us do our thing that bare witness. Once again...Do your homework so that you don't risk being shown to be an uninformed idiot...again. SO SHUT YA PIE HOLE . ALL THINGS ARE RE-LEVANT - - -Opinions vary. DR. YORK IS THE ONLY ONE WHO CAME AND SHOWED US THE TRUE OUR-STORY - - -The only one huh...who is the "us" we wonder...This has what to do with the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government-Operations? You gonna call us about the ongoing operations we speak of or continue wasting your time on this crap? OF THE MOORS THAT U OR NOBODY IN UR UNHEARD OF "EMPIRE" - - - "EMPIRE"...EMPIRE...EMPIRE???What is that? We don't know anything about what you refer to however you could ask us about the Amexem-Moor-Empire: National-Collective. CAN REFUTE. EYE COME TO BRING A CONNECTION - - -Not interested. Is that clear enough???Or do you require the assistance of get hooked on phonics??? U

STRIVE FOR DIVISION - - -If York does something about his self generated smoke and apparent fire problem(We don't see how)...Perhaps we could talk on a relevant matter provided:His-Imperial-Majesty authorizes such a discourse (Not likely). AS EYE - - - EYE???Eye??? EYE/Eye???Unreal/Real...With the real one do your require an optician? HAVE STATED, NU MOORS - - -MOORS or Moors? LOL ARE HERE AND UR WORKS WILL BE DIMINUTIVE - - -Sounds good in theory Buckyboy...As for the reality thing...well...We stand on the merits of our track record all day. If you cannot at least match our track record as in right now as opposed to what you plan on doing...one day...perhaps...Your hot air means nothing to our kith and kindred...the brothers and sisters around the way lost in the foreign-venue: drama looking for a viable solution that they could see themselves with a vested interest in...so follow your own advice Buckyboy and "shut your pie hole"...mate---lol. Feel free to put our page a'stern and NEVER return. Don't worry, you won't be missed.

My intent was to show the concept, and hear how best an interaction, exchange and development an input can be demonstrated . . . e.g., a forum for the wide-spread sharing of the "Universal Health Plan" - - -We are having a second Healthcare-Forum however the primary-matter = expansion of the ranks of the care-providers with the certification for the care-providing within the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Non-Surgical: Universal-Healthcare-Plan. Healthcare-providers seeking certification have to go through the certification-process therein the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Department For The Health And Phytotherapy prior-to their being authorized-to: participate as care-providers therein the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Non-Surgical: Universal-Healthcare-Plan ; knowlege of law - - -This is off the table as we are not a law-firm nor a law-school thus the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Minister For The Law And Justice = precluded-from: any-such-activity governmetn - - -probably-off the table and national & international trade and navigation - - -possibly on the table in a limited-manner; etc. All of which the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government has so diligently mastered and demonstrate - - -And so can anyone else that puts in the work the way: His-Imperial-Majesty pushes us to do and does Himself. His-labors in this amaze as He is relentless. None of us grumble with the results though. According-to the record, you could have been pretty far along in your training or you could have started the amalgamation-proces into the National-Family by now since our interaction with you goes back over: 2: Earth-years. . . for the uplift of the Asiatic nation(s) for our continued success in producing "for, by and of the Moors".

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Re: Other developments in need of investigation & clarification

Having read past informatin on the Empress of Washitaw De Dugdahmoundyah, and being privy to a conference call with her son Jo and other staff claiming her approval of a change in course -- "artificial-recognition" -- in full disregard of her life's work, sufferings and accomplishments - - - Unless the Empress gave another other than: Her-bloodline authority for the governance of the Washitaw and such claimant has the written-documentation providing the prima-facie: evidence of the same, "Jo" = sole-authority regarding the governance-issue unless the Empress specifies otherwise in a lawful-manner. All others have no standing. Without contravening-evidence, barring-proof of the Empress not transferring the regal-power of the Washitaw-Monarchy or abdicating or appointing a caretaker, pro-tempore, "Jo"by bloodline has the only lawful-claim unless "Jo" has a female-offspring as she would have the potentate-status: superior unto "Jo" as the Washitaw have been Matriarchial, since-time: out -of-mind (intent in this regard = clearly-established over the course-of-generations) ... I find it necessary if at all appropriate to have an investigative report on same - - -Not without standing to engage. What came accross was so contra that it leaves suspicion of "sell-out" and/or "incompetence" which in either case need to made known - - -Without standing, your opinion even if conceivable is moot.

MEANWHILE . . .FYI below are links concerning other activities that ought to be looked upon to-ward all unifying-efforts sought under our (5) Five:

http://www.goarchie.com/aashid/miamicircleorder.html -- How can this be abandoned? - - -Have not viewed this link http://www.muurishgansul.com/ --The Empress' hard-work-procured "215-93 international Standing and its application by the "Asiatic(s)" - - -Contracting with the privately-owned and operated: [U.N.] = rem and res: detrimental. We don't give legal-advice so don't ask for an explanation. Do your own research and figure this out.

http://www.wsbtv.com/video/17018923/index.html --The best way to address and/r prevent situations of this nature - - -Do not contract with parties and know how to navigate, in-general. This may be simply put however it is the truth plain and simple. Law library is better than a play station or x box anyday.

Submitted with respect and honor unto H.I.M. via the Noble National Ambassador.

Peace

P.S. --Knowing that Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government, is most qualified to address the need for an Asiatic: 1) Health Emergency Hotline; 2) Terrorist Emergency (as in the thugs comeing to unlawfully "kidnap"; 3) Bonding and/or advice on best Bonding mechanisms for the development, accumulation and utilization of resources; to name a few things inherent in the demonstration of self-sufficiency = sovereighty (in-part) - - -This constitutes giving legal-advice regarding a foreign-jurisdiction thus such activity = off the table. Thus, looking for the best way per Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government's perspective. Peace

In an effort to give clues to the clueless...

Diplomat is a status given by the host as a privilege not a right. Consequently the host has the ability to give this privilege or take it away at their discretion. Who has this privilege as a courtesy unto the corporate: [LIBERIA] from the foreign-venue? Dwight or Mal we wonder.

Mal/Dwight/whatever he is calling himself for the next 10 minutes...Since whoever he is for the moment contracted with those that are holding him he is not wrongfully held, he contractually agreed. Such agreement renders moot any subject matter. Not knowing how to navigate contract law on an international-level resulted in an unwanted vacation in thearea misnomer = [rocky mountains].

Voluntarily contracting precludes "constitutional" discussion as contracts make that argument moot.

Sent: Wednesday, August 13, 2008 3:47:03 PM
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] A clue for the clueless

SERIOUSLY, CAN U PROVE THAT HE CONTRACTED WITH THEM - - -Been there done that. If you comprehended what is spread all over the thousands of messages on this page you would not ask such a question...Can't give ya legal advice junior. You are seeing the effect of the cause as he is a secured party secured in [COLORADO]? THERE IS NOT ONE SHRED OF EVIDENCE - - -Since ya don't know how to navigate you would 'nt know the evidence if it broke your long skinny nose. HE ACCEPTED THE CHARGES FOR VALUE AND PAID 50,000,000.00 MILLION DOLLAR BOND TO SATISFY THE BID, PERFORMANCE, AND PAYMENT BOND - - - Ah yes...the unintelligent-commercial-crap, again...We asked you before about how well that worked for Dwight/Mal/whatever he is calling himself for the next: 10-minutes. To no surprise you did not answer however you did not have to as again...He is an- acceptance-for-value: secured in a foreign-venue: prison: party. We all clearly see how well that worked...or not. Most unfortunate as we would not wish that on anyone. BROTHER - - -BROTHER?Brother? Us and you as family the way you act on our page? When you act like a brother we shall treat you like one. Until then you are unworthy of the honor and privilege of being family unto anyone including us. U ARE THE ONE THAT DONT HAVE A CLUE - - - , U JUST HATE DR. YORK - - -We are not even one-fourth of the way feeling him that is true however we do not hate him. In fact we could care less and what his kool aid drinking followers "think" (as if yawl could) means even less to us. We are engaged and engaging in real work junior. Man up and help us out. All of the energy you waste on this pointless crap could be used to assist the kith and kindred seeking assistance and elevation from the muck and mire. THUS SHOWING THE HATE FOR YA SELF - - -. EYE REMEMBER WHEN EYE FIRST STARTING READING THE SCROLLS AND WOULD GO INTO THE BOOKSTORE - - -You read? With comprehension? So far we see no evidence to support that allegation. Do you listen to audiobooks to get your misinformation or something? IN BKLYN - - -What is this/that?, EYE USED TO BE LIKE "THIS NIGGA GOT HIS OWN TOOTHPASTE?" - - -Like we said...Ya been a street urchin for a long time. Disrespectful and dishonorable...Lacking comportment and deportment has been and is still is your way. You should choose to grow up, man up and be decent honorable, and respectful thus respectable. Ignorance, we grab and snap that crack head neck. EYE AM ABLE TO LOOK BACK AND SEE MY IGNORANCE - - -An you have exposed it on this page for a while now. There are scholars on here that have ripped your feeble skills and misinformation to shreds all the while you have cowered in the corner like a punk everytime we step to you about manning up. , CAN U STEP BACK FOR A MOMENT AND SEE URS - - -We are not perfect nor pious this we concede. However on the relevant points we stand on principle. How we present what we have... the manner of which regarding you may be 'acidic' as some would say. Nonetheless we have repeatedly said that if you respect our wished on this page we would show you love. You refuse so we engage you and we cc what we said on this page unto the many in our address book showing you as the uninformed mockery of your bloodline you have chosen to be at your own hand ?

Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] A clue for the clueless

Well said...Even the thick of skull should comprehend this!!! Whether they catch on or not remains to be seen. Thanks for the excellent imput

.

----- Original Message ----
From: Sharif Bey
To: NorthAmexemObservers@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Wednesday, August 13, 2008 4:13:22 PM
Subject: Re: [NorthAmexemObservers] A clue for the clueless

Islam,

Seriously, I'm waiting for the day when the so-called conscious Asiatics will stop plagerizing and reverse-engineering the work of Europeans like Jean Keating.

The person below mentions the submitting of a bond to "satisfy" GSA's forms, ie., BID BOND, PERFORMANCE BOND and PAYMENT BOND. If this in fact took place for Dr. York, there would be no need for the discussion of case particulars in any way, shape or form; the case particulars being rendered mute by the satisfying of the debt. Secondly, the supporters of Dr. York also claimed the court had no jurisdiction. Well, in playing the commercial game as evidenced by the submitting of bonds to satisfy a judgment, JURISDICTION IS ADMITTED, AS THE VENUE (HENCE JURISDICTION) IS EXPRESSED TO BE COMMERCIAL. Further, in the commercial arena, the Creditor, in satisfying a debt is acknowledging full responsibility. Creditors do not deny debt; they PAY IT. Lastly, the whole matter of the so-called creditor offering/submitting their own bond is NOT to satisfy the debt so to speak, but to enter a bid as the real creditor, since the court officers will not admit to being the creditor, nor want the real creditor to appear. To the experienced in these matters, this sounds like the "kitchen sink" demo, where ones throw everything but the kitchen sink, hoping that one of them will work.

Seriously... ones know just enough to get them jailed...or to talk big online. Stop plagerizing (read: FOLLOWING) the European. Dr. York was never interested in unity until the Roman soldiers came for him.

Re: ARE YOU MOORS READY TO TAKE THE GOVERNMENT NOW?

Since the corporate: [U.S.] is a for-profit: corporation, as-opposed-to-a-government and since there was only a smoke and mirrors: bait and switchan in-organic-structure, purported-as-a-[republic] being the end-result, the premise behind the question "are you Moors ready to take the government now" as described-therein the original-post is beyond moot. More importantly it requires the question...What government?

To that end the better-perspective is what independent: psycho-socioeconomic-structure = of, by, and for the Moors/government = of, by, and for the Moors is operational-underway with the fraud-countermeasures and accountability = firmly-in-place with the proven-track-record...right-now?

For those of you on this group-page that actually read with comprehension...For those of you that actually have a clue. For those of you that study what we place before you throughout the message section of this page...For those of you that studied what we present in the 100 plus videos we make a available that are viewable via youtube, google, yahoo, digg, myspace, et.al...For those of you that objectively view our track record and videos. For those of you that have not drunk the kool-aid...You already

(Message over 64 KB, truncated)

| 28397|2009-03-29 21:16:07|redheathergold|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
I am curious... Why do we accept the conclusion that we don't know what the Egyptian language sounds like when Coptic is still spoken? Isn't Coptic the Egyptian spoken language only written using the Greek alphabet? I'm sure modern Greek doesn't sound exactly like ancient Greek but no one seems to think we don't have any idea of what the ancient Greeks sounded like.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Investigating this topic further, I noticed a similarity in how Gardner grouped the Hieroglyphics and how the Bantu noun classes are classified. Again, we are investigating whether the nature of the unique Bantu affixes gave rise to the method employed by the hieroglyphic script which primarily utilized consonants and what Egyptologists call determinatives. Ultimately we are seeing if some of the determinatives are in actuality affixes (i.e., noun class prefixes).
>
> GARDINER HIEROGLYPHIC SIGN CATEGORIES
>
> 1 A. Man and his Occupations
> 2 B. Woman and her Occupations
> 3 C. Anthropomorphic Deities
> 4 D. Parts of the Human Body
> 5 E. Mammals

> 6 F. Parts of Mammals
> 7 G. Birds
> 8 H. Parts of Birds
> 9 I. Amphibious Animals, Reptiles, etc.
> 10 K. Fish and Parts of Fish
> 11 L. Invertebrates and Lesser Animals
> 12 M. Trees and Plants
> 13 N. Sky, Earth, Water
> 14 O. Buildings, Parts of Buildings, etc.
> 15 P. Ships and Parts of Ships
> 16 Q. Domestics and Funerary Furniture
> 17 R. Temple Furniture and Sacred Emblems
> 18 S. Crowns, Dress, Staves, etc.
> 19 T. Warfare, Hunting, Butchery
> 20 U. Agriculture, Crafts, and Professions
> 21 V. Rope, Fiber, Baskets, Bags, etc.
> 22 W. Vessels7 of Stone and Earthenware
> 23 X. Loaves and Cakes
> 24 Y. Writings, Games, Music
> 25 Z. Strokes, Signs derived from Hieratic, Geometrical Figures
> 26 Aa. Unclassified
>
> BANTU NOUN CLASS PREFIX CATEGORIES
>
> Noun Class Meanings
> 1/2 humans, other animates
> 1a/2a kinship terms, proper names
> 3/4 trees, plants, non-paired body parts, other inanimates
> 5/6 fruits, paired body parts, natural phenomena
> 6 liquid masses
> 7/8 manner
> 9/10 animals, inanimates
> 11 long thin objects, abstract nouns
> 12/13 diminutives
> 14 abstract nouns, mass nouns
> 15 infinitive
> 16,17,18 locatives (near, remote, inside)
> 19 diminutive
> 20/22 augmentive (diminutive)
> 21 augmentive pejorative
>
> For the most part we can see that both the Egyptians and the Bantu speakers divided their speech into categories. Although we assume we can't pronounce the Egyptian, we can see that their written language definitely followed this convention. In my opinion, I don't see why the ancient Egyptians would divide the script into categories like this if it they were not already conscious of this presence in their speech. I would assume the written language is simply following the patterns of the spoken language. The next step would be to find examples in the written language where we could possibly see this convention in action.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Asar Imhotep asar_imhotep@... wrote:
>
> From: Asar Imhotep asar_imhotep@...
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 8:57 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Peace Phamily
>
> I am not sure if everyone is familiar with Dr Mubabinge Bilolo, but he is a linguist and Egyptologist out Kinshasa, Congo. If you have not heard of him, I recommend that you look him up and try to find his works. I put him in the category of Diop and Obenga par excellence.
>
> One of his 2005 discussions argues that the Egyptian Language is essentially a Bantu language. And that proto-bantu would be pre-pharaonic and would belong to the Proto-Negro- African super language family as argued by Obenga. One of the interesting notions proposed by him is that the determinatives serve also as pre and suffixes characteristic of the Bantu languages.

>
> If true, I think we need to do a reevaluation of the role Bantu pre/suffixes play in the spoken language and see how we can apply that to the possible development of the Egyprian written > script.
>
> Dr. Fu-Kiau in his work Self-Healing Power and Therapy makes an interesting comment about initiated names (names given to people who have successfully completed initiation). He states:
>
> "This name, in the process of calling or writing, comes after the formal name, e.g., FU-KIAU Kimbwandende, after which comes the informal name or the determining name, which is not, in reality, the name of the individual when linked with a preposition although it makes part of the entire name, e.t., Fu-Kiah (f) Kimbwadnde (i) Kia (pr) Bunseki (inf)." (1991: 14)
>
> (f) = formal name
> (i) = informal name
> (pr) = preposition
> (inf) = informal name
>
> Basically what he stating is that among the people of the Kongo (lingala speakers) you have the name you were born with (formal name), the name after initiation (initiation name) and and informal name (usually > the name of a relative). The informal name is always known as an informal name if it is linked by a preposition, in the above example it would be the word Kia (dia, wa, ma, lwa -- meaning of, from, belonging to, son/daughter of)
>
> Although the informal name or determining name is part of the overall name, it is not a part of the name of the person. We would consider it the last name but it is the name of the mother or father and in some cases the grandparents.
>
> What's interesting for me is that in the spoken language, the informal name shows relation as a means of clarifying the formal names, but is not considered a part of the name, yet is a part of the name.
>
> A similar relationship exist in the Mdw Ntr with the determinatives. For the determinatives, . by our understanding, are a part of the written word, but is not considered part of the pronunciation of the word, but an indispensable part > of the word because it shows relationship between signs.

>
> I wonder if there is more to this and could this type of paradigm, coded into the Bantu languages regarding formal names of persons, be a fossil of a way of thought which helped to shape the structure of the Egyptian written language? And could this line of thinking also lead to a better understanding of the role of the Egyptian determinative for clarifying the glyphs, but also serving as a pre or suffix for the root words themselves?
>
> I guess a good starting point would be to list all of the known Bantu Affixes and their roles, then look at the Egyptian determinatives and see which ones would be good candidates to represent certain affixes among the Bantu languages. For example, if you see a word with the determinative as a "man," we could assume, if our theory is correct, that the man would represent the person noun class prefix of MU- as in MUNTU. If our contention is correct, > then we could assume that the normal plural determinatives of a man or woman would be BA- as in BANTU.
>
> To start to understand the Bantu affixes, I recommend everyone download Linkie Mohlala's master's thesis dissertation at this link: http://upetd. up.ac.za/ thesis/available /etd-03152004- 104546/
>
> Ancestrally,
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
| 28398|2009-03-29 21:17:08|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Fwd: unbelievable|

Attachments :

Yeah, we know what they really fear is the black penis. It is at the root of the hatred, and injustice throughout the world. The fear of being genetically annihilated.

From: Tafari khumbaka
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 3:39 PM
To: maatcollective@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fwd: unbelievable

wow!!!

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, memphisegypt wrote:

From: memphisegypt
Subject: Fwd: unbelievable

Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 4:55 PM

Peace and Love Black People,
Sent: Tue, 24 Feb 2009 11:12 am
Subject: Fw: Fwd: unbelievable

Peace, Love & Blessings,

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: ja thompkins <lekadajkt@yahoo.com>
To: jada <jada_thompkins@rfcuny.org>; marvin <marvolous720@aol.com>; awa diaw <adiaw@bowdoin.edu>; Aaliyah <heavenssent12@aol.com>; billy <blance24@yahoo.com>; Theodore Dweh <blacktee9@yahoo.com>; Carl Hewitt <hewitt.carl@gmail.com>; Jessica Mejia <coolloser01@yahoo.com>; Dean <firetowerlane11@yahoo.com>; William Franklin <lordofthe_stringz@hotmail.com>; Jonathan Montes <Jmont@rfcuny.org>; catherine small <catkity2@aol.com>; uncle alonzo <zomanel@yahoo.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 24, 2009 12:08:12 AM
Subject: Fw: Fwd: unbelievable

--- On Sun, 2/22/09, Erick Steele <ecs3xs@yahoo.com> wrote:

> This a real museum exhibit in New York City that was shut down before the gallery could be opened to the public.
>
> # The Assassinaton of Barack Obama: Freedom of expression or racism?

A controversial art exhibit was raided and shut down before it could be viewed in NYC yesterday.

According to the NY Times blog: Cityroom <http://cityroom.blogs.nytimes.com/2008/06/04/police-shut-down-assassination-art-exhibition/%3E; <http://cityroom.blogs.nytimes.com/2008/06/04/police-shut-down-assassination-art-exhibition/>; , Boston-born performance artist, Yazmany Arboleda, tried to set up a provocative art exhibition in a vacant storefront on West 40th Street in Midtown Manhattan with the title, "The Assassination of Hillary Clinton/The Assassination of Barack Obama".

The artist thought his racist views were protected under the Constitution because he was expressing himself through his art. Wrong.

Not 30 minutes after Arboleda set up the gallery across the street from the New York Times building, police, feds and secret service swooped in to shut the art exhibit down. While police covered the offensive storefront window with brown paper, Arboleda was led away in handcuffs to be "interrogated".

Arboleda, 27, learned the hard way that freedom has its limits. Later, in an interview, he said: "It's art. It's not supposed to be harmful. It's about character assassination about how Obama and Hillary have been portrayed by the media." He added, "It's about the media."

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

| 28399|2009-03-29 21:19:08|odhiambo okecth|Fw: [africa-oped] This is Lake Victoria|
Attachments :

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, odhiambo okecth wrote:

Fahoo.co.uk, madaraka-kenya@yahoogroups.com
Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 10:12 AM

Can Kazi Kwa Vijana help these people of Kisumu who have been disinherited of the

Oto

| 28400|2009-03-29 21:19:20|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: My Humble Apologies|
What does homophobic have to do with anything? And why is it unfortunate that African people prepare the original way of God, which was a man and a woman?

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 1:03 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies

I was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

> Greetings

Pham

> I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.

> I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.

> As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.

> I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.

> So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.

> I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.

> Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.

>
> Asar Imhotep
>
href="http://www.asarimhotep.com">http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
> --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> >
> > Peace and blessings,
> >
> > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > think we are in alot of trouble.
> >
> > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > in disagreement.
> >
> > That
tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> >
I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren' s destiny.
> >
> > Much respect,
> >
> >
E.
> >
> >
>

| 28401|2009-03-29 21:21:50|Peter Gray|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
Dear redheathergold,

It would be great if youd give us the scientific reference(s) for the compositional analysis of the greenish gold foundin Mozambique. Many thanks. This stuff is very specific evidence.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: redheathergold@yahoo.com
Date: Sat, 28 Mar 2009 03:06:34 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?

I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods" and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically. Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".

Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt. White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went. One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt geographically is Southern Central Africa.

One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us. She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the oldest ethnic group on earth.

As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive, they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
| 28402|2009-03-29 21:22:04|Lamar Perryman|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Materialists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM

I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
>
> To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com

From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many other normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part c perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these ty mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mor Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

| 28403|2009-03-29 21:34:26|Asar Imhotep|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
The reason why you do not know how anything sounded is because we have no recording devices that captured how they spoke. We make inferences about ancient Egyptian phonology based on living languages that have changed throughout the course of time. The Coptic is the last written stage of ancient Egyptian, but does not represent the actual sounds of the ancient Egyptians.

What you see is an approximation of phonetics based on the Greek language. The Greek language did not have the exact sound values as did the AE. So you can't use Coptic fully to address Ancient Egyptian phonetic values. Although African languages change slower than most, all we have to look at is the various Bantu languages in which we've examined on this forum.

Some of these Bantu languages are tonal and some semi-tonal. Some have no tones at all (Like Kiswahili). Yet these Bantu languages, as Obenga and Bilolo have proven, have strong affinities with ancient Egyptian. But so does Wolof and so does Yoruba. Wolof is not tonal, but Yoruba is. So which one of these has the correct sound values for ancient Egyptian? You don't know. So always think in approximates, not absolutes.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, redheathergold wrote:
From: redheathergold
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 6:16 PM

I am curious... Why do we accept the conclusion that we don't know what the Egyptian language sounds like when Coptic is still spoken? Isn't Coptic the Egyptian spoken language only written using the Greek alphabet? I'm sure modern Greek doesn't sound exactly like ancient Greek but no one seems to think we don't have any idea of what the ancient Greeks sounded like.

-

| 28404|2009-03-29 21:41:26|Mahari Mengistu|Re: My Humble Apologies|
Well, are you opposed to, non-accepting of the diversity of life?
Or let me put it to you bluntly and see what kind of heart you have. Are you therefore - if you are non-accepting of homosexuals - in favor of them being annihilated- dispensed with, or what?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> What does homophobic have to do with anything? And why is it unfortunate that African people prepare the original way of God, which was a man and a woman?
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 1:03 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
>
>
> I was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
> I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.
> HTP,

> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
> >
> > Greetings Pham
> >
> > I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.
> >
> > I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.
> >
> > As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.
> >
> > I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.
> >
> > So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.
> >
> > I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.
> >
> > Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > http://www.asarimhotep.com
> >
> >
> >

> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace and blessings,
> > >
> > > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > > think we are in alot of trouble.
> > >
> > > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > > in disagreement.
> > >
> > > That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> > > I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > > > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren's destiny.
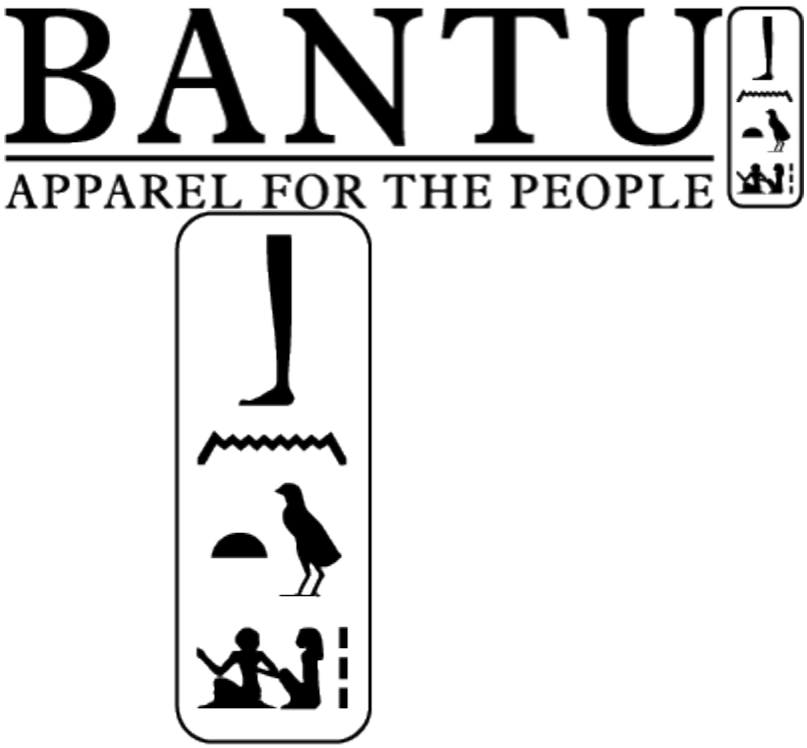
> > >
> > > Much respect,
> > >
> > > E.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>
| 28405|2009-03-30 06:08:42|Asar Imhotep|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
Greetings Redheathergold



I appreciate your response to my inquiry, but I am not sure what was stated is in alignment with my general premise. This particular discussion concerns the possibility of the Ancient Egyptian determinatives having an affixal value in the written language. We seek to see if the Bantu Nominal Noun Class prefixes can give us some clues as to how this process played out in the Ancient Egyptian language.

For us, the question of Bantu speakers in ancient Egypt has already been established. And we no longer argue the African origins of Egyptian civilization. That has already been established for us since the early 20th century, and has come to a final consensus with UNESCO's conference in 1974 where Chiekh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga presented their case for an African cultural, historical and linguistic make-up of ancient Egyptian civilization.

We seek now to further understand the nature and reason behind ancient Egyptian cultural expressions by examining, systematically, the living cultures of present day Africa since these cultural expressions have already been illuminated.

So this particular thread concerns understanding a linguistic component that will further help us to understand the structure of Ancient Egyptian written languages.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, redheathergold wrote:
From: redheathergold
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 10:06 PM

I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods" and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically. Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".

Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt. White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went. One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt geographically is Southern Central Africa.

One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us. She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the oldest ethnic group on earth.

As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive, they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?

| 28406|2009-03-30 08:18:26|Paul Kekai Manansala|Nubia: Lost civilisation of Egypt|

Treasures of Nubia like Philae were saved, but dozens of villages disappeared

By Yolande Knell
BBC News, Aswan
http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/middle_east/7963042.stm

The Sun Temple at Abu Simbel is a popular tourist attraction which has featured in well-known films like Death on the Nile and The Mummy Returns but had it been left where Ramses II built it 35 centuries ago, it would now be under water.

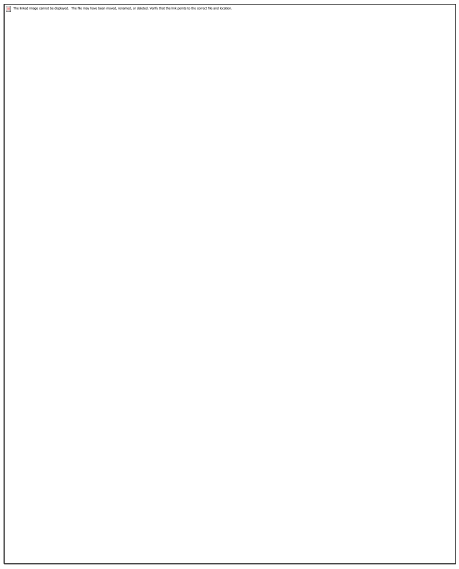
Fifty years ago this year Egypt and Sudan asked for international help to save ancient sites threatened by the construction of the Aswan High Dam.

"It was going to submerge all the area of Nubia - monuments, people, the landscape, everything," says Costanza de Simone from the United Nations' culture agency, Unesco.

"So the two governments launched an appeal to Unesco.

"The work brought people from all over the world into Nubia, people with different backgrounds: archaeologists, engineers and geologists. They had to invent new methods and techniques.

"It changed the vision of how to preserve cultural heritage."



Over two decades the race to carry out large-scale excavations uncovered thousands of artefacts and huge monuments were carefully cut into blocks and dismantled before being rebuilt in new locations.

The most famous are the temples of Abu Simbel and Philae.

"The Nubia campaign was very important," says the head of the Egyptian supreme Council of Antiquities, Zahi Hawass.

"It was the first time you saw such international cooperation.

"Egypt sent the message that our monuments don't just belong to Egypt - they belong to everyone - and that is why so many different countries participated."

The Abu Simbel temple was cut up and moved between 1964 and 1968

Uprooted people

Experts who worked on the salvage projects are celebrating the anniversary of the campaign with events at the Nubia Museum in Aswan this week.

It was built after they finished work to display their finds and explain the distinct history of the Nubian people.

Tens of thousands of Nubians were moved from their ancestral homeland along the Nile - in southern Egypt and northern Sudan - because of the dam.

When I dream, I never dream in my village now. All my dreams are in our old Nubian one

Abdallah Abdul Fattah

Many were resettled in the desert where they were unable to practise agriculture and young people left in search of work. Uprooted, they began to lose Nubian languages and customs.

"The Nubia Museum was a gift for those who sacrificed their homeland," says the director, Osama Abdul Waruth, who is Nubian himself.

"Nubian culture is one of the oldest and richest in Africa and dates back before Egyptian civilisation although this later overtook it.

"The original environment of the Nubian is to be on the shore of the Nile. It is the source of life itself - but also our myths and traditions.

"In the desert, Nubians are kept away from all their intangible heritage connected to the Nile. The living culture will disappear soon if they do not go back home."

Dreaming of home

Nubians have long been fighting to return to land by Lake Nasser, close to their original villages. It is widely believed that economic and security concerns have kept them away.

However there have been recent signs the authorities' attitudes could be changing.

Nubians have a distinct culture from the Egypt civilisation further down the Nile

The governor of Aswan has announced plans to build almost 5,000 new Nubian homes at a site chosen by community elders.

Abdallah Muhammad Abdul Fattah was a child when his family left its village in 1964.

"I still remember it with sorrow with a broken heart - you can imagine what is your feeling when you are prevented from going to your native land," he says.

"When I dream, I never dream in my village now. All my dreams are in our old Nubian one."

At a gathering to lay the cornerstone for the new development, Mr Abdul Fattah smiled broadly as Nubian children sang of the beauty of Aswan.

"All the Nubians are very happy because they are about to return to their motherland."

| 28407|2009-03-30 08:19:44|Marc Taylor|Re: Fw: [africa-oped] This is Lake Victoria|

Excellent pictures, I would love to visit Kenya one day what type of crops are those?

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of odhiambo okecth
Sent: Saturday, March 28, 2009 12:20 PM
To: mbonbani@yahoogroups.com; mulembe; mwananchi; mwanyagetinge@yahoogroups.com; Nation; net-kenya@yahoogroups.com; News Desk; NewVisionKenya@yahoogroups.com; panafricanist; progressiveminds; siasa; SonsofAfrika@yahoogroups.com; Standard; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com ; trueblackness@yahoogroups.com; youngprofessionals_ke@googlegroups.com; youthagenda
Cc: mediakenya@yahoo.co.uk; mwananchi@egroups.com; Nation TV; Africare- NewPublications; newvisionkenya@egroups.com; next_kenya@yahoogroups.com; pointb@eastandard.net; regionalnews@ppa.or.ke; smaitawi@yahoogroups.com; SOA@yahoogroups.com; Alpha Sports; Sunday Standard; TheBlackList@yahoogroups.com; ugandacom; citizens against violence; VOA; VOU
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: [africa-oped] This is Lake Victoria

--- On Sat, 3/28/09, odhiambo okecth wrote:

Fahoo.co.uk, madaraka-kenya@ yahoogroups. com
Date: Saturday, March 28, 2009, 10:12 AM

Can Kazi Kwa Vijana help these people of Kisumu who have been disinherited of the Lake ?

Oto
| 28408|2009-03-30 08:20:02|Sekmet|SHOULD AFRICAN PEOPLE BE DOWN WITH NUCLEAR WEAPONS & TECHNOLOGY?|
GET THAT VOTE ON: Some would prefer you didn't think! Some would prefer that you don't take action. What Up?
http://www.blackconsciousness.com/nvmar09.html

Should Black / Afrikan people develop and study to control their own nuclear, computer & satellite technology endeavors?
http://www.blackconsciousness.com/nvmar09.html

Support Black Youth, Support Black Business!
DON'T SUPPORT NEGRO BEHAVIOR!
Do something productive for your people!
| 28409|2009-03-30 08:20:30|Ferg|Re: MAMA|
Tafari.
How interesting. The key here is the word 'seed'.
Does this suggests thatmother was originally'bisexual' ?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Tafari khumbaka
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 7:01 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
>
> After Ausar was murdered.... ... Auset went to ancient Ka-Anu(canaan) and taught the crown prince there ,the arts of initiation (the fire ritual of Ra) and through engendering his devotion she was able to retrived the body of ausar petrified in a tamarisk Tree.

all that Ausar was becamedcodified and hybernated in the tree of Ka-Anu.. The great mother-Mut thru her own energetic sexual dynamic by way of devotion rose up the dead phallance of Ausarby way of her Ra-Hekau (Ra thru the masterbatory act creates mankind/male &female) and like her father Ra immaculately concieves.

the above shows great insight into what science in our modern age has determined , that the female is the Genectrix the primal matrical determinative of evolution.
The so-called woman's seed is a fact that is evident under the modern microscope, that many teen age girls morph into boys and that women can by way of a much less invasive and harsh procedure be turned into men by modern m.d.'s, is mild evidence speaking of a time when our progenator species was A/sexual .
The hard evidence is in the chromosomes.
---------- --------- --------- --------- -
The Ka
also I think u should look into the ancient Ka symbol of the mother as the cow of heaven/Pet as her 4 hunches are sometimes drawned as large Y symbols that the Aten enters and leaves thru the 12 hrs of the night initiation/Ra ritual ,.
the old Y=ka symbol as the supports of Nut are also analagous to the 4 sons of Heru (bull of his mother) Heru-Ur can be likened too Ra manifest in the initiates Grand task/cross road situations in his/her lifetimes.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
please, forgive grammatical mistakes, and egnorance.

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 12:05 PM

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28410|2009-03-30 08:20:34|Ferg|Re: MAMA|
Asar
The linguist Merrit Ruhlen has examined the etymology of the word MAMA and says that the terms such as MAMA mother, PAPA, father are kin terms and are sound symbolic. Such terms have been known to occur in languages around the world. Ruhlen gives the evidence from the Russian linguist Roman Jakobson who proposed a solution to the MAMA problem. He suggests that words such as MAMA, PAPA occurred so widely around the world because the consonants M and P and the vowel ?A? are among the first sounds learned by children. Ruhlen disputes this by citing other examples of words which do not obey this rule. Ruhler concludes that the word MAMA must have a genetic component and MAMA or PAPA must be the result of common origin and not of convergence which is defined as objects which were originally different have come to resemble each other.
I would like to add further evidence to my description of the word MAMA.
Recall: The etymology of the word MAMA is derived from the act of giving suck to an infant at its mother?s breast. The suckling process involves the intake of air and milk which in turn give a burbling sound MAA, or MAMA a natural sound of breathing and satisfaction resulting from the suckling process. The word for MAMA is derived from AMA, to give suck.
Upon researching the word MAMA further and observing that a suckling infant remains quiet for a time, then peruses to suck again indicates that the action of speech resemble those of a dumb person who can only mutter the syllable MAMA. This is the evidence derived from the Luvale-Bantu language for the word MAMA means mother and MAMA is the utterance of incoherent sounds as a dumb person trying to speak. Could this scenario be a valid case which determines the etymology of MAMA to become a genetically inherited word of common origin which made its way around the world?
Somo

----- Original Message -----
From: Asar Imhotep
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 6:05 PM
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28411|2009-03-30 08:24:52|SaNu Tepra|Re: A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage|
I admire the work and effort of both Ashra Kwesi and Ray Hagin inelevating the consciouness of our people, so I'm not biased in favor of one or the other. That said, I have the following observations:
1. The video "response", such as it was, did nothing to address the substantive issues raised by Ray Hagin.Either Ashra Kwesi has been behaving ina shameful manner toward Ray Hagin or he has not. Hagin's exasperated response to what he says is Kwesi'sbad behavior is now being construed as an "outrage", when the question that should have been focused on is "did Bro Kwesi do or saythe thingsHagin accused him of doing and saying?" If the answer is "yes" then a) that speaks volumes about Kwesi's character and , b) Hagin's response was appropriate (except the "enemy" part, which I don't agree with), and c) Kwesi's followers lack the moral authority to accuse Hagin of being unfair by responding as he did. If the accusations are not true, then that would speak volumes about Hagin's character.
2. Within the context of traditional Afrikan culture,the fact that one is older does not in and of itself makeone an Elder. To be an Elder necessarilyentails demonstrating the ability toexhibit a high degree of maturity,wisdom,restraint &reconciliation when dealing with situations such as this. If you're an older person and behave like a petulant child, then you're not an Elder. All you are is an older person behaving like a petulant child.

Why do I get the feeling that we're having a repeat of the Black Panther Party vs the Us Organization conflict of the 60's? Could it be because in 2009 Black people who consider themselves conscious and Afrikan Centered still employ eurocentric methods of conflict resolution?

--- On Wed, 3/25/09, Nnabakyaala Afr?ka wrote:

From: Nnabakyaala Afr?ka
Subject: [Ta_Seti] A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage
To: undisclosed-recipients@nlpi051.prodigy.net
Date: Wednesday, March 25, 2009, 3:37 AM

This isone response to that horrible letter sent to the masses from Ray Hagins.
http://www.afrovide o.org/play. php?vid=5641
? ? ? ? ? ?
A Race Without Knowledge is Like a Tree Without Roots!

| 28412|2009-03-30 09:05:12|Asar Imhotep|Re: MAMA|
Peace Ferg

Even by that standard, we couldn't say then that any of the languages that use the term MAMA derived it from a Bantu language. Now, regardless of origin, everyone is not going to automatically come up with the term UMA to mean mother AND fireplace, hearth, or fire. It is these two combinations that I think makes a case for borrowing.

The term MAMA, if ultimately derived from your quote, would be Paleo-World as suggested by Greensberg. Another "global etymological" term for mother is AJA. I think a good read is an article by John D. Bengtson and Merritt Ruhlen titled Global Etymologies.

As far as the possible etymology for mother, I'm not quite sure I can buy that one either. I have a son who will be five next month, so his breast feeding days are fresh in my memory. The sound that a child makes is more of a smacking sound. I primarily can't go with the proposed solution because you can't say MAA sucking air in. You must push the lips forward and the sound is slightly breathed. That makes it impossible to say MAA or MAMA while sucking in liquids or air.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 8:54 AM

Asar

The linguist Merrit Ruhlen has examined the etymology of the word MAMA and says that the terms such as MAMA mother, PAPA, father are kin terms and are sound symbolic. Such terms have been known to occur in languages around the world. Ruhlen gives the evidence from the Russian linguist Roman Jakobson who proposed a solution to the MAMA problem. He suggests that words such as MAMA, PAPA occurred so widely around the world because the consonants M and P and the vowel A are among the first sounds learned by children. Ruhlen disputes this by citing other examples of words which do not obey this rule. Ruhler concludes that the word MAMA must have a genetic component and MAMA or PAPA must be the result of common origin and not of convergence which is defined as objects which were originally different have come to resemble each other.

I would like to add further evidence to my description of the word MAMA.

Recall: The etymology of the word MAMA is derived from the act of giving suck to an infant at its mothers breast. The suckling process involves the intake of air and milk which in turn give a burbling sound MAA, or MAMA a natural sound of breathing and satisfaction resulting from the suckling process. The word for MAMA is derived from AMA, to give suck.

Upon researching the word MAMA further and observing that a suckling infant remains quiet for a time, then peruses to suck again indicates that the action of speech resemble those of a dumb person who can only mutter the syllable MAMA. This is the evidence derived from the Luvale-Bantu language for the word MAMA means mother and MAMA is the utterance of incoherent sounds as a dumb person trying to speak. Could this scenario be a valid case which determines the etymology of MAMA to become a genetically inherited word of common origin which made its way around the world?

Somo

| 28413|2009-03-30 09:44:50|Li (wiseladyowl)|Re: A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage| good point brother!

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, SaNu Tepra wrote:

From: SaNu Tepra
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 11:23 AM

I admire the work and effort of both Ashra Kwesi and Ray Hagin inelevating the consciouness of our people, so I'm not biased in favor of one or the other. That said, I have the following observations:
1. The video "response", such as it was, did nothing to address the substantive issues raised by Ray Hagin.Either Ashra Kwesi has been behaving ina shameful manner toward Ray Hagin or he has not. Hagin's exasperated response to what he says is Kwesi'sbad behavior is now being construed as an "outrage", when the question that should have been focused on is "did Bro Kwesi do or saythe thingsHagin accused him of doing and saying?" If the answer is "yes" then a) that speaks volumes about Kwesi's character and , b) Hagin's response was appropriate (except the "enemy" part, which I don't agree with), and c) Kwesi's followers lack the moral authority to accuse Hagin of being unfair by responding as he did. If the accusations are not true, then that would speak volumes about Hagin's character.
2. Within the context of traditional Afrikan culture,the fact that one is older does not in and of itself makeone an Elder. To be an Elder necessarilyentails demonstrating the ability toexhibit a high degree of maturity,wisdom,restraint &reconciliation when dealing with situations such as this. If you're an older person and behave like a petulant child, then you're not an Elder. All you are is an older person behaving like a petulant child.
Why do I get the feeling that we're having a repeat of the Black Panther Party vs the Us Organization conflict of the 60's? Could it be because in 2009 Black people who consider themselves conscious and Afrikan Centered still employ eurocentric methods of conflict resolution?

--- On Wed, 3/25/09, Nnabakyaala Afr?ka wrote:

> From: Nnabakyaala Afr?ka
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] A Video Response to The Ray Hagins Outrage
> To: undisclosed- recipients@ nlpi051.prodigy. net
> Date: Wednesday, March 25, 2009, 3:37 AM
>
> This isone response to that horrible letter sent to the masses from Ray Hagins.
> http://www.afrovide o.org/play. php?vid=5641
> ? ? ? ? ? ?
> A Race Without Knowledge is Like a Tree Without Roots!

| 28414|2009-03-30 10:38:03|Obadele (abibitumikasa.com)|Reminder: FREE Online Yoruba Class tonight at 7PM EST|

Feel free to come and check out how the class goes

If you're interested in REGISTERING for a class follow these four simple steps to SUCCESSFUL registration for class:

Have you registered for the class:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/register.html

Have you submitted payment for the class:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/payment.html

Have you registered and logged into the forums:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/register.php

Have you clicked on member classroom (where the classes are held):
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/chat/flashchat.php

Learn to hook up your audio and/or webcam for class and more at:
http://www.abibitumikasa.com/forums/video-tutorials-how-abibitumi-kasa/

Live Interactive Online and Accra, Ghana Afrikan Language Classes

Register for Free Afrikan Liberation Institute

Sign Up for AKALI Mailing List

Abibitumi Kasa Fundraiser

| 28415|2009-03-30 11:48:54|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Mr. Perryman,

I was unaware of having presupposed so much. If your position is that the science of evolution is wrong, so be it. But I can only offer my insights based on my own reading/understanding of history and science. Let's face it, neither of us knows "from whence did Man/Woman originate". I stand by my what I stated in my post. If it was not to your liking, so be it.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
CC: africanclassicalhistory@yahoogroups.co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@yahoo.com
Date: Sun, 29 Mar 2009 13:23:04 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"

Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM

I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many other normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these ty mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mor

> Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>
> [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>
> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to Windows Live and your favorite MSN content with Internet Explorer 8.

| 28416|2009-03-30 14:03:43|Tafari khumbaka|Re: MAMA|
asexual, bi as in biune the smai-taui or shutefnut figure in one,...
hahaha, not as is in modern profane literature.
seed of the woman is sometimes use in myth/ancient stories.
the immaculate concepcion is a idea of many mythes,.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Mon, 3/30/09, Ferg wrote:
> From: Ferg
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 3:47 AM
>
> Tafari.
> How interesting. The key here is the word 'seed'.
> Does this suggests thatmother was originally'bisexual' ?
> Somo
>
> > ----- Original Message -----
> > From: Tafari khumbaka

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 7:01 PM
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA

After Ausar was murdered.... ... Auset went to ancient Ka-Anu(canaan) and taught prince there ,the arts of initiation (the fire ritual of Ra) and through engendering hi was able to retrived the body of ausar petrified in a tamarisk Tree.
all that Ausar was becamedcodified and hybernated in the tree of Ka-Anu.. The gr
Mut thru her own energetic sexual dynamic by way of devotion rose up the dead p Ausarby way of her Ra-Hekau (Ra thru the masterbatory act creates mankind/male like her father Ra immaculately concieves.

the above shows great insight into what science in our modern age has determined female is the Genectrix the primal matrical determinative of evolution.
The so-called woman's seed is a fact that is evident under the modern microscope, age girls morph into boys and that women can by way of a much less invasive and procedure be turned into men by modern m.d.'s, is mild evidence speaking of a tim progenator species was A/sexual .
The hard evidence is in the chromosomes.
---------- --------- --------- --------- -
The Ka
also I think u should look into the ancient Ka symbol of the mother as the cow of h her 4 hunches are sometimes drawned as large Y symbols that the Aten enters and 12 hrs of the night initiation/Ra ritual ,.
the old Y=ka symbol as the supports of Nut are also analagous to the 4 sons of Her mother) Heru-Ur can be likened too Ra manifest in the initiates Grand task/cross r in his/her lifetimes.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
please, forgive grammatical mistakes, and egnorance.

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 12:05 PM

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the anci society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an exam follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KM God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28417|2009-03-30 21:01:45|Lamar Perryman|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Mr. Gray,
I respect your right to believe as you do.Iam not trying to convert you or even make you rethink your beliefs. However we are dealing with the exposure of minds and psyches to information especially in this society.
The topic that we are on requires more than just a focus on Origination it also requires a examination of evolution and its developments itself. My position, supported by ample knowledge and science, is that Darwinism is wrong and it 's THEORY and its science (psuedo-science) is not Evolution. Even considering human evolution in the light of darwinism is ariduculous position of almost educated insanity. Human evolution proves itself when we know that only kind produces like kind. No Darwinisnist yet has gotten pass that.
It (Darwinism) is as bankrupt as religion. That was my point. You do NOT have to change your belief system and I would not want you to feel that I am into trying to coerce you to do so. However I have a standard from the very start when discussingrealities and questions essential to man in the present time and long term.This has been since a early age Mr. Gray. I assure you that it is nothing personal but volitional.
Thank You and have a Nice Day Sir.
MLP,
MFN-American Federal Nationalists.

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 6:48 PM

Mr. Perryman,

I was unaware of having presupposed so much.. If your position is that the science of evolution is wrong, so be it. But I can only offer my insights based on my own reading/understandi ng of history and science. Let's face it, neither of us knows "from whence did Man/Woman originate".
I stand by my what I stated in my post. If it was not to your liking, so be it.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Sun, 29 Mar 2009 13:23:04 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"

Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM

I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda.... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previousl existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherw normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these typ mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mor

Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to Windows Live and your favorite MSN content with Internet Explorer 8.

| 28418|2009-03-30 21:02:06|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective... someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman

Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Crea and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species
Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the kno higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM

Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and e one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour th have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natu barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the V was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage display genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, thing might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste L seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of ev Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people acro poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administra government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherw normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these typ mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mon April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mon Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast.
Find out more.

| 28419|2009-03-30 21:02:30|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: My Humble Apologies|
Even if I were to comment or reply to your question, you would not be able to determine what kind of heart I have from one response/ fragment of who I am. I don?t comment on peoples sexual orientation. It is not my business. It is not my position to judge, or discriminate. To each his own. I live my life according to what I think is pleasing to the creator and I treat all people with respect. I questioned your comments because the argument between the two brothers, and even the comments by all the people who responded, had nothing to do with homophobia or sexual orientation. So it seemed to me that you were using this conversation to put forward your opinion of their opinion about this way of life. Just as you hold that against them, their views, there are some who love them for that. And they are entitled to loving them for that, just as they are entitled to expressing their opinions.
There is no argument against someone supporting the natural way, of a man and a woman. It is how all of us were created - by a man and a woman - and it is the only way humanity will survive - by way of the man and woman. I don?t condone violence or inappropriate behavior towards anyone, based on their life choices. I don?t spend my time hoping that homosexuals will be annihilated or dispensed with. I spend my time learning about the ways of our ancestors and trying to implement that into this society today.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 9:41 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies

Well, are you opposed to, non-accepting of the diversity of life?
Or let me put it to you bluntly and see what kind of heart you have. Are you therefore - if you are non-accepting of homosexuals - in favor of them being annihilated- dispensed with, or what?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, wrote:

>
> What does homophobic have to do with anything? And why is it unfortunate that African people prepare the original way of God, which was a man and a woman?

>
>
>
From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 1:03 PM
> To:
Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
>
>
> I
was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
> I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:
> >
> >
Greetings Pham
> >
> > I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.
> >
> > I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.
> >
> > As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.
> >
> >
I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.
> >
> > So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.

> >
> > I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.
> >
> >
Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> >
href="http://www.asarimhotep.com">http://www.asarimho tep.com
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In
href="mailto:Ta_Seti%40yahoogroups.com">Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace and
blessings,
> > >
> > > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > > think we are in alot of trouble.
> > >
> > > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > > in disagreement.
> > >
> > > That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> > > I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to

> > >
forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren' s destiny.
> > >
> > > Much respect,
> > >
> > > E.
> > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28420|2009-03-30 21:02:51|Nix Winter|Re: MAMA|
hi :)

I'm new here :)

I'm Nix. bows politely

I wonder which gender immaculate conception is more supportive of.. the idea that clean life comes from a woman without the touch of man, or that clean life comes from a woman who has only been touched by the divine.. either way, I expect it's saying life comes from women.

Evolutionarily speaking, I think it's been a very long time since our species line touched asexual reproduction. I think the concepts of bi sexuality though are more balanced and helpful to human culture than strong gender identification.

Anyway :) I'm glad to have found this group!

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 5:02 PM, Tafari khumbaka <tafari_sudra@yahoo.com> wrote:
asexual, bi as in biune the smai-taui or shutefnut figure in one,...
hahaha, not as is in modern profane literature.
seed of the woman is sometimes use in myth/ancient stories.
the immaculate concepcion is a idea of many mythes,.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:
From: Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk>
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 3:47 AM

Tafari.
How interesting. The key here is the word 'seed'.
Does this suggests thatmother was originally'bisexual' ?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Tafari khumbaka
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 7:01 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
>
> After Ausar was murdered.... ... Auset went to ancient Ka-Anu(canaan) and taught the cro > prince there ,the arts of initiation (the fire ritual of Ra) and through engendering his devoti > was able to retrived the body of ausar petrified in a tamarisk Tree.
> all that Ausar was becamedcodified and hybernated in the tree of Ka-Anu.. The great motl
> Mut thru her own energetic sexual dynamic by way of devotion rose up the dead phallanc > Ausarby way of her Ra-Hekau (Ra thru the masterbatory act creates mankind/male &fema > like her father Ra immaculately concieves.
>
> the above shows great insight into what science in our modern age has determined , that th
> female is the Genectrix the primal matrical determinative of evolution.
> The so-called woman's seed is a fact that is evident under the modern microscope, that ma > age girls morph into boys and that women can by way of a much less invasive and harsh > procedure be turned into men by modern m.d.'s, is mild evidence speaking of a time when > progenator species was A/sexual .
> The hard evidence is in the chromosomes.
> ---------- --------- --------- --------- -
> The Ka
> also I think u should look into the ancient Ka symbol of the mother as the cow of heaven/I > her 4 hunches are sometimes drawned as large Y symbols that the Aten enters and leaves t > 12 hrs of the night initiation/Ra ritual ,.
> the old Y=ka symbol as the supports of Nut are also analagous to the 4 sons of Heru (bull > mother) Heru-Ur can be likened too Ra manifest in the initiates Grand task/cross road situ > in his/her lifetimes.
>
>
> Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
> please, forgive grammatical mistakes, and egnorance.
>
> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, Asar Imhotep *yahoo.com wrote:
> From: Asar Imhotep yahoo.com>
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 12:05 PM

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg fsnet.co. uk> wrote:
From: Ferg fsnet.co. uk>
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28421|2009-03-30 21:18:45|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
i believe in the idea of an elegant universe, for me that means creative evolution..... but i feel and understand where u are,. I am only a creative evolutionist at this point in my life, when a better theory is proposed I will take it as the best guess and most reasonable hypothesis.
here is a book my person did not see as solidly rationale, but i would like to recommened it as you my have better insight due to your antievolution platform.
the book is not totally against evolution mind you, but it may help u in your search a lil
human devolution
a vedic alternative to darwinism
by. micheal a. cremo

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, gingerd2007@hotmail.com wrote:
From: gingerd2007@hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 12:22 PM

Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then presen the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. t fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or orig of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Scie and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionis done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
> Or
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
> > From: Peter Gray
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> > To: "Marc Washington"
> > Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
> >
> > Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
> >
> > However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherw normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these typ

mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor
April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mon
Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

| 28422|2009-03-30 21:29:57|Tafari khumbaka|Re: MAMA|
asexual progenitors of our species,yes in deed a very long time ago.lol.....
but mythic language is a way of talking and writing thats fanciful yet true ,a poetry thats bigger then its present day vernacular.
everthang that is has its place in the grand drama that is life.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Nix Winter wrote:
From: Nix Winter
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 4:16 PM

hi :)

I'm new here :)

I'm Nix. bows politely

I wonder which gender immaculate conception is more supportive of.. the idea that clean life comes from a woman without the touch of man, or that clean life comes from a woman who has only been touched by the divine.. either way, I expect it's saying life comes from women.

Evolutionarily speaking, I think it's been a very long time since our species line touched asexual reproduction. I think the concepts of bi sexuality though are more balanced and helpful to human culture than strong gender identification.

Anyway :) I'm glad to have found this group!

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 5:02 PM, Tafari khumbaka <tafari_sudra@yahoo.com> wrote:

asexual, bi as in biune the smai-taui or shutefnut figure in one,...
hahaha, not as is in modern profane literature.
seed of the woman is sometimes use in myth/ancient stories.
the immaculate concepcion is a idea of many mythes,.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Ferg <egyptology@theunit. fsnet.co. uk> wrote:
From: Ferg <egyptology@theunit. fsnet.co. uk>
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 3:47 AM

Tafari.
How interesting. The key here is the word 'seed'.
Does this suggests thatmother was originally'bisexual' ?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Tafari khumbaka
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 7:01 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
>
> After Ausar was murdered.... ... Auset went to ancient Ka-Anu(canaan) and taught prince there ,the arts of initiation (the fire ritual of Ra) and through engendering his devotion she was able to retrived the body of ausar petrified in a tamarisk Tree.

all that Ausar was becamedcodified and hybernated in the tree of Ka-Anu.. The great mother-Mut thru her own energetic sexual dynamic by way of devotion rose up the dead phallance of Ausarby way of her Ra-Hekau (Ra thru the masterbatory act creates mankind/male &female) and like her father Ra immaculately concieves.

the above shows great insight into what science in our modern age has determined , that the female is the Genectrix the primal matrical determinative of evolution.
The so-called woman's seed is a fact that is evident under the modern microscope, that many teen age girls morph into boys and that women can by way of a much less invasive and harsh procedure be turned into men by modern m.d.'s, is mild evidence speaking of a time when our progenator species was A/sexual .
The hard evidence is in the chromosomes.
---------- --------- --------- --------- -
The Ka
also I think u should look into the ancient Ka symbol of the mother as the cow of heaven/Pet as her 4 hunches are sometimes drawned as large Y symbols that the Aten enters and leaves thru the 12 hrs of the night initiation/Ra ritual ,.
the old Y=ka symbol as the supports of Nut are also analagous to the 4 sons of Heru (bull of his mother) Heru-Ur can be likened too Ra manifest in the initiates Grand task/cross road situations in his/her lifetimes.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
please, forgive grammatical mistakes, and egnorance.

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Asar Imhotep yahoo.com> wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep yahoo.com>
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 12:05 PM

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep

http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg fsnet.co. uk> wrote:
From: Ferg fsnet.co. uk>
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28423|2009-03-31 06:46:42|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Thanks foryour response. I feel the same about your right to your own opinions as well.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
CC: black_freethinkers@yahoogroups.com
From: pharoahisrael@yahoo.com
Date: Mon, 30 Mar 2009 16:02:00 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray,
I respect your right to believe as you do.Iam not trying to convert you or even make you rethink your beliefs. However we are dealing with the exposure of minds and psyches to information especially in this society.
The topic that we are on requires more than just a focus on Origination it also requires a examination of evolution and its developments itself. My position, supported by ample knowledge and science, is that Darwinism is wrong and it 's THEORY and its science (psuedo-science) is not Evolution. Even considering human evolution in the light of darwinism is ariduculous position of almost educated insanity. Human evolution proves itself when we know that only kind produces like kind. No Darwinisnist yet has gotten pass that.
It (Darwinism) is as bankrupt as religion. That was my point. You do NOT have to change your belief system and I would not want you to feel that I am into trying to coerce you to do so. However I have a standard from the very start when discussingrealities and questions essential to man in the present time and long term.This has been since a early age Mr. Gray. I assure you that it is nothing personal but volitional.
Thank You and have a Nice Day Sir.
MLP,
MFN-American Federal Nationalists.

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 6:48 PM

Mr. Perryman,

I was unaware of having presupposed so much.. If your position is that the science of evolution is wrong, so be it. But I can only offer my insights based on my own reading/understandi ng of history and science. Let's face it, neither of us knows "from whence did Man/Woman originate".
I stand by my what I stated in my post. If it was not to your liking, so be it.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Sun, 29 Mar 2009 13:23:04 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then presen the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. t fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or orig of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Scie and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionis done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM

I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda.... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered pe This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peop (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previousl existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherw normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these typ mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A

April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mor Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to Windows Live and your favorite MSN content with Internet Explorer 8.

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
| 28424|2009-03-31 10:21:00|Asar Imhotep|Re: MAMA|
Peace Nix

We have to understand that in sociology we do not consider gender to be a biological thing. Gender is social. In the US we have two genders, while in some native American traditions they have three. So I don't think immaculate concept has much to do with gender.The term means to be "without blemish" and I think both males and females can be without blemish. But ultimately it will go to the female since only females can conceive life. So they can only "immaculately conceive"

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Nix Winter wrote:
From: Nix Winter
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 4:16 PM

hi :)

I'm new here :)

I'm Nix. bows politely

I wonder which gender immaculate conception is more supportive of.. the idea that clean life comes from a woman without the touch of man, or that clean life comes from a woman who has only been touched by the divine.. either way, I expect it's saying life comes from women.

Evolutionarily speaking, I think it's been a very long time since our species line touched asexual reproduction. I think the concepts of bi sexuality though are more balanced and helpful to human culture than strong gender identification.

Anyway :) I'm glad to have found this group!

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 5:02 PM, Tafari khumbaka <tafari_sudra@yahoo.com> wrote:

asexual, bi as in biune the smai-taui or shutefnut figure in one,...
hahaha, not as is in modern profane literature.
seed of the woman is sometimes use in myth/ancient stories.
the immaculate concepcion is a idea of many mythes,.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Ferg <egyptology@theunit. fsnet.co. uk> wrote:
From: Ferg <egyptology@theunit. fsnet.co. uk>
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 3:47 AM

Tafari.
How interesting. The key here is the word 'seed'.
Does this suggests thatmother was originally'bisexual' ?
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Tafari khumbaka
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 7:01 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA

After Ausar was murdered.... ... Auset went to ancient Ka-Anu(canaan) and taught the crown prince there ,the arts of initiation (the fire ritual of Ra) and through engendering his devotion she was able to retrived the body of ausar petrified in a tamarisk Tree.
all that Ausar was becamedcodified and hybernated in the tree of Ka-Anu.. The great mother-Mut thru her own energetic sexual dynamic by way of devotion rose up the dead phallance of Ausarby way of her Ra-Hekau (Ra thru the masterbatory act creates mankind/male &female) and like her father Ra immaculately concieves.

the above shows great insight into what science in our modern age has determined , that the female is the Genectrix the primal matrical determinative of evolution.
The so-called woman's seed is a fact that is evident under the modern microscope, that many teen age girls morph into boys and that women can by way of a much less invasive and harsh procedure be turned into men by modern m.d.'s, is mild evidence speaking of a time when our progenator species was A/sexual .
The hard evidence is in the chromosomes.
---------- --------- --------- --------- -
The Ka
also I think u should look into the ancient Ka symbol of the mother as the cow of heaven/Pet as her 4 hunches are sometimes drawned as large Y symbols that the Aten enters and leaves thru the 12 hrs of the night initiation/Ra ritual ,.
the old Y=ka symbol as the supports of Nut are also analagous to the 4 sons of Heru (bull of his mother) Heru-Ur can be likened too Ra manifest in the initiates Grand task/cross road situations in his/her lifetimes.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka
please, forgive grammatical mistakes, and egnorance.

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Asar Imhotep yahoo.com> wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep yahoo.com>
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 12:05 PM

Peace Ferg

I'm not quite sure I can follow this one. Especially when one assumes that the ancient iKami society was matriarchal as argued by Diop (Dual Cradle Theory). Is there an example we could follow in an actual Egyptian text that could possibly clarify this? I think seeing the term in action would better explain why they chose those glyphs versus something else. Also, we need to know if this spelling is common in ancient Egyptian texts, or is this a rare thing (like KMT with the God determinative) ?

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Ferg fsnet.co. uk> wrote:
From: Ferg fsnet.co. uk>
Subject: [Ta_Seti] MAMA
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 9:52 AM

Asar
Here is a possible explanation of the male symbol in pdf form.

| 28425|2009-03-31 16:20:00|Nix Winter|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from ones ancestor rather than ones cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.

To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the poisoning the well fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, <gingerd2007@hotmail.com> wrote:
Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?

According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective... someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Materialists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com> wrote:

> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups.com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present

"devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM

Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many other normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these ty mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mor Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

| 28426|2009-03-31 16:20:07|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Ok, thank you I will check it out.

From: Tafari khumbaka
Sent: Monday, March 30, 2009 9:18 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

i believe in the idea of an elegant universe, for me that means creative evolution... .. but i feel and understand where u are,. I am only a creative evolutionist at this point in my life, when a better theory is proposed I will take it as the best guess and most reasonable hypothesis.
here is a book my person did not see as solidly rationale, but i would like to recommened it as you my have better insight due to your antievolution platform.
the book is not totally against evolution mind you, but it may help u in your search a lil
human devolution
a vedic alternative to darwinism
by. micheal a. cremo

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, gingerd2007@ hotmail.com wrote:

From: gingerd2007@ hotmail.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 12:22 PM

Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?

According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then presen the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. t fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or orig of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Scie and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionis done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM

I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.

Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM

Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherw normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these typ mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mon April. So, April has much significance for me.

> > > To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mon
> > > Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
> > >
> > > [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
> > >
> > > "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
> > >
> > > Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> > > Check out my websites:
> > > http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum
> > >
> > > ---
> > > Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
> >
> > ---
> > Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

| 28427|2009-03-31 16:20:09|Nix Winter|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
So...

You believe that every human child is born perfectly, looking exactly like every other healthy member of our species looks and behaves like? There's no significant deviation?

Nix

> On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 7:02 PM, Lamar Perryman > <pharoahisrael@yahoo.com> wrote:
>
> Mr. Gray,
> I respect your right to believe as you do.Iam not trying to convert you or even make you rethink your beliefs. However we are dealing with the exposure of minds and psyches to information especially in this society.
> The topic that we are on requires more than just a focus on Origination it also requires a examination of evolution and its developments itself. My position, supported by ample knowledge and science, is that Darwinism is wrong and it 's THEORY and its science (psuedo-science) is not Evolution. Even considering human evolution in the light of darwinism is ariduculous position of almost educated insanity. Human evolution proves itself when we know that only kind produces like kind. No Darwinisnist yet has gotten pass that.
> It (Darwinism) is as bankrupt as religion. That was my point. You do NOT have to change your belief system and I would not want you to feel that I am into trying to coerce you to do so.

However I have a standard from the very start when discussingrealities and questions essential to man in the present time and long term.This has been since a early age Mr. Gray. I assure you that it is nothing personal but volitional.
Thank You and have a Nice Day Sir.
MLP,
MFN-American Federal Nationalists.

--- On Mon, 3/30/09, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com> wrote:

> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups.com>
> Date: Monday, March 30, 2009, 6:48 PM
>
> Mr. Perryman,
>
> I was unaware of having presupposed so much.. If your position is that the science of evolution is wrong, so be it. But I can only offer my insights based on my own reading/understandi ng of history and science. Let's face it, neither of us knows "from whence did Man/Woman originate".
> I stand by my what I stated in my post. If it was not to your liking, so be it.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Sun, 29 Mar 2009 13:23:04 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence Man/Woman originate ?
> And How ? ..... . By what means ???
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then presen the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. t fish, monkey, ape etc).
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or orig of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists
> belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Scie and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists)and Religionis done.

Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
> Or
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
> > From: Peter Gray
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> > To: "Marc Washington"
> > Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
> >
> > Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
> >
> > However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. Th seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events wo Rwanda.... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all cl poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, an government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in con over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circum this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 8 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaugh
This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. Th (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with mache crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members do human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, tempora waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many qu During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had p existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on th perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What > of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can t > mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

>
> April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a m > inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occ > April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and m > grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in > April. So, April has much significance for me.
>
> To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel th
> Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>
> [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>
> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to Windows Live and your favorite MSN content with Internet Explorer 8.

| 28428|2009-03-31 16:20:26|Nix Winter|Queen Te|
So is anyone doing research on Queen Te? I don't know much about her, or where to start, but I'm interested in starting. Any suggestions?

Nix
| 28429|2009-03-31 16:20:41|Nix Winter|Re: My Humble Apologies|

hi :)

If one accepts the evolutionary model of life, there was a time when our ancestors reproduced without male/female sexuality. Also, I would like to emphasis that conception, which can be achieved through violence or other unpleasant means historically, and through laboratory procedures now, does not constitute the whole portion needed for an individual to achieve self-sustaining life. An individual organism needs years of support from a community prior to achieving independence. Historically, that community has been formed by groups for frequently than monogamous mating pairs consisting of one male and one female. The predominate model in the world today is not that of one male and one female, but one male and several females. There are even parts of the world where one female and multiple males is the norm. Serial monogamy is also quite common. Sexuality, with it's inherent pleasures and tendency to socially stratify the participants, is a bonding behavior that serves the purpose of enhancing the likelihood that individuals will contribute needed resources to offspring. Homosexual, bi-sexual, and heterosexual behaviors are all contributive to the welfare of offspring and therefore continue to be seen in future generations.

While I understand that there is a sub-culture in current Western Society that feels the need to try to find support for their spiritual beliefs by defining social behavior and therefore inclusion and exclusion rituals according to sexuality, in the West most of those groups do not have the power to enforce artificial social structures. Individuals drawing emotional and spiritual grounding from inclusion in those groups may find it more useful to focus on internal spiritual practices rather than attempting to impose impossible to achieve and artificial social behaviors on the larger group.

Even in cultures where similarly motivated social groups retain the power of life and death, the urge to bond with other humans through sexuality is impossible to completely suppress. It is a deeply rooted instinct and has served our species well.

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:33 PM, <gingerd2007@hotmail.com> wrote:

Even if I were to comment or reply to your question, you would not be able to determine what kind of heart I have from one response/ fragment of who I am. I dont comment on peoples sexual orientation. It is not my business. It is not my position to judge, or discriminate. To each his own. I live my life according to what I think is pleasing to the creator and I treat all people with respect. I questioned your comments because the argument between the two brothers, and even the comments by all the people who responded, had nothing to do with homophobia or sexual orientation. So it seemed to me that you were using this conversation to put forward your opinion of their opinion about this way of life. Just as you hold that against them, their views, there are some who love them for that. And they are entitled to loving them for that, just as they are entitled to expressing their opinions.

There is no argument against someone supporting the natural way, of a man and a woman. It is how all of us were created - by a man and a woman - and it is the only way humanity will survive - by way of the man and woman. I dont condone violence or inappropriate behavior towards anyone, based on their life choices. I dont spend my time hoping that homosexuals will be annihilated or dispensed with. I spend my time learning about the ways of our ancestors and trying to implement that into this society today.

From: Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 9:41 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies

Well, are you opposed to, non-accepting of the diversity of life?
Or let me put it to you bluntly and see what kind of heart you have. Are you therefore - if you are non-accepting of homosexuals - in favor of them being annihilated- dispensed with, or what?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> What does homophobic have to do with anything? And why is it unfortunate that African people prepare the original way of God, which was a man and a woman?
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 1:03 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
>
>
> I was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
> I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
> >
> > Greetings Pham
> >
> > I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.
> >
> > I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.
> >

> > As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.
> >
> > I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.
> >
> > So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.
> >
> > I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.
> >
> > Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > http://www.asarimhotep.com
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace and blessings,
> > >
> > > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > > think we are in alot of trouble.
> > >
> > > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > > in disagreement.
> > >
> > > That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> > > I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > > > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren's destiny.
> > >

> > > Much respect,
> > >
> > > E.
> > >
> > >
> >
>

| 28430|2009-03-31 19:27:32|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Queen Te|

try :
stranger in the valley of the kings
Ahmed osman
(he has others also) black women in antiquity
Ivan Van Sertima
in praise of black women vol1 simone schwarz-Bart
tutankhamen
amenism,atenism and egyptian monotheism
Wallis Budge
the bible myth
african origin of the jewish people gary greenberg
(check out the egyptian library at your closest university)

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Tue, 3/31/09, Nix Winter wrote:
From: Nix Winter
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Queen Te
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Tuesday, March 31, 2009, 7:38 AM

So is anyone doing research on Queen Te? I don't know much about her, or where to start, but I'm interested in starting. Any suggestions?

Nix

| 28431|2009-03-31 22:03:07|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
Asar,
That logo is Fantastic!

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Greetings Redheathergold
>
> I appreciate your response to my inquiry, but I am not sure what was stated is in alignment with my general premise. This particular discussion concerns the possibility of the Ancient Egyptian determinatives having an affixal value in the written language. We seek to see if the Bantu Nominal Noun Class prefixes can give us some clues as to how this process played out in the Ancient Egyptian language.
>
> For us, the question of Bantu speakers in ancient Egypt has already been established. And we no longer argue the African origins of Egyptian civilization. That has already been established for us since the early 20th century, and has come to a final consensus with UNESCO's conference in 1974 where Chiekh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga presented their case for an African cultural, historical and linguistic make-up of ancient Egyptian civilization.
>
> We seek now to further understand the nature and reason behind ancient Egyptian cultural expressions by examining, systematically, the living cultures of present day Africa since these cultural expressions have already been illuminated.
>
> So this particular thread concerns understanding a linguistic component that will further help us to understand the structure of Ancient Egyptian written languages.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, redheathergold wrote:
> From: redheathergold
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 10:06 PM
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting
>
> finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that
>
> the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called
>
> Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
>
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
>
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
>
> Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
>
> Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be
>
> added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a > whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".
>
>
>
>
> Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
>
> White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
>
> locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those
>
> who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition
>
> to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other
>
> tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
>
> and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall
>
> paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact > that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.

>
>
> One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was
>
> a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is
>
> that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This
>
> gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now
>
> know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back
>
> from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can
>
> only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt
>
> geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
>
>
> One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
>
> the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly
>
> knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local
>
> leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar
>
> clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
>
>
> She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
>
> group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
>
>
> and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
>
> and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the
>
> oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
>

>
> As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many
>
> African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with
>
> large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me
>
>
> that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive,
>
> they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European
>
> women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>
| 28432|2009-03-31 23:21:31|Asar Imhotep|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Asar,
That logo is Fantastic!
HTP,
Mahari

****

Peace Mahari

It is part of a new line of shirts I've created which will be ready in like two weeks or so. Here are some of the design

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 12:02 AM

Asar,
That logo is Fantastic!
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Greetings Redheathergold
>
> I appreciate your response to my inquiry, but I am not sure what was stated is in alignment with my general premise. This particular discussion concerns the possibility of the Ancient Egyptian determinatives having an affixal value in the written language. We seek to see if the Bantu Nominal Noun Class prefixes can give us some clues as to how this process played out in the Ancient Egyptian language.
>
> For us, the question of Bantu speakers in ancient Egypt has already been established. And we no longer argue the African origins of Egyptian civilization. That has already been established for us since the early 20th century, and has come to a final consensus with UNESCO's conference in 1974 where Chiekh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga presented their case for an African cultural, historical and linguistic make-up of ancient Egyptian civilization.
>
> We seek now to further understand the nature and reason behind ancient Egyptian cultural expressions by examining, systematically, the living cultures of present day Africa since these cultural expressions have already been illuminated.
>
> So this particular thread concerns understanding a linguistic component that will further help us to understand the structure of Ancient Egyptian written languages.
>
>

>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, redheathergold wrote:
> From: redheathergold
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 10:06 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting
>
> finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that
>
> the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called
>
> Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
>
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
>
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
>
> Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
>
> Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be
>
> added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a

>
> whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".
>
>
>
> Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
>
> White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
>
> locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those
>
> who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition
>
> to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other
>
> tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
>
> and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall
>
> paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact
>
> that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.
>
> One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was
>
> a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is
>
> that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This
>
> gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now
>
> know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back
>
> from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can
>
> only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt
>
> geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
>
>
> One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
>
> the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly
>
> knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local > leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar

>
> clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
>
>
> She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
>
> group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
>
>
> and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
>
> and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the
>
> oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
>
>
> As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many
>
> African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with
>
> large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me
>
>
> that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive,
>
> they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European
>
> women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>

| 28433|2009-03-31 23:34:17|Mahari Mengistu|Re: My Humble Apologies|

>>Even if I were to comment or reply to your question, you would not be able to determine what kind of heart I have from one response / fragment of who I am<<

Well, I beg to differ. I am not able to draw your heart in thorough detail and proceed to notate every meaning of its workings and its intentions. But I was able to surmise a good deal about your heart from your reply. However, as I have said before and again before that we, black folk, seem to be waiting for an opportunity to start a conflict. So I will make this related post and end this and I will not make reference to any individuals:

It is not OK to attack or degrade or denigrate little people or unusually big people or fat people or mentally challenged people or weak people or blind people or handicapped/physically challenged people or any person or people who have no control over their status as a powerless minority. It is not OK... at any time. I will attack and I think it is one's duty to attack the oppressor or the bully. And I have done it numerous times on this forum. But it is my opinion that one who attacks a powerless person for being who he/she is is, at best, a coward and very likely hateful as well. And these hateful and/or cowardly people are very likely to have others like them who will love them for being hateful. Think of the pictures of the lynchings of black men AND WOMEN and those white folks standing around smiling like they were at a music concert. Just because you have your own entourage of haters doesn't make it right unless your goal is to have murderous hatred prevail in the world.
Yet, we are all imperfect people -including me ? and we have to work at living together with the good, bad and ugly amongst us and in us. And I am prepared to do it. But I am not prepared to accept abusive treatment or injustice from others against me or against others.
I think we can take lessons from Martin Luther King who said (to paraphrase) "Injustice against anyone is injustice against all of us".
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Even if I were to comment or reply to your question, you would not be able to determine what kind of heart I have from one response / fragment of who I am. I don't comment on peoples sexual orientation. It is not my business. It is not my position to judge, or discriminate. To each his own. I live my life according to what I think is pleasing to the creator and I treat all people with respect. I questioned your comments because the argument between the two brothers, and even the comments by all the people who responded, had nothing to do with homophobia or sexual orientation. So it seemed to me that you were using this conversation to put forward your opinion of their opinion about this way of life. Just as you hold that against them, their views, there are some who love them for that. And they are entitled to loving them for that, just as they are entitled to expressing their opinions.
>
> There is no argument against someone supporting the natural way, of a man and a woman. It is how all of us were created - by a man and a woman - and it is the only way humanity will survive - by way of the man and woman. I don't condone violence or inappropriate behavior towards anyone, based on their life choices. I don't spend my time hoping that homosexuals will be annihilated or dispensed with. I spend my time learning about the ways of our ancestors and trying to implement that into this society today.
>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 9:41 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
>
>

> Well, are you opposed to, non-accepting of the diversity of life?
> Or let me put it to you bluntly and see what kind of heart you have. Are you therefore - if you are non-accepting of homosexuals - in favor of them being annihilated- dispensed with, or what?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> >
> > What does homophobic have to do with anything? And why is it unfortunate that African people prepare the original way of God, which was a man and a woman?
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 1:03 PM
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
> >
> >
> > I was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
> > I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
> > >
> > > Greetings Pham
> > >
> > > I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr. Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.
> > >
> > > I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.
> > >
> > > As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.

> > >
> > > I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.
> > >
> > > So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.
> > >
> > > I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.
> > >
> > > Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.
> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep
> > > http://www.asarimhotep.com
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Peace and blessings,
> > > >
> > > > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > > > think we are in alot of trouble.
> > > >
> > > > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > > > in disagreement.
> > > >
> > > > That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> > > > I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > > > > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren's destiny.
> > > >
> > > > Much respect,
> > > >
> > > > E.

> > > >
> > > >
> > >
> >
>
| 28434|2009-03-31 23:40:29|Mahari Mengistu|Re: BANTU Apparel|
ASAR,YOU STOLE MY IDEA!!! You just can't trust anyone! lol
Those are great designs - very classy.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Asar,
>
> That logo is Fantastic!
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
> **********
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> It is part of a new line of shirts I've created which will be ready in like two weeks or so. Here are some of the design
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 4/1/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 12:02 AM
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar,
>
> That logo is Fantastic!
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
>
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> >
>
> > Greetings Redheathergold
>
> >
>
> > I appreciate your response to my inquiry, but I am not sure what was stated is in alignment with my general premise. This particular discussion concerns the possibility of the Ancient Egyptian determinatives having an affixal value in the written language. We seek to see if the Bantu Nominal Noun Class prefixes can give us some clues as to how this process played out in the Ancient Egyptian language.
>
> >
>
> > For us, the question of Bantu speakers in ancient Egypt has already been established. And we no longer argue the African origins of Egyptian civilization. That has already been established for us since the early 20th century, and has come to a final consensus with UNESCO's conference in 1974 where Chiekh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga presented their case for an African cultural, historical and linguistic make-up of ancient Egyptian civilization.
>
> >
>
> > We seek now to further understand the nature and reason behind ancient Egyptian cultural expressions by examining, systematically, the living cultures of present day Africa since these cultural expressions have already been illuminated.

>
> >
>
> > So this particular thread concerns understanding a linguistic component that will further help us to understand the structure of Ancient Egyptian written languages.
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > Asar Imhotep
>
> > http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > --- On Fri, 3/27/09, redheathergold wrote:
>
> > From: redheathergold
>
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
>
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
>
> > Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 10:06 PM
>

> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting
>
> >
>
> >
>
> finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that
>
> >
>
> >
>
> the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called
>
> >
>
> >
>
> Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
>
> >
>
> >
>
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
>
> >
>
> >
>
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
>

> >
>
> > Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
>
> >
>
> > Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be
>
> >
>
> > added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a
>
> >
>
> > whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
>
> >
>
> > White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
>
> >
>
> > locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those
>
> >
>
> > who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition
>
> >
>
> > to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other
>
> >
>
> > tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
>
> >
>

> > and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall
>
> >
>
> > paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact > > that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.
>
> >
>
>
> >
>
> > One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was
>
> >
>
> > a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is
>
> >
>
> > that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This
>
> >
>
> > gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now
>
> >
>
> > know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back
>
> >
>
> > from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can
>
> >
>
> > only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt
>
> >
>
> > geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
> >
>
> > >
>

> >
>
> > One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
>
> >
>
> > the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly
>
> >
>
> > knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local
>
> >
>
> > leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar
>
> >
>
> > clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the
>
> >
>
> > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
>
> >
>
> > She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
>
> >
>
> > group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
>
> >
>
>
> >
>
> > and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
>
> >
>
> > and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the
>
> >
>

> > oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many
>
> >
>
> > African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with
>
> >
>
> > large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me
>
> >
>
>
> >
>
> > that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive,
>
> >
>
> > they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European
>
> >
>
> > women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>
> >
>

| 28435|2009-04-01 04:24:17|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|

The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: jewlswithink@gmail.com
Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from ones ancestor rather than ones cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.

To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the poisoning the well fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. ..

someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists- Materialists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail. com> wrote:

> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail. com>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups .com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
Download FREE now!
| 28436|2009-04-01 05:04:05|Asar Imhotep|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Attachments :
Ha, that's how I felt about the Matrix film. But it's all good. Glad you enjoyed them. I will now explain the science behind the BANTU logo.

As you can see the glyphs used in the shenew represent the consonants BNTW which we use to mean BANTU. Bantu we know simply means "the people." But I wanted to have a science in true African fashion. In African wisdom centers signs represent ideas and when you place certain signs together you can form a sentence or statement of ideas. When reading the Mdw Ntr we not only read the signs as phonetic values, we also read them "ideographically." That means each sign is also a ideogram that represents an idea or concept.

Each sign in the BANTU set of glyphs represent a word which you can read in any hieroglyphic dictionary. So the general breakdown is as follows:

B (foot) = place
N (water) = wave, to write, to weave
T (bread loaf) = mass, land, matter
W (baby chick) = to grow, to develop
Man and woman determinatives followed by 3 strokes denotes people.

The oval shaped shenew represents the universe. When you examine the sign for RA you will see a dot encircled by a larger circle. The smaller circle or dot is actually RA or the sun. The circle that encloses RA signifies "all that God sees." You won't find that definition in any Egyptology books. You just have to sit at the foot of African teachers to get that.

So "all that God sees" is in fact EVERYTHING in the universe. So that's why the shenew (which was originally a circle) signifies the universe itself. So let's get back to our statement. When we look at the logo it is really telling us something. It states:

> "The universe is the place where waves/radiations and mass/matter grow/develop to become man (the people)."

As can be illustrated in the Fulani and Bambara traditions, there are two terms that designate a person.They are Neddu and Neddaaku for the Fulani and Maa and Maaya for the Bambara. The definitions are as follows:

> Neddu = the person
> Neddaaku = the people of the person
> Maa = the person
> Maaya = the people of the person

The person is the "receptical" and the people of the person are the various aspects of the Creator (Maa Ngala) contained in the "recptical." As Hampate Ba further explains:

> "To contain man, the all-in-one being, Maa-Ngala devised a special body, vertical and symmetric, able to contain at one and the same time a piece of all the existing beings. This body, called "Fari", symbolizes a sanctuary where all beings are moving in a circle. This is why tradition regards the body of man as the world in miniature, according to the expression "Maa ye dinye merenin de ye," which means "Man is the universe in miniature.""

He goes on to say:

> "The concept of the unity of life goes hand in hand with the fundamental notions of balance, exchange, and interdependence. Maa, who contains in himself an element of all existing things, is called to become guarantor of the equilibrium of the exterior world, and even of the cosmos. To the extent that he returns to his true nature (that of primordial Maa), man appears, in the world, as the axis whose vocation it is to keep the external multiplicity from falling into chaos.....Synthesis of the universe and crossroads of the forces of life, man is therefore called to become the equilibrium point where it will be possible to combine, through him, the various dimensions of which he is the bearer. Then will he truly deserve the name of Maa, interlocutor of Maa-Ngala and guarantor of the balance of creation."

In other words, man (the person) is the central axis of the forces of the universe, endowed with a consciousness that allows it to know and understand these forces, who has been given a job to be the Creator's interlocutor and to maintain balance of such forces. Man is itself a miniature universe, made up of all of the elements that are contained in the universe. This is a living example of the maxim, "Man know thyself and thou shalt know the gods and the universe."

Now lets revisit our ideographic meaning of BANTU:

> "The universe is the place where waves/radiations and mass/matter grow/develop to become man (the people)."

The logo has a "reveal front view" and a "hidden back view." The revealed front view simply means THE PEOPLE. The hidden back view is an open textured discourse on the science of the "people of the person" and his/her purpose.

This apparel project is simply an aspect of the African-American Cultural Development Project that I will be spear heading within a year. I am completing the initial framework as we speak. This BANTU Apparel project will be an example of one of the major pillars of Culture: Creative Motif.

Just by displaying the logo (and the many Bantu proverbs that will be displayed on the t-shirts) will allow me (or anyone who understands) to speak to the minds of our people. It will intice the curiousity (hunger for the mind) of the individual and it will give us an opportunity to engage in a dialogue on the concepts and lessons that the images convey.

I have attached my abstract for the African-American Cultural Development Project to this email. Please read and give feedback. I hope this wasn't too long winded.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 1:40 AM

ASAR,YOU STOLE MY IDEA!!! You just can't trust anyone! lol
Those are great designs - very classy.
HTP,
Mahari

| 28437|2009-04-01 10:13:56|Dexter Harper|German Scientists Reveal Two-Faced Nefertiti|

BERLIN?German scientists have discovered a second face just under the surface of the bust of Nefertiti, the Associated Press reports.

The group of researchers, led by Alexander Huppertz, director of the Imaging Science Institute at Berlin's Charit頻ospital and medical school, performed a CT scan on the sculpture that revealed an underlying stone carving that is slightly different than the external stucco face. The findings were published today in the monthly journal Radiology.

"Until we did this scan... the hypothesis was that the stone underneath was just a support," said Huppertz.

The 3,300-year-old bust depicts Queen Nefertiti, the wife of Pharaoh Akhenaten.

The differences between the two faces are slight and include creases at the corners of the mouth and a bump on the nose in the stone version. Huppertz believes that someone must have ordered the adjustments.

John H. Taylor, a curator for Ancient Egypt and Sudan at the British Museum, cautioned against "attempting to explain the significance of these changes" but added that the information will be valuable in helping to preserve the sculpture.

The bust was discovered in 1912 by Egyptologist Ludwig Borchardt, who brought it to Berlin. It is currently on view at the city's Altes Museum and will move to the Neues Museum when the institution reopens in October.

http://www.artinfo.com/news/story/30987/german-scientists-reveal-two-faced-nefertiti/

| 28438|2009-04-01 12:45:06|Paul Kekai Manansala|Giza Pyramids Align Toward City of Sun God|
Rossella Lorenzi, Discovery News

March 24, 2009 -- Some of Egypt's most magnificent pyramids were deliberately designed to follow a pattern of invisible diagonal lines, an Italian study has concluded.

 According to Giulio Magli, professor of archaeoastronomy at Milan's Polytechnic University, these invisible lines would connect most of the funerary complexes raised by the kings of the Old Kingdom between 2630 and 2323 B.C.

"Following these diagonals, it appears clear that the arrangement of the monuments was carefully chosen in order to satisfy a number of criteria, which include dynastic lineage, religion and astronomical alignments," Magli told Discovery News.

Published on the Cornell University physics Web site arXiv.org, the study examined the chronology and geographical location of all the pyramids of the Fourth and Fifth Dynasties, from the Step Pyramid of Djoser (2630-2611 B.C.) to the now-collapsed pyramid of Unas (2356-2323 B.C.), both in Saqqara.

Related Content:

- Slide Show: Pyramidology 101
- Pyramids of Giza: One Grand Plan
- HowStuffWorks.com: 7 Wonders of the Ancient World
- More Discovery News

"Our starting point was the so-called 'Giza diagonal,' an ideal line which connects the southeast corners of the three main pyramids and points to Heliopolis. This was an important religious center sacred to the sun god," Magli said.

While the pyramids of Khufu, the second pharaoh of the Fourth Dynasty, and his son Khafre were easily aligned along the diagonal, the pyramid of Menkaure, Khufu's grandson, had to be built very far into the desert to sit on the line of sight toward Heliopolis.

"But there is more. As a consequence of this intentional alignment, the second smaller pyramid becomes invisible from Heliopolis, its mass being covered by Khufu's larger pyramid," Magli said.

Next 21 Previous

| 28439|2009-04-01 13:58:03|Tafari khumbaka|11 dimensions of space|

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uyXVCggV6EU
click above, dark matter, multiverse, 11 dimensions of space
Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28440|2009-04-01 14:52:19|Tafari khumbaka|martial arts/ afr.am teacher.....|

http://ropersmartialarts.com/blog.html
new look and lots of new vids in store
Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

| 28441|2009-04-01 18:44:54|Tafari khumbaka|Fw: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.|

good info ,thanx
Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Tue, 3/31/09, Linda Maples <> wrote:
From: Linda Maples <>
Subject: Fw: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.
To: "tafari"
Date: Tuesday, March 31, 2009, 6:48 PM

Leap and the net will appear
peace and love~patchouliwindz

--- On Tue, 3/31/09, Linda > wrote:

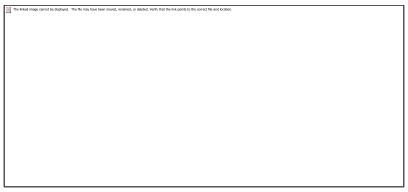
From: Linda Maples <>
Subject: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.
To: "Melissa" <>
Date: Tuesday, March 31, 2009, 7:46 PM

ORGANIC FOOD AND FARMERS ABOUT TO BE CRIMINALIZED...



CLICK HERE TO VIEW NEWSCAST NOW

Don't lose your right to choose how you feed your family!

"Food is, as we have been saying for some time, the central battle for freedom and su
"Change", which sounds great, has, in fact, become the mantra of those who seek corporate triumph over independent producers - and it's happening around food. Th mechanism is simple: a set of bills ostensibly devoted to "food safety" and "food secu
- and a plan to put Big Agribiz supporters in charge."

Taking Action is quite simple: Let Them Know We Are NOT BLIND by saying "N

The window of opportunity to say no is short (less than two weeks) and the issue is of immense importance.

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Urgent 3-Part Action Item:

Step 1: Click here to email the President NOW!

Step 2: Call the White House switchboard at 202-456-1414 and the comment center 202-456-1111. Let's keep those phones ringing! Between the hours of 9AM and 5PM Eastern.

Step 3: Click here to tell Congress "NO!" to all of the fake food "safety" bills. They provide neither real, wholesome food nor safety

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

"Politicians often come up with bad ideas. These are not just bad ideas: they are catastrophically bad ideas for BOTH health and freedom. In fact, we are facing nothing short of food tyranny that will kill not only organic farming, but lots of people as well, along with the entire private farming sector. Your own gardens are at risk.

The President's appointment of someone so closely associated with industrialized "food" is "change" in exactly the wrong direction."

Let's demand real change!

Information and links courtesy of Dr. Rima E. Laibow, MD - Medical Director of Natural Solutions Foundation.

www.HealthFreedomUSA.org
Thanks to Cory Herter @ wishforlove.com

Leap and the net will appear
peace and love~patchouliwindz

| 28442|2009-04-01 20:57:19|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|

>>Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?<<

If I am reading this correctly that statement is not anti-scientific but strictly scientific. The undeniable truth is that this is the way that most people live their lives and make important decisions: "on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." . The problem lies in believing consequently that other people's ideas are the ABSOLUTE TRUTH. If you are to find that you must do rigorous research or see rigorous research that you can analyze.
I don't know if you have noticed that most people don't know what they are talking about and most of the rest only partially know what they are talking about.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: jewlswithink@...
> Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from one's ancestor rather than one's cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.

>
> To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the `poisoning the well' fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.
>
>
> Nix
>
>
> On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because that's all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesn't make sense to me, it just doesn't. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They don't really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
>
> According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
>
> I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesn't make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective... someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".

>
> Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.
>
>
>
>
> From: Lamar Perryman
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
> To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Cc: Group Members
>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
>
> And How ? ..... By what means ???
>
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present
> the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
>
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists > belief of some Anthropomorphic " Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created > man from " Dust ... "
>
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Materialists) and Religionists have done.
>
>
>
>

> Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rational argument ???
>
>
> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups.com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
>
>
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved like all other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, but human behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature > and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion ?
>
> Or
>
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-

Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
>
>
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited. Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
>
> Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
> By Angeline Bandon-Bibum
>
> "April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.
>
> No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.
>
> So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonder?what is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of "group think" mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?
>
> April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. It's also the month of my father's birthday and my grandmother's birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.
>
> To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>

> [1] T.S. Eliot (1888?1965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>
> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum
>
>
>
>
>
> Windows Live? SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
>
>
>
>
>
> Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
> http://ie8.msn.com/microsoft/internet-explorer-8/en-us/ie8.aspx?ocid=B037MSN55C0701A
>
| 28443|2009-04-02 07:19:52|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
My "rigorous research" as yousay, has been56 years of education.I do agree that one is required to critically assess any new information/theory you come across before simply accepting it. That isthe meaningof education.And when it comes to evolution, many minds much better than mine have already developed a scientific concensus.So the onus is on the those who disagree with evolution to argue their counterthesis. I stll don't get what is so difficult to grasp about the environment having a selective pressure on genetics. Just my view.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Thu, 2 Apr 2009 03:56:16 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

> >>Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?<<

If I am reading this correctly that statement is not anti-scientific but strictly scientific. The undeniable truth is that this is the way that most people live their lives and make important decisions: "on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." . The problem lies in believing consequently that other people's ideas are the ABSOLUTE TRUTH. If you are to find that you must do rigorous research or see rigorous research that you can analyze.
I don't know if you have noticed that most people don't know what they are talking about and most of the rest only partially know what they are talking about.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> From: jewlswithink@ ...
> Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
> Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from one's ancestor rather than one's cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.
>
> To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the `poisoning the well' fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.
>
>
> Nix
>
>
> On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because that's all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesn't make sense to me, it just doesn't. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They don't really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
>
> According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.

>
> I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesn't make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
>
> Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.
>
>
>
>
> From: Lamar Perryman
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
> To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Cc: Group Members
>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
>
> And How ? ..... . By what means ???
>
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present
> the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
>
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists
> belief of some Anthropomorphic " Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created

> man from " Dust ... "
>
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists) and Religionists have done.
>
>
>
>
> Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rational argument ???
>
>
> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups .com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
>
>
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved like all other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, but human behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature > and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion ?
>
> Or
>
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
>
>
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited. Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
> By Angeline Bandon-Bibum
>
> "April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.
>
> No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.
>
> So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of "group think" mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?
>

> April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. It's also the month of my father's birthday and my grandmother' s birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.
>
> To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>
> [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>
> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum
>
>
>
>
>
> Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
>
>
>
>
>
> Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _
> Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
> http://ie8.msn. com/microsoft/ internet- explorer- 8/en-us/ie8. aspx?ocid=
B037MSN55C0701A
>

Rediscover Hotmail: Now available on your iPhone or BlackBerry Check it out.
| 28444|2009-04-02 08:49:18|cristofori whitakara|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months| from your years of research/education it is safe to compare darwin's evolution to our evolving out of our mother's wombs?

--- On Thu, 4/2/09, Peter Gray wrote:
From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Thursday, April 2, 2009, 10:17 AM

My "rigorous research" as yousay, has been56 years of education.I do agree that one is required to critically assess any new information/ theory you come across before simply accepting it. That isthe meaningof education.And when it comes to evolution, many minds much better than mine have already developed a scientific concensus.So the onus is on the those who disagree with evolution to argue their counterthesis. I stll don't get what is so difficult to grasp about the environment having a selective pressure on genetics. Just my view.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: mahari@myway. com
Date: Thu, 2 Apr 2009 03:56:16 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

>>Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?<<
If I am reading this correctly that statement is not anti-scientific but strictly scientific. The undeniable truth is that this is the way that most people live their lives and make important decisions: "on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." . The problem lies in believing consequently that other people's ideas are the ABSOLUTE TRUTH. If you are to find that you must do rigorous research or see rigorous research that you can analyze.
I don't know if you have noticed that most people don't know what they are talking about and most of the rest only partially know what they are talking about.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>

> The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> From: jewlswithink@ ...
> Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
> Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from one's ancestor rather than one's cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.
>
> To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the `poisoning the well' fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.
>
>

> Nix
>
>
> On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because that's all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesn't make sense to me, it just doesn't. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They don't really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
>
> According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
>
> I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesn't make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
>
> Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.
>
>
>
>
> From: Lamar Perryman
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
> To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Cc: Group Members
>

> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
>
> And How ? ..... . By what means ???
>
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present
> the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
>
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists
> belief of some Anthropomorphic " Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created > man from " Dust ... "
>
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists) and Religionists have done.
>
>
>
>
> Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rational argument ???
>
>
> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups .com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
>

>
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved like all other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, but human behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature > and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion ?
>
> Or
>
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
>
>

>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited. Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
> By Angeline Bandon-Bibum
>
> "April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the

poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.
>
> No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.
>
> So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of "group think" mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?
>
> April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. It's also the month of my father's birthday and my grandmother' s birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.
>
> To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>
> [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>
> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum
>
>
>
>
>

> Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
>
>
>
>
>
> Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _
> Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
> http://ie8.msn. com/microsoft/ internet- explorer- 8/en-us/ie8. aspx?ocid=B037MSN55C0701A
>

Rediscover Hotmail: Now available on your iPhone or BlackBerry Check it out.

| 28445|2009-04-02 08:59:12|Asar Imhotep|Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009|
I thought this might interest a few who are on this list. Enjoy!

Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009  Get email alerts!

Dear Asar Imhotep,

As someone who has previously registered for a trial of an online journal published by SAGE, we wanted to let you know about our current free access period on SAGE Journals Online. You can now register for free online access to more than 500 SAGE journals with content available from 1999-current until April 30, 2009!

The SAGE Journals Online platform provides users access to one of the largest and most powerful collections of business, humanities, social sciences, and science, technical, and medical content in the world. SAGE is also the world's leading publisher of research methods and during the trial you will be able to search more than 25 research methods journals--from qualitative, quantitative, and mixed methods to evaluation.

You already have an account set up so all you need to do is activate this trial on your SAGE Journals Online account.

Register here

Scroll down the page to enter your username 'imhotep06' and your password in the 'Sign in' section. If you have forgotten your password, simply follow the link on the 'Sign in' page to receive a new one.

Activation only takes a couple of minutes and then you can access all 500+ SAGE journals on SAGE Journals Online, our award-winning online platform.

Sincerely,

SAGE Marketing
www.sagepub.com

If you need assistance with your trial, please contact: onlinesupportUS@sagepub.com.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

| 28446|2009-04-02 22:08:54|Mahari Mengistu|EGYPTIAN PRIEST'S HUGE AFRO WIG|
Most impressive Kemetian priest ceremonial wig... this is a YouTube segment from Nefertiti Resurrected. The wig appears about 1/2 of the way through.
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8m4rYJBE3gI&playnext=1&playnext_from=QL

HTP,
Mahari
| 28447|2009-04-03 05:39:18|Peter Gray|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
I can't see the comparison -- "evolving out of our mothers' wombs" is called birth. Darwin's theory has to dowith long evolutionary processes.

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: boogie_down_black@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 2 Apr 2009 08:46:21 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

from your years of research/education it is safe to compare darwin's evolution to our evolving out of our mother's wombs?

--- On Thu, 4/2/09, Peter Gray wrote:
From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Thursday, April 2, 2009, 10:17 AM

My "rigorous research" as yousay, has been56 years of education.I do agree that one is required to critically assess any new information/ theory you come across before simply accepting it. That isthe meaningof education.And when it comes to evolution, many minds much better than mine have already developed a scientific concensus.So the onus is on the those who disagree with evolution to argue their counterthesis. I stll don't get what is so difficult to grasp about the environment having a selective pressure on genetics. Just my view.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: mahari@myway. com
Date: Thu, 2 Apr 2009 03:56:16 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

>>Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?<<
If I am reading this correctly that statement is not anti-scientific but strictly scientific. The undeniable truth is that this is the way that most people live their lives and make important decisions: "on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." . The problem lies in believing consequently that other people's ideas are the ABSOLUTE TRUTH. If you are to find that you must do rigorous research or see rigorous research that you can analyze.
I don't know if you have noticed that most people don't know what they are talking about and most of the rest only partially know what they are talking about.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?

>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> From: jewlswithink@ ...
> Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
> Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from one's ancestor rather than one's cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.
>
> To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the `poisoning the well' fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.
>
>
> Nix
>
>
> On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, wrote:
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
> Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because that's all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesn't make sense to me, it just doesn't. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They don't really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
>
> According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
>
> I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesn't make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
>
> Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.
>
>
>
>
> From: Lamar Perryman
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
> To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Cc: Group Members
>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
>
> And How ? ..... . By what means ???
>
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present
> the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
>
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists
> belief of some Anthropomorphic " Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created > man from " Dust ... "
>
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Material ists) and Religionists have done.
>
>
>
>
> Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rational argument ???
>
>
> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups .com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
>
>
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved like all other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, but human behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>

> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature > and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion ?
>
> Or
>
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
>
>
>
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited. Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
> By Angeline Bandon-Bibum
>
> "April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

>
> No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.
>
> So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of "group think" mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?
>
> April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. It's also the month of my father's birthday and my grandmother' s birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.
>
> To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>
> [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>
> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum
>
>
>
>
>
> Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
>
>
>
>
>
> Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _
> Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
> http://ie8.msn. com/microsoft/ internet- explorer- 8/en-us/ie8. aspx?ocid=
B037MSN55C0701A
>

Rediscover Hotmail: Now available on your iPhone or BlackBerry Check it out.

Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
Download FREE now!

| 28448|2009-04-03 09:13:58|Nix Winter|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|

I had this professor in South Carolina once. He is a brilliant man. He taught biology and anatomy. Now I believed in evolution before I took his classes, but after wards... I understood it. It's an elegant and effective theory and when people complain that 'we didn't come from apes' it just makes me wish I could explain evolution as well as he did.

It has been very much on my mind thought that assertions and dogma must be examined, not swallowed.

I was taking this art class this term, just a life drawing portrait class. The text book though made what I felt to be outrageous statements about the lack of art complexity in other cultures, historic cultures. The book took no notice of actual artifacts or alternative world views that allow human expression to exhibit in other ways than in modern western culture.

Now the professor was extremely skilled as an artist. He is an elderly black gentleman who spoke of issues with segregation and racial tension. This text book though might as well have been the word of GOD in his class. No amount of pointing out that Egyptians were a complex society with highly developed arts and evidence of personal expression in different levels of society got through to this professor or his devotees... It was crazy and very frustrating to me.

If it's in a book written by someone with a PhD... then it must be true.... bangs head

For their statements to be true, one must believe that Egyptians had different brain structure, functions, instincts... were a different species. And if you extrapolate the same 'elevated' ideas to more modern peoples then both freed slaves and women lack the higher functions so prized in western art history.

It's this kind of crap that gets into our system as a social group and causes us to incorrectly value members of our group. No set of ideas is so sacred that it can not be explored and tested.

Piltdown Man was a fraud and kept evaluating the human line correctly for around forty years.

Truth needs to be supported by more than just the good names speaking it.

As for 'Creationism', while I do understand the personal psychological motives for needing to maintain support for a religious system and therefor one's own personal feeling fo safety and sanity, there is no credible evidence that could survive Ocham's Razor that would support that idea.

NJ

On Thu, Apr 2, 2009 at 10:17 AM, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com> wrote:

My "rigorous research" as yousay, has been56 years of education.I do agree that one is required to critically assess any new information/theory you come across before simply accepting it. That isthe meaningof education.And when it comes to evolution, many minds much better than mine have already developed a scientific concensus.So the onus is on the those who disagree with evolution to argue their counterthesis. I stll don't get what is so difficult to grasp about the environment having a selective pressure on genetics. Just my view.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Thu, 2 Apr 2009 03:56:16 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

>>Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?<<
If I am reading this correctly that statement is not anti-scientific but strictly scientific. The undeniable truth is that this is the way that most people live their lives and make important decisions: "on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." . The problem lies in believing consequently that other people's ideas are the ABSOLUTE TRUTH. If you are to find that you must do rigorous research or see rigorous research that you can analyze.

I don't know if you have noticed that most people don't know what they are talking about and most of the rest only partially know what they are talking about.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: jewlswithink@...
> Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
> Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from one's ancestor rather than one's cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.
>

> To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the `poisoning the well' fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.
>
>
> Nix
>
>
> On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because that's all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesn't make sense to me, it just doesn't. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They don't really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
>
> According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
>
> I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesn't make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective... someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
>
> Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.
>

>
>
>
> From: Lamar Perryman
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
> To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Cc: Group Members
>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
>
> And How ? ..... By what means ???
>
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present
> the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
>
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists
> belief of some Anthropomorphic " Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created > man from " Dust ... "
>
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Materialists) and Religionists have done.
>
>
>
>
> Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rational argument ???
>
>
> --- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray wrote:

>
>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups.com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
>
>
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved like all other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, but human behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature > and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion ?
>
> Or
>
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De-Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge of our higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>

>
> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
>
>
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited. Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
> Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
>
>

> Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
>
> By Angeline Bandon-Bibum
>
> "April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would begin in Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes from the poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.
>
> No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.
>
> So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of "group think" mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?
>
> April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. It's also the month of my father's birthday and my grandmother's birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.
>
> To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.
>
> [1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.
>
>
> "Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009
>

> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
> Check out my websites:
> http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum
>
>
>
>
>
> Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.
>
>
>
>
>
> Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
> http://ie8.msn.com/microsoft/internet-explorer-8/en-us/ie8.aspx?ocid=B037MSN55C0701A
>

Rediscover Hotmail: Now available on your iPhone or BlackBerry Check it out.

--
www.nixwinter.com

| 28449|2009-04-03 09:14:19|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|CT scan reveals hidden face under Nefertiti bust - Yahoo! News|
These people have nothing better to do than fabricate information... why don't they go searching the foothills of Europe and manipulate their own history, opposed to always mingling in ours!!!

>
>
>
> CT scan reveals hidden face under Nefertiti bust - Yahoo! News
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20090331/ap_on_re_eu/eu_germany_nefertiti_face
>
> ==========
> Yahoo! News
> http://news.yahoo.com/
>
| 28450|2009-04-03 09:14:32|redheathergold|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
Asar Imhotep,

I'm not really sure we're saying different things. In your original post you summarized Dr. Bilolo's premise that the Egyptian language is essentially a Bantu language:

One of his 2005 discussions argues that the Egyptian Language is essentially a Bantu language. And that proto-bantu would be pre-pharaonic and would belong to the Proto-Negro- African super language family as argued by Obenga. One of the interesting notions proposed by him is that the determinatives serve also as pre and suffixes characteristic of the Bantu languages.

According to the Egyptians, Punt is their Mother Land. If Punt is referring to an area populated by Bantu People then wouldn't this support the idea that the Egyptian language is rooted in the Bantu?

Regarding the concept that Coptic does not shed light on the phonology of Ancient Egyptian language; I'm reluctant to discard it as a useful resource. Coptic does not sound like Greek, it is the spoken language of the ancient Egyptians represented by Greek characters. While I agree with you that it likely doesn't sound exactly like Ancient Egyptian, my understanding is that it is the language of Ancient Egypt represented by Greek letters. A modern example would be representing a Russian word with the Roman alphabet. The Egyptians added letters to the Coptic alphabet to account for sounds present in Ancient Egyptian that were not in the Greek language.

I think that both of these languages can provide vital information about the language of the Ancient Egyptians.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Greetings Redheathergold
>
> I appreciate your response to my inquiry, but I am not sure what was stated is in alignment with my general premise. This particular discussion concerns the possibility of the Ancient Egyptian determinatives having an affixal value in the written language. We seek to see if the Bantu Nominal Noun Class prefixes can give us some clues as to how this process played out in the Ancient Egyptian language.
>

> For us, the question of Bantu speakers in ancient Egypt has already been established. And we no longer argue the African origins of Egyptian civilization. That has already been established for us since the early 20th century, and has come to a final consensus with UNESCO's conference in 1974 where Chiekh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga presented their case for an African cultural, historical and linguistic make-up of ancient Egyptian civilization.
>
> We seek now to further understand the nature and reason behind ancient Egyptian cultural expressions by examining, systematically, the living cultures of present day Africa since these cultural expressions have already been illuminated.
>
> So this particular thread concerns understanding a linguistic component that will further help us to understand the structure of Ancient Egyptian written languages.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, redheathergold redheathergold@... wrote:
> From: redheathergold redheathergold@...
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 10:06 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting
>
> finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that

>
> the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called
>
> Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
>
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
>
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
>
> Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
>
> Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be
>
> added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a
>
> whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".
>
>
>
> Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
>
> White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
>
> locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those
>
> who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition
>
> to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other
>
> tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
>
> and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall
>
> paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact
>
> that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.
>
> One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was
>
> a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is
>
> that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This
>
> gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now
>
> know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back

>
> from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can
>
> only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt
>
> geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
>
>
> One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
>
> the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly
>
> knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local
>
> leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar
>
> clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
>
>
> She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
>
> group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
>
>
> and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
>
> and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the
>
> oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
>
>
> As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many
>
> African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with
>
> large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me
>
>
> that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive,
>
> they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European

>
> women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>

| 28451|2009-04-03 09:14:40|Shu Tefnut|Fw: AFRICAN ORIGINS OF PHARONIC ART & ARCHITECTURE.|

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: George Bennett
To: George Bennett
Cc: shutefnut
Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 8:51:17 PM
Subject: AFRICAN ORIGINS OF PHARONIC ART & ARCHITECTURE.

HOTEP/ GREETINGS

BRO. HERU BENNU AMEN RA, WILL BE GIVING A LECTURE ON THE:

AFRICAN ORIGINS OF PHARONIC ART AND ARCHITECTURE.

when: April 9th, 2009
where: The Mackey Group.
103 Quincy St, near corner ofFranklynave
in the basement,
Brooklyn, New York
time: 8pm. sharp

direction by train: 8th ave line "C" train to Franklyn ave.

THIS WILL BE A SLIDE PRESENTATION

LECTURE CONTENT:

1. Developmentof Paleolithic cultures along the Nile River Valley, and the Great Rift Valley. We will review Odawan,
Archulian, Tasian, Badarian, and Mustrian stone tool industries.

2. Pre-dynasticperiods reviewed with a focus on early artifacts and an attempt to give a chronological perspective of the art and architecture of the Nagada I, II, and III positions in the development of the art and architecture of dynastic Egypt.

3. Kush the birth place of the Gods of ancient Kemet. The Nubian high culture and its effects on Nile valley civilization.
The foundation of art and architecture that reached its zenith in Egypt. As a result the civilizing of other cultures such as:
The Greeks, Romans, Assyrians, Babylonians, and the Hindus Kush Valleys, all of whom have benefited from the culture of the Nubians who in fact established the canons of art and architecture.

| 28452|2009-04-03 09:14:49|Nix Winter|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..."

How is that anti-scientific? To base one's ideas on the ideas of others without direct observation or logical testing is to rely on dogma. Science is the exploration and testing of ideas, not the simple swallowing of them as if they were well... 'the word of God'.

Nix

On Wed, Apr 1, 2009 at 7:24 AM, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com> wrote:

The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: jewlswithink@gmail.com
Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from ones ancestor rather than ones cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.

To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the poisoning the well fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, <gingerd2007@hotmail.com> wrote:

Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective... someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman
Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).

Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists
belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists-Materialists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com> wrote:

> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups.com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
> Or
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
> > From: Peter Gray

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM

Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.

However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8.
Download FREE now!

--
www.nixwinter.com

| 28453|2009-04-03 09:14:50|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Fw: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.|
WOW

From: Tafari khumbaka
Sent: Wednesday, April 01, 2009 6:44 PM
To: maatcollective@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.

good info ,thanx
Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Tue, 3/31/09, Linda Maples <> wrote:

> From: Linda Maples <>
> Subject: Fw: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.
> To: "tafari" <tafari_sudra@ yahoo.com>
> Date: Tuesday, March 31, 2009, 6:48 PM
>
> Leap and the net will appear
> peace and love~patchouliwindz
>
> --- On Tue, 3/31/09, Linda > wrote:
>
> From: Linda Maples <>
> Subject: Say NO NO NO to all of the fake food "safety" bills.
> To: "Melissa" <>
> Date: Tuesday, March 31, 2009, 7:46 PM
>
> ORGANIC FOOD AND FARMERS ABOUT TO BE CRIMINALIZED. ..
>
> CLICK HERE TO VIEW NEWSCAST NOW

Don't lose your right to choose how you feed your family!

"Food is, as we have been saying for some time, the central battle for freedom and survival. "Change", which sounds great, has, in fact, become the mantra of those who seek corporate triumph over independent producers - and it's happening around food. The mechanism is simple: a set of bills ostensibly devoted to "food safety" and "food security" -- and a plan to put Big Agribiz supporters in charge."

Taking Action is quite simple: Let Them Know We Are NOT BLIND by saying "NO!"

The window of opportunity to say no is short (less than two weeks) and the issue is of immense importance.

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~

Urgent 3-Part Action Item:

Step 1: Click here to email the President NOW!

Step 2: Call the White House switchboard at 202-456-1414 and the comment center 202-456-1111. Let's keep those phones ringing! Between the hours of 9AM and 5PM Eastern.

Step 3: Click here to tell Congress "NO!" to all of the fake food "safety" bills. They provide neither real, wholesome food nor safety

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~~~ ~~~~~~~~

"Politicians often come up with bad ideas. These are not just bad ideas: they are catastrophically bad ideas for BOTH health and freedom. In fact, we are facing nothing short of food tyranny that will kill not only organic farming, but lots of people as well, along with the entire private farming sector. Your own gardens are at risk.

The President's appointment of someone so closely associated with industrialized "food" is "change" in exactly the wrong direction."

Let's demand real change!

Information and links courtesy of Dr. Rima E. Laibow, MD - Medical Director of Natural Solutions Foundation.

www.HealthFreedomUS A.org

Thanks to Cory Herter @ wishforlove. com

Leap and the net will appear
peace and love~patchouliwindz

| 28454|2009-04-03 09:14:58|odhiambo okecth|Thank you Zeddy Nyanchama|
Mr Zedekiah Nyanchama has given KCDN Kshs 7,000.00 in support of our programmes. This was in fulfillment of a pledge he made to me early March.

At the same time, Mr Eric Jangolo of Barclays Bank has given Kshs 1000.00 in support. Mr Chrispin Obwolo of Getrude has also given us Kshs 1000.00 in support.

On behalf of KCDN, I want to sincerely extend our gratitude to them. This support will go along way in strengthening our outreach.

We have a lot going on now, and we appeal to more people of goodwill to come forward and help support what we are doing.

Our blessings and Many thanks.

Odhiambo T Oketch,
CEO KCDN Nairobi,
PO Box 47890-00100,
Nairobi, Kenya.
Tel; 0735 529 126, 0724 365 557,
Email; komarockswatch@yahoo.com,
http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

| 28455|2009-04-03 09:15:03|gingerd2007@hotmail.com|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Perhaps my verbiage was misleading, but I will explain my intent and perhaps it will clarify what I meant. It is true that the homo erectus is our immediate predecessor, right? Which means that this homo erectus was basically our ancestor right? Prior to the "evolution" of man kind to the homo sapiens right? Ok, thats a bit more than a cousin if I understand correctly. Because during the evolution stages, we went from homo habilis, to homo erectus, to homo sapiens... according to the "theory of evolution". Apparently, the time frame of the homo habilis and the australopithecines overlapped, and they are not exactly sure of the relationship between the two. You assuming that I have not read or studied the "theory" of evolution is a bit presumptuous, but I speak from an emotional standpoint at times, so perhaps that led you to this conclusion. Still and all, it doesnt make sense to me. And the more I read and study, the more it doesnt make sense. And I dont care what scholar, from what western institution, further testifies to the foundation of the theory. It still doesnt make sense. But I do not argue with people who believe this "theory" because it is their right, just as it is mine. When I said spin off, I meant in the sense that we as African Americans are a sort of "spin off" from our ancestors in Africa. This is just lemans terms for the point I was trying to convey. I would really like to know, how come our "cousins" are not still evolving, if in fact this theory is true... let me guess... environment must be factored in, and the changes that we have faced as well as the evolution of the brain... I know, I read a paper on Darwin that explained this "theory". Ok. If you say so.

I am not sure if the comment about the bible was directed to me, or someone else. If to me, for your information I do read the bible. And the Quran, and on occasion I have tackled the Talmud / Torah. I am not a one-tracked person. I am not looking for my truth, I seekTHE truth. One thing is for sure, I dont trust these scientists, the same ones who experimented on slaves, mixed blood work with apes and humans to create a deadly disease, and have basically oppressed many throughout the world in the name of science and religion. The same blood line of mad scientists that now spray "aerosols" in every major city in the nation, more frequently now than ever, and call it weather modification. The same bloodline of mad scientists that put flouride in the water for "cosmetic" reasons and tell us it is safe. We are aware that these scientists had "theories" about the brains of black people right? Our craniums, and the craniums of the slaves that they shipped here... I could go on and on, but for what. Medical Apartheid, the book and the writer excapes me, goes into detail. What does this have to do with evolution? My point is, that these mad scientists have a hypothesis that they set out to prove. There is no possible way that life started with the black man and woman. They would rather be descendents of apes and eventually evolve to be the most superior of all the races... this is what they teach in the schools...
I believe your comment about religious material being more static and comforting is not well thought out. For in the religious texts, there is more death and destruction than any of us would care to admit, much of which is happening now.
But to the science... these are the questions I have that can never be answered, even by my professors who seem to get irritated when I question "science"... I mean these "theories"
1. If apes evolved, how come they are not still evolving?
2. How can they assume that those micro-organisms that supposedly began in the crevices of the oceans were the beginnings of all life as we know it, if they cannot even get to the depths of the oceans and study them properly? There is no concrete evidence of this happening in the Oceans... it is simply a theory. Oceanology became a serious study in the 1960's. Most of their effort now is based on global warming.
3. Where are the fossils of all of these evolving species?
4. The big bang theory, which was the beginning of the evolution of earth, is now being challenged and even changed. I am sure you know of the recent changes... how can we make such a large leap from the original "theory"?
You do not have to answer any of this, that is up to you. My point is, you stated - One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other peoples ideas of those idea sets. I dont think this applies to what I said or my opinion. The theory of natural selection, and evolution, is just that. A THEORY. And if it is not a proven fact, then it can be openly questioned or challenged by anyone.

From: Nix Winter
Sent: Tuesday, March 31, 2009 5:28 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from ones ancestor rather than ones cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.

To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the poisoning the well fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

> Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
> According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
> I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
> Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.
>
> From: Lamar Perryman
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
> To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Cc: Group Members
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
> You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
> And How ? ..... . By what means ???
> One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
> Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
> Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists- Materialists)and Religionists have done.

Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail. com> wrote:

> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail. com>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups .com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter
>
> ---
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
> From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com
> Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
> Or
> Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???
>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:
>
> > From: Peter Gray
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> > To: "Marc Washington"
> > Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
> >
> > Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
> >
> > However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many

milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?

So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.

Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

By Angeline Bandon-Bibum

"April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. This line seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events would beg Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all classes fr poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstance this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered p This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These peo (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a strange the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occu human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teache farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, int waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this typ destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previous existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherw normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part o perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were th of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these typ mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month tha inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in A April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the mor
April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three mor
Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

| 28456|2009-04-03 09:15:06|Todd Jackson|Re: 11 dimensions of space|
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
>
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uyXVCggV6EU
> click above, dark matter, multiverse, 11 dimensions of space
>
>
>
> Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka
>

Greetings, Tafari!

Before we get too far down the rabbit-hole, I recommend both the "Electric Universe" and the "Plasma Cosmology" series. This is a simpler, more elegant vision which strikes me as more scientifically responsible - though I'm no scientist.

http://www.youtube.com/results?search_type=&search_query=plasma+cosmology&aq=f

Blessings,

Todd Jackson
| 28457|2009-04-03 09:15:13|redheathergold|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|

Dear Peter,

Regretfully, I discovered about three years ago that the website whereI discovered thisinformation no longer has the link to the page I referred to. Since then I have tried numerous times to find the information again, but to no avail. At the time that I came across this little nugget (pun intended), I was just casuallyresearching for my own personal edification and it never occurred to me to write the author's name or any other details for that matter. What I shared in this forum is from memory.

After you asked, I tried again but all I could find were sites describing Hatshepsut's expedition and what the Ancient Egyptians called this particular type of greenish Gold - Gold of Emu
http://www.reshafim.org.il/ad/egypt/trades/metals.htm#godsland

Also I found sites that are along the lines of speculation documents aimed at investors. These documents describe mining possibilities for precious metals and they discuss a greenish gold found in Zambia in the region of the Zambezi River. They seem to refer to this particular type of gold as copper-gold.

Sorry I couldn't offer more than that but I will continue to try to find a comparable source, if not the original source.

Jennifer

> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
> >
> >
> > Dear redheathergold,

>
>
>
> It would be great if youd give us the scientific reference(s) for the compositional analysis of the greenish gold found in Mozambique. Many thanks. This stuff is very specific evidence.
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: redheathergold@...
> Date: Sat, 28 Mar 2009 03:06:34 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
>
>
>
>
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting > finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that > the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called > Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
> Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
> Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be > added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a > whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".
>
> Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
> White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
> locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those > who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition > to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other > tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
> and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall > paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact > that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.
> One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was > a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is > that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This

> gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now > know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back > from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can > only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt > geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
> One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
> the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly > knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local > leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar > clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
> She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
> group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
> and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
> and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the > oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
> As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many > African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with > large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me > that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive, > they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European > women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> Windows Live? SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage.
>
http://windowslive.com/online/skydrive?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_skydrive_032009
>

| 28458|2009-04-03 09:15:15|Michael J Robinson|Check out Videos just posted on "Owning Our Own Businesses" and of M|

Hotep family,

I just posted videos on my Youtube Channel, www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914 that you will probably find very informative and useful.

1) Owning Our Own Business by Dr. Ray Hagins. With 2 million people losing their jobs in the past few months this is a very timely video. If you are thinking about owning your own business or have one and want to take it to the next level. You may find this video helpful.

We must own the businesses that are in our communities so our dollar will turn over 8 12 times before it leaves the hands of African-Americans. In 2008, African-Americans spent $913 Billion but only 2% were spent with African-American owned businesses. This is economic suicide. No other ethnic group operates like this. By learning what it is that we dont know, we can begin to correct what hasnt be done.

2) Malcom X Debates James Farmer and Wyatt T. Walker. Watch this very interesting debate between Malcom X, James Farmer and Waytt T. Walker about the Civil Rights Movement, segregation, desegregation, integration, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the future of our people. This is a class video and a must see even if you have watched it again. This is a classic.

If you like my channel, please subscribe to it and let your friends know about it. It is quickly growing and we just hit 1,000 subscribers.

Also, tune into Dr. Ray Hagins online radio station at www.WBLR.com. He broadcast 24/7 and on Sundays and Wednesdays at 8pm he broadcasts live. He has a ton of information on African history, culture, current affairs, etc. Everyone can learn from his station regardless of how much you already know. You can view some of Dr. Hagins videos on my Youtube Channel as well including videos such as, The Verdict Is In, Egypt: The Source of the Bible and Kemetic Spiritual Preparation In Times of Crisis to name a few.

Thanks,

Bro. Michael

www.Youtube.com/mjrob1914

"Right knowledge corrects wrong behavior."
| 28459|2009-04-03 09:15:19|pharoahisrael@yahoo.com|Re: Reflecting on the Cruelest Months|
Greetings again,
Mr. Gray and Group Members. The statement that you quote below is not so " unscientific " after all Mr. Gray. The statement appears to have been made by a Mr/Mrs Nix from what I can gather.
However let's get back to our main sticking point in the conversation between You and I.
In fact we have never gotten past it or even into it yet. Like some of my mechanically inclined brothers at Black Freethinkers Mr. Gray You appear to have once again confused Phenomena with Originations. Adaption and Origination are two different things altogether.
Origination itself is inherent with practical perfection. For instance animals are perfect in their order and natural state until some outside force intervenes in the organism's life. A dog or cat does not have to be taught how to bea dog or cat. It inherently and instinctively knows so.

All that it will do from then on is to practice it's survival skills for offensive, defensive action and for prey. The predators" food " knows this too and so they practice concealment, deceit, speed and other survival skills. They already have them they just develope them for maximum mileage. All of Nature's Creatures are sense creatures.
And so with Man/Woman as the primary intelligent species on this planet. You ask " what is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form ? Is it that some life forms are inherently superior to others ?
The answer to your second question is YES. The answer to your first question is that this branching off is genetically impossible. Even religionists (racial ones too) have recognized the scientific axiom that as life can come only from life , so only can like kind come from like kind.!!! There is no evidence to be found that the Seed of Man andThe Egg/Cell of Woman (The Sacred Egg of The Ancient World) has a genetic pattern for apes, monkeys, tadpoles, frogs, etc.!!!!!!!!
And the same for them. For millions of years the same kind, once originated, HAS PRODUCED ONLY THAT KIND and no other. This is a Scientific Fact as well as Common Sense. !
Adaptations are what Anthropolgy has examined in the Life of the Human Species over long periods of time in a World where the Elements Rule and We are subject to adjusting to such for our maximum benefit.
Sincerely,
MLP.,
Moorish Federal Nationalists-AFN

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Peter Gray wrote:

From: Peter Gray
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
To: "Marc Washington"
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 11:24 AM

The fundamental tenet of Darwinism/evoltion is that life forms adjust genetically to their environment, by virtue of the fact that those natural mutations that arise daily provide some memers of a given population with an advantage in survival, so that over time, the genetic variant will more likely survive than the rest of the population. This is how evolution works. It's called natural selection, or adaptation. What is so frightening about having branched off from an ape form? Is is that some life forms are inherently superior to others? Also, "one should not make judgements about a set of ideas primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas ..." What?!!! Does anyone else on this forum agree with that antiscientific statement?

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: jewlswithink@ gmail.com
Date: Tue, 31 Mar 2009 08:28:16 -0400
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Well, as someone who has studied evolution I totally agree with you that we are not, and Darwin's theory never said that we were, a 'spin off' of apes. What it said was that current primates have a common ancestor. There is a significant difference between descending from ones ancestor rather than ones cousin. If one is going to take issue with someone else's hypothesis, perhaps one should actually understand it in the first place. I also think people should actually read the Bible, and other religious materials. One should not make judgments about a set of ideas based primarily on information garnered from other people's ideas of those idea sets.

To impugn the scientific community because knowledge gained from observation and research updates and changes, in comparison to religious material which is much more static and comforting, could maybe be a version of the poisoning the well fallacy. To say that these people are doing something uncomfortable, therefore everything they say must be suspect, that is a fallacy that does not even attempt to address the validity or lack thereof of the information in question.

Nix

On Mon, Mar 30, 2009 at 1:22 PM, <gingerd2007@ hotmail.com> wrote:

Thank you soooo much for saying that. I often see comments on here about homo sapiens... etc... and I am dumb founded as to how this can be. Can we really believe the white mans theory that we were the first spinoff of apes? Is there really credible PROOF of this THEORY? Because thats all it is, is a theory. I have read up on Darwin's theory, and the evolution theory. It doesnt make sense to me, it just doesnt. They have not collected all of the fossils during this so-called transformation stage that would prove this theory. Also, I am taking an Oceanology class right now. The theory is that we evolved from microcosms in the Ocean, but they really just started studying Oceans effectively in the 1960's. They dont really have much information about them. How can we come up with such a large hypothesis about the beginning of life on earth without concrete knowledge from which they came?
According to scientists, after the "big bang theory" occurred, it took millions of years for the earth to cool down before the oceans began to form. Now they are saying it did not take millions of years, it happened quickly and the Oceans have been here much longer than they originally thought.
I am no scholar in these fields, by no means. But I am a student of all knowledge and it is my right to disagree / question these things. Most of the questions I ask on the subject are never answered. It just doesnt make sense to me. I have tried to find information on this subject from another perspective. .. someone who perhaps was not "schooled" in the European school system who has done research of their own. Someone who has not studied the mad scientists of "this world".
Sometimes it is ok to just not know. But I know it is the intention of many to prove that the creator does not exist. Hence the "evolution" and not creation of all things.

From: Lamar Perryman

Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 1:23 PM
To: Marc Washington ; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Cc: Group Members
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray , In all due respect Sir,
You pre-suppose too much without ever having settled the central question. From whence did Man/Woman originate ?
And How ? ..... . By what means ???
One cannot talk about the evolution and/or devolution of man and society and then present the general everyday life of man in any age of time as " proof " of a Animal Origin (e.g. tadpole, fish, monkey, ape etc).
Moreover to pre-suppose without evidence that the Ape-Man/Woman is the creator or originator of the Human Life Form is just as Theorectically Wrong as The Religionists belief of some Anthropomorphic" Hidden Superman in The Sky called God " that created man from " Dust ... "
Come on now. Neither THEORY is correct let alone talking about building a Human Science and Spirituality off of them as Modern Scientists (Darwinists- Materialists)and Religionists have done.
Can you give me something more than just a conventional, any old day answer, if just for the sake of rationalargument ???

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail. com> wrote:

> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail. com>
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington" <ta_seti@yahoogroups .com>
> Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 1:42 PM
>
> I believe that Homo sapiens evolved likeall other mammalian species, first and foremost as a survivalist -- moral dimensions arose later with sophisticated society based on specialization of knowledge, buthuman behaviour was and still is animal behaviour. No amount of religious/spiritual romanticism can change that. The species did not evolve from a "perfect state", as you call it, to its present "devolved" state. That is romanticism, not science.
>
> Peter

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
CC: americanpharoahs@ yahoogroups. com; africanclassicalhis tory@yahoogroups .co.uk
From: pharoahisrael@ yahoo.com

Date: Fri, 27 Mar 2009 14:08:41 -0700
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

Mr. Gray, do you propose that Man/Woman was originally a Barbaric/Savage Creature and Evolved to the State of a Sense of Compassion?
Or
Do you believe that Man/Woman was originally a Perfect Creature for our species and De Volved to the state that we are now in over a course of time and the loss of the knowledge higher and original state ???

--- On Fri, 3/27/09, Peter Gray wrote:

> From: Peter Gray
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
> To: "Marc Washington"
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 1:22 PM
>
> Interesting report, Ms. Bibum.
>
> However, it is clear that basic human nature itself has not changed over the many milenia of our evolution. Furthermore, we should recognise that each and every one of us has the psychological capacty to exhibit the horrific behaviour that you have sited.Only our social conditioning determines our ability to resist natural barbarity (and we are a barbaric, plundering species). Remember how the West was won?
>
> So it seems clear to me that we haven't seen the last of these savage displays of genocidal war. Perhaps with a peacemonger now in the White House, things might take a turn for the better globally.
>
> Peter

To: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
From: angelinebandonbibum @yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 26 Mar 2009 21:12:21 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Reflecting on the Cruelest Months

> Reflecting on the Cruelest Months
>
> By Angeline Bandon-Bibum
>
> "April is the cruellest month,"[1] wrote T.S. Eliot in his poem, The Waste Land. Tl seemed to ring true in April of 1994. On April 6, 1994, a cruel course of events wo Rwanda... A planned and organized massacre was executed by people across all cl poor subsistence farmer, to the middle class schoolmaster, local administrators, and other government officials. There have been genocides throughout human history, in continents all over the world, including Europe, Asia, and Africa. However, the speed and circumstances of this genocide had a chilling uniqueness it seems. For instance, it is estimated that 800,000 people were killed in 100 days during this massacre. That averages to 8,000 people slaughtered per day. This number constituted one tenth of the population of the country at that time. These people (men, women, and children) were killed by their fellow citizens, many with machetes and other crude weapons. This happened in 1994, in a post modern world of technology.

No society is completely immune from crime or violence. A crime committed by a stranger, or the occasional crime of passion between acquaintances or even family members does occur in human societies. Nevertheless, how can one imagine being killed by a local school teacher, farmer, doctor, coworker, or one's neighbor? This happened in Rwanda in 1994.

So as April approaches, I ponder on that cruel month that turned Rwanda, temporarily, into a waste land. I cannot help but to wonderwhat is it in human psychology that allows this type of destructive group behavior, on this magnitude, to go unchecked. I have so many questions: During this massacre, where were the ethical codes and moral standards that had previously existed? What type of group think mentality, in addition to coercion, made so many otherwise normal people participate in this violence? Where was the analytical thinking on the part of the perpetrators? That is, why did not more people stop to analyze their actions? What were the roots of this massacre? What were the warning signs before it happened? And how can these types of mass acts be prevented in the future, anywhere?

April approaches. It is traditionally a month of plentiful rain and renewal. It is a month that inspires lots of reflection for me. Easter, a sacred Christian holiday, most often occurs in April. April is the month of my birthday. Its also the month of my fathers birthday and my grandmothers birthday, both of whom have passed on. My mother passed away in the month of April. So, April has much significance for me.

To my list of things to reflect on in the month of April, I have added those cruel three months in Rwanda in 1994, that started in April and lasted 100 blood-soaked days.

[1] T.S. Eliot (18881965). The Waste Land. 1922.

"Reflecting on the Cruelest Months" Copyright March 2009

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
Check out my websites:
http://www.authorsd en.com/msangelin ebandonbibum

Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage. Check it out.

Hotmail is up to 70% faster. Now good news travels really fast. Find out more.

Quick access to your favorite MSN content and Windows Live with Internet Explorer 8. Download FREE now!

| 28460|2009-04-03 09:15:33|odhiambo okecth|Kuria-Mwangi; Thank you|
KCDN has today received 50USD [Kshs 3,856.00] from Migosi Kuria-Mwangi, a prolific comic relief and satirist, a Friend of KCDN. Migosi Kuria is a Friend who has been following our postings and he has decided to support the KCDN Child Support Initiative.

We have also received Kshs 1,500.00 from Dr Edwin Otieno, a Consultant Surgeon in Nairobi. Mr Luke Ogono, a Friend of KCDN has also given us Kshs 500.00.

To all of you we say; thank you. Your support gives us hope.

We have a lot going on at our office, and it is only through such friends that we can be of support to the many children visiting our office. Your support comes closely on the heels of a Kshs 10,000.00 donation from the President- Kenya Community in Ontarion Mr. Ben Ondoro, and a donation of Kshs 7,000.00 from Migosi Zedekiah Nyanchama from the US.

To all Friends of KCDN, it is your support that gives us strength to mobilize and be of help to the many orphans and vulnerable children.

Let us all join hands and be of help to each other.

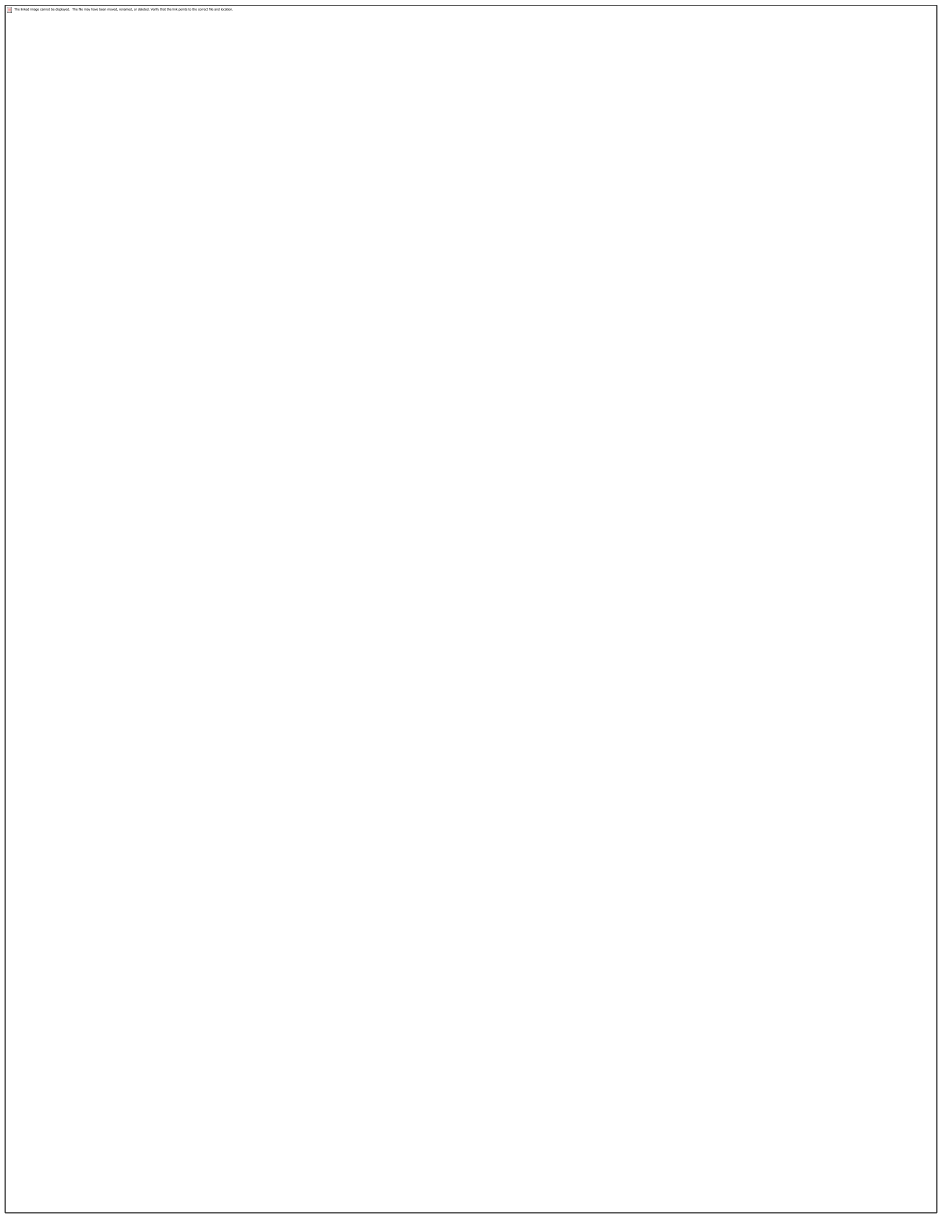
Our regards and blessings,

Odhiambo T Oketch,
CEO KCDN Nairobi,
PO Box 47890-00100,
Nairobi, Kenya.
Tel; 0735 529 126, 0724 365 557,
Email; komarockswatch@yahoo.com,
http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

| 28461|2009-04-03 09:15:59|Nix Winter|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Those are so awesome... though the religion one could be.. .since monotheism...

Where are they going to be sold?

Do you have a gallery of your art?



Nix

On Wed, Apr 1, 2009 at 2:21 AM, Asar Imhotep <asar_imhotep@yahoo.com> wrote:
Asar,
That logo is Fantastic!
HTP,
Mahari

****

Peace Mahari

It is part of a new line of shirts I've created which will be ready in like two weeks or so. Here are some of the design

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 12:02 AM

Asar,
That logo is Fantastic!
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Greetings Redheathergold
>
> I appreciate your response to my inquiry, but I am not sure what was stated is in alignment with my general premise. This particular discussion concerns the possibility of the Ancient Egyptian determinatives having an affixal value in the written language. We seek to see if the Bantu Nominal Noun Class prefixes can give us some clues as to how this process played out in the Ancient Egyptian language.
>
> For us, the question of Bantu speakers in ancient Egypt has already been established. And we no longer argue the African origins of Egyptian civilization. That has already been established for us since the early 20th century, and has come to a final consensus with UNESCO's conference in 1974 where Chiekh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga presented their case for an African cultural, historical and linguistic make-up of ancient Egyptian civilization.
>
> We seek now to further understand the nature and reason behind ancient Egyptian cultural expressions by examining, systematically, the living cultures of present day Africa since these cultural expressions have already been illuminated.
>
> So this particular thread concerns understanding a linguistic component that will further help us to understand the structure of Ancient Egyptian written languages.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>

>
> --- On Fri, 3/27/09, redheathergold wrote:
> From: redheathergold
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Friday, March 27, 2009, 10:06 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting
>
> finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that
>
> the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called
>
> Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
>
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
>
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
>
> Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
>
> Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be
>
> added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a
>
> whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".
>
>
>
> Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
>
> White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
>
> locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those
>

> who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition
>
> to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other
>
> tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
>
> and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall
>
> paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact
>
> that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.
>
> One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was
>
> a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is
>
> that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This
>
> gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now
>
> know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back
>
> from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can
>
> only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt
>
> geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
>
>
> One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
>
> the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly
>
> knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local
>
> leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar
>
> clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
>
>
> She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
>
> group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
>

>
> and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
>
> and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the
>
> oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
>
>
> As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many
>
> African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with
>
> large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me
>
>
> that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive,
>
> they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European
>
> women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>

--
www.nixwinter.com

| 28462|2009-04-03 09:16:03|odhiambo okecth|Kenyans must demand action over Migingo|
Attachments :

Kenyans must demand action over Migingo 2nd April 2009

The world must know that for the last eight months, Yoweri Museveni of Uganda has been levying taxes on Kenyans leaving at Migingo Island , an Island in Kenya , 15 Kilometres from Muhuru mainland of Kenya and 260 Kilometres from the nearest mainland in Uganda . This is an act of aggression.

During all that time, the world famed ruthlessness of the Kenya Police against Kenyans and the brutality exhibited by the Kenya Army in Mt Elgon and Wagir against Kenyans has been conspicuously absent. The Kenya Police even took off from Migingo at the first sight of 2 armed

Police Officers from Uganda .

Yesterday, Migosi Raila Odinga was emphatic that Migingo belongs to Kenya and that the Ugandan flag that has been hoisted there for the last eight months must be lowered immediately. He went on to say that only 6% of Lake Victoria belongs to Kenya . As a partner in this government, I would have wanted to hear from him that all those Ugandans at Migingo have been arrested for being in Kenya illegally, and are been detained at Kodiaga Prisons awaiting to appear in Court.

If 94% of the Lake belongs to Uganda and Tanzania , then, johana mane ma ooro Museveni mondo okaw Migingo Islands ? [What is this madness that has made Museveni invade Kenya ?]

Why are we negotiating with Museveni? If the Army, the Police and the politicians can not reclaim Migingo, the people will, the people of Kenya must. We will stop all transit vehicles to Uganda , either through rail or road transport. We must stop all transit vehicles either by rail or road into Uganda with immediate effect.

It is very simple;

1] The Kenya Police must immediately arrest all those people masquerading as Ugandan Police at Migingo. They are in Kenya illegally. Do not negotiate this. It is so sad when an invader shuts down our Minister in the presence of 2 Provincial Commissioners, the Police Commanders and the press. Why is the Police Commissioner being sent to Uganda to negotiate with the invaders? Why has he never been sent to negotiate with Kenyans in areas of conflict? They cannot fool us!

2] The Armed Forces of Kenya must cease being ornaments best used for passing out parades. They must defend the territorial space of Kenya . They must not negotiate with Museveni over any bit of an inch of Kenya . They must repulse those invaders with the full force that they can. Why move into Elgon and Wagalla with such might and force, and put your tails between your legs when your services are most needed? When Kenya has been invaded?

3] The Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of Kenya must know that Kenya has been invaded. He must act to protect Kenya and Kenyans. We do not eat new Districts. We eat the fish that Museveni is now controlling at Migingo. For Gods sake, can those people who meet Kibaki daily tell him that Migingo has been invaded and has been under the firm grip of Museveni for the last 8 months? And that he is the Commander-in-Chief of the Kenya Armed Forces, as Mutula and Kalonzo likes reminding us.

Unless he and they know something that we do not know.

The Commander-in-Chiefs response to the Migingo crisis, now in its eighth month, leads most of us to confirm that there is a deal between him and Museveni. This deal is a fulfillment of favours earlier extended, or a deal expected in future. And that future is 2012.

If we look at how Kibaki has bestrowed Kenya in the past 6 years, I am convinced that the president does not mean well for Kenya . If a part of Kenya can be invaded by a country like Uganda and he keeps silent, then his leadership is wanting. It is also not by surprise that the President has refused to visit that same part of Kenya for the entire period he has been President of Kenya.

Museveni had invaded Rwanda and Kagame beat him so quickly and so ruthlessly that he cannot try again. He invaded DRC and again, Kagame came to the rescue of DRC and beat him there. He tried Tanzania and he knew the repercussions. He knows that Tanzanians will beat him and follow him to Kampala and topple him, the way they did with Idi Amin Dada.

He tried South Sudan, and the rag tag army of the southern Sudan dared him. They were ready for him any time, day or night. He cannot dare Ethiopia . He knows that Menes Zenawi does not take those kinds of jokes lightly.

He then turned to Kenya and invaded Migingo and for eight months, his flag has been high as he collects taxes from Kenyans.

The fact that our trigger happy police force could fold their tail and take off speaks volumes. What is the rationale of unleashing too much force on students who are just rioting while you turn a blind eye to an invader?

Where is the force needed? Against our own or against the invaders? I cannot believe that our normally ruthless police force could have left Migingo in fear of Museveni. There must have been an order to withdraw.

I also do not believe that our ceremonial ornaments in the barracks are that cowardly. They invaded Mt Elgon and beat our own Saboat people ruthlessly. There must have been an order for non interference. If our Army can beat people senseless in Mount Elgon and in Wagir, what can stop them from beating these Ugandans from Migingo?

Or, is it that our police and army are at their best against civilians, people who have no guns? People who cannot defend themselves?

Surely, if the Police could cordon off Uhuru Park for a whole one month in January 2007, can they surely be so afraid of Museveni and his team at Migingo? If the Police could kill so many Kenyans just to ensure that Kibaki became our President, can they not kill these 2 Ugandans at Migingo? Can they surely be so afraid in Migingo?

No. It is not the Police, it is not the Army. It is the Commander-in-Chief.

If the President does not want to take action, Kenyans must now defend their territorial integrity. We did it before by uprooting the Railway line to Uganda . We did it before by stopping all transit vehicles through Busia and Malaba.

If Uganda has invaded Kenya , and the Kenya Police and Army are under instructions not to intervene, Kenyans must take the law into their hands and protect our boundaries.

It is a shame that a rag tag army in Somali can act so swiftly whenever there is territorial violations while an Independent Kenya , cries baby.

It is sad to note that the President is doing nothing to promote peace, national healing and reconciliation in Kenya . He is refusing, for purposes of expediency, to be the symbol of national unity.

It looks to me like Migongo is an advance post for 2012, and we must view it as such. Kenya must not loose any inch of land, more so to Yoweri Museveni.

If the Army and the Police are under instructions not to defend us, let us defend ourselves. Sijivuni kuwa Mkenya!

Odhiambo T Oketch,

Koamrocks Nairobi.

| 28463|2009-04-03 09:16:05|Nix Winter|Egyptian perfume|
http://www.livescience.com/history/090324-smelly-queen.html

Interesting, ne?

--
| 28464|2009-04-03 09:16:12|Nix Winter|Re: My Humble Apologies|
listens

So many things to think about! :)

I agree... a person's words do reveal their heart, as much as a human heart's intent and motives can ever be fully laid out and understood.

It is not only persons of pale skin that act out as bullies. Skin color is only a superficial indicator of type that people use to impose social status or to self select into social status. The Hutu-Tutsi conflict. Or historical conflicts between French and English. A fifteenth century Englishman can tell the difference visually between a Germanic person, a French person, or an English man, even between a Scot and an English person. Using facial features, variance in coloring, perhaps even body languages and movements, and using these superficial identifiers can segregate into social groupings. The segregation of social groupings through superficial physical traits was so intense in Europe (and other places) that descendants who still live in Europe can still do it, whereas in the US... White is .. well White and we can't tell French blood from Irish Blood, not really.

I think there may be a certain amount of safety in being within a social group, as if it were a tribe, and excluding others from it. A hold over from when family groups, tribal units, competed with other groups for limited resources in a more hostile environment.

In the present environment, perhaps weve come to a place where it would be better for individuals and the whole group if we were to behave as one tribe, which we really are. Superficial indicators aside, we are all one species.

On Wed, Apr 1, 2009 at 2:34 AM, Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:
>>Even if I were to comment or reply to your question, you would not be able to determine what kind of heart I have from one response / fragment of who I am<<

Well, I beg to differ. I am not able to draw your heart in thorough detail and proceed to notate every meaning of its workings and its intentions. But I was able to surmise a good deal about your heart from your reply. However, as I have said before and again before that we, black folk, seem to be waiting for an opportunity to start a conflict. So I will make this related post and end this and I will not make reference to any individuals:
It is not OK to attack or degrade or denigrate little people or unusually big people or fat people or mentally challenged people or weak people or blind people or handicapped/physically challenged people or any person or people who have no control over their status as a powerless minority. It is not OK... at any time. I will attack and I think it is one's duty to attack the oppressor or the bully. And I have done it numerous times on this forum. But it is my opinion that one who attacks a powerless person for being who he/she is is, at best, a coward and very likely hateful as well. And these hateful and/or cowardly people are very likely to have others like them who will love them for being hateful. Think of the pictures of the lynchings of black men AND WOMEN and those white folks standing around smiling like they were at a music concert. Just because you have your own entourage of haters doesn't make it right unless your goal is to have murderous hatred prevail in the world.
Yet, we are all imperfect people -including me and we have to work at living together with the good, bad and ugly amongst us and in us. And I am prepared to do it. But I am not prepared to accept abusive treatment or injustice from others against me or against others.
I think we can take lessons from Martin Luther King who said (to paraphrase) "Injustice against anyone is injustice against all of us".

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
>
> Even if I were to comment or reply to your question, you would not be able to determine what kind of heart I have from one response / fragment of who I am. I don't comment on peoples sexual orientation. It is not my business. It is not my position to judge, or discriminate. To each his own. I live my life according to what I think is pleasing to the creator and I treat all people with respect. I questioned your comments because the argument between the two brothers, and even the comments by all the people who responded, had nothing to do with homophobia or sexual orientation. So it seemed to me that you were using this conversation to put forward your opinion of their opinion about this way of life. Just as you hold that against them, their views, there are some who love them for that. And they are entitled to loving them for that, just as they are entitled to expressing their opinions.
>
> There is no argument against someone supporting the natural way, of a man and a woman. It is how all of us were created - by a man and a woman - and it is the only way humanity will survive - by way of the man and woman. I don't condone violence or inappropriate behavior towards anyone, based on their life choices. I don't spend my time hoping that homosexuals will be annihilated or dispensed with. I spend my time learning about the ways of our ancestors and trying to implement that into this society today.

>
>
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Sent: Sunday, March 29, 2009 9:41 PM
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
>
>
> Well, are you opposed to, non-accepting of the diversity of life?
> Or let me put it to you bluntly and see what kind of heart you have. Are you therefore - if you are non-accepting of homosexuals - in favor of them being annihilated- dispensed with, or what?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, wrote:
> >
> > What does homophobic have to do with anything? And why is it unfortunate that African people prepare the original way of God, which was a man and a woman?
> >
> >
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Sent: Friday, March 27, 2009 1:03 PM
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: My Humble Apologies
> >
> >
> > I was reluctant to enter this fray because I tend to try to avoid inter-group conflict (I find it depressing because it always happens to a very high degree in our community) and because I don't know either of these gentlemen. I have seen a number of Dr. Hagins videos and heard him on internet radio. He seems thoroughly sincere - though likely homophobic as does Kwesi which is an unfortunate ever-present sign of immaturity that prevails within the Afrocentric circles - and his description of events SEEMS right on.
> > I could only surmise by watching some videos of Mr. Kwesi. And there does seem to be a lot egotism there which always leads to mistakes when interacting with others.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
> > >
> > > Greetings Pham
> > >
> > > I must say that I am not surprised at this whole thing. I am not familiar personally with Dr.

Hagin, but I am with Ashra Kwesi and everything he said in his open letter to me is an accurate depiction of how Ashra typically is.
> > >
> > > I know Ashra is an elder in the game now, but on occasion he doesn't act like that. I can kind of see both people's points. It seems to be that Ashra is upset because Dr. Hagin had scenes from Ashra's actual tour in his promotional video. It doesn't seem to be an issue of Dr. Hagin taping the tour in of itself, but using members of Ashra's actual tour in his video. If that is the case, I can understand that.
> > >
> > > As noted in his open letter, Dr. Hagin stated that he offered to discontinue the tape. He could have easily deleted the scenes from the dvd that were in conflict, but he offered to discontinue the whole thing. That is more than honorable for the sake of piece.
> > >
> > > I've been to many Ashra Kwesi lectures and have been taught by him privately in lodges, so I know how he teaches and if certain members of the community says he made slanderous comments about Hagin, I believe it. He does it all of the time with TD Jakes and Skip Gates, as well as others. That's just Kwesi.
> > >
> > > So what I see is a man sincere about his mission and aims at reconciliation and they have been met with hostility. Some say Dr. Hagin is wrong for coming out with an open letter, but I disagree. If a person is doing lecture tours slandering your name, you have a right first as a man to speak up for yourself.
> > >
> > > I understand the need for unity in the Black community, but we have to understand that this happens to any community regardless because it is human. Just because you have knowledge on ancient Egypt doesn't take you out of the human domain. We've seen it with Dubois and Garvey, Dubois and Washington, Malcolm and Martin, Tupac and Biggie. It is what it is. The error comes from the so-called follows, like the brother in the video, who feel they need to step in on someone's behalf.
> > >
> > > Brother Suten Seti, in my opinion, has a long way to go: information wise as well as in character. But he will develop in his own time. Right now, the ball is in Ashra's corner but knowing him, I don't think he'll take the high road.
> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep
> > > http://www.asarimhotep.com
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Every Man Movin wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Peace and blessings,
> > > >
> > > > if the brother in the video is indicative of we call "respect", I > > > > think we are in alot of trouble.

> > > >
> > > > I was taught to be a bit more reverent of my brothers and elders, even
> > > > in disagreement.
> > > >
> > > > That tirade, laced with threats was less than empowering or unifying.
> > > > I'm disapointed in the whole thing. Again, brothers are divided over > > > > things that can't possibly have enough substance for us not to > > > > forgive, move on and serve each other for our grandchildren's destiny.
> > > >
> > > > Much respect,
> > > >
> > > > E.
> > > >
> > > >
> > >
> >
>

--
www.nixwinter.com

| 28465|2009-04-03 09:16:49|angelinebandonbibum@yahoo.com|On April 6, 1994...|
In the Spring and Summer of 1994, there was planned massacre of one group of people by another group in the country of Rwanda. It started on April 6, 1994, and it lasted 100 blood-soaked days. Let us, as human beings, never forget that massacre, or others.

Sojourner's Dream is a novel that incorporates those tragic events into a love story. This story shows that one day you can have a normal life, and the next day you can be thrown into a tragic and historic event.

Angeline.
See the trailer for Sojourner's Dream,
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QdDjD5Wuz6Y
Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com

| 28466|2009-04-03 09:17:01|odhiambo okecth|Fw: Presidential visit t|
Attachments :

--- On Thu, 4/2/09, odhiambo okecth wrote:

Date: Thursday, April 2, 2009, 4:55 AM

Mr. Ben Ondoro, President- Kenya Community in Ontario Canada , paid a courtesy call o KCDN yesterday, 1st April 2009. This was in fulfillment of his desire to visit KCDN and s hand what KCDN does.

In his maiden visit, Mr. President was accompanied by;

1] Ms Betina Sehnke, Founder Director, Huband Cradle of Hope Childrens Home; Canad home is based at Ngong Township]

2] Ms Lynda J. Kuhn, Senior Vice President, Maple Leaf Foods, Toronto , Ontario , Cana
[She was visiting a childrens home in Nakuru]

3] Lone Desperson, Maple Leaf Foods; Canada ;

And a Lady whose name we inadvertently missed.

On hand to receive our visitors were;

1] Mr. Onyango-Oloo, a Friend of KCDN, a prolific social commentator;

2] Mr. Lawrence Murunga, a Trustee of KCDN;

3] Mr. Onyango Atito, a Trustee of KCDN;

4] Tom from the Chiefs office;

5] Mr. Owino Olendo, Director, Taxplus Consult Ltd, a Friend of KCDN;

6] Ms. Phyllis Wanjiku, the Office Manager, KCDN;

7] Ms. Elizabeth Mwende, Programmes Officer, KCDN;

8] Ms. Ester Anying, Programmes Officer, KCDN; and

9] Odhiambo T Oketch, CEO KCDN.

This was an introductory meeting of minds to explore areas of mutual cooperation in supp
the..... http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

Regards,

Odhiambo T Oketch,

CEO KCDN Nairobi,

PO Box 47890-00100,

Nairobi, Kenya.

Tel; 0735 529 126, 0724 365 557,

Email; komarockswatch@yahoo.com,

http://kcdnkomarockswatch.blogspot.com

PICT0079.JPG

PICT0081.JPG

PICT0083.JPG

PICT0084.JPG

PICT0085.JPG

PICT0086.JPG

PICT0087.JPG

PICT0088.JPG

| 28467|2009-04-03 09:17:38|Divine Allah|Re: Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009|
Peace. EXCELLENT RESOURCE. Thank you for making Knowledge Born. Peace.

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

On Thu, Apr 2, 2009 at 11:58 AM, Asar Imhotep <asar_imhotep@yahoo.com> wrote:
I thought this might interest a few who are on this list. Enjoy!

Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009 Get email alerts!

Dear Asar Imhotep,

As someone who has previously registered for a trial of an online journal published by SAGE, we wanted to let you know about our current free access period on SAGE Journals Online. You can now register for free online access to more than 500 SAGE journals with content available from 1999-current until April 30, 2009!

The SAGE Journals Online platform provides users access to one of the largest and most powerful collections of business, humanities, social sciences, and science, technical, and medical content in the world. SAGE is also the world's leading publisher of research methods and during the trial you will be able to search more than 25 research methods journals--from qualitative, quantitative, and mixed methods to evaluation.

You already have an account set up so all you need to do is activate this trial on your SAGE Journals Online account.

Register here

Scroll down the page to enter your username 'imhotep06' and your password in the 'Sign in' section. If you have forgotten your password, simply follow the link on the 'Sign in' page to receive a new one.

Activation only takes a couple of minutes and then you can access all 500+ SAGE journals on SAGE Journals Online, our award-winning online platform.

Sincerely,

SAGE Marketing
www.sagepub.com

If you need assistance with your trial, please contact: onlinesupportUS@sagepub.com.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

| 28468|2009-04-03 09:18:08|shutefnut|Fwd: German Scientists Reveal Two-Faced Nefertiti|
-HOTEP!

thanks my brother I, cant wait to see the original sculpture in stone underneath. I, have always thought it was a fake because her other portraits, from Akhet-Amen were more African in features than this bust of 1912, so called discovered by German egyptologist Ludwig borchard. Now I know they was fixin her up for sure.

Heru Bennu Amen Ra

-- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

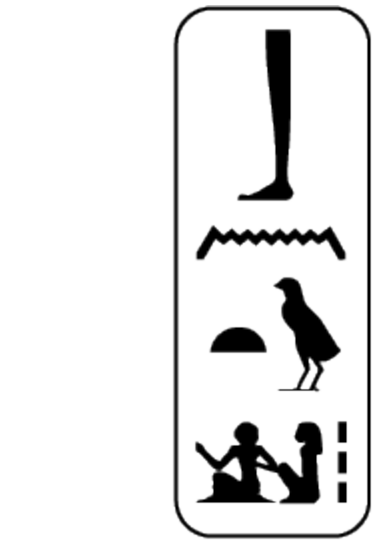
BERLIN?German scientists have discovered a second face just under the surface of the bust of Nefertiti, the Associated Press reports.

The group of researchers, led by Alexander Huppertz, director of the Imaging Science Institute at Berlin's Charit頒ospital and medical school, performed a CT scan on the sculpture that revealed an underlying stone carving that is slightly different than the external stucco face. The findings were published today in the monthly journal Radiology.

"Until we did this scan... the hypothesis was that the stone underneath was just a support," said Huppertz.

The 3,300-year-old bust depicts Queen Nefertiti, the wife of Pharaoh Akhenaten.

The differences between the two faces are slight and include creases at the corners of the mouth and a bump on the nose in the stone version. Huppertz believes that someone must have ordered the adjustments.



John H. Taylor, a curator for Ancient Egypt and Sudan at the British Museum, cautioned against "attempting to explain the significance of these changes" but added that the information will be valuable in helping to preserve the sculpture.

The bust was discovered in 1912 by Egyptologist Ludwig Borchardt, who brought it to Berlin. It is currently on view at the city's Altes Museum and will move to the Neues Museum when the institution reopens in October.

http://www.artinfo.com/news/story/30987/german-scientists-reveal-two-faced-nefertiti/

--- End forwarded message ---
| 28469|2009-04-03 09:19:50|Ferg|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Asar.
Absolutely brilliant!
It's about time there was an establishedvoice representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of Culture. KAA!
Somo

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Wednesday, April 01, 2009 1:03 PM
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
>
> Ha, that's how I felt about the Matrix film. But it's all good. Glad you enjoyed them. I will now explain the science behind the BANTU logo.

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

As you can see the glyphs used in the shenew represent the consonants BNTW which we use to mean BANTU. Bantu we know simply means "the people." But I wanted to have a science in true African fashion. In African wisdom centers signs represent ideas and when you place certain signs together you can form a sentence or statement of ideas. When reading the Mdw Ntr we not only read the signs as phonetic values, we also read them "ideographically. " That means each sign is also a ideogram that represents an idea or concept.

Each sign in the BANTU set of glyphs represent a word which you can read in any hieroglyphic dictionary. So the general breakdown is as follows:

B (foot) = place
N (water) = wave, to write, to weave
T (bread loaf) = mass, land, matter
W (baby chick) = to grow, to develop
Man and woman determinatives followed by 3 strokes denotes people.

The oval shaped shenew represents the universe. When you examine the sign for RA you will see a dot encircled by a larger circle. The smaller circle or dot is actually RA or the sun. The circle that encloses RA signifies "all that God sees." You won't find that definition in any Egyptology books. You just have to sit at the foot of African teachers to get that.

So "all that God sees" is in fact EVERYTHING in the universe. So that's why the shenew (which was originally a circle) signifies the universe itself. So let's get back to our statement. When we look at the logo it is really telling us something. It states:

"The universe is the place where waves/radiations and mass/matter grow/develop to become man (the people)."

As can be illustrated in the Fulani and Bambara traditions, there are two terms that designate a person.They are Neddu and Neddaaku for the Fulani and Maa and Maaya for the Bambara. The definitions are as follows:

Neddu = the person
Neddaaku = the people of the person
Maa = the person
Maaya = the people of the person

The person is the "receptical" and the people of the person are the various aspects of the Creator (Maa Ngala) contained in the "recptical." As Hampate Ba further explains:

"To contain man, the all-in-one being, Maa-Ngala devised a special body, vertical and symmetric, able to contain at one and the same time a piece of all the existing beings. This body, called "Fari", symbolizes a sanctuary where all beings are moving in a circle. This is why tradition regards the body of man as the world in miniature, according to the expression "Maa ye dinye merenin de ye," which means "Man is the universe in miniature.""

He goes on to say:

"The concept of the unity of life goes hand in hand with the fundamental notions of balance, exchange, and interdependence. Maa, who contains in himself an element of all existing things, is called to become guarantor of the equilibrium of the exterior world, and even of the cosmos. To the extent that he returns to his true nature (that of primordial Maa), man appears, in the world, as the axis whose vocation it is to keep the external multiplicity from falling into chaos.....Synthesis of the universe and crossroads of the forces of life, man is therefore called to become the equilibrium point where it will be possible to combine, through him, the various dimensions of which he is the bearer. Then will he truly deserve the name of Maa, interlocutor of Maa-Ngala and guarantor of the balance of creation."

In other words, man (the person) is the central axis of the forces of the universe, endowed with a consciousness that allows it to know and understand these forces, who has been given a job to be the Creator's interlocutor and to maintain balance of such forces. Man is itself a miniature universe, made up of all of the elements that are contained in the universe. This is a living example of the maxim, "Man know thyself and thou shalt know the gods and the universe."

Now lets revisit our ideographic meaning of BANTU:

"The universe is the place where waves/radiations and mass/matter grow/develop to become man (the people)."

The logo has a "reveal front view" and a "hidden back view." The revealed front view simply means THE PEOPLE. The hidden back view is an open textured discourse on the science of the "people of the person" and his/her purpose.

This apparel project is simply an aspect of the African-American Cultural Development Project that I will be spear heading within a year. I am completing the initial framework as we speak. This BANTU Apparel project will be an example of one of the major pillars of Culture: Creative Motif.

Just by displaying the logo (and the many Bantu proverbs that will be displayed on the t-shirts) will allow me (or anyone who understands) to speak to the minds of our people. It will intice the curiousity (hunger for the mind) of the individual and it will give us an opportunity to engage in a dialogue on the concepts and lessons that the images convey.

I have attached my abstract for the African-American Cultural Development Project to this email. Please read and give feedback. I hope this wasn't too long winded.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

& nbsp;

MOCHA-VERSITY

MOCHA-Versity

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
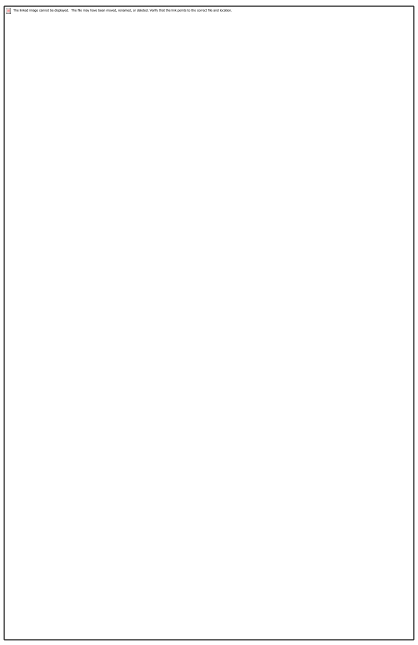
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 1:40 AM

ASAR,YOU STOLE MY IDEA!!! You just can't trust anyone! lol
Those are great designs - very classy.
HTP,
Mahari

| 28470|2009-04-03 09:20:44|Pearl Jr|Michael Jackson Hires Activist as Manager & Diddy's Disregard!|



In Association with

Elbow Grease Productions

Newsletter

Meet Michael Jackson's New Manager

PRESS RELEASE
For Immediate Release
Contact: Ladd Biro, Champion Management
972.724.3039; lbiro@championmgt.com

Michael Jackson Appoints New Management
Leonard Rowe, legendary promoter, to steer singer's latest comeback

Beverly Hills, CA (March 27, 2009) - Michael Jackson, universally acclaimed as the King of Pop, today named Leonard Rowe, the legendary concert promoter from Atlanta, as his new Manager. Rowe succeeds Dr. Tohme Tohme.

"I am very pleased that Leonard has accepted my offer to manage my business affairs during this important period in my career," stated Jackson. He added, "Leonard Rowe has been a long-time friend and business associate whose judgment I have come to trust."

Rowe has worked closely with Michael and the Jackson Family since promoting the family's "Off the Wall Tour" in March 1979. "For the past 30 years, I have had a great feeling of admiration for Michael and his family," said Rowe. "We worked hard together and made history on the 'Off the Wall Tour.' I am grateful to Michael for this opportunity and look forward to once again working with my friend to ensure a successful and historic comeback," stated an enthusiastic Rowe.

Rowe has been a staunch advocate for African-American rights in the concert promotion industry for the past 35 years. His landmark antitrust and civil rights litigation against nearly every concert promoter and agency in the music industry won the promoter a no-nonsense reputation for challenging the status quo.

Renowned Civil Rights leader Dr. Joseph Lowery recently said, "Rowe has foughthard to preserve the rights of both African-American promoters and artists in the music industry against rampant industry discriminatory practices." Rowe has dedicated his career to successfully promoting and touring hundreds of acts, including the Jacksons, Prince, R. Kelly and the late Marvin Gaye.

Please sign this petition for Michael Jackson to perform in the USA.

http://www.thepetitionsite.com/1/usa-4-michael-jackson

~~~~~~

Diddy's Dumb Deed

By Pearl Jr.
Author, Black Women Need Love, Too!

Another attack on Black Women by one of our own! Diddy's CIROC vodka sent out a cattle call looking for and I quote, "White, Hispanic and Light-skinned African American" women to represent his vodka. The arrogance to specify the type of Black woman has reached back to racism of the early 1900's brown paper bag mentality.

The brown paper bag test was for admittance to Black social societies and certain, so-called, upscale parties. If a WOMAN was darker than a brown paper bag, she was disallowed to join certain social groups. This can be verified by watching old Black movies (usually in black and white) and you'll see that nearly ALL females are light-skinned. Diddy's Dumb Deed let's us see that, even though, some progress has been made, real CHANGE has not occurred.

Imagine the mental abuse Black women must be going through thinking well, if I wear light foundation or bleach my skin through the night, I might be able to pull off being light-skinned, or dang I'm too dark; leading to self-hatred. Then imagine the thought processes in the waiting room with all the White and Hispanic women feeling superior because they are NOT melanin enriched and Black women feeling less confident because they are in doubt about their beauty and worth because of the color of their skin.

Furthermore, what would Diddy and/or his staff do when a dark-skinned woman showed up? Would "they" be rude and angrily reiterate that the requirement was for light-skinned Black women ONLY, and then she'd be shamed and embarrassed in front of the crowd of other women because she was told she wasn't good enough due to her dark-skin?

What would Diddy do if Haley Berry showed up? She is technically a dark-skinned bi-racial woman. What about the beautiful Gabrielle Union, or modeling pioneers Grace Jones, Beverly Johnson, or Imaan? Would they be turned away because their skin was too dark?

And the biggest slap in the face would be the denial of our First Lady, Michelle Obama! She would, too, be turned away because she is not light-skinned, White or Hispanic.

There are so many racist ways of Hollywood, and yes, Diddy qualifies as a part of "Hollywood" because he is a celebrity. The propaganda in movies that seems to always match a Black man (with any useful skills) with a non-Black woman in videos, TV shows, and even blockbuster movies be THE catalyst for the lack of Black love within the Black race family? This propaganda campaign is using the age-old trick of dividing in order to conquer. How long are we going to keep falling for the same old tricks???
~~~~~~

The only solution is to boycott racism in all forms, which means that under the devastating circumstances of the high amount of single Black woman/mothers, Black women should NEVER support anyone, especially Black men, that want to keep that status quo unchanged. The media and marketing executives will soon learn that to continue to devalue Black women will NOT render them much sought after profits.

And please, no one use the "it's all about the money" excuse. Hell, slavery was "all about the money" and how many of us condone that behavior? Racism is racism, even when it's racism within the same group, now called self-hate.

Well let's use their own motivation to our favor, "if it don't make dollars, it don't make sense (cents)!" Don't allow your hard-earned dollars to be used from anything that divides the Black race and weakens our already weaknesses.

There's no acceptable denial for Diddy. In fact, he purposely omitted dark-skinned women and there's proof. On the black and white TV ad for Diddy's vodka already airing, it only includes light-skinned women. Diddy's ignorance is astounding because his twin daughters are dark-skinned. HeMUST not connect the dots that he is devaluing his own daughters and insulting his own momma!

Now, this falls right in line with the marketing of Diddy's perfume too. As I was shopping in Macy's over a year ago, I saw a large advertisement for Diddy's perfume with Diddy in the middle of two non-Black women. I thought to myself, I guess my money isn't good enough for him because that ad didn't speak to me; as a matter of fact, it was insulting that he CHOSE NOT to use, AT LEAST, one Black woman in his ad.

Don't these fools realize that Black women are their MAIN market and will support a Black male, especially one in the music industry, in a quick second IF THEY FELT CARED FOR? Well according to the US Census Bureau, there are about 112 million White females and only 20 million Black females, so if this marketing of Black men with non-Black women WORKED, then why is today'sBlack music sales by Black men so dismal and declining fast and in a hurry? If non-Black women were truly ALL INTO BLACK MEN, then why are these types of marketing strategies NOT rendering much higher sales figures? There are about 130 million non-Black women and I just don't see the omitting of Black women in the lives of Black men working and equating to 7X more sales. It seems MOST of "them" don't realize Black women are Black men's BIGGEST supporters. As a matter of fact, sales figures are doing the opposite, they are declining!

BlackMediaReview.com has been reviewing and tracing the sales figures of so-called Black movies and record sales for the past two and a half years religiously every week. Spike Lee, who is usually a shoe-in for making a profitable movie, failed miserable with his Miracle at St. Anna's, where he promotes the heck out of Black men swooning over White women; so much so that I simply walked out the movie in disgust. The movie is his biggest loser to date.

Then examine the careers of Taye Diggs, Cedric the Entertainer and many others after they made shows/movies featuring non-Black women. They, too, are huge flops!

Terrence Howard, whoin an interview in Essence Magazine, a Black female publication, dissed Black women. Then when he released his debut album, his record sales were so low that many didn't evencheck to seeif he could sing or not. Black women just didn't care and apparently, neither did non-Black women.His sales didn't reach 60,000.

And since many people failed to realize that Michael Jackson suffers from the skin depigmenting disease, vitiligo, and seemed to have few Black friends, his sales have been declining for decades. And since he hired the Nation of Islam bodyguards during his trial, had a Black female publicist, was rumored to marry a Black African female, attended James Brown's funeral and Jesse Jackson's birthday party, he sold out nearly a million tickets in the United Kingdom in a matter of hours.

It seems even Whites respect people who respect themselves. Check out who Americans elected the President with the most votes in Presidential history? It's a Black couple named Barack and Michelle Obama. The "sell-out" doesn't work well for Black folks! Damn it, even proud sell-out Larry Elder, got cancelled due to his low TV and radio ratings.

Yes, people watched Will Smith's movie, Hancock in large numbers, but he didn't end up with that White girl at the end of the movie; besides the special effects and the magic of Will Smith's charm works under nearly every circumstance, except for the movie, SEVEN POUNDS, where he is matched up with self-proclaimed Latina, Rosario Dawson (her last name sounds Black American and she's quite dark-skinned as well).*SEVEN POUNDS*is one of his weakest films in recent history!

My "sistas" are finally waking up and no longer making excuses for self-haters. Black women have always purchased Black music, jerseys, and tennis shoes for their sons. Ladies, the proverbial "they"obviously believe we don't have value, so we can keep our value in our purses. Why give money and power to those who don't have value for you or, worse yet, don't like you?

Well, the time has come to make a loud strong statement to celebrities, athletes, executive decision-makers, and anyone else NEEDING to please loads of people, that if you don't like us, we don't like you, or better yet, we'll spend it on people that are showing some signs of support for our community and we'll pay their bills.

We can forgive, but only with ACTIONS!

~~~
~~~

information call 1-877-787-9326. Get your subscription online today at www.askdeannamagazine.com and save 30% off the newsstand price. Single copy purchases are also available online at www.askdeannamagazine.com

Get your annual subscription to Ask Deanna! Magazine today for $25 and save 30% off the newstand price.

What's Was In The Debut Issue for March 2009?

How to deal with jealousy

Types of men women shouldn't marry

Sex between married couples

Mistakes of New Entrepreneurs

And much, much, more!!!!
Call 1-877-787-9326 for advertising rates and more information.

March Cover of Ask Deanna! Magazine

IT IS TIME FOR A BLACK'S BEST INTEREST STANCE!

TOGETHER WE WILL CHANGE THE WORLD TOWARDS A MORE RACIALLY BALANCED & EQUAL SOCIETY FOR ALL!

Sincerely,

Pearl Jr
Elbow Grease Productions

Elbow Grease Productions is a full service media company that specializes in activism via the media.

THIS EMAIL IS SPONSORED BY:

THE BLACK WOMAN'S MOVEMENT!

~~~
~~~

even know to credit him or his kind for bringing money into black communities.

His work may seem like a fun and glamorous career, but he is quick to pull the sheet back on the scathing bed of corruption that holds the deep dark secrets of this field.

Despite the many drawbacks and situations that occur as he pushes forward he finds enjoyment in his work and feels he has not only a right but a purpose in staying. His staying power is quickly credited to God and those who have supported him. Leonard Rowe sees beyond the concerns and problems and realizes that giving up will not make the path any easier for his predecessors, nor will his fight for justice be one that is fought with any more ease for those who remain behind.

So who is Leonard Rowe and what does he do? Is he a literal soldier in the armed forces? Does he work in the corporate world and bang his head on the glass ceiling we all have heard of? Is he out there fighting the "good ol' boy" system of politics? No...he's a top flight concert promoter. And yet he manages to shed light on an industry that still has deep roots in a racist thrust toward monetary power shifts within the entertainment industry.

I asked Mr. Rowe if he knew a lot about promoting and just how he got started and he began to recant his genesis. "I started promoting in 1975. And it was on a whim that I started promoting. I was in love with a group at the time called The Spinners. I wasn't thinking about entering into the industry at all. I just wanted to see The Spinners perform. So a friend of mine and I flew out of Atlanta to Newark, New Jersey to see the Spinners. We got up there around noon and we decided to go downtown to Symphony Hall to where they were playing. I went down to the building and the line was two blocks long. At that particular time, the tickets were seven dollars [in Newark] which was high because down South the tickets are traditionally lower than they are up North. So that seven dollars was extremely high and I thought it was a lot of money. As I stood in that line about a block away from the building, I mumbled out to myself, talking out loud "I wonder who's getting all these seven dollars." And some guy who was standing in line said, "The promoter gets these seven dollars." I didn't know what a promoter was or what he did but I made up in my mind that that was what I was gonna be and here I am some 32 years later. So basically that is how I got interested and into the industry."

Rowe continues with the story, telling of his first loss and how important it was to have a strong support system. "I went from there and started learning as much as I could learn on my own because, no one helps you in this business. No one volunteers advice. I went from there and met a good banker who was my friend, and is my friend today. He went out on a limb and loaned me a few thousand dollars, which I lost, but I was able to keep going doing about two shows a year. So with him on my side, and by the grace of God, I was always able to keep going. But, to get ahead, I always tell people it's like obtaining credit. You could be a person coming out of college with no credit...never had bad credit and never had good credit. You walk into a bank and ask for a Visa and that banker will deny you nine times out of ten; not because you have bad credit but because you have no credit at all. You can go across the street to another bank and ask for a Master Charge and a banker there might see something in you and take a chance with you and say, 'Come on...I ain't supposed to do this but I will issue you a Master Charge.'" Once he gives you that Master Charge you can go immediately back across the street and ask for a Visa and they will give it to you, so it's like that in promoting."

I couldn't help but wonder who the first act was that gave him a chance. Rowe affectionately talks about that break like it was yesterday. "I was able [to get a big act] a few years after I started, I was never able to get a real superstar artist, to talk to one of the biggest groups in the country at the time. The O'Jays. The O'Jays gave me about half of their tour. For some reason they liked me. I don't know why, but they did and I got half of their tour and it was all successful. All of the shows sold out in every major arena that we played and from that point on

I began to book every major artist n the country from Michael Jackson on down. So I give a lot of credit to The O'Jays for going out on a limb and taking a chance with me. I am thankful today to them for that."

I read about the struggles and problems Rowe has had in the industry. He was the man behind a major class action lawsuit against the concert industry. The lawsuit was dismissed, a major setback for Rowe, but he continues the fight and is not giving up on pursuing equality. I needed to know more about the injustice he fights because so far, things seem as though every day hard knocks we all must deal with when starting a new business.

Leonard Rowe then gave me a history lesson full of insight that made me feel privileged to be privy to such a wealth of knowledge.

"Being a concert promoter is a very highly stressful job. They are responsible for all costs. If people decide not to come to your show, you are still responsible for the costs. Its very stressful not only to play one show, but to launch a national tour like an R. Kelly tour when you are hitting every major city in the US it becomes very highly stress. Especially in these days; Black promoters are becoming extinct. They are basically gone.

That's due to the racism and discrimination in this industry, they have basically eliminated us. So, it's very hard for Black Promoter to maintain. Yes, I have been blessed. I know I have to stay around as long as I have. It's the way the industry treats us. A black promoter is not given the opportunity to promote a White act like an Elton John or a U2 or The Rolling Stones. The White promoters, and I know all of 'em that came into the industry with me, are able to promote any and all acts be it Black or White. If I call the booking agency and ask them what's available for me, they'll only go down the Black roster. If a White promoter calls that same booking agency and asks what's available, they'll go down both the Black and White roster. So it's very hard for a Black promoter to maintain in this industry, no matter whether he has the wherewithal or the knowledge...that doesn't matter. They will not sell me a date on U2 and they make no exceptions for that. So, it's difficult. But, I have to keep going and fighting for what is right, which I intend to do."

The obvious injustice is apparent in that equality is not practiced, but it runs deeper. He shifts gears and talks about the turn around benefits of supporting African American promoted concerts.

"R. Kelly should be commended for what he has done. He stepped forward to fight against that type of racism and gave his whole tour to a Black promoter. And see, many people don't know what all that entails and what is the significance of that. So, let me tell you the significance of that. A promoter, be it Black or White, sits at the helm of the distribution of that concert dollar. That promoter is the person that hires the catering service, the limo service, the production service, the security company and the list goes on and on for a tour of this magnitude. So, when a Black promoter sits at the helm, all of a sudden, Black security companies profit. Black production companies profit. Black catering companies profit. And, the list goes on and on. So instead of that concert dollar fertilizing Beverly Hills and commercial districts like Rodeo drive, that dollar is brought back to our community. That is something that the ticket buyer is not aware of when they go to that glass window and stick their money through that hole and think they are just goin' to see Janet Jackson or think they are just goin to see Prince. That wealth is a lot of money being taken away from them by the White promoter who is putting that money back into the White companies and White business districts of this country. But, when a Black promoter is aware of that and an artist is aware of that, they and try to take that wealth and redistribute it into our own communities like the White promoters do. We are just trying to do what's right with the concert dollar and make sure that Black America sees their money again that they stick through that glass hole."

When asked if the artist has much control over the promoter they choose for their concert, he quickly responds "All of it! All of it! I stick it on them. All of it!" He takes a moment, however, ad gives the artist some grace... "But, I will say this; the booking agency is paid a lot of money to give them advice, but when they [the booking agency] do not even recognize Black promoters, the artist has no knowledge of the Black promoter. It's like this: before the fair housing bill was passed they didn't know that real estate agents did what is called "steering." If you call a real estate company and say "I'm looking for a house for two hundred thousand dollars, I want x amount of bedrooms and one and a half baths." If they only show you what's up for sale in the Black neighborhoods then you don't even know what's for sale in the White neighborhoods and that's how they kept segregation going. The same thing exists in the concert industry."

Many have discussed the strength in numbers. Why is their not a union of form of unity amongst the Black promoters in America? Wouldn't that increase the power and booking ability of the Black promoter? "Black concert promoters are a limited breed. Those that work on a national level are down to about five. Not the local ones doing club concerts, but on a national level. It's an industry that is difficult to break into, no matter how much money you have. I have you guys come up to me all of the time and ask me how to get started. Every time they ask me that question, I cringe because it is so hard for them to get started. It's a hard question for me to answer. It really is."

Rowe takes a moment to reflect on those he has worked with and who he really enjoyed. "Who have I enjoyed? Because of my relationship with him; Michael Jackson. He was not difficult at all to work with. I also enjoyed working with The Temptations. God gave them a gift and they just had what it takes. There are so many that I enjoyed working with...Patti Labelle, Stevie Wonder and I am now enjoying working with R. Kelly. But relationship wise, I am very close to the Jackson family and I really enjoyed working with Michael. And, I'm looking to work with him again. I have been talking to him and trying to get him ready to go. Hopefully I will be able to get him ready for next year. I talked to him earlier this year and he said he wanted to do it next year. So, hopefully, we'll tour the world real soon." Although he has proven he has staying power, there are still artists he would love to work with. "I have worked with just about all of the African American acts, but I would love to be able to work with a U2 or 'The Rolling Stones', but the industry would have a fit. Maybe one day that'll happen."

One day...maybe...if the concertgoer and artists begin to support and demand tours promoted by Black promoters. And, just why should they support the Black promoters? Rowe says it best when discussing the current R. Kelly tour that features J. Holiday and Keyshia Cole. "This tour is a tour that is produced, organized and controlled by African Americans and we ask that they come out to support us 'cause we are trying to support them as well."

"BARACK OBAMA THE POWER OF CHANGE" DVD Available at Barnes & Noble Stores Nationwide & AMAZON.COM

The Campaign That Inspired A Nation is Now on DVD!

This is your inspirational piece of history!

| 28471|2009-04-03 10:58:31|cristofori whitakara|african migrations|

Multiple out-of-Africa migrations seen for early humans

March 23, 2009
World Science staff

Fossil evidence suggests that early, anatomically modern humans may have split into many isolated populations before leaving Africa in a series of migrations, scientists report.

Scientists generally believe humans evolved in Africa and from there spread out to other regions, starting over 60,000 years ago.

In new research, Gerhard Weber of the University of Vienna and colleagues used geometric patterns of fossilized skulls found in various parts of Africa to compare the diversity among early representatives of the genus Homo, the evolutionary group to which humans belong.

The researchers concluded that, rather than a single out-of-Africa dispersal, their evidence shows early modern humans in Africa were divided into different populations by the Pleistocene, the era from about two million to 11,000 years ago.

Skulls from early modern humans showed the greatest variation in shape over the last 1.8 million years, indicating that early modern humans had split into multiple, temporarily isolated populations, the researchers explained.

After that breakup there seems to have followed a complex migration pattern in which different populations left the continent left at different times, they added. They report that the skull shapes of early modern humans most closely resembled those found in later humans outside of Africa, providing a link between some isolated African populations with later migration.

Understanding the diversity of anatomically modern humans in Africa before the migrations is crucial to any analysis of modern human origins, the researchers wrote in a paper detailing their findings. The African continent deserves more attention in the modern human origins debate, they added in the paper, to appear in this weeks early online edition of the research journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

| 28472|2009-04-03 11:27:02|Manu Ampim|Re: German Scientists Reveal Two-Faced Nefertiti|
There is norealdoubt that this famous "Nefertiti" image is a modern forgery. This news storyis more concrete evidence of the great forgery activity that continued into the early 20th century, as countless "artifacts" were invented and/or altered during the 19th-20th centuries.
It is known that one of the greatest all-time forgerers was in Germany at the time that this phoney "Nefertiti" bust magically appeared in Germany in 1920. I will demonstrate that this image is a forgery, after I complete my major work on the Rahotep & Nofret forgeries.
Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

-HOTEP!

thanks my brother I, cant wait to see the original sculpture in stone underneath. I, have always thought it was a fake because her other portraits, from Akhet-Amen were more African in features than this bust of 1912, so called discovered by German egyptologist Ludwig borchard. Now I know they was fixin her up for sure.

Heru Bennu Amen Ra

-- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

BERLIN?German scientists have discovered a second face just under the surface of the bust of Nefertiti, the Associated Press reports.

The group of researchers, led by Alexander Huppertz, director of the Imaging Science Institute at Berlin's Charit頒ospital and medical school, performed a CT scan on the sculpture that revealed an underlying stone carving that is slightly different than the external stucco face. The findings were published today in the monthly journal Radiology.

"Until we did this scan... the hypothesis was that the stone underneath was just a support," said Huppertz.

The 3,300-year-old bust depicts Queen Nefertiti, the wife of Pharaoh Akhenaten.

The differences between the two faces are slight and include creases at the corners of the mouth and a bump on the nose in the stone version. Huppertz believes that someone must have ordered the adjustments.

John H. Taylor, a curator for Ancient Egypt and Sudan at the British Museum, cautioned against "attempting to explain the significance of these changes" but added that the information will be valuable in helping to preserve the sculpture.

The bust was discovered in 1912 by Egyptologist Ludwig Borchardt, who brought it to Berlin. It is currently on view at the city's Altes Museum and will move to the Neues Museum when the institution reopens in October.

http://www.artinfo. com/news/ story/30987/ german-scientist s-reveal- two-faced-nefertiti/

| 28473|2009-04-03 12:47:18|Asar Imhotep|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Peace brother Ferg

I have already renamed African-Americans the BAKALA of North America. I am also preparing an essay for that, which will be released before the AACP essay is released. You should already know where I'm going with BAKALA. I will simply be detailing how the term, in its many meanings, pertain to African-American history, philosophy, present experience and future goals. I hope to be finish by this weekend. Will keep the phamily updated.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:24 AM

Asar.
Absolutely brilliant!
It's about time there was an establishedvoice representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of Culture. KAA!
Somo

| 28474|2009-04-03 12:48:59|Asar Imhotep|Re: BANTU Apparel reply to Nix|
Peace Nix

They will be available on my website, hopefully by the end of next. I am still programming my online store and making sure all ducks are in a row.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Wed, 4/1/09, Nix Winter wrote:
From: Nix Winter
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:00 AM

Those are so awesome... though the religion one could be.. .since monotheism.. .

Where are they going to be sold?

Do you have a gallery of your art?

Nix

| 28475|2009-04-03 13:00:00|Asar Imhotep|Evolution on Trial: Dover Case|
Peace Phamily

With all of this discussion on Darwinian evolution and the alleged issues that it raises, I thought I would reintroduce this documentary done by PBS on the Dover trial that took place in 2005.

A lot of the stuff I'm reading in the forum just isn't correct and I think that this documentary puts things into its proper perspective. Enjoy:

Judgment Day -- Intelligent Design on Trial: Nova - 1:52:25 - Nov 29, 2007
http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-4047290626132009 11&ei=RGnWSbiCJ4GarwKRwpjDBg&q=judgement+day+dover+on+trial&hl=en&client=firefox-a

PBS Nova Documentary on the Dover school district trial (Kitzmiller v. Dover) and the ramifications it has for being able to keep Intelligent Design (creationism) out of science classrooms. Ken Miller and many others

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

| 28476|2009-04-03 13:15:19|Peter Gray|Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?|
Thanks for trying. The link was quite interesting, even though I couldn't get to the embedded link to Hatshepsut's journey to Punt.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: redheathergold@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 2 Apr 2009 19:29:44 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?

Dear Peter,
Regretfully, I discovered about three years ago that the website whereI discovered thisinformation no longer has the link to the page I referred to. Since then I have tried numerous times to find the information again, but to no avail. At the time that I came across this little nugget (pun intended), I was just casuallyresearching for my own personal edification and it never occurred to me to write the author's name or any other details for that matter. What I shared in this forum is from memory.

After you asked, I tried again but all I could find were sites describing Hatshepsut's expedition and what the Ancient Egyptians called this particular type of greenish Gold - Gold of Emu
http://www.reshafim .org.il/ad/ egypt/trades/ metals.htm# godsland
Also I found sites that are along the lines of speculation documents aimed at investors. These documents describe mining possibilities for precious metals and they discuss a greenish gold found in Zambia in the region o`f the Zambezi River. They seem to refer to this particular type of gold as copper-gold.
Sorry I couldn't offer more than that but I will continue to try to find a comparable source, if not the original source.
Jennifer

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
> Dear redheathergold,
>
>
>
> It would be great if youd give us the scientific reference(s) for the compositional analysis of the greenish gold found in Mozambique. Many thanks. This stuff is very specific evidence.
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> From: redheathergold@ ...
> Date: Sat, 28 Mar 2009 03:06:34 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egyptian Determinatives = Bantu Pre/Suffixes?
>
>
>
>
>
> I haven't studied this scholar's work, but I have made some interesting > finds in my own studies that support his position. We all know that > the Egyptians themselves say that they migrated into the land now called > Egypt from the South. Now, the Egyptians call the "Land of the Gods"
> and "Home of Amen" what linguists transliterate as "Punt". From the way
> it's written about in Egyptian literature, it is the Egyptian Mother
> Land. Punt and Bantu in themselves are almost identical phonetically.
> Keep in mind that to make a word plural in Metu Neter, a "u" would be > added to the end of the word. So to identify people from Punt as a > whole, Egyptians would say "Puntu".

>
> Now there has been much misinformation about the location of Punt.
> White supremacist scholars have come up with all sorts of illogical
> locations, but we all know the truth is always in plain view for those > who wish to see it. First of all, when Hatshepsut sent the expedition > to Punt, they returned with Giraffe, monkeys, etc, as well as other > tropical plants - things native to sub-saharan Africa, not Iran, Iraq
> and certainly not Europe. This is clearly depicted in the wall > paintings describing the voyage. But here is one exciting unknown fact > that proves the actual geographical location where the voyagers went.
> One of the things the Egyptians returned with from their expedition was > a very rare type of Gold that has a greenish tint. What I learned is > that there is only ONE place on Earth where this gold comes from. This > gold is ONLY found near the mouth of the Zambesi river in the land now > know as Mozambique. The Egyptians said they brought these things back > from Punt, so if they brought this gold back from Punt and the gold can > only be found in the land now known as Mozambique, then Punt > geographically is Southern Central Africa.
>
> One other thing that stood out to me when studying this; we all know
> the saying "a picture speaks a thousand words". The Egyptians clearly > knew this. When depicting the people of Punt, they painted the local > leaders who they met during the expedition who, by the way have similar > clothing and hairstyle as the Egytians of that time. The wife of the > chief has a very unique physiology that the Egyptians tried to show us.
> She has the same physical characteristics that women of the Khoi Khoi
> group possess. This physical type was made famous by Sarah Bartman, > infamously known as the Hottentot Venus. The Khoi Khoi people now live
> and have lived from time immemorial in Southern Africa. The Khoi Khoi
> and the San, sometimes characterized together as the Khoisan, are the > oldest ethnic group on earth.
>
> As a side note, when studying this, it suddenly struck me why many > African American men are fascinated by and very attracted to women with > large buttocks unlike men of any other race. As a black women with a > modest backside, this is of interest to me. Also, it occurred to me > that even though many of the drawings of Sarah Bartman were derisive, > they called her Venus - Goddess of Beauty. Could this be why European > women began incorporating bustles into their clothing?
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
> _____ _____ _____ _____ _____ _____
_____
> Windows Live SkyDrive: Get 25 GB of free online storage.
> http://windowslive. com/online/ skydrive? ocid=TXT_ TAGLM_WL_ skydrive_ 032009
>

Rediscover Hotmail: Get quick friend updates right in your inbox. Check it out.
| 28477|2009-04-03 13:31:00|Asar Imhotep|Re: Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009|
No problem

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Thu, 4/2/09, Divine Allah wrote:
From: Divine Allah
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Thursday, April 2, 2009, 9:15 PM

Peace. EXCELLENT RESOURCE. Thank you for making Knowledge Born. Peace.

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

On Thu, Apr 2, 2009 at 11:58 AM, Asar Imhotep <asar_imhotep@ yahoo.com> wrote:

I thought this might interest a few who are on this list. Enjoy!

Free Online Access to all SAGE Journals until April 30, 2009 Get email alerts!

Dear Asar Imhotep,

As someone who has previously registered for a trial of an online journal published by SAGE, we wanted to let you know about our current free access period on SAGE Journals Online. You can now register for free online access to more than 500 SAGE journals with content available from 1999-current until April 30, 2009!

The SAGE Journals Online platform provides users access to one of the largest and most powerful collections of business, humanities, social sciences, and science, technical, and medical content in the world. SAGE is also the world's leading publisher of research methods and during the trial you will be able to search more than 25 research methods journals--from qualitative, quantitative, and mixed methods to evaluation.

You already have an account set up so all you need to do is activate this trial on your SAGE Journals Online account.

Register here

Scroll down the page to enter your username 'imhotep06' and your password in the 'Sign in' section. If you have forgotten your password, simply follow the link on the 'Sign in' page to receive a new one.

Activation only takes a couple of minutes and then you can access all 500+ SAGE journals on SAGE Journals Online, our award-winning online platform.

Sincerely,

SAGE Marketing
www.sagepub. com

If you need assistance with your trial, please contact: onlinesupportUS@ sagepub.com.

| 28478|2009-04-03 21:33:28|Mahari Mengistu|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Hey, Asar,
I have a question. What is the significance of spelling family "p-h-a-m-i-l-y"? And why is "fat" spelled "p-h-a-t"?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace brother Ferg

>
> I have already renamed African-Americans the BAKALA of North America. I am also preparing an essay for that, which will be released before the AACP essay is released. You should already know where I'm going with BAKALA. I will simply be detailing how the term, in its many meanings, pertain to African-American history, philosophy, present experience and future goals. I hope to be finish by this weekend. Will keep the phamily updated.
>
> Ancestrally,
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 4/1/09, Ferg wrote:
> From: Ferg
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:24 AM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar.
>
> Absolutely brilliant!
>
> It's about time there was an establishedvoice > representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of > Culture. KAA!

>
> Somo
>
>
| 28479|2009-04-03 21:54:46|Asar Imhotep|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Peace Mahari

I spell Phamily with a "ph" because I'm in a fraternal order Alpha PHi Alpha and it's just poetic license.It's just something I do. I know members of Kappa Alpha Psi who spells anything that starts with a "c" with a "k." For instance, in Houston, a good friend of mine owns a restaurant called The Breakfast Klub. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi and in all of his correspondences, he replaces the initial C with K.

As far as P.H.A.T., it is short for Pretty Hot And Tempting. But even before that, it was just poetic license to spell FAT as PHAT (to make a distinction).

Hope this helps.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
From: Mahari Mengistu
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 11:33 PM

Hey, Asar,
I have a question. What is the significance of spelling family "p-h-a-m-i-l- y"? And why is "fat" spelled "p-h-a-t"?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace brother Ferg
>
> I have already renamed African-Americans the BAKALA of North America. I am also preparing an essay for that, which will be released before the AACP essay is released. You should already know where I'm going with BAKALA. I will simply be detailing how the term, in its many meanings, pertain to African-American history, philosophy, present experience and future goals. I hope to be finish by this weekend. Will keep the phamily updated.
>
> Ancestrally,
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Wed, 4/1/09, Ferg wrote:
> From: Ferg
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
> Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:24 AM

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar.
>
> Absolutely brilliant!
>
> It's about time there was an establishedvoice > representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of > Culture. KAA!
>
> Somo
>
>

| 28480|2009-04-03 22:08:47|Mahari Mengistu|LUO ORIGIN OF CIVILISATION: TOWARDS A POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION OF THE|

This is a very long paper. The full piece can be found at the web link below.

==========

Luo Origins and History

> The historical analysis in this paper is a contribution towards the reclamation and linking of Luo and African history to that of ancient Itiyopianu and Egypt . . . Attempts by some western historians, Egyptologists and missionary scholars to conceal the Luo cradle-land, distort the identities of some Luo groups of peoples and their migration patterns, were part of a strategy calculated to rob not only the Luos, but Africans of their historical heritage.

Editor's Note: A great big thank you goes to Dr. Paito, who has decided to share an outstanding article on Luo peoples.

LUO ORIGIN OF CIVILISATION: TOWARDS A POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION OF THE ANCIENT ITIYO-PI-ANU PEOPLES

Dr. Terence Okello Paito - Abstract

After the Second World War, Henri Frunkfort, an eminent Egyptologist, suggested that there are distinct groups of Africans surviving today, whose ancestors can be traced back to the ancient Egyptians. A couple of decades later, at a symposium on the peopling of ancient Egypt and the deciphering of the Meroitic script, C.A. Diop, resolved to carry out a comparison of the languages of ancient Egypt and those of contemporary Africa. Both Diop and Frunkfort believed that there are people alive today in Africa who speak the very same language or one very close to the language spoken in ancient Egypt. The identification of such a people would add a linguistic dimension to the conventional study and better understanding of ancient Egyptian history. This paper presents an argument in support of the contention that the survivors of the ancient Egyptian culture are the Nilotic people now commonly known as the Luo (or Lwoo). It is suggested that the Luo were the founders of the ancient Koch or Cushitic kingdom at Napata, which had expanded into Egypt. It will be further argued that the Luo pledged collective loyalty to the god Anu and were the very Itiyo-pi-anu peoples.

Introduction

The identities of the earliest settlers and builders of the great ancient Itiyo-pi-an and Egyptian civilisations have been a subject of protracted debate that has largely remained in abeyance for sometime. At the height of the early 19th century Euro-imperialism and colonialism in Africa, the `civilisation/barbarism' dichotomy was a construct and an ideological tool to explain the justification for colonialism. Throughout the colonial and early post-independence period, the imposition of a euro-centric curriculum plus western anthropologists' sustained denigration of the African personality and culture, deterred Africans from considering, `The African Origin' of civilisation. Nevertheless, Henri Frunkfort (1948), one of the Western scholars whose attention was drawn to the achievements of the early Egyptians wrote, "?. There are alive today in Africa groups of people who are the true survivors of that great East African substratum out of which the Egyptian culture arose ?." (Henri Frunkfort, 1948, p.6). Resistance to the contradictions inherent in colonial policies, curricula and the distortion of African history, later produced a generation of African scholars who were prepared to examine facts on ancient Egyptian history. It was in that light that C.A. Diop (1974), stood out and published `The African Origin of Civilisation: Myth or Reality'. In the preface of that work, Diop advocated a linguistic approach to link the history of black Africa to that of ancient Egypt. Following the symposium on `The peopling of Ancient Egypt and Deciphering of the Meroitic script', he repeated the call for the application of the linguistic approach to analyse ancient Egyptian history. So far, from the literature on ancient Egypt, three main observations can be made. First and foremost, the literature suggests that much ground has been covered towards the reclamation and linking of ancient Egypt to African history thanks to the efforts of African-American and other diasporan scholars. Secondly, despite the great strides made, most of the diasporan scholars continue to confuse ancient Itiyopianu with modern Ethiopia. Thirdly, and most importantly for this paper, Diop's lead in which he identified Osiris race with the Nilotic Luo has not been followed, despite Simon Simonse's (1992) assertion that Luo antecedents have relevance for the reconstruction of the past. Similarly, J.B. Webster's (1979), call for a linguistic approach to reconstruct and expand Crazzolara's work on the Luo has been largely ignored.

In this paper, we argue that the people referred to as the Luo were the very builders of the ancient Itiyo-pi-anu civilisation known as Koch (Cush, Kush). The Koch (Cush) kingdom expanded into Egypt, Arabia, Mesopotamia and Phoenicia. The paper is divided into five sections. In the second section, we review the attempts by some scholars to de-link the Luo from ancient Egyptian civilisation; section three presents a discussion on how the identification of Luo Cradle-land became such a contentious issue in the historiography of the Great Lakes region. In section four, the Luo will be identified as the ancient Itiyopianu peoples. Luo presence in ancient Egypt is discussed in section five, followed by conclusions.

The Luo

In the opening statement of his work `The Lwoo', Fr. J.P. Crazzolara (1950), wrote, "The Lwo racial group of people has had a past so full of exciting adventures that their history - once it were fairly completely written up - would read like an absorbing novel" (Crazzolara, 1950,p.1). Fr. Crazzolara, an Italian Catholic Missionary, linguist and historian had lived, worked and conducted field-work amongst the Luos for over thirty years. Most importantly, he had access to the Meroitic scripts. Apart from the three volumes on the Lwoo, Crazzolara (1938) wrote `A Study of the Acooli Language'. For the composition of the Luo racial group who are scattered across thousands of miles in Eastern and Central Africa, Fr. Crazzolara, noted that,

"The tribe into which the original group of the Lwo divided after leaving their country of origin, are as follows, 1. Boor, 2. Jo- Luuo, (Thuri, Bwodho, Jur), 3. Collo (Shilluk), Anywaa, 5.Paari (Lokooro, Ber, Nyorro), 6. Acholi, 7.Alur, 8. Jo-Pawir (Jur), 9. Lango, 10. Kumam, 11. Jo- Pa- Wiir alias Jo-Ka- Weer, 12. Jo-Pa-Adhola, 13. Jo-Lwo, 14. Barabaig". (Fr. J.P. Crazzolara, 1950: 5).

Thus, the Luo group of peoples are found in the Sudan, Ethiopia, Uganda, Kenya, Tanzania and the Congo. Though Crazzolara was ecstatic at the prospect of reconstructing Luo history, he had underestimated the opposition towards such an endeavour. Before looking at attempts by some Africanist to de-link the Luo from ancient Itiyopia and Egypt, the question that arises is, what is meant by the very term Luo or Lwoo?

What is Luo or Lwoo?

According to Nalder (1937), the word Luo derives from the evening fire around which people sat. He suggested that, "A feature of the village life is the `O', men's sitting ? place, rather like a club ?." (Nalder, 1937, p.147). Nalder was particularly aware that, amongst some Luo groups such as the Acholi, `Lu' is a plural prefix (sing. `La') which means `those who?.', and denotes a group in relation to some activities, profession or general behaviour. On the other hand, the one letter word `o' means the evening fire around which a family or friends sat in an open court yard to chat, discuss, educate, gaze into the clear sky, and enjoy the fresh evening air, before retiring to bed. By combining `Lu' and `o', Nalder claimed to have explained the identity of the Luo people.

http://luounite.net/2009/04/03/luo-origins-and-history/

.....

Conclusion

The reclamation of African heritage from ancient Egyptian civilisation has been a daunting endeavour. This has been due a great deception about the identity of the ancient Egyptians and also to the obstacles placed by some euro-centric scholars to deny Africans their historical heritage portraying them as a people without history. From the advent of colonialism till now, the history curriculum in most African education institutions was based on the experiences of Europeans and their world-view. The false perception of the colonialism as a civilising mission led Africans to embrace a euro-centric curriculum. Though the ancient Egyptians invented writing through which they documented their history, the very loss by Africans, of Cush, Egypt, Akum, (Axum), and Meroe culminated in migration and the gradual loss of their ancient art of writing. The inability of Africans to read ancient scripts remains a big obstacle in their quest to re-discover their past.

The historical analysis in this paper is a contribution towards the reclamation and linking of Luo and African history to that of ancient Itiyopianu and Egypt. We have argued that the conception and development of the `Hamitic theory' was undertaken to thwart such an effort. Attempts by some western historians, Egyptologists and missionary scholars to conceal the Luo cradle-land, distort the identities of some Luo groups of peoples and their migration patterns, were part of a strategy calculated to rob not only the Luos, but Africans of their historical heritage. Using linguistic, oral and written sources, we have presented an argument to support the contention that the Itiyopianu kingdom of Koch (Cush), which expanded into lower- Egypt, was indeed founded by the Luos. From Napata, the people of Koch migrated and settled in Arabia, Mesopotamia and Phoenicia. The Luo presence in those areas will be a subject of future discussion.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 28481|2009-04-04 09:07:45|Mahari Mengistu|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Thanks.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> I spell Phamily with a "ph" because I'm in a fraternal order Alpha PHi Alpha and it's just poetic license.It's just something I do. I know members of Kappa Alpha Psi who spells anything that starts with a "c" with a "k." For instance, in Houston, a good friend of mine owns a restaurant called The Breakfast Klub. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi and in all of his correspondences, he replaces the initial C with K.
>
> As far as P.H.A.T., it is short for Pretty Hot And Tempting. But even before that, it was just poetic license to spell FAT as PHAT (to make a distinction).
>

> Hope this helps.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> http://www.asarimhotep.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- On Fri, 4/3/09, Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 11:33 PM
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Hey, Asar,
>
> I have a question. What is the significance of spelling family "p-h-a-m-i-l- y"? And why is "fat" spelled "p-h-a-t"?
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
>
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Asar Imhotep wrote:
>
> >
>
> > Peace brother Ferg
>
> >
>

> > I have already renamed African-Americans the BAKALA of North America. I am also preparing an essay for that, which will be released before the AACP essay is released. You should already know where I'm going with BAKALA. I will simply be detailing how the term, in its many meanings, pertain to African-American history, philosophy, present experience and future goals. I hope to be finish by this weekend. Will keep the phamily updated.
>
> >
>
> > Ancestrally,
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > Asar Imhotep
>
> > http://www.asarimho tep.com
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > --- On Wed, 4/1/09, Ferg wrote:
>
> > From: Ferg
>
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
>
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
>
> > Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:24 AM
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >

> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > Asar.
>
> >
>
> > Absolutely brilliant!
>
> >
>
> > It's about time there was an establishedvoice
>
> > representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of
>
> > Culture. KAA!
>
> >
>
> > Somo
>
> >
>

> >
>
| 28482|2009-04-04 10:34:36|Lamar Perryman|Fw: [P-U-T-T] Black Moors, Celts And Pres. Obama in Strausberg.|

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Lamar Perryman wrote:

From: Lamar Perryman
Subject: [P-U-T-T] Black Moors, Celts And Pres. Obama in Strausberg.
To: "D. Van Esche" < cooljazzcafe@gmail.com>
Cc: "Progressive Urban Think Tank"
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 8:46 PM

Greetings,
WhileI do not disagree with your interpretation of The Medieval Period and its conflicts b Whites, Blacks and Indians as represented in the Painting by Mr. Washington I do feel tha sides have to be taken into account and given just weight.
However one of the anomaly's that I see in that period of time when it is viewed by moder peoples (Whites, Blacks and Indians alike) is the Identification of The Black Moors and Jews in Spain. One would tend to think that when Jews and Black Moors are mentioned th are talking about two different groups of peoples.
All the actual history is contrary to that assumption. The Jews spoken of were also Black M who were just a subset of The Moorish Population in Southwestern Europe in those days a times. Just like other blacks they traced their roots and origins to The Mediterannean, Nort Africa and Western Africa (The Western Sudan).
Because of the rise of European-Caucasian Jewry in the past 4 centuries or so most peoples often associate the Jewish Presence among Black Moors to beCaucasian Based. W remember that The Moors were not Originally Islamic but were Tribal Vodun Ethnic Animist based peoples of which that Classical System of Their Spirituality called Judaism. Among the African, Indian and Caucasian Jews this system varies in interpretation and practice.
That is a point I would like to make in regards to The Jewish Presence in Black/Moorish S
MLP.,
Moorish Federal Nationalists- AFN.

| 28483|2009-04-04 10:35:12|Michael Bayman|Latest links for Blogtalkradio broadcast segments|
From: Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Broadcasting-Agency: Staff
Unto: All-Moors(Declared/Un-declared)/Original-men and women across the planet
Re: Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government-Watch: Blogtalkradio-Recent-Segments
I.S.L.A.M.:
On the behalf of the Amexem-Moor-Empire: Constitutional-Monarch, His-Imperial-Majesty: Emperor: An-Anu-El: Bey and the-entire: Amexem-Moor-Empire: National-Collective, peace and much-love: be-upon-you.
For the record, we-do-dispatch the links of the presenting-herein, for-your-contemplation.
Should you decide to invest the time to experience the material available via these links, please do your own research. If you appreciate the information therein, please share the links with all of those therein your sphere of influence.

Please know that we look forward to building with you with the rigors of the principles = love, peace, freedom, truth, and justice.
Blogtalkradio: On-Demand-Episodes

Original Air Date: [4/2/2009 7:00 PM] Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government-Watch

Original Air Date: [3/26/2009 7:00 PM] Amexem-Moor-Empire: Imperial-Government-Watch

>Of the dispatching by the Amexem-Moor-Empire:

Imperial-Broadcasting-Agency: Staff

| 28484|2009-04-04 10:35:13|Shu Tefnut|REMINDER, AFRICA / EGYPT / NUBIA: EDUCATIONAL TOUR|

Africa / Egypt / Nubia Educational Tour.

August 15th, through August 25th, 2009.

Starting at $2379.00 P.P Double Room

Join Us As We Return to the Motherland.

Join us on our annual tour, as we return to the motherland. Lets experience the great works and wonders of our ancestors, who were the builders of the Great Pyramids, Sphinx, and many temples. You will enjoy the historical sites from Nubia to the Giza Plateau. Experience the beginning of world civilization which was influenced by ancient Egypt. Experience Nubia, which is the foundation and beginning of the Nile Valley civilization which is called Ancient Egypt. We will visit the Nubian Museum which boasts the antiquity of Ancient Egypt with artifacts going back 90,000 years. You will witness and see stone pictographs, tools made of metal (copper) and ancient sites, before there was an Egyptian Dynasty. Learn the history of Egypt and come back to the beginning of knowledge with Bro. Heru Bennu Amen Ra. (aka George Bennett M.F.A.) African Art historian, Archeologist Researcher/Lecturer, From Paleolithic (Kush) to (kemet) Egypt.

Day 1: - Departure from USA

Board your international flight to Cairo and begin your journey back in time to Egypt, and Nubia the holy land.

Day 02 - Cairo

Arrival in the Land of the Pharaohs.At Cairo International airport you will be welcomed and assisted through immigration and customs by our representative, then escorted to Hotel.

Day 03: - Cairo, Aswan

After breakfast, you will begin a full day of sight seeing in Cairo which include the Pyrimids, Sphinx, Egyptian Museum,and the bazaar. Camel ride opportunity-overnight in Cairo.

Transfer to Railway Station to board night train to Aswan. Overnight on board.

The Pyramids of Giza:

The only present-day survivors of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, The Pyramids of Giza are among the worlds greatest tourist attractions and never lose their ability to inspire and overwhelm visitors. The largest and oldest of the Pyramids of Giza is that of Cheops (Khufu). The Pyramids of Khafre the Great and Menkaure the Divine may not be as large in size as the Great Pyramid, but they are no less imposing in fascination.

Sphinx

The Sphinx remains a symbol of strength, wisdom and mystery for eons. Partially buried several times over the years by the shifting desert sands, the Sphinx now stands fully exposed with its impressive dimensions visible to all. The body of a lion with the head of a king or god, the Sphinx lines up with the Pyramid of Khafre. After visiting the Pyramids of Giza, proceed to visit the Egyptian Museum.

The Egyptian Museum

The Egyptian Museum was built during the reign of Khedive Abbass Helmi II in 1897, and opened its doors on November 15, 1902. Today, the museum contains the most important collection of Egyptian antiquities in the world. Exhibited are over 120,000 objects from the Pharaonic and Greco-Roman periods, including the celebrated mummies of ancient Egyptian kings and the treasures of King Tutankhamen. After Lunch, drive to Old Cairo, where early Judaism and Christianity flourished in Egypt. Visit the Ben Ezra Synagogue and Saint Sergious Church

Day 04: Aswan, Abu Simbel, Aswan

transferred to your hotel. The next morning

After breakfast you willbe transferred to airport

for your flight to Abu Simbel visit the colossal Temple of Ramses II and the temple of his beloved Queen Nefertari, both temples carved out of a hillside beside the Nile in the 13th century BC. Transfer back to the airport for your flight back to Aswan. Upon arrival you iewill be escorted to your 4D/3N cruise. Accommodation aboard your cruise ship will consist of a cabin with private facilities. In the afternoon, you will be escorted to visit the Nubian Museum, Temple of Philae, and the Broken Obelisk

The Nubian Museum

Located in the city of Aswan, on the eastern bank of the Nile, 899 kilometers south of Cairo. The museum is a three-story building with an outdoor exhibition area. It houses the main finds of the UNESCO salvage campaign carried out at the time of the building of the High Dam, which eventually flooded that whole region. Another major exhibit is a diorama which shows the daily life of Nubian villagers. Dinner & overnight on board.

Day 05 : Aswan - Kom Ombo Edfu

Philae Temple

On a small island in the Nile near Aswan stands the amazing Temple of Isis at Philae. This monument is possibly best known for the international effort which moved it in it's entirety to the island when it's original location was threatened by the change in water level caused by the High Dam. The temple has been completely dismantled and rebuilt to the original orientation on the nearby island of Agilika which rises higher from the water and has been reshaped and landscaped to resemble the original Philae. Sail to Komombo. Visit the temple shared by the two Gods sobek and Haroe

Temple of Kom Ombo:

The temple is actually made up of two temples: that of Sobek and that of Haroeris. In ancient time, crocodiles waded in the river. There are two entrances, two courts, two colonnades, two hypostyle halls and two sanctuaries. There were probably even two sets of priests for the two temples. Despite being badly damaged, the temple is a beautiful sight as one approach from either direction on the river, particularly as sunset nears and the colors change. Overnight in Edfu.

Day 06: Edfu - Esna - Luxor

After breakfast, visit the temple of Horus in Edfu

The Temple of Horus:

Of all the temples of ancient Egypt, the one at Edfu is the most complete and best preserved. The reason is that the temple had been totally submerged under the desert except for the very top of the pylon entrance. A small amount of stone had been removed from the exposed part, but when excavated it was found to be in near perfect condition. Sail to Esna, cross the lock, then sail to Luxor and overnight.

Day 07: Luxor

Disembarkation after breakfast. Cross to the west bank. And visit Valley of the Kings, the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut and the Colossi of Memnon.

Valley of the Kings & Queens:

A vast City of the Dead where magnificent tombs were carved into the desert rocks, decorated richly, and filled with treasures for the afterlife by generations of Pharaohs. You will also see the Valley of the Queens.

Temple of Queen Hatshepsut:

The temple built in El Deir El Bahari on the west bank of the Nile in Luxor by queen

Hatshepsut, who ruled Egypt for almost 20 years. She chose a very well protected location as it is surrounded by the mountains

Colossi of Memnon:

Two large colossal sculptures of Amenhotep III also foundation of tample.

On the way back to the river Nile, your road passes by the famed Colossi of Memnon, known in Ancient Greek times for their haunting voices at dawn. Transfer to the railway station to board your first class sleeping train to Cairo. Overnight on board.

Day 08: Cairo

Upon arrival you will be escorted to Hotel in Cairo. Rest of your day at leisure.

Suggested TourVisit the pyrimids of Saqqara, and the tombs of Kagemeni and Ptah hotep

Day 09: Day of leisure suggested tour

Old Cairo:

Is so named because it is the oldest part of Cairo, and in fact, predates what is now Cairo. Later, the Romans built a fortress here which we call Babylon. Some of these Roman walls still exist. Later, it became a Christian stronghold, with as many as 20 churches built within an area of one square mile. There are only five remaining from which is the Church of St. Sergius (Abu Serga), which legend has it is built atop one of the sites where the Holy Family rested on their flight from Herod. Overnight at hotel.

Day 10: Sun Departure

After breakfast, transfer to Cairo International Airport for your flight back to the USA.

Great trip.

Contact info: For more details contact Dr. Bennett (347-495-4289) or Egyptian Connections at (800-334-4477)

Itinerary subject to change

Day 1	Depart from JFK
Day 2	Upon arrival to Cairo, you will be met and escorted to your Cairo Hotel - Overnight
Day 3	After your breakfast, you will begin your full day of sight-seeing in Cairo, which will include the Egyptian Museum, Bazaar, Pyramids and Sphinx. Camel ride Opportunity - Transfer to train station for trip to Aswan. Overnight on train
Day 4	Upon arrival, transfer to your Hotel for Check in. Afternoon visit of the Nubian Museum. Overnight in Hotel.
Day 5	After Breakfast, transfer to your deluxe Nile Cruise (Optional Abu Simbel Tour). After Orientation, enjoy your tour to the Temple of Philae, which is dedicated to the goddess Isis. Sail to Kom Ombo
Day 6	Visit the Temple of Kom Ombo, shared by the two Gods Sobek & Haroeris. Sail to Edfu. Upon Arrival to Edfu, visit the Temple of Horus. Sail to Luxor
Day 7	Cross the Nile to visit the Valley of the Kings and Queens, the Temple of Hatshepsut and the Colossi of Memnon. In the afternoon, visit the Temple of Karnack, the largest religious complex in the world, and the Temple of Luxor with its elegant colonnaded hall, Evening Captain's Dinner party Overnight on Board.
Day 8	Disembark, rest of the day at Leisure in Luxor, 7 PM. Transfer to the train station for a trip to Cairo Overnight on train

Day 9 Day Free at leisure.

Day 10 After your breakfast, you will transfer to the airport for your homebound flight

Africa/Egypt Reservation Form

Please print this Form and e-mail, fax to 201-678-0077, or mail to our address:

Name of Traveler:

Name of Companion:

Phone:

Mailing Address:

(Separate forms should be completed in case more than two are joining the trip)

Payment Information: (Please check the appropriate boxes)

Basic Package	$2379.00
Single Supplement	$239.00
Abu Simbel (Optional)	$230.00

All above are per person Total

Reservation and deposits:

A $200.00 per person deposit by check only is required to initiate the booking.

Full amount is requested 45 days prior to departure date.

Full payment is requested for any booking made less than 45 days before departure.

Note: Payments made by check received less than 30 days prior to departure must be certified.

Cancelation and Refunds:

All cancellations should be received in writing.

$75.00 per person administration fees will apply on all cancellations 45 days prior to departure.

20% cancellation fee will apply 44-30 days prior to departure|50% for 29-7days|100% for less than 7 days

No refund for any unused service while on tour.

No refund can be made for intangible items such as hardship, unpleasantness, or the like.

Travel Insuranceis strongly recommended, please call & inquire within.

235 Main St. Suite 202
Hackensack, NJ 07601

www.EgyptOnTheWeb.com

| 28485|2009-04-04 10:35:38|Marc Taylor|Re: BANTU Apparel|
I would like to read the essay, are you going to post it?
as a tidbit... the name bakala has negative connotations in certain circles...
I have always pondered a new name for african americans also, but only in case we exited america and created our own nation...

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 2:46 PM

Peace brother Ferg

I have already renamed African-Americans the BAKALA of North America. I am also preparing an essay for that, which will be released before the AACP essay is released. You should already know where I'm going with BAKALA. I will simply be detailing how the term, in its many meanings, pertain to African-American history, philosophy, present experience and future goals. I hope to be finish by this weekend. Will keep the phamily updated.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On W! ed, 4/1/ 09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:24 AM

Asar.
Absolutely brilliant!
It's about time there was an establishedvoice representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of Culture. KAA!
Somo

| 28486|2009-04-04 10:42:30|cristofori whitakara|Re: Southeast Asian History of Blacks|
thank you. many of my uncles were in vietnam and one of them told me about the Black people he met there in central viet nam

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Southeast Asian History of Blacks
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 11:03 PM

Check out my new movie on the history of Southeast Asia
http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=av_JaADauYI
Clyde

| 28487|2009-04-04 10:51:23|Asar Imhotep|Re: BANTU Apparel|
Peace Mark

Bakala is also a town in the Central African Reublic. Of course any negative connotations in one language will not a part of the central theme in which I will be articulating. But yes, I will share the article with the list.

Ancestral,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Marc Taylor wrote:

From: Marc Taylor
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 11:32 PM

I would like to read the essay, are you going to post it?
as a tidbit... the name bakala has negative connotations in certain circles...
I have always pondered a new name for african americans also, but only in case we exited america and created our own nation...

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 2:46 PM

Peace brother Ferg

I have already renamed African-Americans the BAKALA of North America. I am also preparing an essay for that, which will be released before the AACP essay is released. You should already know where I'm going with BAKALA. I will simply be detailing how the term, in its many meanings, pertain to African-American history, philosophy, present experience and future goals. I hope to be finish by this weekend. Will keep the phamily updated.

Ancestrally,

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On W! ed, 4/1/ 09, Ferg wrote:
From: Ferg
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: BANTU Apparel

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Wednesday, April 1, 2009, 8:24 AM

Asar.
Absolutely brilliant!
It's about time there was an establishedvoice representing anAfrican-American GrandUniversal Force Field of Culture. KAA!
Somo

| 28488|2009-04-04 12:41:51|cristofori whitakara|Re: Fw: [P-U-T-T] Black Moors, Celts And Pres. Obama in Strausberg.|
in ivan van sertima's book the golden age of the moors he has a picture of a Moor holding a flag with the 'star of david'.

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Lamar Perryman wrote:
From: Lamar Perryman
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: [P-U-T-T] Black Moors, Celts And Pres. Obama in Strausberg.
To: "Group Members"
Cc: "Ta Seti"
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 4:53 PM

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Lamar Perryman wrote:

From: Lamar Perryman
Subject: [P-U-T-T] Black Moors, Celts And Pres. Obama in Strausberg.
To: "D. Van Esche" < cooljazzcafe@ gmail.com>
Cc: "Progressive Urban Think Tank"
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 8:46 PM

Greetings,
WhileI do not disagree with your interpretation of The Medieval Period and its conflicts between Whites, Blacks and Indians as represented in the Painting by Mr. Washington I do feel that both sides have to be taken into account and given just weight.
However one of the anomaly's that I see in that period of time when it is viewed by modern peoples (Whites, Blacks and Indians alike) is the Identification of The Black Moors and The Jews in Spain. One would tend to think that when Jews and Black Moors are mentioned that we are talking about two different groups of peoples.
All the actual history is contrary to that assumption. The Jews spoken of were also Black Moors who were just a subset of The Moorish Population in Southwestern Europe in those days and times. Just like other blacks they traced their roots and origins to The Mediterannean, North Africa and Western Africa (The Western Sudan).
Because of the rise of European-Caucasian Jewry in the past 4 centuries or so most peoples often associate the Jewish Presence among Black Moors to beCaucasian Based. We must remember that The Moors were not Originally Islamic but were Tribal Vodun Ethnic Animist based peoples of which that Classical System of Their Spirituality is now called Judaism. Among the African, Indian and Caucasian Jews this system varies in interpretation and practice.

That is a point I would like to make in regards to The Jewish Presence in Black/Moorish Spain.
MLP.,
Moorish Federal Nationalists- AFN.

| 28489|2009-04-05 08:30:02|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Evolution on Trial: Dover Case|
Attachments :

the misnomer is that all who use the term intelligent design think that a species can come about fully formed.....
intelligent design can mean,and does mean(to me)that God is the innate force in all life and life is intelligent.
creationism, for me means ultimately God is the creator of all things and is the evolving eleagant universe.....
this is a average western ploy: the creationist all use the bible and the scientist all use modern darwinian analaysis; the scientist dont have to argue "God" only the narrow christian view of God so they automaticaally win due to default, (its a easy win, they accept readily).
and the christians win by making their claims heard, therefore respected and acknowledgedment.
so its a easy arguement for both sides without science having to admitt there is intelligence/God and christians need not confess the bibleis a simple myth.
the evangelist and soldiers have been doing this agressively for the last 500yrs. making the only alternatives their alternatives.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

> --- On Fri, 4/3/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
> To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 2:58 PM
>
> Peace Phamily
>
> With all of this discussion on Darwinian evolution and the alleged issues that it raises, I th > would reintroduce this documentary done by PBS on the Dover trial that took place in 200
>
> A lot of the stuff I'm reading in the forum just isn't correct and I think that this documenta > things into its proper perspective. Enjoy:
>
> Judgment Day -- Intelligent Design on Trial: Nova - 1:52:25 - Nov 29, 2007
> http://video. google.com/ videoplay? docid=-404729062 613200911&ei=RGnWSbiCJ4G > wpjDBg&q=judgement+ day+dover+ on+trial&hl=en&client=firefox- a

PBS Nova Documentary on the Dover school district trial (Kitzmiller v. Dover) and the ramifications it has for being able to keep Intelligent Design (creationism) out of science classrooms. Ken Miller and many others

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

MOCHA-VERSITY
MOCHA-Versity

| 28490|2009-04-05 09:07:06|Asar Imhotep|Re: Evolution on Trial: Dover Case|
Peace

Note to be rude, but you obviously didn't watch the film. The problem with ANY "intelligent design" "theory" is that it can never be a scientific endeavor for the simple fact that you can't prove or disprove God in the first place. You can't put God in the laboratory and watch him/her/it do its work. This fact was stressed in the film by Christian scientists.

Science is a field based on observation, experimentation and recording of phenomena. If you can't observe or record "God" you don't have science. Even in African centered wisdom traditions they tell you this and don't see a problem with understanding this dichotomy. Only we in the west who grew up in Christian and Islamic traditions finds this a problem. I advise you to read V. Credo Mutwa's Indaba My Children (1964) pages 561-565 for a Zulu perspective on this very subject. I would also read further to get an indigenous account on evolution.

The reason why you will never find conflict in African wisdom traditions about this (as explained in the above recommendation) is because to the African, "God" is all that there could be. In order to "observe" God as an object, you would have to figure out a way to exist outside of "God" in order to observe it. This is impossible and is why you will NEVER, in western or African sciences, be able to explain scientifically God making the changes we observe.

Another point brought out in the film, if you saw it, is that intelligent designers never have an alternative explanatory model for how God makes change in the universe. We could all agree that God made the universe. It still doesn't tell you HOW. Science is concerned with how creation works based on observable, measurable change we can record and analyze. God is outside the realm of human analysis therefore cannot be considered a scientific endeavor. That's philosophy.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
From: Tafari khumbaka
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 10:29 AM

the misnomer is that all who use the term intelligent design think that a species can come a fully formed..... ....
intelligent design can mean,and does mean(to me)that God is the innate force in all life an intelligent.
creationism, for me means ultimately God is the creator of all things and is the evolving el universe.... ...
this is a average western ploy: the creationist all use the bible and the scientist all use mod darwinian analaysis; the scientist dont have to argue "God" only the narrow christian view God so they automaticaally win due to default, (its a easy win, they accept readily).
and the christians win by making their claims heard, therefore respected and acknowledge so its a easy arguement for both sides without science having to admitt there is intelligenc and christians need not confess the bibleis a simple myth.
the evangelist and soldiers have been doing this agressively for the last 500yrs. making the alternatives their alternatives.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 2:58 PM

Peace Phamily

With all of this discussion on Darwinian evolution and the alleged issues that it raises, I thought I would reintroduce this documentary done by PBS on the Dover trial that took place in 2005.

A lot of the stuff I'm reading in the forum just isn't correct and I think that this documentary puts things into its proper perspective. Enjoy:

Judgment Day -- Intelligent Design on Trial: Nova - 1:52:25 - Nov 29, 2007
http://video. google.com/ videoplay? docid=-404729062 613200911&ei=RGnWSbiCJ4GarwKR wpjDBg&q=judgement+ day+dover+ on+trial&hl=en&client=firefox- a

PBS Nova Documentary on the Dover school district trial (Kitzmiller v. Dover) and the ramifications it has for being able to keep Intelligent Design (creationism) out of science classrooms. Ken Miller and many others

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

| 28491|2009-04-05 10:45:32|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Evolution on Trial: Dover Case|
I saw vid longtime ago on pub.tv, .
its a easy surmise, if there is a thing called intelligence then it came from evolution therefore evolution has at the very least a degree of intelligence/GOD.....
that intelligence I call holy and spirit/ Ra or Khepra it must come from a place/time(pri-mordial)of genesis since it is the matrix for all that is life.
its my humble position that science is a base for philosophy and the two should always acknowledge and question one another.
if God is creator then simply investigate weight and analyize creation, in viewing my works of art and literature you will get to understand me; the more u view all my emails the more you will know about me; so I say look at the beetle bug, mark the ways and manner of the sun moon and stars, and if there is a thing called intelligence exam it to see what made it looks like (or may look like).
Credo Mutwa is a metaphysical master, im guessing he's been to that place outside of creation in his meditations and knows Nun and its unfoldment as Khepera.....so his traditional beliefs are varifiable facts to him,.
i am a traditionalist, and althought my microscope/meditations may not be as powerful as his i have minor objectable knowledge of God.
the way things change is the same way breeders change dogs stature and emotions . now can species change or a lizard creature eventually become a mammalian?..... seems to me its possible, since the need for creation to lock into a chemical law for a duration of time doesnt mean that a particular PERCIEVED law is gonna act in that manner at all times in any and every situation.....

the vary nature/natura/neter of life is dynamism and thats the science of the big bang or bangs something turns into something else that does not exist in time/space the big bang or bangs of science show Gods creation thereforegod itself .
acknowledgeing God made the universe is all i ask for,. the how will be a endeavor for scientist and philosophers for the history of mankind.

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
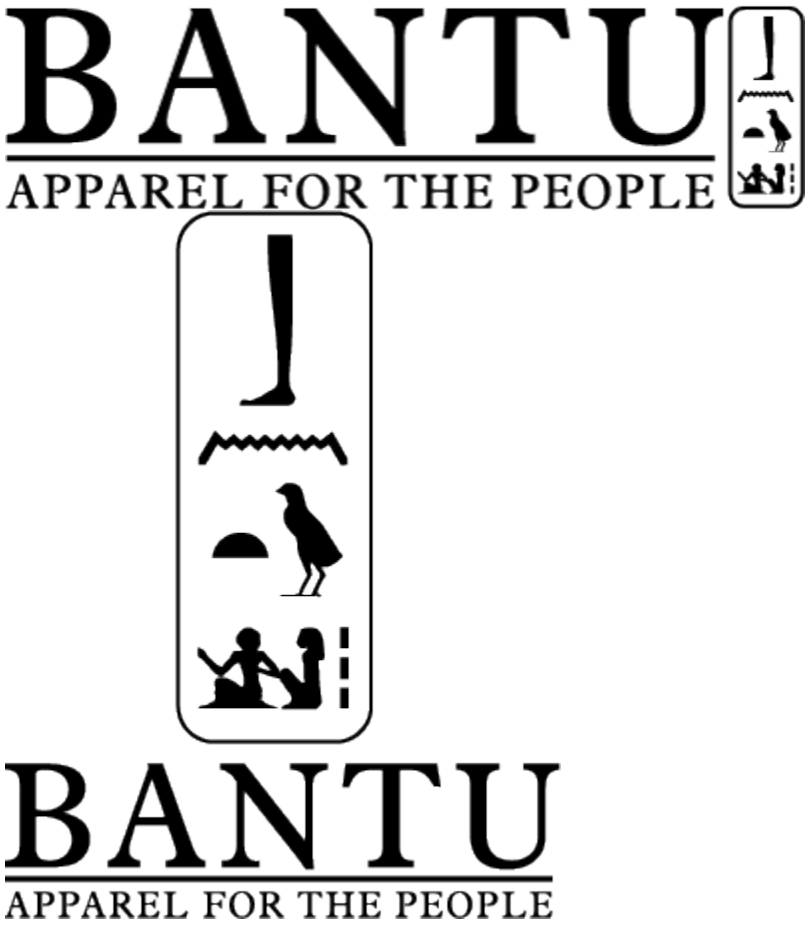
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 11:06 AM

Peace



Note to be rude, but you obviously didn't watch the film. The problem with ANY "intellig design" "theory" is that it can never be a scientific endeavor for the simple fact that you ca prove or disprove God in the first place. You can't put God in the laboratory and watch hir do its work. This fact was stressed in the film by Christian scientists.

Science is a field based on observation, experimentation and recording of phenomena. If y can't observe or record "God" you don't have science. Even in African centered wisdom traditions they tell you this and don't see a problem with understanding this dichotomy. Or in the west who grew up in Christian and Islamic traditions finds this a problem. I advise y read V. Credo Mutwa's Indaba My Children (1964) pages 561-565 for a Zulu perspective very subject. I would also read further to get an indigenous account on evolution.

The reason why you will never find conflict in African wisdom traditions about this (as explained in the above recommendation) is because to the African, "God" is all that there be. In order to "observe" God as an object, you would have to figure out a way to exist out "God" in order to observe it. This is impossible and is why you will NEVER, in western o African sciences, be able to explain scientifically God making the changes we observe.

Another point brought out in the film, if you saw it, is that intelligent designers never have alternative explanatory model for how God makes change in the universe. We could all ag that God made the universe. It still doesn't tell you HOW. Science is concerned with how creation works based on observable, measurable change we can record and analyze. God i outside the realm of human analysis therefore cannot be considered a scientific endeavor. philosophy.

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
From: Tafari khumbaka
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 10:29 AM

the misnomer is that all who use the term intelligent design think that a species can come about fully formed..... ....

intelligent design can mean,and does mean(to me)that God is the innate force in all life and life is intelligent.
creationism, for me means ultimately God is the creator of all things and is the evolving eleagant universe.... ...
this is a average western ploy: the creationist all use the bible and the scientist all use modern darwinian analaysis; the scientist dont have to argue "God" only the narrow christian view of God so they automaticaally win due to default, (its a easy win, they accept readily).
and the christians win by making their claims heard, therefore respected and acknowledgedment.
so its a easy arguement for both sides without science having to admitt there is intelligence/ God and christians need not confess the bibleis a simple myth.
the evangelist and soldiers have been doing this agressively for the last 500yrs. making the only alternatives their alternatives.

Tafari-sudra, Khumbaka

--- On Fri, 4/3/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Friday, April 3, 2009, 2:58 PM

Peace Phamily

With all of this discussion on Darwinian evolution and the alleged issues that it raises, I thought I would reintroduce this documentary done by PBS on the Dover trial that took place in 2005.

A lot of the stuff I'm reading in the forum just isn't correct and I think that this documentary puts things into its proper perspective. Enjoy:

Judgment Day -- Intelligent Design on Trial: Nova - 1:52:25 - Nov 29, 2007
http://video. google.com/ videoplay? docid=-404729062 613200911&ei=RGnWSbiCJ4GarwKRwpjDBg&q=judgement+ day+dover+ on+trial&hl=en&client=firefox- a

PBS Nova Documentary on the Dover school district trial (Kitzmiller v. Dover) and the ramifications it has for being able to keep Intelligent Design (creationism) out of science classrooms. Ken Miller and many others

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

MOCHA-Versity

| 28492|2009-04-05 11:21:13|Asar Imhotep|Re: Evolution on Trial: Dover Case|
I still think you're missing the point, and believe me when I say I understand what you're saying. I think an excerpt from the Zulu account in Anthem of the Decades can shed some light on this situation. Although technically this excerpt doesn't deal with our topic directly, it does shed light, at least from the Zulu perspective, on why knowing what the Creator knows is impossible. I provide the following:

> That is why Nomkhubulwane (the princess of heaven) implored Mvelinqangi (the ultimate creator), her father:
> Because of the great tasks on my shoulder,
> I ask you, give me a symbol that shall reveal your truth.

Then I shall possess the mind to discern your true desires.
None shall contradict your word.
The Creator, who had never refused her requests, replied:
My child you have asked for what I cannot give.
Such knowledge would negate life itself.
Creation must grow from ever newly fathomed truths.
If you possess such omniscience your thinking would cease.
Indeed, should someone discover you possessed such powers
Then they themselves would stop creating and thinking.
For whoever finds ready-made solutions loses.
It is better for all ceaselessly to search for the truth.
In this way life goes on forever and ever.
Your genius must be to select from any desires.
The creative powers of each species
Endows them with many possibilities of joy.
To fulfill themselves each must leap beyond the pain.
Thus spoke the creator of heaven and earth and all things.
Each element is only a seed of what is to be.
Only through the infinite can the end of being be conceived
(Kunene 1981: 47).

As can be ascertained from the above, saying "God" did it stops you from thinking, from unfolding new truths. This is why change is constant in the universe, to keep man forever desiring and seeking truth. It is this aspect of creation that compels change. Intelligent Design, as a so-called Theory, doesn't encourage the unfolding of truth because it feels that that is all there is to know. This is why Intelligent Designers do not have an explanatory model for how God makes change in the universe: they are content with just know he did it.

Science doesn't operate under this limited paradigm. The belief in the scientific fields are that there is an infinite amount of knowledge to be obtained, and we must constantly update and refine what we think we know. The minute we think we know everything there is to know, that is the end of science. As the white bearded man in the documentary film What The Bleep Do We Know states, "You don't want to be in the know, but be in the mystery (paraphrased)."

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
From: Tafari khumbaka
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 12:44 PM

| 28493|2009-04-05 11:31:56|Tafari khumbaka|Re: Evolution on Trial: Dover Case|
i dont see where we disagree.....
isay the same, the Amen portion we call God cannot be know, only the ra= matter all that is can be examined

Tafari-sudra,Khumbaka

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, Asar Imhotep wrote:
From: Asar Imhotep
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 1:20 PM

I still think you're missing the point, and believe me when I say I understand what you're s
I think an excerpt from the Zulu account in Anthem of the Decades can shed some light on situation. Although technically this excerpt doesn't deal with our topic directly, it does she at least from the Zulu perspective, on why knowing what the Creator knows is impossible.
provide the following:

That is why Nomkhubulwane (the princess of heaven) implored Mvelinqangi (the ultimate creator), her father:

Because of the great tasks on my shoulder,

I ask you, give me a symbol that shall reveal your truth.

Then I shall possess the mind to discern your true desires.

None shall contradict your word.

The Creator, who had never refused her requests, replied:

My child you have asked for what I cannot give.

Such knowledge would negate life itself.

Creation must grow from ever newly fathomed truths.

If you possess such omniscience your thinking would cease.

Indeed, should someone discover you possessed such powers

Then they themselves would stop creating and thinking.

For whoever finds ready-made solutions loses.

It is better for all ceaselessly to search for the truth.

In this way life goes on forever and ever.

Your genius must be to select from any desires.

The creative powers of each species

Endows them with many possibilities of joy.

To fulfill themselves each must leap beyond the pain.

Thus spoke the creator of heaven and earth and all things.

Each element is only a seed of what is to be.

Only through the infinite can the end of being be conceived

(Kunene 1981: 47).

As can be ascertained from the above, saying "God" did it stops you from thinking, from unfolding new truths. This is why change is constant in the universe, to keep man forever desiring and seeking truth. It is this aspect of creation that compels change. Intelligent Design, as a so-called Theory, doesn't encourage the unfolding of truth because it feels that that is all there is to know. This is why Intelligent Designers do not have an explanatory model for how God makes change in the universe: they are content with just know he did it.

Science doesn't operate under this limited paradigm. The belief in the scientific fields are that there is an infinite amount of knowledge to be obtained, and we must constantly update and refine what we think we know. The minute we think we know everything there is to know, that is the end of science. As the white bearded man in the documentary film What The Bleep Do We Know states, "You don't want to be in the know, but be in the mystery (paraphrased) ."

Asar Imhotep
http://www.asarimho tep.com

BANTU
APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, Tafari khumbaka wrote:
From: Tafari khumbaka
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Evolution on Trial: Dover Case
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 12:44 PM

| 28494|2009-04-05 12:18:58|Everett Prewitt|Re: Southeast Asian History of Blacks|
The prettiest Vietnamese I met was very dark skinned and lived in Vung Tau. She resembled Angela Bassett. She also wore an afro. This was 1969.
Everett Prewitt

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto:Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of cristofori whitakara
Sent: Saturday, April 04, 2009 1:42 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Southeast Asian History of Blacks

thank you. many of my uncles were in vietnam and one of them told me about the Black people he met there in central viet nam

--- On Sun, 3/29/09, clyde winters wrote:

From: clyde winters
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Southeast Asian History of Blacks
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, March 29, 2009, 11:03 PM

Check out my new movie on the history of Southeast Asia
http://www.youtube. com/watch? v=av_JaADauYI
Clyde

| 28495|2009-04-05 13:41:48|clyde winters|Re: Hundreds of Natural-selection studies could be wrong|

Hundreds Of Natural-selection Studies Could Be Wrong, Study Demonstrates

The image depicts the structure of the bovine rhodopsin protein. The blue circles represent amino acid sites that have undergone natural selection as determined through experiments, while the red circles represent amino acid sites that have undergone natural selection as determined through statistical analyses. (Credit: Masafumi Nozawa, Penn State (Adapted from Yokoyama et al. 2008 PNAS))

ScienceDaily (Mar. 31, 2009) Scientists at Penn State and the National Institute of Genetics in Japan have demonstrated that several statistical methods commonly used by biologists to detect natural selection at the molecular level tend to produce incorrect results.
"Our finding means that hundreds of published studies on natural selection may have drawn incorrect conclusions, " said Masatoshi Nei, Penn State Evan Pugh Professor of Biology and the team's leader. The team's results will be published in the Online Early Edition of the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences during the week ending Friday 3 April 2009 and also in the journal's print edition at a later date.

Nei said that many scientists who examine human evolution have used faulty statistical methods in their studies and, as a result, their conclusions could be wrong. For example, in one published study the scientists used a statistical method to demonstrate pervasive natural selection during human evolution. "This group documented adaptive evolution in many genes expressed in the brain, thyroid, and placenta, which are assumed to be important for human evolution," said Masafumi Nozawa, a postdoctoral fellow at Penn State and one of the paper's authors. "But if the statistical method that they used is not reliable, then their results also might not be reliable," added Nei. "Of course, we would never say that natural selection is not happening, but we are saying that these statistical methods can lead scientists to make erroneous inferences," he said.

The team examined the branch-site method and several types of site-prediction methods commonly used for statistical analyses of natural selection at the molecular level. The branch-site method enables scientists to determine whether or not natural selection has occurred within a particular gene, and the site-prediction method allows scientists to predict the exact location on a gene in which natural selection has occurred.

"Both of these methods are very popular among biologists because they appear to give valuable results about which genes have undergone natural selection," said Nei. "But neither of the methods seems to give an accurate picture of what's really going on."

Nei said that for many years he has suspected that the statistical methods were faulty. "The methods assume that when natural selection occurs the number of nucleotide substitutions that lead to changes in amino acids is significantly higher than the number of nucleotide substitutions that do not result in amino acid changes," he said. "But this assumption may be wrong. Actually, the majority of amino acid substitutions do not lead to functional changes, and the adaptive change of a protein often occurs by a rare amino acid substitution. For this reason, statistical methods may give erroneous conclusions. " Nei also believes that the methods are inaccurate when the number of nucleotide substitutions observed is small.

To demonstrate the faultiness of the statistical methods, Nei's team compiled data collected by their Emory University colleague, Shozo Yokoyama, on the genes that control the abilities of fish to see light at different water depths and on the genes that control color vision in a variety of animals. The team used these data to compare statistically predicted sites of natural selection with experimentally determined sites. They found that the statistical methods rarely predicted the actual sites of natural selection, which had been identified by Yokoyama through experiments. "In some cases, statistical method completely failed to identify the true sites where natural selection occurred," said Nei. "This particular exercise demonstrated the difficulty with which statistical methods are able to detect natural selection."

To demonstrate how small sample sizes can lead to incorrect results, the team used computer simulations to examine the evolution of genes in three primates: humans, chimpanzees, and macaques. The scientists mimicked the procedures used by the authors of a 2007 paper, which applied the branch-site method to 14,000 orthologous genes -- genes that are genealogically identical among different species -- and which found that the method predicted selection in 32 of the genes. Nei and his team also studied selection using Fisher's exact test, but this test did not detect any selection. "The results indicate that the number of nucleotide substitutions that occurred were too small to detect any selection; therefore, all of the 32 cases obtained by the branch-site method must be false positives," said Nozawa.

"These statistical methods have led many scientists to believe that natural selection acted on many more genes in humans than it did in chimpanzees, and they conclude that this is the reason why humans have developed large brains and other morphological differences, " said Nei. "But I believe that these scientists are wrong. The number of genes that have undergone selection should be nearly the same in humans and chimps. The differences that make us human are more likely due to mutations that were favorable to us in the particular environment into which we moved, and these mutations then accumulated through time."

Nei said that to obtain a more realistic picture of natural selection, biologists should pair experimental data with their statistical data whenever possible. Scientists usually do not use experimental data because such experiments can be difficult to conduct and because they are very time-consuming.

A third author on the study is Yoshiyuki Suzuki, a researcher at the National Institute of Genetics in Japan. This research was supported by the National Institutes of Health.

Adapted from materials provided by Penn State.
Penn State (2009, March 31). Hundreds Of Natural-selection Studies Could Be Wrong, Study Demonstrates. ScienceDaily. Retrieved April 1, 2009, from http://www.scienced aily.com/ releases/ 2009/03/09033020 0821.htm

.

| 28496|2009-04-05 15:31:28|Asar Imhotep|Re: Hundreds of Natural-selection studies could be wrong|
Peace

I would like to know the initial statistical method's margin of error. All stats deal with margins of error. And the fact that the method did predict accurately some sites while "some" failed, demonstrates that it is a good working model, but needs refinement.

The error a lot of scientists make when conducting even the experimental methods is that they assume it's possible to create, in the lab, the exact same conditions which cause organisms to evolve. I would think that's impossible given the vast fields of science still hasn't been able to show how all things are related on Earth and how each, even if small, object on Earth effects others.

I have a recent copy of Science where it talks about how neuroscientists believed until relatively recently that the white matter around the brain wasn't important. Come to find out that it is one of the most important cellular structures as white matter acts as the cables which sends messages between grey matter cells. In other words, it is vital to our cognitive abilities. Just goes to show we have a lot to learn and why science is always concerned with the refinement of one's method.

Asar Imhotep

http://www.asarimhotep.com

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

BANTU

APPAREL FOR THE PEOPLE

--- On Sun, 4/5/09, clyde winters wrote:
From: clyde winters
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Hundreds of Natural-selection studies could be wrong
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Sunday, April 5, 2009, 3:39 PM

Hundreds Of Natural-selection Studies Could Be Wrong, Study Demonstrates

The image depicts the structure of the bovine rhodopsin protein. The blue circles represent acid sites that have undergone natural selection as determined through experiments, while the red circles represent amino acid sites that have undergone natural selection as determined through statistical analyses. (Credit: Masafumi Nozawa, Penn State (Adapted from Yokoyama et al. 2008 PNAS))

ScienceDaily (Mar. 31, 2009) Scientists at Penn State and the National Institute of Genetics in Japan have demonstrated that several statistical methods commonly used by biologists to detect natural selection at the molecular level tend to produce incorrect results.
"Our finding means that hundreds of published studies on natural selection may have drawn incorrect conclusions, " said Masatoshi Nei, Penn State Evan Pugh Professor of Biology and the team's leader. The team's results will be published in the Online Early Edition of the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences during the week ending Friday 3 April 2009 and also in the journal's print edition at a later date.

Nei said that many scientists who examine human evolution have used faulty statistical methods in their studies and, as a result, their conclusions could be wrong. For example, in one published study the scientists used a statistical method to demonstrate pervasive natural selection during human evolution. "This group documented adaptive evolution in many genes expressed in the brain, thyroid, and placenta, which are assumed to be important for human evolution," said Masafumi Nozawa, a postdoctoral fellow at Penn State and one of the paper's authors. "But if the statistical method that they used is not reliable, then their results also might not be reliable," added Nei. "Of course, we would never say that natural selection is not happening, but we are saying that these statistical methods can lead scientists to make erroneous inferences," he said.

The team examined the branch-site method and several types of site-prediction methods commonly used for statistical analyses of natural selection at the molecular level. The branch-site method enables scientists to determine whether or not natural selection has occurred within a particular gene, and the site-prediction method allows scientists to predict the exact location on a gene in which natural selection has occurred.

"Both of these methods are very popular among biologists because they appear to give valuable results about which genes have undergone natural selection," said Nei. "But neither of the methods seems to give an accurate picture of what's really going on."

Nei said that for many years he has suspected that the statistical methods were faulty. "The methods assume that when natural selection occurs the number of nucleotide substitutions that lead to changes in amino acids is significantly higher than the number of nucleotide substitutions that do not result in amino acid changes," he said. "But this assumption may be wrong. Actually, the majority of amino acid substitutions do not lead to functional changes, and the adaptive change of a protein often occurs by a rare amino acid substitution. For this reason, statistical methods may give erroneous conclusions. " Nei also believes that the methods are inaccurate when the number of nucleotide substitutions observed is small.

To demonstrate the faultiness of the statistical methods, Nei's team compiled data collected by their Emory University colleague, Shozo Yokoyama, on the genes that control the abilities of fish to see light at different water depths and on the genes that control color vision in a variety of animals. The team used these data to compare statistically predicted sites of natural selection with experimentally determined sites. They found that the statistical methods rarely predicted the actual sites of natural selection, which had been identified by Yokoyama through experiments. "In some cases, statistical method completely failed to identify the true sites where natural selection occurred," said Nei. "This particular exercise demonstrated the difficulty with which statistical methods are able to detect natural selection."

To demonstrate how small sample sizes can lead to incorrect results, the team used computer simulations to examine the evolution of genes in three primates: humans, chimpanzees, and macaques. The scientists mimicked the procedures used by the authors of a 2007 paper, which applied the branch-site method to 14,000 orthologous genes -- genes that are genealogically identical among different species -- and which found that the method predicted selection in 32 of the genes. Nei and his team also studied selection using Fisher's exact test, but this test did not detect any selection. "The results indicate that the number of nucleotide substitutions that occurred were too small to detect any selection; therefore, all of the 32 cases obtained by the branch-site method must be false positives," said Nozawa.

"These statistical methods have led many scientists to believe that natural selection acted on many more genes in humans than it did in chimpanzees, and they conclude that this is the reason why humans have developed large brains and other morphological differences, " said Nei. "But I believe that these scientists are wrong. The number of genes that have undergone selection should be nearly the same in humans and chimps. The differences that make us human are more likely due to mutations that were favorable to us in the particular environment into which we moved, and these mutations then accumulated through time."

Nei said that to obtain a more realistic picture of natural selection, biologists should pair experimental data with their statistical data whenever possible. Scientists usually do not use experimental data because such experiments can be difficult to conduct and because they are very time-consuming.

A third author on the study is Yoshiyuki Suzuki, a researcher at the National Institute of Genetics in Japan. This research was supported by the National Institutes of Health.

Adapted from materials provided by Penn State.
Penn State (2009, March 31). Hundreds Of Natural-selection Studies Could Be Wrong, Study Demonstrates. ScienceDaily. Retrieved April 1, 2009, from http://www.scienced aily.com/ releases/ 2009/03/09033020 0821.htm

.

| 28497|2009-04-05 16:35:40|Mahari Mengistu|The Greek Alphabet|
I have always been fascinated by the spelling of the world for "pharaoh". Why was it not spelled with an "f". Well, there is no "f" in the Greek alphabet.

The "f" sound is the "phi" symbol. Interestingly, according to Budge's dictionary, there is hardly a Kemetic symbol for an "f" either. There is a symbol of a snail or slug behind which Budge has place a question marks. Also intriguing is that Greek alphabet comes from Phoenician who many believe came from Kemet.
I remember reading a post on Ta-Seti where someone transliterated a section of Greek and it read phonetically like an Afrakan language. From reading the following article one can see that over time (approx. after the translation of the bible) Greeks began to change to pronunciation of the language. To my way of thinking this article lends more credence to a likely Afrakan language foundation but considerably changed by the Indo-European language influence which is replete with "v" and "z" phonetics. The article also points to a good deal of language egotism and narcissism which also fits (personal statement).
==========
The Greek Alphabet

The alphabet is among the few linguistic elements that have remained essentially unchanged between the Ancient and Modern Greek languages. Before listing the letters, let us make a brief comment on the pronunciation of the language, as it evolved through the millennia.
Pronunciation

How close is the sound of Modern Greek to that of Classic Greek?

Phonetically, Classic Greek would sound rather alien to contemporary Greeks, but don□t ever say this to them! It is an issue that most Greeks, even educated ones, ignore.(1) I suspect it is because the alphabet has stayed unchanged, so Greeks can read classic texts with no trouble at all (pronouncing in Modern Greek). After all, it all looks Greek to them! If any (non-Greek) scholar attempts to pronounce classic texts in the reconstructed(2) pronunciation, that, to Greeks is tantamount to sacrilege. As a contemporary Greek myself, I can give you my personal feeling for how the reconstructed pronunciation sounds: it is as if a barbarian is trying to speak Greek.(3) For example, take the word □barbarian□ itself (which is of Greek origin): in Classic Greek it would be pronounced [barbaros]. In Modern Greek, it is [varvaros]. In general, the second letter of the alphabet, beta, was pronounced as [b] in Plato□s time, but was changed to [v] by the time the Gospels were written. Now, to the modern Greek ear, [v] is a soft sound (a □fricative□ in linguistics), sort of smooth and gentle, while [b] is a hard one (a □plosive□), kind of rough and crass. The same can be said about the letter delta, which was pronounced as [d] by Plato, and as [th] (as in this) since around Christ□s time, and the letter gamma ([g] in Classic Greek, [gh] later the latter sound is a □voiced velar fricative□; click here to see the full repertoire of Modern Greek sounds). Greek readers of this text who do not believe that Plato, Socrates, etc., were sounding so barbaric, may take a clue from this very word: □barbaros□ was coined after somebody who, as a non-native speaker of Greek would produce incomprehensible speech, which sounded like... well, what? Could it be □var-var-var□? Wouldn□t it sound more barbaric if it were □bar-bar-bar□? Besides this word, direct evidence for beta comes from a fragment of Attic comedy where it is said that the voice of the sheep is BH-BH.(4) In Modern Greek this would read as □vi-vi□, rather un-sheepish-like; while in the reconstructed way it would be □beeh-beeh□, exactly the sound that we, contemporary Greeks, attribute to the animal. (If the reader would like to make a comment on the above issues, email to me, and let me know what you think; but please make sure to have read first the links that say □Evidence□ on the righmost column of the table, below.)

However, the truth is when non-Greek scholars attempt to pronounce Classic Greek in the reconstructed way, they think they pronounce accurately. To me, American scholars sound distinctly American (like Platos with spurs and cowboy hats), Germans sound German, etc. Probably nobody can reproduce exactly the Classic Greek pronunciation: we might know the rules of the reconstructed system, but when it comes to moving our jaws, tongue, and lips, something different comes out of our mouths. As native speakers of this or that language we necessarily carry over our native phonology. Finally, let it be noted that Classic Greek used pitch to differentiate vowels in words, while nearly all modern European languages (including Modern Greek) use stress instead.(5)

The Alphabet

(Click on the speaker icon, next to the letter name, to hear the pronunciation in Modern Greek)

Letter Name & Sound	Modern Greek pronunciation	Classic Greek Pronunciation (Attic)
1 Alpha	[a], as in □father□. Same as [a] in Spanish and Italian. Phonetically, this sound is: open, central, and unrounded. As in Modern Greek
2 Beta	[v], as in □vet□; a voiced labiodental fricative.	[b], as in □bet□; a voiced bilabial plosive. Evidence
3 Gamma	[gh], a sound that does not exist in English. If followed by the sound [u] then it sounds almost like the initial sound in □woman□, but with the back of the tongue touching more to the back (soft) palate. To pronounce [gha], try to isolate □w□ from □what□ without rounding your lips, and then say [a]. In Castilian Spanish this sound exists in □amiga□. Same is true for [gho]: try eliminating the [u] sound from □water□. (C. Spanish: □amigo□.) On the other hand, due to a phonetic phenomenon called palatalization, [ghe] sounds a bit like □ye□ in □yes□, and [ghi] sounds a bit like □yi□ in □yield□. Phonetically, gamma is a voiced velar fricative. (Its palatalized version is a voiced palatal fricative.) [g], as in □got□; a voiced velar plosive. Evidence 4

Delta
[th], as in □this□; a voiced dental fricative. [d], as in □do□; a voiced alveolar plosive. Evidence
5
Epsilon
[e] as in □pet□, except that the [e] in □pet□ (and other similar English words) is lax, whereas in Greek it is tense. To pronounce a tense [e] pull the edges of your lips to the sides a bit more than when you say □pet□. (We pull the edges of our lips to the sides when we smile; but I don□t mean you need to smile every time you pronounce the Greek epsilon, OK?) As in Modern Greek
6
Zeta
[z], as in □zone□, a voiced alveolar fricative. Actually, the remark for sigma (see below) applies to zeta as well (it is shifted a bit towards [Z], as in □pleasure□). Read the remark for sigma to understand why, and how to pronounce it. [zd], as in □Mazda□. Also: [z], and even: [dz]. Evidence
7
Eta
[i], as in □meet□, but shorter, not so long. This is one of the three [i] in the Greek alphabet; they all have identical pronunciation. The reason for this redundancy has to do with Classic Greek, where they were not redundant. long open mid-[e], as in □thread□ (but long). Evidence
8
Theta
[th], as in □think□; a voiceless dental fricative. In Castilian Spanish: □zorro□. [th], as in □top□, but more aspirated. Evidence 9
Iota
[i], exactly like eta (see above). The name of the letter is pronounced □yota□ in Modern Greek. (the reason for the y-sound in front of the letter□s name is due to phonetic transformation of [io] into [yo]). As in Modern Greek 10
Kappa
[k], as in □pack□. Notice that in English [k] is aspirated if it is at the beginning of a word; Greek makes no such distinction. When followed by the vowel [e] it is pronounced nearly as in □kettle□, while when followed by [i] it is pronounced nearly as in □kill□. For the exact pronunciation in the last two cases, please check the page on palatalization. Phonetically, it is a voiceless velar plosive. (Its palatalized version is a voiceless palatal plosive.) As in Modern Greek
11

Lambda
[l] as in □lap□. When followed by the vowed [i] it becomes palatalized, turning to a sound that does not exist in English (check the page on palatalization). The name of the letter is pronounced □lamtha□ ([b] is eliminated because it is difficult to pronounce it between [m] and [th]). A voiced alveolar lateral approximant. As in Modern Greek 12
Mu
[m], as in □map□; a voiced bilabial nasal. Notice that the name of the letter is pronounced □mi□ (mee), not □mew□ as in American English. As in Modern Greek 13
Nu
[n], as in □noble□; a voiced alveolar nasal. When followed by the vowed [i] it becomes palatalized, turning to a sound that does not exist in English (but exists in Spanish; check the page on palatalization). Notice that the name of the letter is pronounced □ni□ (nee), not □new□ as in American English. As in Modern Greek
14
Ksi
[ks] as in □fox□. Contrary to the English □x□, the letter ksi does not change pronunciation at the beginning of a word (it does not become a [z]; Greeks have no trouble starting a word with [k]+[s]). For example, in the word ksenofovia (ξενοϽοβία = xenophobia) the initial sound [k] is not omitted. Don□t put any aspiration between [k] and [s] when pronouncing this letter. The remark for sigma applies to the second constituent of this letter, too. As in Modern Greek 15
Omicron
[o] as in □hop□, except that the [o] in □hop□ (and other similar English words) is lax, while in Greek it is tense, which means that you should really round your lips when you pronounce it. Same like [o] in □got□ the way it is pronounced in British English. A mid-close back rounded vowel. As in Modern Greek
16
Pi
[p], as in □top□; a voiceless bilabial plosive. Notice that in English [p] is aspirated if it is at the beginning of a word; Greek makes no such distinction. As in Modern Greek
17
Rho
[rh], a sound that does not exist in English (but exists in Scottish). Sounds very much like the Italian, or Russian [r], or the Spanish [r] in □caro□. (Spanish speakers: in Greek there is no difference in how long you trill your rho; but better to make it like in □caro□ than like in □carro□.) Phonetically, it is a voiced alveolar trill. Probably as in Modern Greek.

Word-initially: aspirated: [hr]
18
Sigma
[s], as is □soap□; a voiceless alveolar fricative. Actually, if you listen carefully to native Greek speakers, it sounds a bit between [s] and [sh] (probably because there is no [sh] in Greek, so the sound is somewhat shifted in the phonological space). However, to the native English ear it sounds much closer to [sh] than to [s], whereas every native Greek speaker would swear they pronounce it exactly like the English [s], unless forced to admit the difference by looking at spectrograms. In reality, you can produce it like this: feel where your tongue is when you say [s] (very close to the front teeth, right?) Now feel where it is when you say [sh] (far back). Place it somewhere midway, and you will produce the Greek [s]. (You□ll find that you□ll need to make a similar adjustment to the shape of your lips, midway through rounded for [sh] and tense for [s]; in the Greek sigma the lips are relaxed.) This is the way □s□ is pronounced in Castilian Spanish (as opposed to Latin American Spanish). Notice that the second way of writing the lower case sigma is used exclusively when the letter appears at the end of a word (there is only one capital form); this rule has no exceptions. Probably as in Modern Greek 19
Tau
[t], as in □pot□; a voiceless alveolar plosive. Notice that in English [t] is aspirated if it is at the beginning of a word; Greek makes no such distinction. As in Modern Greek 20
Upsilon
[i], exactly like eta and iota (see above). The name of the letter is pronounced [ipsilon] (ee-psee-lon), not □yupsilon□ as it is called in American English. Rounded [i], as in French □une□. Evidence
21
Phi
[f] as in □fat□; a voiceless labiodental fricative. [ph], as in □pit□, but more aspirated. Evidence 22
Chi
[ch], a sound that does not exist in English (but exists in Scottish, as in □loch□; German: □Bach□; Spanish: □Jorge□). When followed by vowels [e] or [i] it is pronounced nearly as in German □ich□. For the exact pronunciation in this case, please check the page on palatalization. Phonetically, it is a voiceless velar fricative. (Its palatalized version is a voiceless palatal fricative.) [kh], as in □cut□, but more aspirated. Evidence
23
Psi
[ps] as in □lopsided□. Contrary to English, the sound of the letter does not change at the beginning of a word (it does not become a [s]; Greeks have no trouble starting a word with [p]+[s]). For example, in the word psychologia (ϽϽϽολογία = psychology) the initial sound [p] is not omitted. Don□t put any aspiration between [p] and [s] when pronouncing this letter. The remark for sigma applies to the second constituent of this letter, too. As in Modern Greek

[o], exactly like omicron. (Once again, the reason for the redundancy is to be found in Classic Greek.) Long open mid-back [o], as in □law□. Evidence

Oops! Twenty-four letters only? Surely some sounds must be missing?

That□s correct. There are sounds common in other languages that do not exist in Greek. Such sounds are all the postalveolar fricatives and postalveolar affricates ([sh] as in □shop□, [Z] as in □pleasure□, [ch] as in □church□, and [dZ] as in □job□). So what do Greeks do when they want to pronounce foreign words with these sounds? If they are not trained to pronounce correctly, they simply transform these postalveolar sounds to their corresponding alveolar ones: [sh] [s], [Z] [z], [ch] [ts], [dZ] [dz]. Ask a Greek to pronounce □fish □n chips□ next time you want to have some linguistic fun.

And what about other very common sounds, like [b], [d], [g], etc.? These seem to be missing from the alphabet, too! Are they also missing from the repertoire of the sounds of the language?

No! These are existent as sounds in the language. It is just that there are no single letters to denote them. When Greeks want to write those sounds they write them as two-letter combinations: [b] is written as μϽ (mu + pi), [d] as νϽ (nu + tau), and [g] as γκ (gamma + kappa), or as γγ (double gamma). Why all this trouble? Remember, as explained in the introductory paragraph on this page, the sounds [b], [d], and [g] used to exist in Classic Greek. Later, probably some time after the New Testament was written in the so-called koine (common) Greek, these three sounds had shifted in pronunciation to the corresponding □soft□ ones ([v], [th], and [gh]). This left a void in the phonological space. Words that contained combinations like □mp□ and □nt□ started being pronounced as [mb] and [nd], respectively. So the □plosive□ sounds were re-introduced, but pairs of letters were used now to denote them.

There is one more sound in the language which is absent from the alphabet: it is the □ingma□, the last consonant in □king□. (This consonant rarely ever has the honor to be denoted by a single letter in the alphabet of any language!(6)) This sound is very rare in Greek, and when it appears (as in □άγϽοϽ□: anxiety; □έλεγϽοϽ□: checking) it is denoted by the combination gamma + chi, with the gamma pronounced as ingma.

All of the above plus much more, including the pervasive phenomenon of palatalization, can be found in this page on the details of Modern Greek pronunciation, which includes sound samples with the author□s voice for all of the presented examples.

You may also find useful this page, showing the sounds of Modern Greek against all possible sounds of any language in the world. The tables for consonants and vowels in that page are very familiar to linguists, but you don□t need to be a linguist to understand it.

What about vowels? Is there any similarity with the English vowels, or with those of any other language?

Vowels in Greek are easy. That is, if you are not a native speaker of English! That□s because although English is very rich in vowel sounds, still, it lacks almost completely the Greek vowels. The latter are more like the vowels of Italian, Spanish, or Japanese: they are the five sounds [a], [e], [i], [o], and u. Now, there are three letters for [i] in the alphabet (eta, iota, and upsilon), pronounced identically, and two letters for [o] (omicron and omega), also pronounced identically. For the sound [u] (as in □loot□) the combination οϽ (omicron + upsilon) is used.

Here are three good rules of thumb for native English speakers:

1. Greek vowels never sound like glides. That is, English speakers tend to pronounce Greek [e] almost always as [ei] (as in □bay□, □buffet□, □claim□, etc.), a phenomenon known as gliding. In Greek that□s wrong! Try to avoid adding the sound [i] at the end just stay with [e] (almost like □bet□, but notice, that [e] in □bet□ is lax; whenever the tense [e] is pronounced in English, it glides and sounds like [ei]). The same is true for [o]: Avoid pronouncing it as [ow] (as in □rope□, □bone□); just stay with [o], as in □awe□, □law□, etc., but make it a bit shorter (and don□t open your mouth as much as is required by □awe□; that□s suitable for the Classic omega; Modern Greek [o] is a bit more closed).
2. If you know Spanish, or Italian, or Japanese(7), there is a one-to-one correspondence between the five vowel sounds in these languages and Greek. Trust your knowledge then, and use it.
3. Greek words often end in [s] (sigma), and when English speakers hear Greeks pronouncing such endings they think they hear [sh]. (For an explanation read the comments of the letter sigma, in the table.) If you can□t reproduce the Greek sigma exactly, simply approximate it with English □s□, as in □boss□. Remember, there is no [sh] in Greek (except in the dialect of Crete, to be accurate), and that□s why hearing [sh] sounds very foreign to the Greek ear.

So, sounds simple. Is there anything else about vowels?

Not in pronunciation. In writing, however, there is. There are three so-called □diphthongs□, which are not diphthongs anymore, but digraphs. (A diphthong is a long vowel with more than one parts, each of which has a different quality, such as the ou in □loud□, or the oy in □boy□; a digraph is two letters which, when put together, are read as one unit, such as the th in □think□, or the ph in □graph□.) Here are the Greek digraphs of vowels:
Digraph Modern Greek pronunciation Classic Greek Pronunciation (Attic)
Exactly like ε (epsilon, 5th letter, see above) [ai], as in □buy□.
Evidence
Exactly like ι (iota, 9th letter, see above) [ei], as in □bay□. Evidence Exactly like ι (iota, 9th letter, see above) [oi], as in □boy□. Evidence Exactly like ι (iota, 9th letter, see above; also read comment below) ~[yui].
Evidence
[u], already explained in a previous paragraph As in Modern Greek [av] if the following sound is voiced, and [af] if the following sound is unvoiced [au], as in □loud□. Evidence
[ev] if the following sound is voiced, and [ef] if the following sound is unvoiced [eu]. Evidence
[iv] if the following sound is voiced, and [if] if the following sound is unvoiced ~[e:u]. Evidence

Thus, Archimedes□s famous □eureka!□ (εύρηκα) in Modern Greek is pronounced as [evrika] (with the stress on epsilon); but in ancient Greek it should be [eure:ka] (again with the stress on the first vowel of the diphthong, i.e., the [e]). The digraph ηϽ (eta + upsilon) is extremely rare in Modern Greek; it appears in three verb-forms only: εϽηύρα [efivra] (=□I invented□), αϽηύδηϽα [apivthisa] (=□I got fed up□), and αϽηύθϽνα [apifthina] (=□I directed my speech to sb.□); it was much more common in ancient Greek, though. Also, the digraph Ͻι (upsilon + iota) appears only in a very small number of Modern Greek words: ϽιϽϽ [ios] (=□son□, but this form is obsolete; the modern one is γιοϽ), and its derivatives: ϽιοθεϽϽ (=□adopt□), ϽιοθεϽία (=□adoption□), ϽιικϽϽ (=□filial□) and a few rare ones, such as άρϽϽια (~a mythological creature), καθεϽϽηκϽία (=□established, prevailing□ [fem.]), etc.

If you want to know the reason why these weird-looking combinations of letters exist, once again, blame ancient Greek, in which these were true diphthongs. When later the vowel space was flattened to its present five members, and no long vowels existed anymore, the diphthongs were transformed as the table above shows.

Does that mean that the sound [ai] (as in □buy□), for example, can never occur in Modern Greek, because if written as αι it would be pronounced [e]?

It is possible to have the letters alpha and iota next to each other and producing the sound [ai], but then we need to show this in writing. We do this by putting a pair of dots, the diaeresis, over the iota, like this: αϽ, as in the word ϽαϽδάκι [paithaki] (=□rib steak□). It is even possible to have the stress together with the diaeresis over the iota: Ͻαΐδι [paithi] (=□rib□). The diaeresis can □dismiss□ any of the vowel-digraphs: αϽ, εϽ, oϽ, ϽϽ, oϽ, αϽ, and εϽ (ηϽ does not occur in Modern Greek), in which case the two constituent vowels are pronounced separately. More about the diaeresis in my text on accent marks.

What are those short straight lines placed over some vowels in Greek texts?

That□s the stress. It shows which syllable should be pronounced slightly higher in pitch than the rest. I suggest that you visit this page of mine to learn all the details about how to place accent marks to show the stress in Greek. But if you want only a brief description, perhaps the following two paragraphs would suffice.

* In Modern Greek, the accent mark is placed only in lowercase writing, and only over the vowel of the stressed syllable. If the vowel is written with a digraph (see above), the accent mark is placed over the second letter of the pair. Monosyllabic words are not shown with stress, since the information would be redundant. In Greek (of all times), only one of the last three syllables of a word can be stressed. Native Greek speakers □internalize□ this rule (they also learn it explicitly at school), and tend to apply it even to languages that allow placement of stress on any syllable, such as English. (For example, the word difficulty is often pronounced [dee-`fee-kal-tee] by Greeks who start learning English as a second language.)
* In Classic Greek there were no lowercase letters, only capitals. So there were no accent marks over the letters. Later, during the Hellenistic times (last three centuries BC) lowercase letters were introduced, and along with them, the accent marks. However, the situation was quite complex, because there were three marks for the stress, and two □aspiration marks□, placed over the initial vowel of a word, if any. One of the latter two (the □rough breathing mark□, written like a tiny □c□) stood in place of the by-then-obsolete initial letter H, and was pronounced like English [h] (in Classic times this letter was actually written). So, words like □history□, □hydrogen□, □hour□, □Hellenic□, and many others, passed into English (filtered first through Latin) with the initial □h□ written and pronounced, while the corresponding Greek words were written with the rough breathing mark over the initial vowel. Later, even the pronunciation of this mark was dropped, so one had to learn what breathing mark to put over the initial vowel without having any clue from pronunciation. This situation lasted until fairly recently (as a child, I had to learn those orthographic rules, too). In 1982 all breathing marks were officially dropped, and the three types of stress marks were reduced to one and even that one is used only on polysyllabic words.

Do Greek letters have some inherent meaning?(8) What are the dictionary definitions of words like □alpha□, □beta□, etc.?

No, there is no meaning in Greek letters. You are probably thinking of Chinese ideograms, or ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs, which are symbols with some associated meaning. Alpha, beta, gamma, delta, etc., bear no more meaning in Greek than a, bee, cee, dee, etc., bear in English. Their names are just a bit longer, that□s all, that□s why they might look like meanigful words. Now, there is an English letter the name of which can be said to have some meaning, however trivial: it□s w, which we pronounce □double-u□. The name of this letter is derived from ancient forms of it, when it was written as two U□s, joined like this: UU. Similarly, there are a handful of Greek letters that can be said to have such trivial meanings, associated always with their pronunciation: epsilon (εϽιλον) is really e-psilon, meaning □light e□, or □bare e□, or □mere e□, a name introduced in Byzantine times, to distinguish it from the other [e], the digraph alpha-iota (see above). In ancient (e.g., classical) times this distinction was unnecessary, because ε and αι had completely different sounds, so the name of this letter was simply ε. Similarly, upsilon (ϽϽιλον) is really u-psilon, meaning □mere u□, distinguishing it from the other two [i], ι and η; in ancient Greek its name was Ͻ. Finally, omicron (ομικρον) is o-micron, or □little o□, to distinguish it from o-mega (Ͻμεγα), or □great o□. Again, these names were introduced in later times, when the pronunciations of the two letters had become identical; in ancient times their names were simply o and Ͻ.

That said, it should be mentioned that the origin of the Greek letters, which is the ancient Phoenician alphabet, did assign meaning to each letter. For example, the first letter of the Phoenician alphabet (a close cousin of the Hebrew alphabet, the first three letters of which are aleph, beth, and gimel) was written as an inverted A, a stylized depiction of the triangular head of an ox with its horns. In Phoenician, the name of the letter was the word for □ox□. Similarly, the letter gamma (Hebrew gimel) is derived from the Phoenician word for □camel□; and so on. But that all is not Greek, it is Semitic languages. In Greek the letters are just symbols, devoid of meaning.

Footnotes (clicking on the footnote-number, on the left, brings back to the text)

(1). As I was informed recently by a Greek reader of this page, now they do learn at school that the ancient pronunciation was different. Good, that□s progress; in my high school years (late 70□s) we were left in the dark. However, I tested this reader□s information by asking a couple of young Greek students (friends□ children), and found out that just about the only thing they learn is that some vowels, such as the omega and eta, were pronounced differently by the ancients; at least that□s what was registered in those young students□ memory.

(2). An earlier version of this page referred to the □Erasmian□ pronunciation of Greek, after the Dutch scholar Desiderius Erasmus (1466?-1536), who established a pronunciation system for ancient Greek that was geared towards the phonological abilities of speakers of Dutch. Later, his system was adopted by speakers of various other languages, who adjusted it slightly to their own needs. Since today it is not known what exactly one refers to when one mentions □the Erasmian system□, this page will refer to the □reconstructed□ system of pronunciation, as shown on the rightmost column, □Classic Greek Pronunciation (Attic)□, and as explained if you follow the links that say □Evidence□.

(3). Some readers (esp. fellow Greeks) took this comment to mean that I do not believe the reconstructed pronunciation is right. Wrong! I do believe it is right. However, what I believe or not is totally inconsequential. One should believe their eyes (looking at data, that is) and that is why I have collected the data (which is known to me) under those links that say □Evidence□ (last column of the table; you know, those blue underlined things? Click on them!). I made this comment to explain to non-Greeks what it feels to hear the reconstructed pronunciation if you are a Greek, and if you have been educated thinking that Pericles could have said to his wife, □ΠƐƐαƐία, Ɛι γκανƐεμιά! ογƐ Ɛη ƐƐλλιάζομαι Ɛη δοƐλειά, Ɛιρί-Ɛιρί Ɛο Ɛάνε να μαƐ Ɛην ƐέƐοƐν οι οακεδαιμƐνιοι. ΠρέƐει να ƐοƐƐ ƐƐάƐοƐμε Ɛον ƐƐαμƐοƐκά!□

(4). Cratinus, in Dionysalexandros:

the fool goes about like a sheep saying □ba ba□.

(5). Not really all modern Indo-European languages, though; Serbo-Croatian, for example, uses pitch. There are probably other I-E languages using pitch as well.

(6). Korean and Thai are among the languages that include a letter for the sound [ng], as readers kindly informed me.

(7). Actually the Japanese [u] is unrounded, while Greek [u] is rounded.

(8). Occasionally young people from the U.S.A. who want to establish a new fraternity or sorority ask me this question, because they want to choose □meaningful□ Greek letters for their organization. If you are one of those people and are disappointed by the answer of this question, there is still hope. Select two or three English words that are meaningful to you, ask me what the corresponding Greek words are, and choose the initial Greek letters for your fraternity or sorority.

===
HTP,
Mahari
| 28498|2009-04-05 17:00:53|Mahari Mengistu|Re: The Greek Alphabet|
Sorry, unfortunately the Greek symbols did not reproduce.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
>
> I have always been fascinated by the spelling of the world for "pharaoh". Why > was it not spelled with an "f". Well, there is no "f" in the Greek alphabet.
> The "f" sound is the "phi" symbol. Interestingly, according to Budge's > dictionary, there is hardly a Kemetic symbol for an "f" either. There is a > symbol of a snail or slug behind which Budge has place a question marks. Also > intriguing is that Greek alphabet comes from Phoenician who many believe came > from Kemet.
> I remember reading a post on Ta-Seti where someone transliterated a section of > Greek and it read phonetically like an Afrakan language. From reading the > following article one can see that over time (approx. after the translation of > the bible) Greeks began to change to pronunciation of the language. To my way > of thinking this article lends more credence to a likely Afrakan language > foundation but considerably changed by the Indo-European language influence > which is replete with "v" and "z" phonetics. The article also points to a good > deal of language egotism and narcissism which also fits (personal statement).
> ==========
> The Greek Alphabet
>
> The alphabet is among the few linguistic elements that have remained essentially > unchanged between the Ancient and Modern Greek languages. Before listing the > letters, let us make a brief comment on the pronunciation of the language, as it > evolved through the millennia.
> Pronunciation
>
> How close is the sound of Modern Greek to that of Classic Greek?
>
> Phonetically, Classic Greek would sound rather alien to contemporary Greeks, but > don□t ever say this to them! It is an issue that most Greeks, even educated > ones, ignore.(1) I suspect it is because the alphabet has stayed unchanged, so > Greeks can read classic texts with no trouble at all (pronouncing in Modern > Greek). After all, it all looks Greek to them! If any (non-Greek) scholar > attempts to pronounce classic texts in the reconstructed(2) pronunciation, that, > to Greeks is tantamount to sacrilege. As a contemporary Greek myself, I can give > you my personal feeling for how the reconstructed pronunciation sounds: it is as > if a barbarian is trying to speak Greek.(3) For example, take the word > □barbarian□ itself (which is of Greek origin): in Classic Greek it would be > pronounced [barbaros]. In Modern Greek, it is [varvaros]. In general, the second > letter of the alphabet, beta, was pronounced as [b] in Plato□s time, but was > changed to [v] by the time the Gospels were written. Now, to the modern Greek > ear, [v] is a soft sound (a □fricative□ in linguistics), sort of smooth and > gentle, while [b] is a hard one (a □plosive□), kind of rough and crass. The > same can be said about the letter delta, which was pronounced as [d] by Plato, > and as [th] (as in this) since around Christ□s time, and the letter gamma ([g] > in Classic Greek, [gh] later the latter sound is a □voiced velar fricative□; > click here to see the full repertoire of Modern Greek sounds). Greek readers of > this text who do not believe that Plato, Socrates, etc., were sounding so > barbaric, may take a clue from this very word: □barbaros□ was coined after > somebody who, as a non-native speaker of Greek would produce incomprehensible > speech, which sounded like... well, what? Could it be □var-var-var□?

> Wouldn□t it sound more barbaric if it were □bar-bar-bar□? Besides this > word, direct evidence for beta comes from a fragment of Attic comedy where it is > said that the voice of the sheep is BH-BH.(4) In Modern Greek this would read as > □vi-vi□, rather un-sheepish-like; while in the reconstructed way it would be > □beeh-beeh□, exactly the sound that we, contemporary Greeks, attribute to > the animal. (If the reader would like to make a comment on the above issues, > email to me, and let me know what you think; but please make sure to have read > first the links that say □Evidence□ on the righmost column of the table, > below.)
>
> However, the truth is when non-Greek scholars attempt to pronounce Classic Greek > in the reconstructed way, they think they pronounce accurately. To me, American > scholars sound distinctly American (like Platos with spurs and cowboy hats), > Germans sound German, etc. Probably nobody can reproduce exactly the Classic > Greek pronunciation: we might know the rules of the reconstructed system, but > when it comes to moving our jaws, tongue, and lips, something different comes > out of our mouths. As native speakers of this or that language we necessarily > carry over our native phonology. Finally, let it be noted that Classic Greek > used pitch to differentiate vowels in words, while nearly all modern European > languages (including Modern Greek) use stress instead.(5)
> The Alphabet
>
> (Click on the speaker icon, next to the letter name, to hear the pronunciation > in Modern Greek)
> Letter Name & Sound Modern Greek pronunciation Classic Greek Pronunciation > (Attic)
> 1
> Alpha
> [a], as in □father□. Same as [a] in Spanish and Italian. Phonetically, this > sound is: open, central, and unrounded. As in Modern Greek > 2
> Beta

> [v], as in □vet□; a voiced labiodental fricative. [b], as in □bet□; a > voiced bilabial plosive. Evidence > 3
> Gamma
> [gh], a sound that does not exist in English. If followed by the sound [u] then > it sounds almost like the initial sound in □woman□, but with the back of the > tongue touching more to the back (soft) palate. To pronounce [gha], try to > isolate □w□ from □what□ without rounding your lips, and then say [a]. In > Castilian Spanish this sound exists in □amiga□. Same is true for [gho]: try > eliminating the [u] sound from □water□. (C. Spanish: □amigo□.) On the > other hand, due to a phonetic phenomenon called palatalization, [ghe] sounds a > bit like □ye□ in □yes□, and [ghi] sounds a bit like □yi□ in > □yield□. Phonetically, gamma is a voiced velar fricative. (Its palatalized > version is a voiced palatal fricative.) [g], as in □got□; a voiced velar > plosive. Evidence
> 4
> Delta
> [th], as in □this□; a voiced dental fricative. [d], as in □do□; a > voiced alveolar plosive. Evidence > 5
> Epsilon
> [e] as in □pet□, except that the [e] in □pet□ (and other similar > English words) is lax, whereas in Greek it is tense. To pronounce a tense [e] > pull the edges of your lips to the sides a bit more than when you say □pet□.
> (We pull the edges of our lips to the sides when we smile; but I don□t mean > you need to smile every time you pronounce the Greek epsilon, OK?) As in > Modern Greek
> 6
> Zeta
> [z], as in □zone□, a voiced alveolar fricative. Actually, the remark for > sigma (see below) applies to zeta as well (it is shifted a bit towards [Z], as > in □pleasure□). Read the remark for sigma to understand why, and how to > pronounce it. [zd], as in □Mazda□. Also: [z], and even: [dz]. Evidence > 7
> Eta
> [i], as in □meet□, but shorter, not so long. This is one of the three [i] > in the Greek alphabet; they all have identical pronunciation. The reason for > this redundancy has to do with Classic Greek, where they were not redundant.
> long open mid-[e], as in □thread□ (but long). Evidence > 8
> Theta
> [th], as in □think□; a voiceless dental fricative. In Castilian Spanish:
> □zorro□. [th], as in □top□, but more aspirated. Evidence > 9
> Iota
> [i], exactly like eta (see above). The name of the letter is pronounced > □yota□ in Modern Greek. (the reason for the y-sound in front of the > letter□s name is due to phonetic transformation of [io] into [yo]). As in > Modern Greek

> 10
> Kappa
> [k], as in □pack□. Notice that in English [k] is aspirated if it is at the > beginning of a word; Greek makes no such distinction. When followed by the vowel > [e] it is pronounced nearly as in □kettle□, while when followed by [i] it is > pronounced nearly as in □kill□. For the exact pronunciation in the last two > cases, please check the page on palatalization. Phonetically, it is a voiceless > velar plosive. (Its palatalized version is a voiceless palatal plosive.) As in > Modern Greek
> 11
> Lambda
> [l] as in □lap□. When followed by the vowed [i] it becomes palatalized, > turning to a sound that does not exist in English (check the page on > palatalization). The name of the letter is pronounced □lamtha□ ([b] is > eliminated because it is difficult to pronounce it between [m] and [th]). A > voiced alveolar lateral approximant. As in Modern Greek > 12
> Mu
> [m], as in □map□; a voiced bilabial nasal. Notice that the name of the > letter is pronounced □mi□ (mee), not □mew□ as in American English. As > in Modern Greek > 13
> Nu
> [n], as in □noble□; a voiced alveolar nasal. When followed by the vowed [i] > it becomes palatalized, turning to a sound that does not exist in English (but > exists in Spanish; check the page on palatalization). Notice that the name of > the letter is pronounced □ni□ (nee), not □new□ as in American English.
> As in Modern Greek
> 14
> Ksi
> [ks] as in □fox□. Contrary to the English □x□, the letter ksi does not > change pronunciation at the beginning of a word (it does not become a [z]; > Greeks have no trouble starting a word with [k]+[s]). For example, in the word > ksenofovia (ξενοϽοβία = xenophobia) the initial sound [k] is not > omitted. Don□t put any aspiration between [k] and [s] when pronouncing this > letter. The remark for sigma applies to the second constituent of this letter, > too. As in Modern Greek > 15
> Omicron
> [o] as in □hop□, except that the [o] in □hop□ (and other similar > English words) is lax, while in Greek it is tense, which means that you should > really round your lips when you pronounce it. Same like [o] in □got□ the way > it is pronounced in British English. A mid-close back rounded vowel. As in > Modern Greek

> 16
> Pi
> [p], as in □top□; a voiceless bilabial plosive. Notice that in English [p] > is aspirated if it is at the beginning of a word; Greek makes no such > distinction. As in Modern Greek > 17
> Rho
> [rh], a sound that does not exist in English (but exists in Scottish). Sounds > very much like the Italian, or Russian [r], or the Spanish [r] in □caro□.
> (Spanish speakers: in Greek there is no difference in how long you trill your > rho; but better to make it like in □caro□ than like in □carro□.)
> Phonetically, it is a voiced alveolar trill. Probably as in Modern Greek.
> Word-initially: aspirated: [hr]
> 18
> Sigma
> [s], as is □soap□; a voiceless alveolar fricative. Actually, if you listen > carefully to native Greek speakers, it sounds a bit between [s] and [sh] > (probably because there is no [sh] in Greek, so the sound is somewhat shifted in > the phonological space). However, to the native English ear it sounds much > closer to [sh] than to [s], whereas every native Greek speaker would swear they > pronounce it exactly like the English [s], unless forced to admit the difference > by looking at spectrograms. In reality, you can produce it like this: feel where > your tongue is when you say [s] (very close to the front teeth, right?) Now feel > where it is when you say [sh] (far back). Place it somewhere midway, and you > will produce the Greek [s]. (You□ll find that you□ll need to make a similar > adjustment to the shape of your lips, midway through rounded for [sh] and tense > for [s]; in the Greek sigma the lips are relaxed.) This is the way □s□ is > pronounced in Castilian Spanish (as opposed to Latin American Spanish). Notice > that the second way of writing the lower case sigma is used exclusively when the > letter appears at the end of a word (there is only one capital form); this rule > has no exceptions. Probably as in Modern Greek > 19
> Tau
> [t], as in □pot□; a voiceless alveolar plosive. Notice that in English [t] > is aspirated if it is at the beginning of a word; Greek makes no such > distinction. As in Modern Greek > 20
> Upsilon
> [i], exactly like eta and iota (see above). The name of the letter is > pronounced [ipsilon] (ee-psee-lon), not □yupsilon□ as it is called in > American English. Rounded [i], as in French □une□. Evidence > 21
> Phi
> [f] as in □fat□; a voiceless labiodental fricative. [ph], as in □pit□, > but more aspirated. Evidence

> 22
> Chi
> [ch], a sound that does not exist in English (but exists in Scottish, as in > □loch□; German: □Bach□; Spanish: □Jorge□). When followed by vowels > [e] or [i] it is pronounced nearly as in German □ich□. For the exact > pronunciation in this case, please check the page on palatalization.
> Phonetically, it is a voiceless velar fricative. (Its palatalized version is a > voiceless palatal fricative.) [kh], as in □cut□, but more aspirated.
> Evidence
> 23
> Psi
> [ps] as in □lopsided□. Contrary to English, the sound of the letter does > not change at the beginning of a word (it does not become a [s]; Greeks have no > trouble starting a word with [p]+[s]). For example, in the word psychologia > (ϽϽϽολογία = psychology) the initial sound [p] is not omitted. Don□t > put any aspiration between [p] and [s] when pronouncing this letter. The remark > for sigma applies to the second constituent of this letter, too. As in Modern > Greek
> 24
> Omega
> [o], exactly like omicron. (Once again, the reason for the redundancy is to be > found in Classic Greek.) Long open mid-back [o], as in □law□. Evidence > Phonology and Orthography
>
> Oops! Twenty-four letters only? Surely some sounds must be missing?
>
> That□s correct. There are sounds common in other languages that do not exist > in Greek. Such sounds are all the postalveolar fricatives and postalveolar > affricates ([sh] as in □shop□, [Z] as in □pleasure□, [ch] as in > □church□, and [dZ] as in □job□). So what do Greeks do when they want to > pronounce foreign words with these sounds? If they are not trained to pronounce > correctly, they simply transform these postalveolar sounds to their > corresponding alveolar ones: [sh] [s], [Z] [z], [ch] [ts], [dZ] [dz]. Ask a > Greek to pronounce □fish □n chips□ next time you want to have some > linguistic fun.
>
> And what about other very common sounds, like [b], [d], [g], etc.? These seem to > be missing from the alphabet, too! Are they also missing from the repertoire of > the sounds of the language?
>
> No! These are existent as sounds in the language. It is just that there are no > single letters to denote them. When Greeks want to write those sounds they write > them as two-letter combinations: [b] is written as μϽ (mu + pi), [d] as νϽ > (nu + tau), and [g] as γκ (gamma + kappa), or as γγ (double gamma). Why all > this trouble? Remember, as explained in the introductory paragraph on this page, > the sounds [b], [d], and [g] used to exist in Classic Greek. Later, probably > some time after the New Testament was written in the so-called koine (common) > Greek, these three sounds had shifted in pronunciation to the corresponding > □soft□ ones ([v], [th], and [gh]). This left a void in the phonological > space. Words that contained combinations like □mp□ and □nt□ started > being pronounced as [mb] and [nd], respectively. So the □plosive□ sounds > were re-introduced, but pairs of letters were used now to denote them.

>
> There is one more sound in the language which is absent from the alphabet: it is > the □ingma□, the last consonant in □king□. (This consonant rarely ever > has the honor to be denoted by a single letter in the alphabet of any > language!(6)) This sound is very rare in Greek, and when it appears (as in > □άγƆοƆ□: anxiety; □έλεγƆοƆ□: checking) it is denoted by the > combination gamma + chi, with the gamma pronounced as ingma.
>
> All of the above plus much more, including the pervasive phenomenon of > palatalization, can be found in this page on the details of Modern Greek > pronunciation, which includes sound samples with the author□s voice for all of > the presented examples.
>
> You may also find useful this page, showing the sounds of Modern Greek against > all possible sounds of any language in the world. The tables for consonants and > vowels in that page are very familiar to linguists, but you don□t need to be a > linguist to understand it.
>
> What about vowels? Is there any similarity with the English vowels, or with > those of any other language?
>
> Vowels in Greek are easy. That is, if you are not a native speaker of English!
> That□s because although English is very rich in vowel sounds, still, it lacks > almost completely the Greek vowels. The latter are more like the vowels of > Italian, Spanish, or Japanese: they are the five sounds [a], [e], [i], [o], and > u. Now, there are three letters for [i] in the alphabet (eta, iota, and > upsilon), pronounced identically, and two letters for [o] (omicron and omega), > also pronounced identically. For the sound [u] (as in □loot□) the > combination oƆ (omicron + upsilon) is used.
>
> Here are three good rules of thumb for native English speakers:
>
> 1. Greek vowels never sound like glides. That is, English speakers tend to > pronounce Greek [e] almost always as [ei] (as in □bay□, □buffet□, > □claim□, etc.), a phenomenon known as gliding. In Greek that□s wrong! Try > to avoid adding the sound [i] at the end just stay with [e] (almost like
